As human beings, we are allowed to change our minds without being called hypocrites and we are allowed to change our minds without worrying who we will have to answer to. And I know it's not easy, it may seem like the whole world is coming down on you. Maybe they are but I'm not. Change your mind for the right reasons though, not because you're afraid of rejection or because you've lost faith or because your genius brother is going to med–school and you want to out–do him. And whatever you do, don't change just because you're feeling afraid, insecure or uncertain. They are not legitimate reasons for giving up on any dream, and trust me, at times I think they are.

Remember to strap on your Nike everyday and be prepared for a long haul. No one said it was going to be easy, but this is semi–real life, and not many things are simple anymore. Just keep walking, over hills and through fog. Something will always keep you going, whether it be a smile from a kind stranger or your boyfriend's hand to hold, you'll keep going. Let the laughter of the beautiful woman I call Mom guide you on your journey. She can be

Need Advice?

Send your campus dilemmas to the editorial desk and have our advice experts deal with them on the pages of the Collegian.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Missed America

Miranda Purnell

I have a confession to make. I watched the Miss America broadcast on Saturday. Not just the first 10 minutes, not even the last 10 minutes, but the whole two and a half hours, from start to finish. I didn't even flick in the ads in case I missed a minute by turning back too late.

That's not the worst of it though. Here's the really scary bit: I loved every minute of it. In fact if you really have to know — my friends are going to kill me for this — we actually had a Miss America party in honor of the event.

Sad, isn't it? Four grown women, hire a car, drive to Maine, shop all day and then book into a cheezy motel room and watch the Miss America Pageant. Kind of like Thelma and Louise really, but without Brad Pitt and the spectacular car crash at the end.

You might ask how someone who likes to think of herself as a liberated woman — as I most certainly am inclined to do — can watch such unadulterated trash. I am tempted to lie and say that it was a required text for my Media Criticism class. However, as I am a foreign student and not entirely certain of my visa restrictions, I fear lying could get me deported and on the next flight back to Australia, so I'll attempt to tell the truth. Secretly, in the darkest depths of my psyche, I harbor a burning desire to be just like Tara Dawn Holland, Miss Kansas and as of Saturday, Miss America. There. That's it, I've said it. I want to be Miss America.

Of course there are a few obstacles standing between me and the crown. The first and most obvious of these being that by some wicked twist of fate, I was born in Sydney, Australia and am therefore not an American. However this seems like a minor problem when I compare it with other attributes essential to any aspiring Miss America.

For starters, I've got too many names. What on earth were my parents thinking when they named me Miranda May Celeste Purnell? Talk about overkill.

Everyone knows that Miss America hopefuls should have multiple given names but the magic number is two not three. Couldn't they have phoned Tara Dawn Holland's folks and asked for advice? If you doubt the importance of this, just look at the statistics. Four out of the five finalists in this year's pageant had two given names. And call me a conspiracy theorist if you will, but the idea that Vanessa Williams was stripped of her crown because she posed in Playboy is absolute garbage. What really happened was that as the judges were admiring her photo spread they realized that her name was not "Va Nessa" but in rather "Vanessa," and made up that ridiculous nudie-scandal thing to cover up their dreadful mistake.

Also somewhat disheartening for me were Tara Dawn Holland's words of wisdom when asked by The Washington Post if she had a boyfriend.

"I freed myself from all those obligations so I'd be ready for this job."

What the hell is she talking about? I had been informed, by what I thought were reliable sources, that the easiest way to triumph in Atlantic City was to date a quarterback, become a cheerleader and that everything would fall into place from there. Apparently not according to Miss Kansas.

She then went on to explain how no skeletons would fall out of her closet for she had lived her whole life, "to be ready for this job."

In hindsight I can see how my skill for throwing up in flower beds — perfected during my teenage years growing up on Sydney's southern beaches — probably wasn't the most sensible thing to nominate as my talent for the pageant.

However, I never imagined that my young, innocent, fumblings with the opposite sex would count against me as well.

So basically the odds are stacked against me when it comes to being crowned Miss America. I'm an Aussie, with four names instead of three, prone to puking and yes, shock and horror, I've had a few friends of the male variety in my life. So what if I'll never walk down the runway with Regis in Atlantic City — I can almost hear the crowds of the day-time talk shows calling me, "Today on Rikki Lake: I would have been Miss America except that I was born in the wrong country, with the wrong name, discovered alcohol too early and once kissed a boy." Surely that's where the big bucks are.

Nothing to say

Luke Meredith

I have no idea what to say.

Here I am, a sports guy, and when they were handing out assignments, I said, like an idiot, "Yeah, sign me up for editorials. I can do that." And yet I sit here and I have no ideas. Not one. I could sit here for the rest of my college career and I still couldn't write this damn thing. I have no skill. You might read this paper and think, "Hey, this guy knows what's going on around campus. He's showed the deal."

I don't.

I'm just down here faking it so I can tell chicks, "Hey, baby, can't make it tonight, gotta write for the paper." It looks good on a resume and when you wake up in the morning and read the paper, it's kinda cool to read your name in under the title Collegian staff. Oooh! Collegian staff!

Wait, Wait, I've got an idea.

This will be somewhat cheesy, but I have nothing else.

You ever notice how we slowly become our parents? I was in the supermarket last week and I muttered the actual words, "I'd like to get the chicken, but I'll wait till it's on sale." I then went on for a few minutes before I realized that I had heard that phrase a million times before. From my dad. And the scary part is — I didn't care.

Who are they to charge what they charge for chicken? I could go kill a chicken myself, skin, pluck, and whatever else you do to a chicken, and save a couple bucks. And are these kids outside my house? Don't they have homes to go to? If they keep me up past 10 I swear to God I'll break their little…

Whoa, Whoa, Whoa, that isn't gonna work. I couldn't make a clear point to save my life. And what was that last sentence? Can you say ramble? See, I told you, I don't know what the hell I'm doing. I couldn't even write 100 words on a subject without rambling out of things to say.

I don't know what you people want to hear about. There's a lot of pressure writing this thing. Picture it. You just got out of your 10:10, you grab a Collegian and head up to the D.C. After grabbing a chicken puck (It all comes back to chicken, baby), you open up the paper and want to read an informative, opinionated, well-thought out column about the events of the day. And what do you see? This piece of…

Hold up. I got it. This might be something all you crazy kids can relate to.

Have you noticed how bad MTV is these days? When I was a young buck, I remember that they actually used to play videos. No, seriously… videos, a vast majority of the time. Now when I turn it on all I see is Jenny McCarthy shakin' her groove thang. Don't get me wrong. Jenny has a very nice groove thang, but enough already. I want videos. Is that too much to ask? Why do I have to wait until midnight to see a decent video? I'm gonna go down to the MTV office and open up a can of whupass on 'em until they play a good video. And if they don't, I swear to God I'm gonna…

Jesus, I gotta chill. Look, I'm sorry all you Kennedy fans out there. I didn't mean it. It's just sometimes I get a little down and I say things I don't mean. I'll try to think of a new topic, and I'll be nicer, I swear.

Hmmm, let me think.

Tick–tock, tick–tock…

Tick-tock, tick-tock…

All right, I officially can't think of anything. I've tried my best, but I guess my best isn't good enough. ('Cause Lord knows we're not getting anywhere.)

Luke Meredith is a Collegian staff

Letters to the Editor

Don't believe the hype

To the editor:

Mike Burke should take his own advice (given in his editorial, "Don't believe the hype"). The thought that a missile brought down TWA flight 800 is preposterous. I'm not a fan of the federal government, the national news media, the anti–terrorism law, or political conventions, but I would kindly ask that Mr. Burke to refrain from writing about things he knows nothing about.

The theory that a U.S. missile shot down flight 800 is highly incredible for a number of reasons. Reasons that Mr. Burke might have thought of himself if his paranoid delusions weren't interfering with his rational side. First of all, no normal missile — either those carried by a soldier, an F–15, or a Navy cruiser — has a warhead big enough to blow up a plane as big as a 747.

The 1980's shoot–down of a Korean airliner required two very large, Russian surface–to–air missiles, and even then it only crashed, it didn't explode in a huge fireball like TWA flight 800. It would take a truly huge surface–to–air missile like a Patriot to shoot down a 747. And guess what? There aren't any Patriot–sized missiles within a hundred miles of Long Island. There's no reason for there to be.

Our skies are defended by the Air Force and its warplanes, not by the Army and Patriot missiles. No missile test would be conducted near a populated area. Missiles aren't even allowed to overfly fish farms, let alone Long Island.

Furthermore, even if it was a heat–seeking missile, as Mr. Burke asserts, someone should inform him that heat–seeking missiles hit hot jet engines, not cool passenger cabins. Besides the only heat–seeking missiles in the U.S. inventory lack the range to engage a 747 flying as flight 800 was.

Finally, the whole story of flight 800 being downed by a U.S. missile first appeared on the Internet, wherein the original author claimed that his source was a "senior 747 pilot with hundreds of hours flying time." When people asked why a 747 pilot, no matter how experienced, would have knowledge of a military cover–up, the same story was re–posted, this time claiming that the source was a "top–level Navy officer." Mr. Burke is correct in stating that the Internet is a good alternative news source, but that doesn't mean you can stop reading with a critical eye.

John Wilkinson
Orchard Hill

Concert review needs serious help

To the editor:

I would like to comment on the 311 review by Rob Stevens in the Sept. 16 edition of the Collegian. The main problem I have with the article is that it portrays the Deftones as playing "a wonderful role as a supporting act." Also, too much time was spent on the "style" of 311, while there was no mention of the Urge's style. Lastly, not enough was mentioned about how the Mullins Center put on the event. I don't believe the article was good.

First off, anyone who enjoyed the Deftones' set must be, as their name puts it, deaf. They played so loud that you couldn't even tell what they were playing.

The Deftones played a decent, albeit abbreviated version of that hit tune, "Say It Ain't So." And I recall one song that had some 'genuine' feeling in the screams, if that's possible.

Anyone who would even care to read the 311 review probably already knows what they sound like. So why waste three paragraphs on information that can be found out by just listening to any one of their songs?

Rob, you might say you put in those three paragraphs of crap so that people who didn't go could get a feel for the experience. If this was so, then why didn't you mention the fact that when general admission ticket holders tried to enter the arena from the south entrance, that they weren't told until reaching the ticket–taker that they had to walk all the way around to the north side?

I'll give you props for mentioning that the security was understaffed, but not mentioning the general admission problem or the fact that the lighting for the Deftones was pretty bogus, doesn't sit well with me.

Perhaps you only wanted to point out the good aspects of the show. If you were doing this, Rob Stevens, then you are providing a disservice to the UMass community.

Geoffrey Harm
Central

Book review in bad taste

To the editor:

I picked up your paper for the first time the other day and I doubt if I will ever read another. I say this because I found the Sept. 11 article "Unique journey explores pedophilia" by Lisa M. Oliveri absolutely revolting. The title made me think it was about a support group or a new type of therapy. Much to my dismay, I found out it was a book review. This book is about two people and "their commonality — pedophilia." Oliveri further describes the book in these terms: "It will not only make you question societal normalcy and conformity, but also test your stomach. Hardly a page is turned without one act of indecency being violated." Oliveri finishes this review with this endorsement, "A definite must– read for lovers of great literature." Then she gave the book a B–plus.

How can anyone endorse a book that promotes pedophilia? Countless children have been mentally destroyed by pedophilia. Many survivors of molestation have managed to put their shattered lives back together and actually form groups to fight pedophilia. I believe that this paper and its staff owes all those people who have been victims and all the children that will be victims an apology. The promotion of pedophilia is unpardonable, I believe this is one thing everyone in society can agree on. By calling such a deplorable book a "must read for lovers of great literature," that is exactly what this paper did — endorse behavior that totally ruins a child.

Joseph Greene
New Salem

Welfare column lacks point

To the editor:

The last Erik Molitor could have done in his "making welfare work" column was to have made a coherent point. He laments that we have come "dangerously close to a socialist state" in America, yet after making such an absurd statement Mr. Molitor advocates that the government initiate a massive public works program; Erik, better decide if you really want the seeds of a communist state. Perhaps Mr. Molitor should learn at least the basic definitions of politics if he is going to pretend he can use anything but monosyllabic words.

Moreover, Mr. Molitor lost whatever legitimacy his argument may have had when he plays the role of God and lumps everyone under categories he creates. Need one know more than the following sentence, "There is altogether too much trash out there getting a welfare check and spending it on various substances, getting high, getting knocked up every time every time they aren't already pregnant and raising kids that will grow up to be trash just like them, continuing the vicious cycle." The vicious cycle, far from Mr. Molitor's statement is the endless propaganda advanced by such pseudo–conservatives as himself.

Mr. Molitor argues a good work ethic and a little bit of luck is all that people need to succeed today. Get a grip Erik, your golden rule for life illustrates how incredibly naive, or if you rather, ignorant you are to the realities of today.

Chris Hurley
Holyoke

Arts & Living

New fall lineup includes Cosby & Rashad

Niles married to Daphne? Paul and Jamie looking for a gynecologist? Caroline and Richard reunited?

If you haven't guessed yet, it's the first week of season premieres and the networks are pulling out all the stops to get the audiences back into television.

NBC's Tuesday night line–up is by far the strongest. "Mad About You" was moved to the 8 p.m. slot. Following the popular sitcom about Paul and Jamie Buchman is Mel Harris's new comedy, "Something So Right."

"Something So Right" lends new meaning to the phrase "blended family" as Harris ("thirtysomething") struggles to juggle two ex–husbands, a new husband and three children. The humor is a little over–the–top and more malicious than funny. The double entendres fly fast, which makes you wonder if this was miscast as a family comedy.

He's back. University of Massachusetts alum and Emmy–award winning actor Bill Cosby finds a new home Monday nights on CBS television. His new comedy, titled briefly "Cosby," is a far cry from his previous sitcom, "The Bill Cosby Show."

Cosby is re–united with Phylicia Rashad, his co–star from the original show, and with the production team Carsey– Werner, which also produced "The Bill Cosby Show." But that's where the resemblance ends.

Cosby and Rashad previously played the affluent doctor– lawyer couple of Cliff and Claire Huxtable on the '80s comedy series. This time around, Cosby is just a regular sort of guy who has lost his job after 30 years of devoted service and Rashad is his supportive wife.

Rounding out the cast of the new series include Madeline Kahn, Doug E. Doug and T'Keyah Crystal Keymah.

In hindsight I can see how my skill for throwing up in flower beds — perfected during my teenage years growing up on Sydney's southern beaches — probably wasn't the most sensible thing to nominate as my talent for the pageant.

Kahn plays Pauline, a friend of Rashad's character. Doug portrays Griffin, a young man enamoured of his housemate, Keymah, who takes on the role of Cosby and Rashad's daughter, Erica.

Right now the question is whether viewers will be able to separate Cosby's former identity as Cliff Huxtable and be able to reconcile that image with his new persona of Hilton Lucas.

Cosby's last foray into television included the dismal "Cosby Mysteries." Lukewarm writing coupled with the thought of the affable Cosby as a Columbo sort of character didn't fly with audiences who had mentally connected him with Cliff Huxtable. And with Rashad joining him on this attempt, chances are viewers are not going to be pleased with the changes.

Did you catch the Miss America pageant last Saturday? If there was ever a cheesier institution in the world, the Miss America Foundation just surpassed it. Forget about sexism or exploitation of women, the Miss America pageant is more hilarious than anything else.

Regis Philbin played host to this latest edition of blatant commercial pandering. Thankfully, he ditched Kathie Lee Gifford as co–host and replaced her with a bevy of former Miss Americas, including Chantel Smith (Miss America '96) and Heather Whitestone Macullum (Miss America '95).

This time around, the pageant enabled viewers to call an 1–900 number to cast their votes for the young lady who would bear the dubious honor of being Miss America '97. If you thought it was a gimmick, you're probably right. Each phone call cost 50 cents and was reminiscent of last year's pageant when viewers voted on whether to have the swimsuit competition or not.

And as for the other seven judges, those called upon to render their expert opinions included Olympic swimmer Janet Evans, "Another World" hunk Joe Barbara and Olympic track & field star, Jackie Joyner–Kersee.

Probably the most blatant example of the pageant's pandering to commercial sponsors were the little plugs before each break. Former Miss Americas would enthusiastically chime their support for products like deodorant, shampoo and make–up.

And even that wouldn't have been so bad, if it hadn't been for the chintzy dance number the potential candidates were put through. After hearing the music with lyrics similar to "Look at you put your make–up on, supermodel," the whole pageant lost whatever vestige of credibility it had.

Makes you wonder what they will come up with next.

Tube Notes
by Seema Mangalmurti

Turn on the tube for latest fall fashion

Lauren Lobik

So, you want to know what's new in fashion? Ask where you should look and most people will say to purchase a magazine like Vogue or Elle. At $2.50 a pop, this can get pretty expensive every month. Plus, who actually dresses like the models in these magazines? Most of the styles worn by the models, who grace these pages, are either the ugliest things I've ever seen or the only body the clothes will fit and look good on is that of a toothpick. Now we all know that this isn't the picture of the average woman. There has to be an alternative and there is.

It seems like more and more of America is getting their fashion trends and tips from their television sets. Let's face it, television is practically free and the styles we see on the tube are much more realistic than the ones that are found in the good–old fashion magazine.

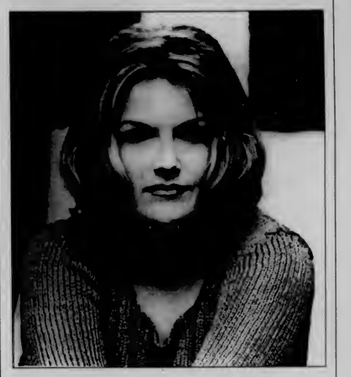
Okay, the beautiful people of the media industry may not look like the average men and women of the world, but you have to admit they are a heck of a lot closer to you and me than a supermodel. Television also contains many different kinds of people. Many more aspects of fashion can be covered here.

We saw Jennifer Aniston's hair on "Friends" last season. Everyone from talk show hosts to eighth graders could be seen sporting the new do. I even thought about getting it myself, but I just couldn't bring myself to do it.

Does this mean it wasn't just the casts acting ability that made the show a hit? It was worth tuning in to for much more. Not only is the program outlandishly funny, but they are some awfully stylish people. This twenty–something cast of men and women are easy to relate to and wear some pretty hip clothes.

There are a couple of new shows that will be hitting the primetime circuit this fall that seem to have fashion as a main character. "Party Girl" starring Christine Taylor, who was made famous as Marcia Brady in "The Brady Bunch Movie," is going to be appearing on FOX. This librarian by day and club–goer by night is sure to set some trends with her retro wardrobe. I watched the premiere last week and she has definitely got some style. Her attire is a little outlandish, but her platform shoes and '70s suits are sure to create some clones.

Another show that is sure to be a fashion hit is "Clueless." The teenage world yearned for Alicia Silverstone's closet after the movie hit the theaters and now that it's appearing every week, there is sure to be an uproar. I think this show will be the best place to look for today's trendiest fashions. Not only are they realistic in the sense that people will actually be able to wear them, but the pieces can be easily found at any mall.



Talk shows are another great place to check out fashions. Women who don't exactly fit in the toothpick category can look to Ricki Lake and Rosie O'Donnell for some classy dressing tips.

One talk show host who I believe has great taste is Leeza Gibbons. She can pull off wearing anything and she does it with flare. If you really want to knock them dead, watch a few episodes of "Leeza." Her style just screams sophistication.

So if you're like me and don't want to spend tons of money on fashion magazines that often sport clothes, I wouldn't dream of wearing, turn on your television. It's now showing the latest styles in a living room near you.

Big E hosts Yearwood

Country superstar set to amaze crowd

COURTESY RUSS HARRINGTON

Trisha Yearwood takes center stage at the Big E this Sunday.

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

It's a safe bet to assume that Trisha Yearwood is one of the most talented singers in contemporary country music today. Her sultry, powerful voice is like no other. She sings with such passion, it's hard to believe that Yearwood is not receiving some spiritual intervention. Yes, she is that great.

Yearwood certainly has not had an easy road to the top. The Monticello, Ga. native spent many days of hard work, earning not–so great pay and dreaming of getting famous. While working at a record company, she recorded demo tapes, hoping someone would recognize her talent. Her break came in the form of the über–famous Garth Brooks who asked if she would like to sing back–up for him. The rest, for Yearwood was, shall we say, history.

Her first single, "She's in Love With The Boy," off of her 1991 self–titled debut shot to the top of the charts, earned her a number one slot and a whole lot of respect, including a nomination for the prestigious Country Music Association's Horizon Award for the most talented newcomer (she lost, to much surprise, to Suzy Boggus).

Hearts in Armor, her sophomore effort, is without question Yearwood's best. Combining blues, jazz, straight country and even a little rock and roll, Yearwood demonstrates her versatility and wide vocal range.

"Walkaway Joe," a ballad about a young girl who runs off with her unbeknownst criminal boyfriend, is one of the most requested songs at her shows. In fact, Yearwood had already made such an impression on country fans that a biography titled Trisha Yearwood: Making of a Nashville Star, which chronicled the genesis of this album, was published. Yearwood was swiftly becoming a household name.

The next three albums, The Song Remembers When, The Sweetest Gift and Thinking About You garnered similar success and comparisons to the great Patsy Cline. She has continued to record sparingly with Brooks and there has been talk of the two releasing an album of duets.

Yearwood in the past, has recorded with many famous people, including Brooks, Don Henley, Mary Chapin– Carpenter and Matraca Berg. Her latest CD, Everybody Knows continues this tradition. She enlists the help of country star Vince Gill to back her up. But even without all the stardom backing her, Yearwood would stand fine on her own.

Everybody Knows shows a different side of Yearwood, one that is lighter and fresher and more mature. She once again takes the opportunity to experiment with different genres of music, as she did with Hearts in Armor — something she hasn't done on her two previous ones. And while most of the songs lack the charisma of hits like "Wrong Side of Memphis" and "XXX's and OOO's (An American Girl)," they are solid and strong.

Trisha Yearwood performs at the Big E in Springfield on Sunday, Sept 22 at 8 p.m.

AMC THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI–LITE) SHOW DAILY LIMITED TO SEATING
Denotes SPECIAL ENGAGEMENT
MT. FARMS 9 MT FARMS MALL ROUTE 9, HADLEY 584-9158
Call Theatre For Showtimes
JACK PG-13
LAST MAN STANDING R
FEELING MINNESOTA R
FLY AWAY HOME PG
HAMPSHIRE 6 HAMPSHIRE MALL ROUTE 9, HADLEY
Call Theatre For Showtimes
FIRST KID PG
THE SPITFIRE GRILL PG-13
BULLETPROOF R
A VERY BRADY SEQUEL PG-13
A TIME TO KILL R
MAXIMUM RISK * R
TIN CUP R
THE FIRST WIVES CLUB PG

take Kaplan and get into the right school.
LSAT GMAT GRE MCAT
• Highly trained, expert teachers who know the tests inside and out.
• Personalized, computerized study plans, tailored to your individual needs.
• Proven methods, guaranteed to raise your score.
the leader in test prep and admissions counseling.
KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
www.kaplan.com

JUST DO IT
OPEN Rush: Sept. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13
Formal Rush: Sept. 16, 17, 18, 19, 20
8:00 P.M. 418 N. Pleasant Street
Please Contact Eric Spitz (Rush Chairman)
549-0676

We Deliver! Kai Chi Chinese • American Cuisine
Restaurant & Bar
MT FARMS MALL
ROUTE 9 • HADLEY • 586-2774
Delivery: Sun.–Thurs. Noon–2 a.m. Fri. & Sat. noon–3 a.m.
Enjoy HALF PRICE APPETIZERS
9 PM–Close • 7 Days a Week
31 SELECTIONS!
Ex: Pu Pu (for two) reg. 11.99 Now 5.99
No other promos apply
EAT IN ONLY

DANCE
GAY LESBIAN BISEXUAL FRIENDS ALLIES
MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 23RD 8:00 - 2:00
Northampton's Own
THE GROTTO
29 WEST ST. NORTHAMPTON 413-586-8660
ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES TO BE SERVED TO 21+ sponsored by the UMass
LBGA
CALL 545-0184 FOR INFO
18+ $2.00 AT THE DOOR
GET IN FREE BEFORE 10:00!!!

SINCE 1984
La Cazuela RESTAURANT
The Cuisines of MEXICO and the AMERICAN SOUTHWEST
Since 1984 La Cazuela has been winning acclaim and awards for its hand made cooking and outstanding design. We prepare food that is representative of fine dining in the many regions of Mexico and the American Southwest. Our menu changes seasonally to take advantage of the freshest available foods and to reflect the cultural traditions of the food we serve. We offer an extraordinary tequila list, superb margaritas, a tasteful wine selection and the warm hospitality that reflects a western heritage. Please join us.
Dinner Every Night
Downtown Northampton
Across From The Parking Garage
LIVE RIGHT EAT WELL COOK WITH CHILES!

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256-0733
145 main st. northampton 586-0155

Affordable
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
Earrings Rings Happy B'day Cards Sweaters Skirts
India Print Bedspreads Posters Candles Incense
Sale 20 to 50% off selected Clothing
The GreatGifts Mercantile
Visa / MC
Th.-Fri. 9PM
Sun 12-5
Daily 10-6
Northampton–18 Center St.
Amherst–Carriage Shops

Men's XC faces three in year's only home meet

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Correspondent

Last year's Massachusetts men's cross-country season was billed as one of great accomplishment.

After a win last week, the Minutemen will look to continue this season's early success when UMass hosts Vermont, Boston University and Maine in its only home meet of the season. The race will be held in the apple orchard behind the Sylvan Residential area at 12:30 p.m.

This is the second consecutive season in which UMass was granted only one home event. Last season, they capitalized on the opportunity by defeating UVM and Maine, both of which they will get another look at this weekend.

Last year, the Minutemen speedsters raced to their first ever Atlantic 10 championship. They were paced by outstanding performances all season, which were capped off by returning seniors Jonathan Way and Paul Blodorn at the Atlantic 10 finals last November.

Last year, UMass coach Ken O'Brien employed a strategy that included pitting UMass against top-ranked teams all season, to properly prepare the team for potential post-season success.

This plan proved to be effective until the very tail end of the season. It was at this crucial juncture that UMass finally succumbed to exhaustion, finishing a disappointing 23rd place at the 1C4A Championships to conclude the 1995 campaign. However, this setback could not take away from the terrific season the Minutemen turned in.

The A-10 championship UMass captured has served as a great building block for this season as the squad reaches for even greater heights.

The Minutemen were off and running last weekend in Boston, as they placed second in their opening meet of the season.

They finished behind Iona, widely known as a veteran top-20 team. The performance was encouraging as they received good finishes from senior Mike Macieko (fourth), junior Ryan Carrera (sixth) and freshman Peter Gleason (seventh).

Gleason's run was perhaps the most encouraging as he was the top freshman finisher last weekend. The 5-foot-10 newcomer out of Northboro is one of several new faces looking to contribute to the Minutemen's cause this season.

Fellow freshmen Sean Murphy, James O'Malley and Kevin Somers also look to pitch in as early as this weekend.

■ Minutewomen

continued from page 8

team counts heavily on both freshmen and returning players who were used sparingly last year by Daniels. Of Hartford's four All-North Atlantic Conference selections last year, only defender Amy Salamon remains.

The No. 9 Minutewomen meanwhile will look to build on the momentum it has picked up in its first five matches — all home wins. A strong showing in Sunday's 4-0 win over St. Bonaventure in UMass' Atlantic 10 opener appears to have the team on track for what Hartford will no doubt approach as a grudge match with a vengeance as it attempts to rectify a slow start and exhume last year's ghosts from Garber Field.

"I'm as excited about this game as any Hartford game," Rudy said. "They've been the underdogs before and won."

■ football

continued from page 8

two games. They have rushed for 361 yards.

The Spiders show impressive numbers on defense though, allowing only 6.5 points per game. They lead the league in passing defense, allowing only 109.5 yards per contest.

Defense will be the key for UMass once again in this game, although season averages show the team has given up 30 points while scoring just 21.

If the Minutemen can stop the Richmond ground game, eliminate turnovers (4 per game) and penalties, they have the chance to return home with a 2-1 mark. UMass is 29-20 in YanCon openers.

Injury Report: Junior defensive end Chris Cronin is out at least six weeks with a torn flexor tendon in his left hand. Junior backup quarterback Vito Campanile is probable with a partially dislocated left kneecap and senior free safety Bryan Mooney is questionable with a strained hamstring. Senior wide receiver Darryl Thomas is doubtful with a sprained left ankle.

Broadcast Notes: The game will be broadcast on 91.1 FM WMUA. The pre-game show starts off at 12:45 p.m.

■ field hockey

continued from page 8

in the year; while McClellan, Johnston and Ott have each assisted on a goal.

No. 19 Penn State (2-2) has been led by the offensive trio of Tara Maguire, Heather Gorlaski and Sonje Volla. Maguire has tallied three goals, including one game winner, on 22 shots. She has also assisted on three goals for nine points on the season.

Gorlaski and Volla each have five points on the year. Gorlaski has connected for two goals and one assist on 16 shots. Volla, whose older sister Streya was a Minutewomen captain last year, also has two goals, including one game winner and one assist.

Penn State goalie Jamie Smith has seen all 280 minutes of action in the Lady Lion cage, stopping 41 shots for a .820 save percentage. Smith has allowed nine goals in her four games, which gives her a 2.25 goals against average.

UMass next plays Wednesday, Sept. 25 when it travels to Rhode Island.

Women's XC returns home

By Corey Goodman
Collegian Correspondent

The Massachusetts women's cross country team is looking forward to returning to Amherst this weekend, after placing second last week to Brown in the Thetford Invitational, at Thetford, Vt.

UMass' 40 point total was 12 better than UConn's 52, but three shy of first-place Brown's 37. The Minutewomen plan on making their only home meet of the season a memorable one, when they host rivals Boston University, UConn and Vermont tomorrow at 11 a.m.

UMass will be counting on a strong performance from standout Rebecca Donaghue, who broke the course record last week by a whopping 25 seconds. The junior from Stow, finished first overall, with an impressive time of 18:45. Donaghue is projected as one of the favorites this weekend.

If the Minutewomen hope to contend with a deep and talented BU squad, they will need outstanding efforts from several other members of the team, such as senior Katie Greenia, who finished fifth last week with a time of 19:39, and junior Christy Martin who placed seventh with a time of 19:49.

UMass will also depend on newcomer Sharon Tillotson, from Wantaug, N.Y., to come up as big as she did last week, when she crossed the line at 20:03, in 11th place. Veteran Molly Dunlap, who finished 17th last week with a time of 20:46, must run another strong race.

UMass coach Julie LaFreniere was impressed with the effort given last week in Vermont, but feels a superlative effort is needed to out run the Terriers and the rest of the field this weekend.

■ volleyball

continued from page 8

The Minutewomen have surpassed many expectations this fall, winning all of the matches they should have, as well as a few they should not have.

"Villanova was a challenge. They played us very hard. I was very happy that we came back after losing those two games," Kenney said.

The match against Villanova was the first time it took her team five games to win.

Major contributors to the team include Dionne Nash and Lesley Nolan, who recently have become only players in school history to reach the 1000 mark in digs and kills, respectively. Nolan is only eight digs shy of the 1000 digs milestone, as well. Junior Michelle Paciorek also has achieved respectable statistics, ranking 15th in the nation with a .440 hitting percentage.

The freshmen Minutewomen have also put up good numbers. Sarah Watters recorded seven digs, seven kills and fell one shy of the school single-match record for aces with six, as she picked up her first collegiate start against Central Connecticut. Jill Meyers was named Most Valuable Player at the UMass Classic compiling 34 kills, 39 digs and 9.5 blocks.

"I think the freshmen are working hard. They all realize what they have to do to be Division One athletes. They've been in the weight room and conditioning. They know it takes a lot of work.

"Sarah Watters is doing very well. She can really play. She's working hard and learning how to play defense," Kenney said.

Massachusetts volleyball fans can look ahead to next weekend when the team returns to the cozy confines of the Cage and continues its conference season against St. Bonaventure and Duquesne.

The Bonnies will be in town on Friday, and the Dukes visit on Saturday. Both matches will be at 7 p.m.

Other UMass teams in action this weekend:

Water polo:
the Minutemen play Saturday at Brown
Women's tennis:
the Minutewomen travel to Princeton, N.J. for the Eastern Championships
Men's tennis:
the men's squad hosts Rhode Island, Sunday

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Play Women's Rugby! Fun and challenging. Daily 4-6pm. Call Mel @ 256-5470.

Trek Fanell! If you are interested in joining a group with similar interests, then call Martin @ 6-7003. STARFLEET International wants you!!

APARTMENT FOR RENT

3 Bedroom apartment in Puffton. For info. call 549-5941.

2 Bedroom. Squire Village. Rest of month for free. looking for someone to take over lease immediately. Mike 665-7922.

AUTO FOR SALE

90 Geo Prism Excellent condition $3600/BO. 584-8302. Ask for Mary.

GREAT CAR
1985 Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme. Good running condition. Best offer. Call 545-3001 or 634-5702.

MAZDA - 91 323 HATCHBACK. 79,000 mi., very good condition, sunroof, tune up work just done, $7900 OBO. Call 549-7286.

87 Ford Ranger New engine, great shape. Call Amy 253-1926.

1984 Ford Tempo PS PB AT AC Runs well a steal at $350. 256-4119.

1985 Buick Wagon. Good condition, new transmission $800. Dave 549-8273.

1988 Bronco II. Well maintained $3750 bo. 367-0564.

1986 Mazda reliable. 5 speed AM/FM cassette $900. 665-8246.

EMPLOYMENT

Spring Break!! Earn Cash! Highest Commissions! Lowest Prices! Travel free on only 13 sales! Free Info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710.

Cruise Ships Hiring: Earn up to $70,000/month. World Travel. Seasonal and Full Time positions. No exp necessary. For info call 1-206-971-3550 Ext. C50015.

National Parks Hiring: Positions are now available at National Parks, Forest, and Wildlife Preserves. Excellent benefits and bonuses! Call 1-206-971-3620 Ext. N50016.

Tropical Resorts Hiring: Students needed! Entry level and career positions available worldwide. Call Resort Employment Services 206-971-3600 Ext. R50012.

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS! Over $6 Billion in public and private sector Grants and scholarships are now available. All students are eligible. Let us help. For more info call 1-800-263-6495 Ext. F50014.

International Employment Earn up to $25-$45/hour teaching basic conversational english in Japan, Taiwan, or S. Korea. No teaching background or Asian Languages required. For info call 206-971-3570 Ext. J50015.

Babysitter Needed for 4 year old Tues and Thurs 3:30-6:00 Call Michele at 256-8622.

Now Hiring All Shirts Closing shirts available with bonus program. Hadley Burger King. Ask for Tim 584-5110.

EMPLOYMENT

Business Opportunity. Need additional income? Want the energy to earn it? Earth Friendly Company looking for distributors. Wild Organic food, free tape 1-800-927-2527 ext. 7368.

Now Hiring! Great pay doing odd jobs. Flexible hours, call Andrew 584-8070.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-9742.

Available now! 2BDR townhouse on bus line. $630/month. Squire Village 665-2203.

FOR SALE

Fridge w/freezer 4ft tall, mint. Call Kelly 549-0920 $90 or BO.

PINBALL MACHINE. Reconditioned $1,000.00 (413) 253-5383.

Futon, Double, Frame and Custom Cover $200.00 OBO 548-9778.

Stereo Systems and components, used/reconditioned. Large selection, honest advice, warranty, great prices. We buy audio, video, DJ, musical equipment. Stereo and Video Exchange at Jackson's Flea Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. Open Sundays only, 9-5. Other days call Amherst, 256-0941.

Waterbed Oak, Queen, Drawers $225. 549-6412.

I have 4 Dave Matthews Tix Oct. 4 MSG. Need to sell. Call Karen 549-5079.

Notebook Computer 8 mb Ram 120 HD Both expandable Microsoft/Office with case $700. 256-1300.

Futon Double, with frame and cover $150 BO. Waterbed, Queen, Semi-waveless with headboard $150 BO. 253-5350.

Red-eared Boa, 3yrs old, 4.5 ft. long, plus 40 gallon tank, needs good home. $150 or B/O. Rick 548-9811.

SmithCorona electric typewriter w/mem. $50 /RollerBlades- Women's 8 5/6 $45 call Tanai 549-3984.

Basement Sale! Everything must go! 549-1578.

Panasonic extra bass stereo, detach speakers CD+ dual cassette. Brand $200/BO CJ 6-1919.

Bar Size Pool Table by United. Perfect condition. Includes everything! Interested? Call Scott and Dom @ 256-1088.

FOUND

Found- set of keys on an old beaded hemp necklace. call 546-4883.

Found key chain with Army guy and one Bronco house key call 549-4068.

Set of Keys in the vicinity of the church at N. Pleasant and Fearing Street. Call 549-1550 9am-noon.

INSTRUCTION

Jazz Piano Teacher Beginners to advanced students - Call Steven Page 253-3764.

WWW.SUCESS.ORG Free business education from American Institute Entrepreneurship and Real Estate Investment Courses. Retire rich in ten years.

Boxing Lessons w/Doris Bumpus. Call for brochure 732-8817.

LOST

Gray Female Lhasa Apso lost 8/12 Main St. Responds to Nala. 549-3947.

MUSICIANS

Guitar Classes Start 9/16. Rentals and Lessons Available. 10wks / $40.00 ITUG Pad 545-0579.

Blues Jam Tues 8:00pm Emerson 112 Check it out!

MISCELLANEOUS

1-900-Business Turn key program, low start-up cost. Call Conard 584-5198.

PERSONALS

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and caring assistance. 549-1906.

Hi Admirer! I had to pay for my own ad. The lines were too long, so I called in my ad. Yes, I am always looking for new friends and gaming partners. You know what I look like. When do I get to see you, meet you, talk to you? How do I know this isn't just my roommate playing a practical joke on me?
-Mr. Interested

ROOM FOR RENT

One Undergrad needed share 2 bedroom. 2 full baths, ceiling fans ++ free heat/hot water. Call here @ 549-4089.

2 Bedrooms Available in 4 Bedroom Apt. Northampton on bus route. Beautiful Apt., great location. Call 586-1612.

SERVICES

COMPUTER PROBLEMS? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Scream Savers 549-0083.

Have you been ripped off by a retailer? Contact the Student Legal Services Office regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center; 545-1995.

TRAVEL

Spring Break '97- Sell trips, earn cash and go free. STS is hiring Campus Reps/Group Organizers to promote trips to Cancun, Jamaica, and Florida. Call 800-648-4849 for information regarding America's #1 Student Tour Operator.

TRANSPORTATION

Ride Share from Lee (or Berkshire area) MTWF @ 9:05 Classes. Call Jason 243-0981.

WANTED TO RENT

Seeking 3BDR Apartment, house needed ASAP. call 546-8077.

WANTED

Hockey Players Wanted- Mullins Center Hockey League is looking for experienced players. Harold 549-3980 or 546-0400.

Wanted 100 People. New Metabolism breakthrough. Lose 5-100 lbs. Guaranteed. Call $25 - 1-800-776-9503.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
Be cautious when confronted with a get-rich-quick scheme. Watch out—it may turn into a get-broke-quick scheme before you know it. Don't forget that honesty is always the best policy. Don't take the easy way out.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
Don't let other people's emergencies become your own this week. They can take care of themselves. Stay open to new ideas at work. A series of major changes could be just around the corner. Adapting quickly to the new changes will be to your credit.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
Your energy level is high this week—just think before you act! Working too quickly will result in careless mistakes. Stay in this weekend and spend some time alone. You won't have quiet time much longer. Catch up on some overdue reading.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
A close friend is having problems right now. Don't hesitate to help. Your kind words can make all the difference in the world. Invite friends over for a fun evening later in the week. You might not feel like being alone. Sharing fun and laughter can be infectious.

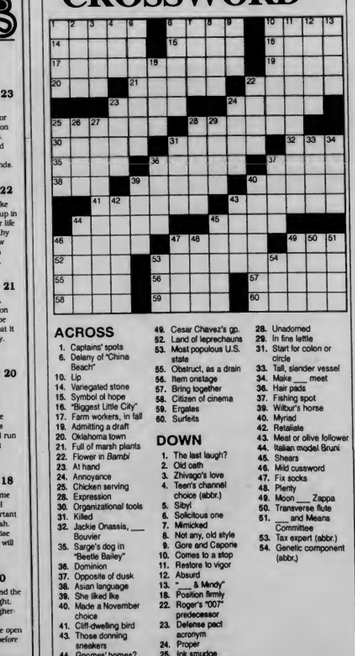
LEO
July 23-August 23
A friendship may be turning into something more. Be careful! You might feel pressure to make a decision. Sleep on it first. There is no rush. An unexpected visit from an old friend will make your spirits soar! Remember to return a borrowed item.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
A major project is finally on its way to completion. You may be feeling impatient, but hang in there a while longer. The sense of accomplishment you will feel will be well worth it! Don't take an argument too seriously. It may not be all your fault.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
Put emphasis on meeting your obligations. Avoid taking anyone for granted. Go slowly when working on your finances or important details. Careless mistakes may occur—and could be costly. As the weekend approaches, make plans with friends.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
A romance from the past may make an appearance. Don't get caught up in the moment—concentrate on your life as it is right now. Avoid any lengthy trips, and if you must travel, allow yourself extra time. Besides, it's a good chance to enjoy the scenery.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
Be generous with compliments. A coworker may need an extra pat on the back. A romantic issue may be resolved very soon. You know what it will take to truly make you happy. Don't settle for anything less.



CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
Don't take any chances at the moment: be very cautious when dealing with strangers. You may not know the full truth. Pay more attention to your appearance this week. You never know who you'll run into. Those extra moments spent primping will yield great results.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
Concentrate on one thing at a time at work. Otherwise, you may feel overwhelmed. Avoid losing important details in the busy afternoon rush. You may be reminded of a promise you made. Keep your word. You will gain respect for your honesty.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
A promotion could be just around the corner if you play your cards right. You will continue to impress higher-ups. Don't back off now. A new friendship continues to grow. Be open about your beliefs and morals before taking it further.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1. Captains' spots
6. Delany of "China Beach"
10. Lip
14. Variegated stone
15. Symbol of hope
16. "Biggest Little City"
17. Farm workers, in fall
19. Admitting a draft
20. Oklahoma town
21. Full of marsh plants
22. Flower in Bambi
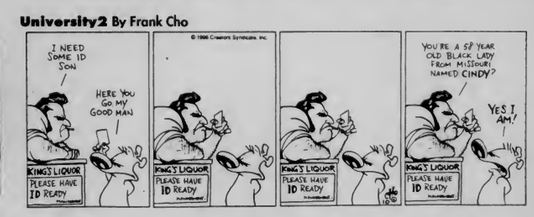
23. At hand
24. Annoyance
25. Chicken serving
28. Expression
30. Organizational tools
31. Killed
32. Jackie Onassis, ___ Bouvier
35. Sarge's dog in "Beetle Bailey"
36. Dominion
37. Opposite of dusk
38. Asian language
39. She liked Ike
40. Made a November choice
41. Cliff-dwelling bird
43. Those donning sneakers
44. Gnomes' homes?
45. Bottle stopper
46. Reviled
47. ___ Lama
49. Cesar Chavez's gp.
52. Land of leprechauns
53. Most populous U.S. state
55. Obstruct, as a drain
56. Item onstage
59. Bring together
58. Citizen of cinema
59. Ergates
60. Surfeits

DOWN
1. The last laugh?
2. Old oath
3. Zhivago's love
4. Team's channel choice (abbr.)
5. Sibyl
6. Solicitous one
7. Mimicked
8. Not any, old style
9. Gore and Capone
10. Comes to a stop
11. Restore to vigor
12. Absurd
13. "___ & Mindy"
18. Position firmly
22. Roger's "007" predecessor
23. Defense pact acronym
24. Proper
25. Ink smudge
26. "Lovely" Beatles subject
27. Regard
28. Unadorned
29. In fine kettle
31. Start for colon or circle
33. Tall, slender vessel
34. Make ___ meet
36. Hair pads
37. Fishing spot
39. Wilbur's horse
40. Myriad
42. Retaliate
43. Meat or olive follower
44. Italian model Bruni
45. Shears
46. Mild cusword
47. Fix socks
48. Plenty
49. Moon ___ Zappa
50. Transverse flute
51. ___ and Means Committee
53. Tax expert (abbr.)
54. Genetic component (abbr.)

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winck



Drabble By Kevin Fagan

8 Years in Braces By Eric Peterson

University2 By Frank Cho

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

I've got a cousin who moved to Hollywood to try to make it big.

I don't think she's in movies yet, but she's got a job as a secretary at some kind of talent search sgency.

The name of the agency is: Lose Some Weight and Move to Hollywood.

Everytime I call them I get confused... I think they're telling me to move to California and lose some weight. I usually start telling the receptionist that I'm very happy where I live but;;;;;

She talks very fast and puts me on hold and I never get to talk to my cousin because I can't hold long distance for very long.

I get confused every time they answer the phone, "Lose Some Weight and Move to Hollywood... Can I Help You?"

So, finally I said to her... "Yeah, you can help me... how do I lose some weight?"

Always Wanted One of Those By A. Morse & S. Dumas

Duh By Maura & Micaela

Close to Home By John McPherson

Wanting simply to face the inevitable, many parents have begun to organize chicken pox parties.

Hear Say By Emile Yang

YOUR COMIC COULD BE HERE
instead of this stupid ad
TO RUN A STRIP IN THE COLLEGIAN CONTACT CHRIS CONNER, MANAGING EDITOR • 545-1672

Quote of the Day

"We may not amount to a hill of beans, but this is our hill, and these are our beans."

–Lt. Frank Drebin

Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Good things about the Textbook Annex

10. State of the art climate control maintains a temperature at a balmy 120 degrees F.
9. It's not Whitmore.
8. Where else can you drop $400 on books you'll never read?
7. All purchases over $100 get you a discount coupon to Arby's.
6. It's 99% ozone friendly.
5. Annex now accepts body parts as legal tender.
4. It's Annex-tastic!
3. Most books redeemable for beer at Liquors 44.
2. It's a great way to let everybody know that you're literate.
1. Two words: Anatomy books.

Today's Staff

Laura Stock
Night Editor

Seema Gangatirkar
Copy Editor

Courtney Smith
Photo Technician

Christopher Brown
Dan Bodah
Matt McCarthy
Production

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Chicken Cutlet Sand.	Chicken / Tofu Fajita
Cheese Steak Sand.	Duchess Meat Pie
Cheese Pizza	Qtr. Pound Burger

Hampden

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburgers	Chicken Fajita
Chicken Cutlet Sand.	Cod in Basil Garlic Sauce
Cod Sub

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Grilled Cheese	Chicken Fajita
Sloppy Joe	Tri-Bean Casserole
Vegan Sloppy Joe	Pastabilites
Spaghetti	Sausage Sand.
	Half time Deli

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Grilled Cheese	Chicken Fajita
Pizza	Duchess Meat Pie
Spaghetti	Tri-Bean Casserole
Sloppy Joe, Vegan Joe	Pastabilites
	Sausage Sand.

Attention Sports Fans
Listen to UMass' only call-in radio talk show, Sportsline, Sundays from 5-6 p.m. on 91.1 FM WMUA.

Sports

Hartford returns to site of NCAA horrors

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

The last time the Hartford Hawks strode across the mangled pitch of Richard F. Garber Field, they were left stunned in the midst of a crisp November afternoon, chilled further by the breeze of Rachel LeDuc running past Hawk goalkeeper Danielle Rotondi to score the game-winner with 1.4 seconds remaining in double overtime of an NCAA women's soccer Tournament match.

Of the 1,327 fans in attendance for the magical moment, few will forget it — those who were clad in Scarlet uniforms in particular.

The match proved not to be not merely an end of a season, but also the end of an era for the Al-Marzook faithful, as the Hawks will have a new look when they return to Garber Field tomorrow at 1 p.m.

Long-time coach Austin Daniels, the 1989 national coach of the year, left Connecticut for Boulder and the first-year program at the University of Colorado. Stephanie Chinura, the Hawks' top scorer last year, with 15 goals and 35 points, followed her coach out west.

Couple those losses with the graduations of first team All-American Jessica Reifer and Danish international midfielder Irene Stelling, the main catalyst in Hartford's offensive transition game, and it isn't overly surprising that the Hawks have slipped this season.

The Hawks are off to the worst start in school history at 1-4, a fact that has Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy more uptight than at ease. The 7-0 shellacking Hartford received on Sunday at the hands of No. 3 Santa Clara out by the San Francisco Bay will only serve as motivation tomorrow.

"Last week they weren't playing UMass," Rudy said. "When they play us, they're always up. I haven't seen a year when they weren't up.

"I don't presume anything right now, particularly with Hartford. With our history with Hartford I take nothing for granted."

One area that Hartford has not changed is their goalkeeping, where both Rotondi and Sloane Cox return from a solid 1995 season. Cox made her first collegiate start in a 0-0 draw with UMass on Oct. 11 in West Hartford and played solidly. Rotondi, meanwhile started 17 of the team's 21 matches last year. The two have evenly split the goalkeeping duties thus far in 1996.

Hartford also has many new faces this year as it adapts to new coach Mark Krikorian's system. The

Turn to MINUTEWOMEN, page 6

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Robin Smith and the UMass women's soccer team will try to fend off longtime rival Hartford tomorrow at 1 p.m. at Garber Field.

Football faces Richmond, Reid on road tomorrow

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

For the Massachusetts football team an all important game awaits this Saturday in Richmond, Va. as the Minutemen take on the Richmond Spiders at 1 p.m.

The Minutemen (1-1) head into UR Stadium to take on the Spiders (1-1), in the first Yankee Conference battle for both schools.

For the Minutemen, a win would show that last week's well-balanced effort on offense was not a fluke, and give them tremendous confidence heading home for their season opener next week against Northeastern.

The Minutemen, who came away with a 28-10 victory last week at Holy Cross, came away with 263 yards on the ground and threw for 224 yards in the air. Eliminating the penalties and turnovers though is what UMass needs to work on going into this game.

"We've been trying to eliminate them during practice, and play in a disciplined way," UMass coach Mike Hodges said. "We need to play with poise every game."

Frank Allesio and Ron Brockington lead the attack on the ground for UMass, as both racked up over 100 yards last week. Along with the return of sophomore Matt Jordan, who has recovered from a hamstring injury, the Minutemen will try for more 100-yard rushing games this week as well.

Quarterback Anthony Catterton will look to put forth another solid passing effort. Last week, he found five different receivers and threw three touchdowns in a career- high performance.

The Minutemen hold a 7-5 advantage in the all-time series with the Spiders, which began in 1984. However, UMass has lost the last two games with Richmond, falling 14-13 in 1994 and 21-7 at home in 1995. The Minutemen are 3-3 against the Spiders in Richmond.

The Spiders are undefeated at home at 6-0 under coach Jim Reid, who served as the head UMass coach from 1986- 1991, before making the move to Richmond.

"The guys know it's an important football game for us," Hodges said. "They're a very, very defensive football team, and it's going to be a challenge for us."

Richmond is coming off a loss last week at The Citadel, where it fell 13-10, after winning the first game of the season at home against Colgate, 13-0.

Richmond quarterback Jimmie Miles, hurt with a hairline fracture in his left non-throwing hand, is doubtful for tomorrow's game. Sophomore Matt Shannon, who started last week, is the probable quarterback. Shannon completed 9 of 18 passes for 109 yards and one TD last week.

Senior tailback Minoso Rodgers will lead the ground game for the Spiders. He has 125 yards on 39 carries this season. Junior tight end Rahmaan Streater and senior wide receiver Denver Haught will be the receiving targets, if Richmond puts the ball in the air. The Spiders have only totaled 150 yards passing through the first

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 6

Massachusetts Football
University of Richmond Stadium
Saturday Sept. 21 1:00 pm

Mike Hodges

UMass vs. Richmond

Jim Reid

On The Air
1400 AM WHMP - Marc Vandermeer, Mike McEvilly
91.1 FM WMUA - Mike Corey, Pat Sheeran

Carol Prendergast

MASSACHUSETTS WOMEN'S SOCCER
Richard F. Garber Field, Saturday, September 21, at 1 p.m.
Hartford vs. UMass

Rebecca Myers

Men's soccer travels to play Gamecocks

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

If you are going to play the numbers game, then thus far the Massachusetts men's soccer team is doing well.

With an overall record of 3-0-1, the Minutemen have earned their highest-ever national ranking. As of Tuesday's polls they were ranked No. 12 in the National Soccer Coaches of America/Umbro poll.

This weekend, the Minutemen head down south where they will face No. 3 South Carolina in one of their toughest matches of the season.

"South Carolina is, man for man, an outstanding team," Massachusetts coach Sam Koch said. "They have four players that are national team caliber players and they can play."

One of those players is starting junior forward Clint Mathis, one of the brightest stars in college soccer. Last season, Mathis almost single-handedly led the Gamecocks to the NCAA Tournament and a top five ranking.

With at least one goal in 23 of his last 28 matches, Mathis scored 25 goals in 19 games last season. To the Minutemen, it looks like UMass' leading marking back Joe Jacobson will have his hands full on Sunday.

On the other side of the ball South Carolina is anchored by sophomore Tony Soto. With outstanding speed and physical presence, Soto is a crafty defender who is known to break into the front third to finish and score goals.

John Mills will be returning between the posts for the Gamecocks as one of the school's all-time great keepers. Last season, Mills posted an impressive 0.67 goals against average allowing just 11 goals while recording 53 saves.

Thus far, South Carolina has stumbled out of the blocks, coming into the weekend with a mark of 0-3 and will be looking to win.

The Minutemen have already tangled with three ranked opponents thus far in pre-season play: No. 2 Duke (tie 1-1), No. 17 Boston College (loss 0-1), No. 6 Brown (L 0-1).

"They're struggling, so that's not good," Koch said.

UMass needs to focus if it wants to dispose of the Gamecocks. On Wednesday, the Minutemen tied New Hampshire 1-1 due to relatively inconsistent play.

"We've gone on highs and lows," Koch said. "We played very well against Duke, then we didn't play well against Brown. We played very well against BU, then we didn't play very well against Holy Cross. We played very well against Maine and we didn't play well against UNH."

If that's the case, UMass should be all set for the weekend, all though it will take more than assumption to beat South Carolina.

The Minutemen need to work more off the ball to live up to their full potential. Granted the one-two combination for Mike Butler and Dave Siljanovski are both in the top 10 in the career points category (76 and 53 respectively), but UMass needs to see more help in the front third of the field. The Minutemen are clearly at the top of their game when they play together.

"I'm not worried about South Carolina, to be honest with you," Koch said. "It's a great opportunity for us to travel and have that type of competition. The game that's important for us is Hartford when we come back, because that's a New England game."

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

Dave Siljanovski (10) will lead the UMass men's soccer team into South Carolina to face the Gamecocks Sunday.

Field hockey looks to cage Lady Lions

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

After rain postponed the first game of the season at Totman Field for the Massachusetts field hockey team, the Minutewomen travel to Storrs, Conn. on Sunday for a 1 p.m. match-up with Penn State.

The No. 5 Minutewomen (4-1) were to face Yale on Wednesday, but rain forced the postponement of the game. UMass hasn't had a game since last weekend, when the team split a pair of games in an invitational tournament hosted by Iowa.

For the Minutewomen, defense has been a mainstay this year. Led by Atlantic 10 and UMass Player of the Week Hilary Rose, the UMass defense has only given up five goals this season, giving Rose a .930 save percentage. She has stopped 66 shots for a .930 goal against average in her 373 minutes of play.

Anchored by senior co-captain Melanie Gore, the backs (Amy Ott, Jen Gutzman and Laura Phelan) have played solidly in front of Rose.

Offensively, Massachusetts has had goal production from seven different players. A-10 Rookie of the Week, Saskia Fuchs leds all UMass scorers with four goals and three assists. Senior All-American Kyle Rothenberger has scored twice and set up two goals as well.

Courtney MacLean has scored three goals on the year, and Erica Johnston has netted a pair. Gutzman, Katherine McClellan Shron Hughes each have one goal

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 6

Rhode Island Classic up next for Minutewoman volleyball

By Jeremy Adams
Collegian Correspondent

The Massachusetts women's volleyball team puts its 10-1 record on the line when it travels to Kingston, R.I. for the Rhode Island Classic this weekend.

The Minutewomen start their conference schedule in the tournament's opening match against Rhode Island on Friday night. The Rams enter the Atlantic-10 season with games against then-top ranked Hawaii and No. 8 Long Beach State under their belt. Rhode Island, which was picked to repeat as conference champions, beat Massachusetts in the final game of last season's A-10 tournament.

Brown and the aforementioned Long Beach State round out the competition for the Minutewomen's weekend schedule. This will be the fourth tournament of their young season.

"We're ready for the conference season. We've had enough tournament," UMass coach Bonnie Kenney said. "It was great to play at home. At the UMass Classic we played very well."

Kenney's team captured the title in last weekend's UMass/Reebok Classic, which it hosted at the Curry Hicks Cage. Massachusetts defended its turf well, going 4-0 against Central Connecticut, Villanova, Delaware and Seton Hall.

Turn to VOLLEYBALL, page 6

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue xx New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890.• Daily Since 1967 Monday, September 23, 1996

Sugar-free Bob Mould

Bob Mould is back on the road for a solo tour. Check out our preview for tonight's show (See Arts & Living, page 6).

No. 5 Minutewomen win in OT

Erica Johnston's overtime goal led the field hockey team to a 4-3 win over Penn State (See Sports Weekend, page 10).

WORLD

New tension rising in southeast Lebanon

By Shibli Abi-Assi
Associated Press

RASHAYA, Lebanon — The army sent 300 commandos to frontline positions facing Israeli forces in southeast Lebanon, a move likely to sharpen tensions in the already volatile region.

Meanwhile, a five-country monitoring group investigated charges by both Lebanon and Israel that the other side violated a cease-fire in fighting last week.

The Lebanese army said it deployed the commandos in armored personnel carriers to the Rashaya district along the eastern sector of the Israeli-occupied enclave in south Lebanon.

"The reinforcements are designed to cope with any Israeli venture in the region following increased Israeli threats of large-scale aggression," a Lebanese army statement said.

NATION

Clinton criticized by gay activists after bill

By Sonya Ross
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton still was attracting the censure of gay rights activists Sunday for signing a bill denying federal recognition of same-sex marriages.

Clinton signed the Defense of Marriage Act into law early Saturday after flying home from a four-day campaign trip to six states. He signed the bill in the wee hours of the morning in hopes of minimizing news coverage.

On Sunday, about a dozen protesters greeted Clinton's motorcade as he arrived for morning services at Washington's Foundry United Methodist Church. They stood a block away from the church, and none approached the president.

The demonstration was among several planned in various cities by the homosexual advocacy group ACT UP.

"Bill Clinton shouldn't be denigrating loving, committed gay relationships. He should be taking notes," said ACT UP spokesman Steve Michael.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tuesday	Wed.
HIGH: 65 LOW: 45	HIGH: 70 LOW: 50	HIGH: 68 LOW: 52

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 10

Education the focus for Olver campaign

By Raghuram Vadarevu
Collegian Staff

Congressman John Olver (D-Amherst) announced his candidacy for re-election for the first district of Massachusetts in the U.S. House of Representatives in front of supporters in a crowded Bangs Community Center on Saturday night.

"I am a candidate for re-election, and I pledge to continue to fight for the working people of the first congressional district," Olver said. "Together, we're going to show the Gingrich Army that their version of extremism is not welcome here [in the Pioneer Valley]," he said.

Olver arrived at the Bangs Community Center as the last stop on his day-long bus trip, called the "Workhorse Express."

"I am like a workhorse. I'll work hard, day in, day out. I'll continue to be there when you need help, when you need an ally, and when you need a voice," Olver said.

Marcia Hill, a junior psychology major at the University, said she credits Olver for saving her financial aid from cuts by the "Gingrich Congress."

According to Olver, he fought strongly to save financial aid funding for 150,000 students nationwide.

"I think we need financial aid because it is what enables middle class families to go to college," Hill said.

Olver said he will promote education from children in Head Start, and will support parents and students who are struggling to pay the rising cost of higher education.

"It's through education, job training and a renewed commitment to research and development, that we can assure ourselves and our children the job opportunities for a prosperous future," Olver said.

Olver said students should vote for him because he has fought his whole life for higher education as opposed to his Republican counterparts.

Olver points to the Weld Administration, which he says, has cut funding for higher education time and time again.

"I was a leader for higher education when I was a state senator," Olver said, referring to his time in the Massachusetts State Senate.

Nationally, Olver said, President Clinton's plan to make a two-year college education universal is "a great proposal because it doesn't cost a great deal."

Olver boasts of his commitment to education and describes it as a "place where we can make a great impact [in the country]."

Although Olver emphasized his commitment to UMass, many students at the University criticized him recently for declining an invitation to debate on campus with his opponent, state Senator Jane Swift (R-North Adams).

The debate was a part of the UMass Student Government Association's voter registration and education campaign for the upcoming election.

Olver declined, citing commitments to five debates in the first congressional district that stretches from Worcester to Berkshire county.

According to Olver, his campaign will make several visits to the UMass campus to "let people know what we have done and... to let them know of Gingrich cuts."

In other issues, Olver declared his commitment for the environment,

Turn to OLVER, page 3

THANG VO/ COLLEGIAN

Rep. John Olver gave a speech at a rally for his re-election at the Bangs Community Center on Saturday night.

Calipari returns to Amherst

Former UM coach promotes Refuse to Lose at book-signing

LAUREN KOSKY/ COLLEGIAN

Former UMass Minuetmen basketball coach, John Calipari, gave a speech before his book signing on Friday afternoon in the Campus Center.

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Before a crowd that had begun to gather at 9 a.m., John Calipari took center stage outside of the University Store on the Campus Center Concourse, where he was signing and promoting his new book, Refuse to Lose, last Friday.

The former University of Massachusetts men's basketball coach and new head coach of the New Jersey Nets spoke to a crowd of several hundred before signing began.

The reaction to the coach's return to UMass was favorable, as many students and fans stood for hours in line for the chance to chat with Calipari.

Freshman pre-nursing major Becky Araujo waited for "about an hour" to have three books signed by Calipari. With one book for her brother, another for her boyfriend, and the third for a friend, Araujo said she did not have the cash to purchase a forth copy for herself.

"I got my checkbook signed instead," she said.

Several fans who did not wait in line to see the coach instead shouted their support as they passed by. There were yells of "Hey coach, good luck," and "Coach Cal, keep refusing to lose."

Calipari was happy with the turnout, and the welcome he received.

"It was special," he said. "It's nice coming home and having that kind of response."

As they left Calipari's table, some fans thanked him for last year's and previous seasons. Many wished him luck in his new job as Nets' coach, although some fans were not very optimistic about the coach's chances of surviving in the professional game.

"I don't think he'll make it in the pros," said Eric Schlumper, a junior sport management major. "I'm not a big NBA fan, but I'll root for him to do well. I won't root for the Nets though."

Schlumper wasn't surprised by Calipari's departure from the University.

"I would have gone too, if I had been given the opportunity," he said.

Carmelo Travieso, who played for three years under Calipari, was happy for his former coach.

"We were a little disappointed with everything that was going on," Travieso said. "We realized that it was a good decision for him, and we were happy for him. He always talked about and dreamed about coaching in the NBA, and we're happy he got the chance to go."

Many of the fans at the book-signing said that they were anxious to see Calipari in action when he returns to the William D. Mullins Center for a preseason exhibition game. The game, scheduled for Sunday, Oct. 13, pits Calipari's Nets against the Washington Bullets.

"[The return to UMass] was special. It's nice coming home and having that kind of response."
John Calipari

"I'm looking forward to seeing him out there," Travieso said. "I'm looking forward to seeing if he's yelling at the guys as much as he used to yell at us."

Calipari is donating all of the proceeds of the book to the University. The money will be given to the Alumni Foundation, and will be used for various funds and programs. Calipari has been a long-time supporter of the University, having made several donations to the W.E.B. DuBois Library.

"[Donating the money] was decided a long time ago," Calipari said. "When I decided to do the book, I talked to [Athletic Director] Bob Marcum about it."

Refuse to Lose, published by Ballantine Books, was co-written by noted sports author Dick Weiss.

Prof. Bracey looks to the future

Editor's Note: this article is the third in a four part series profiling key administrators and faculty at the University of Massachusetts

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

Professor John H. Bracey, Jr. has taught for University of Massachusetts Afro-American Studies department since 1972, and has evolved into one of the most influential faculty members on the Amherst campus.

Coupled with his dynamic teaching career, Bracey serves as Presiding Officer/Speaker of the Faculty Senate, placing him at the center of debates surrounding a university in transition

An education background

Bracey was born in Chicago, and grew up Washington D.C.

Bracey was raised on a college campus, and said that the only real work is teaching.

"I come from a family who has been teaching in America since slavery," he said. "It never occurred to me not to be a teacher. Within our family, teaching is the really only respectable profession."

Bracey attended Howard University, then transferred to Roosevelt University in Chicago, where he earned his B.A. in 1964. He has also done graduate work at Roosevelt and Northwestern University.

Before arriving at UMass, Bracey had taught Afro- American history at Northern Illinois University of Rochester.

He came to UMass 27 years ago to assist in the formation of an innovative Black Studies program.

"I came here for one year to take part with Black Studies," Bracey said. "It was not a career move."

However, Bracey has remained at UMass, which he said is a fairly comfortable place to work.

Within his classes, Bracey, a life member of the Organization of American Historians, said that he attempts to teach people to use their minds.

"I am trying to teach students to cultivate their minds," he said. "To think critically, analyze, evaluate and make critical judgements."

The importance of history

"History is important because we come to understand that we can do things another way," Bracey said. "Three hundred years ago, we were not here, and in 300 years we might not be here. History lets you see a process."

"Live your life and do the best you can. Make a difference for the better; and if that don't get you to heaven, then I
John Bracey

Bracey said that African American history is important because it shows a alternative perspective to what may be considered mainstream.

With this perspective, however, he added that, "there is not a lot of evidence that the world is being transformed."

"Cultures flow back and forth; if you can get a handle on it, you won't feel so hopeless, so powerless," Bracey said. "In the long run, teaching comes out."

Cultural diversity at UMass

"Overall, cultural diversity at UMass is not that great," Bracey said. "But it never has been."

Bracey said that in terms of the distribution of minority faculty in both numbers and quality are sufficient. In terms of the administration, there is at least one Afro-American member in every major area, but said there was still room for improvement.

"The numbers of minorities could be better," Bracey said. "You could put all of them in one room."

He added that not having a large minority population is fairly typical of large higher education institutions.

Bracey said that there needs to be more recruiting, specifically in areas where there are larger concentrations of minorities, like Springfield and Holyoke.

"If you look for people and ask them to come, they'll come," he said. "Recruiting is fairly simple."

Personal Perspectives

Bracey said that a personal shortcoming throughout his teaching career was a tendency to be extremely impatient with all forms of injustice. He added that at times, this could be a strength, however, it was something of a sidetrack for him on the way to something greater.

"Traditionally, I have been impatient, which people might feel is abrasive; but it doesn't really bother me," Bracey said.

Bracey said that he tends not to think in psychological terms.

"Live your life and do the best you can. Make a difference for the

Turn to BRACEY, page 2

Lobbying report released

By Jim Drinkard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Corporations, trade groups, unions and other special interests spent at least $400 million trying to influence the federal government in the first half of 1996, according to an analysis of the first disclosures under a new lobbying law. Expenditures ranged from the millions spent by AT&T and the nation's largest doctors' lobby to less than $10,000 by the San Francisco-based Family Violence Prevention Fund, which can afford only a part-time lobbyist.

The figure is the most comprehensive estimate yet of amounts special interests spend on lobbying official Washington, but experts say it is probably conservative.

"I don't think you're at all out of bounds with the thought of a billion-dollar-a-year industry," said Ron Shaiko, an American University professor who teaches lobbying.

The Associated Press derived the $400 million spending total by randomly sampling one of every 50 of the more than 9,000 lobbying reports on file at Capitol Hill and using their reported lobbying expenses to project an industry-wide total.

In addition, AP randomly reviewed some 1,800 reports in greater detail, and searched the reports of 200 of the most active players in Washington. Those methods further bolstered the $400 million figure.

Among the largest spenders in the first half of 1996:

-Philip Morris, $11.3 million. The tobacco giant spent its money primarily in a fight to keep tobacco products from coming under regulation of the Food and Drug Administration.

-The American Medical Association, $8.5 million. The nation's largest professional group for doctors lobbied on Medicare and Medicaid, tobacco regulation, health care and legislation to change liability reform.

-The U.S. Chamber of Commerce, $7.5 million. The chamber lobbied heavily on behalf of the Republican "Contract with America," which included many business-friendly provisions.

Under a law that took effect Jan. 1, groups that lobby on federal legislation or regulations must file reports estimating their expenditures twice a year. The first were due beginning Aug. 15.

For two reasons, the first six-month figure probably is low. First, 1996 so far has been a quieter-than-usual season for lobbyists, said Wright Andrews, president of the American League of Lobbyists, the profession's main trade group.

Second, the new reports ignore money spent on grass-roots lobbying, the rapidly growing practice of using advertising, fax machines, mail and telephone banks to stir up public support or opposition to policies.

Not only the Chamber of Commerce but groups including the National Restaurant Association and the National Association of Home Builders spent heavily last year promoting the "Contract With America" with the public. Unions are spending $35 million this election year on broadcast ads promoting Democratic issues. The new numbers reflect none of that spending.

The new law also does not require spending reports on such other forms of influence as political donations, state and local lobbying and public relations and advertising.

For Your Information

FYI's are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Monday, Sept. 23

Meeting — The Golden Key National Honor Society will be holding a general meeting at 7 p.m. in room 805–809 of the Campus Center. All are encouraged to attend. Any questions, call Michelle at 549–0189.

Meeting — The Asian American Student Union will hold it's first general meeting at 7:30 p.m. in room 174 of the Campus Center. Non–members are welcome, and there are positions open. For more information, call the AASA office at 545–0189.

Meeting — Alpha Phi Omega, a co–ed community service fraternity, will be holding an informational meeting in their office, room 409 of the Student Union, at 7 p.m. Refreshments will be served. For further information, call 545–2068.

Meeting — Circle K International, a collegiate community service organization, is having a meeting at 7 p.m. in room 409 of the Student Union. For more information, call Aimee at 665–7712.

Wednesday, Sept. 25

Meeting — The Cannabis Reform Coalition invites everyone to their first general meeting at 7 p.m. at Earthfoods. On the agenda: Hiring an office staffer, nominations for the executive board, and building faculty support. For more information, call Brian Julin at 545–1122.

Meeting — Spectrum, a student–run art and literary magazine, will hold its first general meeting for all those interested at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center. For more information, call 545–2240.

Meeting — The MASSPIRG general interest meeting will be at 7 p.m. in Campus Center room 101.For more information, call Leigh at 545–0199.

Reception — The Women's Studies Welcome Back Reception for students, faculty, staff and friends will be held from 12–2 p.m. in room 1001–2 of the Campus Center. Refreshments will be served, and all are welcome.For more information, call 545–1922, or e–mail at womens– studies@wost.umass.edu or http://www–unix.oit.umass.edu/~wostu.

Thursday, Sept. 26

Meeting — There will be an informational meeting about a UMass trip to Israel being offered on Winter Break (Dec. 23–Jan 2), at 7 p.m. at the Hillel House.

Meeting — The Math Club will hold its first meeting at 7 p.m. in LGRT 1521D.All math majors invited. Come tour the new undergraduate reading lounge and meet other math majors. Pizza will be served for those signed up in LGRT 1521D ahead of time.

Notices

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley offers rides to students to attend the 10 a.m. service in Amherst. Drivers arrive at the Knowlton and Prince bus stops at 9:45 a.m. Please call Mark to confirm, or for other stops, at 253–0361.

Everywoman's Center — "Acculturation Group for Latina Women," facilitated by Mari Vicente, Thursday from 4–6 p.m. "Child Sexual Abuse Survivors Support Groups:" Group 1 facilitated by Sara Elinoff, Mondays from 7–9 p.m. Group 2 facilitator, day and time TBA. "Coming Out Group For Lesbians," facilitated by Lynne Schachne, Mondays 4– 5:30 p.m. "Lifting Your Spirits," facilitated by Carla Brennan and Diana Dalendina, Wednesdays from 4–5:30 p.m. "Eco–Psychology for Women," facilitated by Carla Brennan, Fridays 10–11:30 a.m. "Post Abortion Support Group," facilitated by Peggy Warwick, Wednesdays 5:30– 6:30 p.m. "Self–Esteem & Assertiveness for Women," facilitated by Carla Brennan, Wednesdays 6:30–8 p.m. "Single Mothers Support Group," facilitated by Amy Rosebury, Tuesdays 1–2:30 p.m. "Women & Divorce," facilitated by Ali Thompson, Tuesdays 6:30–8 p.m. All groups offered by the Everywoman's Center begin in October, and offer a safe and confidential space. For other groups, call 545–0883.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition meetings are every Tuesday at 7 p.m. in room 306 of the Student Union. For more information, call the ARC office at 5–1925.

Dancing—Beginner classes in Cajun dancing and Appalachian clogging are starting on Sunday evenings from 6–7 p.m. No experience or partner needed, all ages welcome. Classes are held in Westfield at 132 Elm St. For more information, call Jo Sarnelli at (413) 746–9067.

Five College–REFLECT, the Five College Bereavement Support Program is a student organization devoted to helping those coping with grief. REFLECT is offering two free eight week grief support groups this semester. Groups are forming now. For more information, call 577–5316.

Staff Needed—The UMass Index yearbook needs staff in all departments. Editorial positions are available in Photo, Layout, Copy and Marketing departments. An assistant copy editor and assistant sports editor are also needed. Meetings are held on Wednesdays at 7 p.m., 304 Student Union, or call 545–0848 if interested.

Community — Womanshelter is a battered woman's shelter located in Holyoke serving the Holyoke/Chicopee area and parts of Hampshire County. Womanshelter has an extensive community education program providing speakers and workshops on the following topics: domestic violence, teen– dating violence, date rape, sexual harassment, domestic violence and children, and many more. The services are free of charge, but the Womanshelter will gladly accept donations. For information concerning these programs or to arrange a program date for a group, call Edith Jennings from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday at 538–9717.

Support group — Synthesis Center Associate Rebecca Reid leads an ongoing support group for single people over 30 from 7:15 to 8:45 p.m. in downtown Amherst. Single, divorced, widowed and all sexual orientation are welcome. There is a low fee. For information, call 253–5494.

Religious — The Muslim Student Association at the University of Massachusetts invites all Muslims in the Amherst area to weekly Friday prayer from 1 to 2 p.m. in the Campus Center. The room number will be posted on the Notice Board. For more information, call Utama at 256–8482 or Laili at 253–0874.

Discussion Group — "A Course in Miracles" will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for 10 weeks on Mondays starting in September. For more information, call 253–3795.

Astronomy — The Amherst Area Amateur Astronomers Association will conduct free public solar observing at 1 p.m. at the Amherst Town Common every Saturday in September. Also offered every Saturday this month will free planetarium shows at 4 p.m. in Amherst College Bassett Planetarium, and free public observatory observing at 9 p.m. at Amherst College Wilder Observatory. Every Sunday this month there will be free public observing at Mt. Pollux, off South East St., in South Amherst.

Dance — The Northeast American School of Dance Studio in Northampton will hold a dance spree every Friday from 8:30 p.m. to midnight every Friday. People can dance to variety of music in a smoke and alcohol–free environment. All ages welcome. Sliding scale. For more information, call 584–8167.

Singing — The Pioneer Valley Capella has immediate openings for people of all voices interessed in a small, select ensemble singing classical music. Rehearsals are held on Thursday evenings in Northampton. For more information, call Tom at 536–3072 or Karen at 259–1646.

■ Bracey

continued from page 1

better, and if that don't get you to heaven, then I don't want to go," he said. "Why do people want to go and be like everyone else; people need to bring a different perspective to things, otherwise, why bother?"

Professional Experience

Bracey has co–edited (with August Meier and Elliot Rudwick) a number of volumes concerning the African American experience. Included are Black Natonalism in America, eight volumes in the series, Explorations in the Black Experience, and a revised edition of Black Protest in the Sixties.

Presently, Bracey is co–editing the microfilm series, Black Studies Research Sources, with August Meier. The series includes A. Phillip Randolph, Mary McLeod Bethune and the National Association of Colored Women's Club.

Bracey and Meier are also co–editing a series of monographs entitled "Blacks in the New World," published by the University of Illinois Press. The two have also published "Towards a research agenda on Blacks and Jews in United States History," in The Journal of American Ethnic History.

In addition, Bracey and Meier are working on two monographs tentatively entitled, "The NAACP: A Short History" and "A. Phillip Randolph and the NAACP: A Study in Cooperation and Conflict." With Ernest Allen, Bracey is now completing a history documentary, "Unite or Perish: Black Nationalist and Radical Thought 1954–1974."

Goals for the University

Bracey made several comments on the administrations plan to gain affiliation with the American Association of Universities (AAU), a prestigious organization with influential power in Washington, D.C.

"The AAU is a goal that the administration likes to play with," he said., "But I don't think that the faculty goes to a university just because they are number one."

Instead, Bracey said that UMass should be more interested in the faculty doing solid teaching, the quality of the students and the strength of the library.

"A different goal would be to make UMass the best place possible within the available resources," he said. "A place where students don't go broke and have undo trauma and stress."

Bracey stressed that the goal of UMass should not be to be number one, two or three; he said that instead, the faculty and staff need to be treated with respect and receive fair money for their labor.

The working environment

"UMass is one of the easier places to work," Bracey said. "Even though we don't get enough resources."

He added that one of the best aspects of UMass was the amazing variety of intellects, which allows for productive interdisciplinary contact.

"A major problem at UMass is simply being a public university in a state where there is a large lack of money for public education," Bracey said.

As for location, the professor said that living in Amherst allows one to experience the culture of a large city without the high expenses.

"If you teach at Harvard, then you have to live in Cambridge and if you teach at Princeton, you have to live in New Jersey," Bracey said. "Amherst is close enough to New York and Boston."

COURTNEY SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Professor John Bracey of the Afro–American Studies department ranks as one of the most important UMass faculty members.

The Career Center Is Coming To Campus! ... on September 24

1996 Fall Open House "Tools for the Road"

2 - 8 p.m., Student Union Ballroom

Sponsored by: The Career Center, Dugital Semiconductotr and EDS

◆ MEET Career Center counselors and staff!!!

◆ REGISTER for on-campus recruiting—Workshops at: 2 & 3pm, "DR. Pro" Discs on sale, resume critiques

◆ WIN PRIZES from downtown stores, salons and eateries!!!

◆ FILL-A-BAG—free books and info worth over $30.00!!!

◆ HEAR nationally known speakers!

Special Thanks to:
IBM
The SUB
The Mercantile Henion Bakery
Sun Microsystems
Copy Cat Print Shop
Claudia's Cafe
Always In Bloom
Regency Stylists
Aesthetics European Skin Care

4 p.m. Bruce Tulgan, 20-something author and president of the Rainmaker strategic consulting firm presents his career management model called "Yourself, Inc."

6 p.m. Dr. Dennis Kimbro, Director of the Center for Entrepreneurship, Clark Atlanta University, author and advocate of being entrepreneurial in the job market, teaches us "How to Fly".

Book sales and signing follow each presentation

A MUST for seniors and graduate students, GREAT for juniors, SUPER for sophomores, MILDLY ENTERTAINING for first year students!! SEE YOU THERE!!!

(Please note: Career Center offices will be closed this day)

■ Olver

continued from page 1

health care, public safety and housing.

"John [Olver] didn't let Mr. [Gingrich] cut funds for self– help housing" said Northfield resident Kim Watson, who has recently finished building a house through the self–help housing program of Northfield. "Now my children have something to look forward to."

"I've delivered millions in economic development dollars for industrial parks and community facilities," Olver said.

Olver also said he will fight to protect the environment from Republican cuts.

In addition to fighting for the environment, Olver said he "will assure that all Americans have access to quality health insurance they can afford."

Olver added, "in our America, no child should go without health care." He also noted there are 40 million Americans who don't have health insurance.

According to Bob Garvey, Sheriff of Hampshire County, Olver has played an integral part in getting a community policing program called TRIAD.

"I've delivered millions more to put cops on the streets, in communities large and small, to provide our citizens with the safety they deserve," said Olver, on the importance of public safety.

Before Olver went into politics, he was a chemistry professor at the University during the 1960s. Olver was first elected to his current seat on June 4, 1991, replacing the late Congressman Silvio O. Conte.

Before his election, Olver was a Massachusetts State Senator. Presently, Olver is a member of the House Budget Committee, Science Committee and the Subcommittees on Basic Research and Energy and Environment.

The bus trip began at the Old Bessie Clarke Building in Pittsfield and ran through Olver's campaign headquarters in Westfield, and the Veteran's Center in Leominster.

The trip was designed to cover each of the areas in the first congressional district.

Congressman Olver has a debate scheduled with his opponent, State Sen. Jane Swift, on Sept. 29 from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Springfield's Channel 57.

Mather open house to offer job placement for students

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

Last year, over 2,000 undergraduate and graduate students attended the University of Massachusetts' Mather Career Center Open House. This year, the Career Center employees are anticipating an even larger turn–out.

"We highly encourage everyone to attend," said Ruth Carey, Assistant Director of Career Services. "Seniors should come to see what services we offer, juniors and sophomores should attend because they need to get started on their resumes soon, and freshmen should attend so they know what's available."

The sixth annual Fall Open House will be hosted by the Center on Tuesday, Sept. 24 from 2–8 p.m. in the Student Union Building Ballroom.

In addition to career placement information, the event will offer two nationally known motivational speakers, Bruce Tulgan and Dr. Dennis Kimbro.

"These two speakers have many wonderful tools to offer. They are going to their share their ideas of success," Carey said.

President and founder of Rainmaker Inc., a consulting firm which advises corporations on ways to improve job satisfaction among "20–something" workers, Tulgan will speak on his own career planning model for students, "Yourself, Inc."

"Tulgan has some great ideas on how to motivate young people," said Joan Stoia, Director of the Career Center.

Kimbro, who has appeared on the "Today Show" and "Larry King Live," is the Director of the Center for Entrepreneurship at Clark University in Atlanta. He will speak on, "How to Fly: Becoming a Personal Entrepreneur."

Tulgan will speak at 4 p.m., followed by Kimbro at 6 p.m.

Tulgan's book, Managing Generation X, along with Kimbro's book, Think and Grow Rich: A Black Choice, co– authored with Napoleon Hill, will be available for purchase and signing.

"Students don't want someone else's definition of success. They want to create their own. These speakers are not going to say in order to succeed you have to do it my way...they want students to know what is available to them so they can succeed," Stoia said.

Demonstrations on the Center's new job referral program, "DR. Pro," will be offered at 2 and 3 p.m.

The program will allow users to call the job line day or night after filling out a survey.

"It helps compensate for our distance away from campus," Stoia said.

The Mather Career Center is located off East Pleasant Street, about a mile from Orchard Hill Residential Area.

"It's is also something that can be used after graduation. It allows alums stay connected with the University," Stoia said.

In addition to DR. Pro there will be a workshop on "Career Search," and other computer–based programs which are designed to help students identify employment options and contact prospective employers.

A gift from the Class of 1995, "Career Search" contains over 300,000 companies organized by industry, geography, size and contact person.

Those who have attended the Open House in the past will find a familiar set–up. Booths and tables will be spread out across the Ballroom in the shape of a "career highway," a user–friendly metaphor to encourage planning, exploration, destinations and occasional "u–turns."

Information and videotapes on various job search tips will be available along each stop of the "highway." Snacks will also be provided at a "pit stop."

Every student that attends the event will receive a "Guide to the Career Highway" designed specifically for their year in college. All seniors will also receive a copy of Career Power by Neil Kalt. Door prizes will be awarded as well.

This year's Open House is being sponsored by Digital Semiconductor and Electronic Data System Corporation, two of the Career Center's new "Partners in Recruiting."

Students are encouraged to bring their resumes for an opportunity to have them critiqued for format errors by EDS employee Lenora Maxwell.

Stoia stresses that the event is going to be "low key and very non–judgmental."

"UMass students do not know how great they are. They do not have enough self–confidence. We want them to know exactly what's available to them and that we are here to help and answer any questions they may have," she said.

For more information about the Open House contact Director Joan Stoia at 545–6253 or Assistant Director Ruth Carey at 545–6252.

THANG VU/COLLEGIAN

Amherst Fog!
Dense fog and chilly temperature rolled into the Amherst area yesterday morning.

PIKE

DO YOU MISS HIGH SCHOOL SPORTS?

DO YOU MISS REAL PARTIES?

ARE YOU TIRED OF BEING JUST ANOTHER NUMBER ON CAMPUS?

ARE YOU TIRED OF DOING THE SAME THING EVERY WEEKEND?

DO YOU MISS EATING GOOD FOOD?

JUST DO IT.

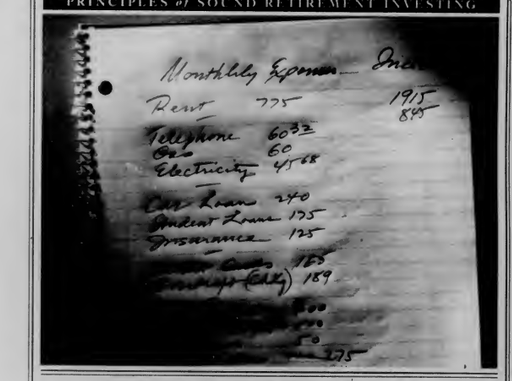
RUSH: September 23, 24 & 25
8:00 to 10:00 pm
PLEASE CONTACT ERIC SMITH 549-0676

THE DECISION IS YOURS

ΠΚΑ

Is Your Smoke Alarm Working?

More Americans have smoke alarms than ever before. But nearly half don't work.



Without a working smoke alarm as an early warning device, fire can spread unnoticed through the household, blocking escape routes and filling rooms with deadly smoke.

Make sure you're protected. Start a lifesaving habit this October 27. When you change your clock fro... daylight-saving time, change the batteries in your smoke alarms.

A message from your fire department.

©1996 Energizer® brand Batteries
International Association of Fire Chiefs

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

IRONICALLY, THE TIME TO START SAVING FOR RETIREMENT IS WHEN IT LOOKS LIKE YOU CAN LEAST AFFORD IT.

Can't afford to save for retirement? The truth is, you can't afford not to. Not when you realize that your retirement can last 20 to 30 years or more. You'll want to live at least as comfortably then as you do now. And that takes planning.

By starting to save now, you can take advantage of tax deferral and give your money time to compound and grow. Consider this: Set aside just $100 each month beginning at age 30 and you can accumulate over $172,109* by the time you reach age 65. But wait ten years and you'll have to budget $219 each month to reach the same goal.

Even if you're not counting the years to retirement, you can count on TIAA-CREF to help you build the future you deserve – with flexible retirement and tax-deferred annuity plans, a diverse portfolio of investment choices, and a record of personal service that spans 75 years.

Over 1.8 million people in education and research put TIAA-CREF at the top of their list for retirement planning. Why not join them?

Call today and learn how simple it is to build a secure tomorrow when you have time and TIAA-CREF working on your side.

Start planning your future. Call our Enrollment Hotline at 1 800 842-2888.

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.®

 Assuming an interest rate of 7% credited to TIAA Retirement Annuities. This rate is used solely to show the power and effect of compounding. Lower or higher rates would produce very different results. CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services.*

©1996 The Trustees of Columbia University in the City of New York, College Retirement Equities Fund, 730 Third Avenue, New York, NY

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Morse Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Mark McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Simsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor
Michael Elliott News Editor
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Sean Horgan Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independents from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the Collegian Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Lost in space

A long, long time ago, back in the days when the Smurfs ruled the televisions and a certain confused president sat in the White House, the launching of anything even remotely related to space was a big deal. It was a source of national pride and interest.

But today, the launch of a shuttle merits only a soundbyte or two and occasionally some file footage on CNN at 4:23 in the morning.

Dan Levenson

This is a topic that someone mentioned to me long ago and has been bouncing around my brain for a little while.

What brought about my current brainstorm on the subject is the fact that I happened to stumble upon an Associated Press news story about a shuttle mission to retrieve an astronaut who had been aboard the Mir Space Station for a ridiculously long amount of time.

Now granted, maybe I don't have all that much contact with the outside world here at UMass, but I really would have thought that I would have heard about something as significant as this.

For a government industry that needs to have the support of the people, one would think that they would want to publicize their successes as much as possible.

But maybe there's the reason that they don't make a big deal out of things. If they advertise the new advancements in space and something goes wrong, then it makes them look bad.

If they get millions of tax-paying citizens to sit down in front of the idiot box to watch a bunch of astronauts hurl themselves toward the stars in a giant electronic tin can, and that tin can explodes, we are going to question whether we should be spending money on more tin cans to go to space when we have people living in cardboard boxes here on earth.

I do feel that the space program has value, but at the same time, I find it hard to justify spending money on visiting silly little green space people when there are a wide variety of Earthlings out there whom we should be attempting to contact and understand first.

The world's oceans are an amazingly rich and diverse environment that instead of exploring, we are exploiting and destroying. It seems that as soon as we realized we weren't going to sail off the edge of the planet, we started messing with the seas.

Will we do the same thing with outer space? Will we turn the skies above us into a vast cosmic Super-Fund site?

In many ways we already have, currently there is a disgusting amount of space trash floating around out there. Do we really need more? Instead of starlight, someday maybe we will marvel at the sunlight reflected off the cosmic equivalent of beer cans and tin foil.

Maybe when Captain Kirk called space the "final frontier" he wasn't so far off the mark. Look what we did to our own "frontier" in the western United States. We took a beautiful place and trashed it like a bunch of crazed, drunk, drugged- up 1970s rock and roll musicians letting loose on a Saturday night. Space has become our hotel, and we must burn it to the ground while singing.

The reality is that there is often nothing noble nor wonderful about discovery, especially for that which is being discovered. Discovery is violent by nature, and humans have often ignored the possibility of peaceful interaction, whether travelling to new worlds or new planets.

I think that before we start to put space first on the list of spending and last on the list for public awareness, we should know what the government is doing with our tax money.

We should be willing to ask ourselves whether we are building a monument to technology among the stars, or a gigantic cosmic trash heap.

Dan Levenson is a Collegian staff member.

Unravelling family ties

Today is Yom Kippur, a Jewish high holiday. This year, I was unable to go home for the holidays. The fault is not that of the University's, nor exclusively my own. The fault lies in our society.

Families are simply losing touch. Some families are literally falling apart, while the rest simply become fractured but remain "together" with both parents.

When my parents were growing up, their grandparents and cousins were an integral part of their lives. It was not uncommon to go to grandma's house for dinner or after school. This was not the case in my life — likewise for friends.

The lifestyle that my parents knew as children and as teenagers is dead. Sure, a few families have maintained this world in the suburbs, but it is an endangered species. I can only think of three close friends who regularly see their grandparents on a weekly or biweekly basis. About the same number of friends went to school with cousins, or saw them on a weekly basis outside of school.

Numerous factors can be attributed to the decline of the family. The move to the suburbs is the most obvious one. My parents grew up in a big city, and their family primarily lived in nearby neighborhoods. Today, my immediate family lives in the suburbs of Boston, while most of the family remains in the New York City area. Even those family members who live near New York do not see each other on the regular basis that my parents often saw relatives.

However, the fracturing goes beyond losing touch with grandparents and cousins. Immediate family members are drifting apart or have very little time to spend with each other. Young families never have time to relax because they must balance careers with family. Older families, where the parents are financially established and the children are older, are also drifting apart.

In both scenarios, family dinners are an exception and not the norm as it was in the past. Young families rush through dinner, and parents went to schools in New York City. My friends and high school classmates have gone as far away as California. UMass students come from all over the nation and the world. Even our own proud university is a bit far from most of our homes in Eastern Massachusetts, but at least we don't have to fly home.

Matthew Wurtzel

The solution to this problem is elusive. It is not a question — as Bob Dole will have you believe — of turning the clock back to the 1950s when women did not work and wages were rising. We need new solutions because our world is different.

The rhetoric of politicians telling us they understand this problem and promise to fix it is hollow. These are the same people who pander to big business behind closed doors. Real statesmen should pass legislation providing families flex- time at work. Flex–time allows employees to work the usual 40 hours, but when it is convenient for them.

Other solutions to this problem include public day care and longer school hours. Parents would no longer have any excuse for allowing their children to sit and watch TV after school. Instead, students would spend more time studying in school. Such programs will not only solve the problem of latch-key kids, but will also improve our education system.

The politicians and businessmen who support such programs will save the American family. However, America will lose the pristine image of a family as Rockwell knew it, if we do not act soon.

Matthew Wurtzel is a Collegian columnist.

Editorial Policy

The editorial/Opinion page welcomes columns, letters and cartoons from UMass and the rest of the Five–College Area.

Letters and columns must be typed and double spaced, with the writer's name, local address and phone number attached. This information is subject to verification prior to publication.

Anonymous submissions will not be printed.

The editorial staff reserves the right to edit letters and columns for grammar, clarity and length.

Any submission that is requested to be left unedited will not be considered for publication.

Submissions become the property of the Collegian and will not be returned.

The Editorial staff is not required to print all submitted material.

Letters should be no longer than 450 words and columns should be about 70 typed lines.

Submissions should be sent to the Editorial Desk, c/o Mark McGrath, 113 Campus Center, UMass Amherst 01003.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Use our power wisely

The old adage "don't believe everything you read" has never been more true than it is today. As various media become more accessible and more electronic, it becomes increasingly difficult to determine where our information is coming from.

The world has become an interconnected place where experience is no longer isolated. For the average American, the outside world is experience, through various media which consciously and unconsciously effect the way we live.

Communication technologies, even as they move toward the future, can be used to maintain the status quo. The flow of information between nations, if unbalanced, can impact upon a nation's cultural, economic and political development. With the spread of television to all corners of the globe, industrialized powers, especially the United States, have been accused of a sort of "cultural imperialism" over less developed nations.

Bryan Schwartzman

Communication technology, if not allowed to function freely, can act as an instrument of oppression. Whether it is the overt manipulation of the media in a fascist state, or the subtle dominance of western media, the way the world is portrayed and perceived affects the way it is run.

The advances in human communication have, of course, served society positively and have the potential to do so on a greater level. It is possible for a group of people to understand the struggles, ideology and daily lives of another group of people halfway around the world. Through an enlightened and active press, education and understanding can occur simultaneously.

If reality is presented from different sides, it can open up the individual to new modes of thinking and perception. The major news wires do a good job of covering world news, but the information given to us is far from complete. Far too often when reading International news, one is presented with the war, conflict, famine, disaster and we are never presented with a picture of daily life or the development of a foreign country. IPS (Inter Press Services), a news wire dealing almost exclusively with third world news, often does a good job of bringing context into a story, but their work does not reach nearly enough people.

Online newspapers have great possibilities because they can make the deadline less important and they can eliminate the spacial constraints of newsprint if they become accessible enough. Just imagine if opposing groups and nationalities in the world (such as the Arab–Israeli conflict) understood how much and to what extent the other group has suffered. Each group might develop greater sensitivity and understanding towards the other. This understanding leads not to the excuse of behavior, but at least a context for which an act was done or a statement was made. The prime objective of media and education should not be the dehumanization of the other. Of course, throughout history the press has been used to do exactly that — dehumanize the other.

Accurate information can combat the substitution of metaphor for facts. Someone who is truly informed would not compare abortion to the Holocaust of the 1940s. The use of metaphor generates an emotional instead of a rational response. With accurate and timely communication, things will be understood by what they are and not by what they are compared to.

The war, famine, natural disasters and political conflicts must be covered by the media, but so must the world's beauty, diversity of people and everyday struggles. Information can convey that the only factors which separate human beings are environment and circumstance.

Bryan Schwartzman is a Collegian staff member.

Letters to the Editor

Students can change DCs

To the editor:

In response to Mark McGrath's Sept. 17 editorial on the downfalls of DC food, we agree and sympathize with students on the meal plan. As juniors, who have gone off the meal plan, we understand the struggle of being able to find a decent meal at a convenient time. We were both on the 10- meal plan and strongly agree with Mr. McGrath's point on how the University cheats students with this meal plan choice. We have had the opportunity to travel to other universities and colleges and their meal plan designs are much more beneficial to the students. It would be a better school for everyone if our meal plans were designed for the students, not for the University of Make–a–Buck.

We disagree, however, with Mr. McGrath's opinion that "students are too apathetic and complacent" to organize and change the condition of the DC. Mr. McGrath obviously feels strongly about this issue now and when he, himself, was a victim of UMass food services. But he was also too passive to work toward change. In this respect, he should not ridicule the underclassmen for their lack of action.

Mr. McGrath's arguments are valid and hit home with much of the student population. If people could organize and do something about these feelings, perhaps a change would occur.

Scott S. Kogos
Southwest
Shannon Aucoin
Orchard Hill

A shameless ploy

To the editor:

College students are sometimes described as being apathetic. But the recent voter registration drive sponsored by the Student Government Association, MASSPIRG, the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy and the campus fraternities and sororities, proves that students, at UMass especially, are vigorous when it comes to fulfilling their civic responsibilities.

A few years ago, when I co–chaired the Election Laws Committee, easing voter registration requirements and encouraging greater turnout were among my top priorities. During that time, I sponsored the "motor voter" bill. When it was signed into law, Massachusetts went from being one of the 13th most difficult states for voter registration to one of the easiest. Needless to say, I was delighted when I read that the "Choose–or–Loose" bus registered 1,054 students, placing UMass in the top five among college campuses nationwide.

That is an outstanding achievement, and everyone who made it happen, from the volunteer organizers to the students who registered, should be proud of it. I am, and I hope the enthusiasm shown during this registration drive continues through this election and beyond.

Stan Rosenberg
State Senator

In defense of the FSO

To the editor:

This note is written in reference to the Collegian column by Shyamala Ivatury and Hussein Ibish ("Incivility Particularly Odious") on September 18. This column talked about a Task Force Report on the International Programs Office, and the columnists targeted Barbara Burns and her staff. The columnists exasperated me with their generalizations and extrapolations ("... the rot has permeated the entire fabric of the office...Given the attitude of its leader, how would one expect the FSO staff to behave?")

The columnists produced one example of "dozens of bloodcurdling accounts of abuses of students by FSO staff." It would be unfair, I think, if I failed to speak about the good things I've heard and experienced about the FSO. Many of my friends have told me how the FSO staff went out of their way to help them. An Asian student, X, wanted to bring his fiance here as a student. She was told at the Embassy in her country that her financial statement was not strong enough. FSO gave her a detailed letter, explaining to the Embassy that she testified financial resources well above the requirements.

Then the Embassy wanted a new I–20. X was tired and going to give up, but the FSO staffer motivated him to keep trying and gave a new I–20, and even offered to send a fax from the FSO if that would help. X thinks that he saw a helpful person in the staffer, not a man, woman, white or colored! He was going to give a token of appreciation to that staffer. There are many stories of sensitive situations which put the helpful FSO staffers in difficult position. I have been to FSO many times and I am pleased with their treatment and service.

Unfortunately, many students get help from the FSO and take it for granted. This is the time, I feel, at least to appreciate the individual efforts of staffers, when FSO is targeted by a sweeping generalization.

After reading the column, a friend of mine wanted me to add her comment here: "Fortunately, FSO has many female officers. Otherwise, this article would have talked in length about 'white domination in the IPO bunker'..."

If everything quoted from the task force report were true, i.e. not divorced from the context, it would have been fair for Barbara Burns to face criticism. But if Barbara Burns is the problem, then she has to be singled out, not the entire FSO! I chose not to talk about the judgmental and subjective remarks in the column. However, I couldn't help wondering: can't the columnists have some positive tone in their attempt to send a decontamination squad to the IPO bunker?

B. Vigneswaran
Amherst

Concert review inaccurate

To the editor:

I was very pleased to see the article on the Smashing Pumpkins concert in the Sept 10 issue of the Collegian. I was glad to see the show covered. I would, however, like to point out some mistakes the person who reviewed the concert made. Rob Stevens wrote that the Pumpkins opened their show with "Zero." This actually happened at the opening riffs of "Cherub Rock." The last thing I would like to point out is that Mr. Stevens claimed that the band's last encore was "Tales of a Scorched Earth," but this song was never played during the show. The final song played by the group was an extended jam version of "Silverfuck." And, the Pumpkins never played any new songs during their three encores. It was great to see such a talented band get some press, but I think next time a concert or similar event is covered it should be done so with correct information.

Scott S. Kogos
Southwest

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Black Affairs

Buck O'Neil Honors Jackie Robinson

John "Buck" O'Neil speaks on America, racism and the late Jackie Robinson

On September 18, former Negro League player, John "Buck" O'Neil, blessed the Robsham Visitor's Center with stories of an era that most of us can only read about.

He spoke of players and athletes who have long since hung up their gloves, but still manage to bring excitement and joy to those who remember their legacies. One player in particular who was the focus of O'Neil's discussion last Wednesday, was the late great Jackie Robinson.

"Jackie was one of the most fiery persons I've ever known," remarked O'Neil in front of a slew of photographers and reporters. "Jackie was a fighter."

The fight to which O'Neil was referring was the constant race obstacles that Jackie hurdled throughout his career.

O'Neil's visit to UMass was in support of the Jackie Robinson initiative, a year–long, interdisciplinary program to commemorate the accomplishments that Robinson made in breaking the color barrier in major league baseball.

Even though Jackie Robinson was considered one of the greatest players the game had ever seen, the fame of being a great athlete was never enough to propel Jackie beyond the color of his skin.

"We were acclimated to segregation, but not Jackie. Jackie knew that you didn't have to put up with it," exclaimed O'Neil, as he spoke of Robinson's will to seek out racism and stand toe–to–toe with it until he had won.

If there was anyone who knew anything about Jackie Robinson, it was O'Neil.

O'Neil played Negro League baseball for the Kansas City Monarchs in 1938. After 10 years, O'Neil was named manager of the team while still playing first base. He continued with the Monarchs until 1955.

In 1962, O'Neil became the first African–American to hold a coaching position in major league baseball.

Humphrey brown III

Mo Vaughn, first baseman for the Boston Red Sox, makes it a point to acknowledge that he wears the number 42 in honor of O'Neil, who wore the same number playing in the Negro Leagues.

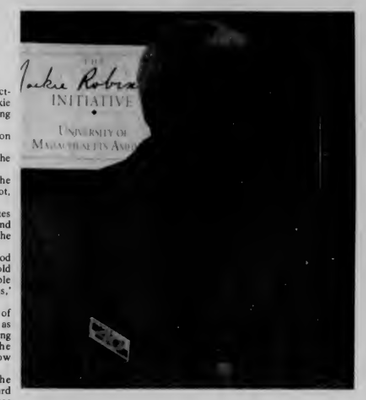
There are many memories that cloud those long years in the Negro League, but it was the fleeting year that Jackie Robinson played that seems to stand out the most for O'Neil and other Negro League players of that time.

"He was an outstanding man... He just played there one year, but we gained more from Jackie that one year than I think we had all of the years that we had played," said O'Neil as he continued to reminisce.

He told comedic stories of countless times when Robinson would break the norm and do something that was uncharacteristic of the way whites expected black people to act in those days. That was Jackie Robinson. Always breaking barriers. Always tearing down walls.

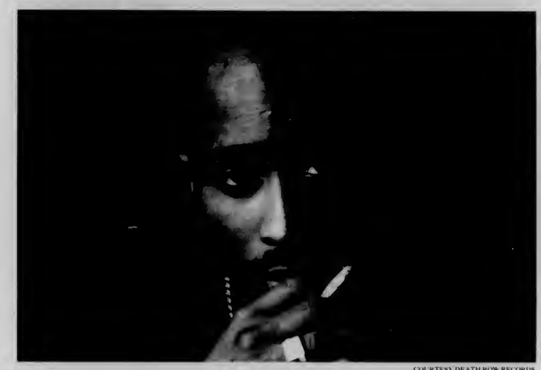
Eventually, all of the overcoming took its toll on Robinson who died in his early 50's.

"Jackie had hair as white as mine now when he was 35," said O'Neil.



The more O'Neil spoke, the more images he painted. It was as if he were an old African griot, speaking of generations past.

He spoke of the problems surrounding athletes and racism and why no matter how much pain and injustice he's seen, he still carries the idea that the whole of people are more good than bad.



"In this country, there's always been more good people than bad," explained O'Neil. "What I hold against the good people is that the good people wouldn't stand up and say 'We won't allow this,' you let the bad ones run everything."

That kind of idealism coming from anyone of this generation and time may not have carried as much weight and meaning as they seemed coming from the mouth of a man who has seen the changes in this country and remembers how things use to be.

"Buck" O'Neil is currently a scout for the Kansas City Royals and is chairman of the board of the Negro League Baseball Museum in Kansas City.

O'Neil honors Jackie Robinson's legacy.

The late Tupac Shakur COURTESY DEATH ROW RECORDS

How Real Is the Game?

One Friday the 13th, the hip hop generation lost one of its most charismatic, if not most controversial artists. On that day, Tupac Shakur was slain.

There are many versions of how it happened. But none of them matter. What matters is that another black man was slain arbitrarily because a couple of brothers didn't agree with his lyrics.

This is not to deny that Tupac wasn't in the forefront of the whole East–West Coast battle. He was antagonistic in his ways, and openly offended a lot of people in the industry. He approached the world with an attitude of arrogance that made him a lot of enemies, yet perversely, a lot of fans.

Tupac was angry at the East Coast after being shot five times back in 1994. But that was a legitimate beef.

And even though he cursed and threatened many people out on his tracks, the only people that Tupac ever shot at were cops, and we all gave him props for that.

But whether or not we felt Tupac sold out by signing with Death Row, he didn't deserve to die over lyrics he rhymed over beats.

The rap game has seriously degenerated into a real life drama where the stakes sometimes come down to life and death.

Rap has long since lost its playful studio rivalry, and instead adopted the "practice what we rap" mentality. If a rapper rhymes about gun–clapping, you can now assume that he or she is strapped on a daily basis.

If cops just went on a binge, and just started pulling over rappers, in addition to finding that twenty bag of Buddha, they'd find a nine mill, too.

Gregory Casimir

Back in the day, you could diss someone's crew or their entire neighborhood, like the classic "The Bridge Is Over" by KRS, and not worry about the repercussions of a violent drive–by.

In the early days of rap, rivalry was studio fun. You broke on somebody on one track, then you waited for next month to come when they dropped their comeback on wax. But in the past couple of years, rap rivalry has transcended its musical roots, and metamorphosed into a violent game of "If you talk the talk, you better walk the walk."

Hip hop isn't just music anymore. It has become a lifestyle for many people. It is a medium through which primarily blacks and other ethnic people can express their views on politics, race, gender issues and the difficulties of everyday life on a worldwide platform.

Hip hop is quickly losing its aesthetic and becoming the scapegoat for black misconduct.

People in the hip hop industry need to seriously ask themselves, "At what point did we lose control of this thing?"

Tupac's death looks like chickens coming home to roost. The monster of rap music spawned Tupac, allowed him to make millions and be famous. Then, when the monster felt he had fulfilled his part in putting hip hop on the map, took him back.

Tupac maybe be dead to us, but quite alive in hip hop. You see, there will be others like him, preaching similar words. Only the beats and label will be different.

The rap game has become for real. The only thing that changes now are the players.

How many moves are you making?

To all incoming "minority" (minor to whom?) freshmen and returning UMass students:

You are not supposed to be here. Your presence at this university was not requested and it really doesn't make a difference if you're here or not. You were not what the forefathers of this institution had in mind when they established the University of Massachusetts way back in 1863.

As a matter of fact, if they could see what UMass has become over the past 133 years they'd probably all turn in their graves. But, for the sake of tired cliches, that was then and this is now. Not to say that there aren't still people who don't want you at this university, but the fact is you are here and there's nothing anyone can do about that except you.

Being here at UMass has given you an opportunity that thousands of other black people will never get. Your future starts from today. You have to take advantage.

As you read this paper in the DC or wherever you've found the time to enjoy this fine publication, there are people betting that you will not be back in the spring — not because you're new to this area or because the 36 percent of last year's freshmen that did not return.

People aren't expecting you to succeed because it has been ingrained in their minds that students of African descent can not excel in competitive and academically challenging schools like UMass. Have you ever heard of the "bell curve?"

It is those same people who want you to believe that you're only in this university because of affirmative action.

How many times have we heard that one?

In the fleeting year that I've been here at UMass, I've already seen too many black students come and go. No one remembers their names or even seems to care. Once you leave this campus, what happens to you outside University walls is really of no concern to them. That's just the way it is. UMass is a great institution for learning, but if you're not here to learn then you're wasting your time. The University isn't in the business of making friends. We need to think of higher education as a tool that we use to get where we need to go. Which is exactly why we can't afford to play around with this college thing.

This is serious, folks. It's going to take more than being the center of attention at a Southside party to make any kind of difference for yourself and those who don't have the opportunity to make long term loot like most of us plan.

Humphrey brown III

I've only been editor of the Black Affairs page for a short time, but the experiences that I bring from back home (the deep South) and the need for black unity and leadership here are the driving forces that keep me doing what I do for my peeps.

The purpose of this page is to inform you on what's going on at UMass as it relates to black students. By "black", I mean all students of African descent (including Haitians, Cape Verdians, Puerto Ricans, West Indians, etc.). We've got to chill on this segregation bull, and start acting as one. Keep cultural identity, but put away the cross–cultural beefs and work together, please.

I also want to include Native Americans in our struggle for equality. It would not only be incredibly naive, but foolish of me to limit the struggle to just blacks versus whites. It's a lot deeper than that, especially when the number of Native Americans enrolled at UMass isn't enough to fill a Coolidge lounge. Check the statistics or just ask Chancellor Scott.

As a member of the diversity desks here at the Collegian, I work hand in hand with all the other diversity pages to ensure equality among all collegiate students. Yet, as I said, the main focus of this page is black affairs. That means you. And what we need now are more writers to get the word out to the masses that black people on this campus have a major voice and we will make it heard by all.

The end of 1996, headed into '97, looks to be pivotal in the future of black America. As democrats and republicans slug it out in the race for America's presidency, blacks are caught right in the middle. And with the rise in voter registration among young people between the ages of 18–25, the future of America is literally being shaped by our votes. Whomever we put in the White House will take us into the 21st century. The question is, will the man we put in the highest seat in all the land do right by us or put our needs and concerns on the back burner, as every other president has done before?

It is every intention of ours here at the page to keep you informed on who's doing what so that when the time comes to pick "the man", you'll know whom to bless with your vote.

Life at UMass can be a good experience for black students, but only if we can put aside petty differences among each other and come together for the common good of everybody. Without unity, we are basically defenseless and are being taken advantage of by those who deprive us of the blessings due us.

Those of us who were here last year will remember the 13–hour sit–in protest in the Student Activities Center. Hopefully, this year we won't have to have another "emergency meeting" to resolve an issue of inequality. If everyone does their part and things go according to plan, we should be so on point that others will be calling emergency meetings to deal with us!! Dig? Stay in knowledge. Peace.

Looking to get involved? Contact Humphrey brown at 6–0977 or leave your name and number in the Black Affairs box at the Collegian in the Campus Center basement.

One Time For The Mind

Go Gorman! Go Gorman! These are the sounds often heard at the Malcolm X Cultural Center or at the South Side during parties.

"Ya'll don't know how to take us, because it's like ya'll jump back when you see like forty of us rollin' up into the party all deep. People from the West don't know what family is all about, Gorman is mad family," said freshman Hattim Jea–Lewis.

For many who aren't from Gorman, it becomes rather annoying. Although I lived in Gorman for the first semester of my freshmen year, and yelled those same words, I realized I needed to be in a bigger environment. I needed space.

Before I moved to the West, everyone told me I wasn't going to have peace of mind there, and that it's like living in a zoo. They said it would be like living in the "ghetto."

When I finally did leave, people automatically gave me the cold shoulder. I thought to myself, "What's the big deal? I'm only going to be ten minutes down the street?"

"Once people come to Gorman, there's a certain bondage among us and it's like when you leave, you break the bond by leaving us," said Luis DaCosta.

Allana E. Todman

DaCosta, a senior, moved to Gorman because he said "I saw more people who looked like me."

Now I must admit there were some things that I missed about living in Gorman. The fact that there are only four floors and that there are people with different nationalities are among the things I miss.

"Ya'll see the same people, Gorman is like a mountain pot: we got Haitians, Cape Verdians, and all types. Ya'll have all those triflin' dudes in the projects," said Jea–Lewis.

As I continued to have this talk with residents from Gorman, people went on to say how personalized Gorman was, and that's where one of the biggest problems was.

Space. Here is where the West treats me the best. When I want to see someone, I can. When I don't, I won't. The fact that the environment is bigger, allows me to socialize with more people, and live in a more realistic environment.

"When I lived in Thoreau, I only knew two people, I didn't know anyone there. I don't know any other dorms where you can see your RD. Here it's more personal; if I have a problem, I know who to talk to. In Southwest, I didn't know who to speak to", said sophomore Adjoa Edzy.

So what am I saying? Am I saying that Gorman is a tighter environment than Southwest? No. Am I saying that Southwest is more open environment than Gorman? Not necessarily.

What I am saying is that there are different strokes for different folks.

So when you put on your gear to come to the West for a party, and you start shouting , "Go Gorman!" don't forget the people around you will be shouting, "Go Southwest!"

Sister Choice Speaks

Dear Sister Choice,

I am a freshman who is trying to meet new peeps on campus, but every time I see a brotha or sista and say hello, they just grill me or walk right past me without even saying anything or making eye contact. It doesn't happen all the time, but enough so that it's beginning to bother me. Is it just me or is every brotha and sista on this campus keeping to themselves?

–anonymous

Dear Anonymous,

I know exactly how it feels to greet your brothers and sisters as they pass you by and receive no response or acknowledgment for your existence. Don't take it personally. These brothers and sisters have issues that they need to deal with. Keep your head up and stay proud of who you are. Don't stop greeting them as you walk by, because they may be trying to figure out who the person is behind the voice. Once they get familiar with your face I'm sure you'll receive more positive replies.

Dear Sister Choice,

I've been in a relationship with a white man for almost three years. We call each other good friends even though we are sexually involved. I feel very deeply for him, but can't call him my man because of the racial difference. I'm thinking of letting him go because of the intensity of our relationship. I can't help but wish for a black man to come along and rescue me, but it doesn't seem like there are any around and my thoughts always travel back to the man I'm with now, a white man! What should I do?

–Confused

Dear Confused,

You need to make a choice. This white male that you are involved with seems like a special person, but if you are not willing to give him what he is giving to you, then you have to let him go. He has feelings too. Talk to him about how you feel about the issues surrounding your relationship. Interracial relationships are hard because you are dealing with both sides accepting you. I know that the majority of the black community does not feel comfortable seeing a black woman with a white male, but if this man makes you happy, go for yours. If you are willing to sacrifice this relationship and wait for a black man to come along, he may or may not. Decent black men can be hard to find on this campus, but I know they exist. The choice is yours. I think you made your choice by stating the fact that you wish that a black man would come along and rescue you. First rescue yourself and then see what happens.

Send your letters by way of campus mail, a free service to UMass students, to:

2210 Coolidge
c/o Humphrey brown III

Humphrey brown III is the editor of the Black Affairs Page and correspondent to Sister Choice. Sister Choice does not necessarily reflect the opinions or views of the Black Affairs desk or the Daily Collegian.

Write for Black Affairs.
Call Humphrey brown III or Gregory Casimir at 6–0977

Arts & Living

Dishing up entertainment gossip

R.E.M. signs landmark record deal, outlook dim for Oasis fans

The spotlight is never dark on the Hollywood celebrities. In fact, watching celebrities is some people's life thrill. For those of you who cannot get out to California to keep tabs on what's new with the stars or find it impossible to read every entertainment magazine, the following highlights are just for you.

Well, the big news this week is that rapper Topie Shakur died Friday evening in Las Vegas from four gunshot wounds to the chest. He was shot following the Mike Tyson fight.

Canadian chanteuse Celine Dion, who was recently featured on the CD Women for Women 2 to help support breast cancer, was rushed to the hospital. She was suffering from a mysterious stomach complaint, that was eventually diagnosed as stress. Dion and husband Rene Angelil have been trying to conceive a baby for a while, but the illness was unrelated to those efforts.

In other music news, R.E.M. signed the biggest deal in music history. They reportedly will receive $80 million for a five-album deal. This salary is even bigger than the King of Pop himself, Michael Jackson.

The Crow 2: City of Angels opened three weeks ago to dismal reviews. If you remember correctly, Brandon Lee, who starred in the original film, was killed in a freak accident on the set. I thought I read somewhere that the producers weren't looking for someone exactly like Lee, but only for a good actor. And who is Vincent Perez? And he looks, um, exactly like Brandon Lee.

Things look pretty dim for Oasis fans. The group hasn't officially broken up, but they have cancelled all their upcoming tour dates. Reportedly, guitarist Noel Gallagher flew home to London after a fight with his brother Liam. Good thing fans got to see them at their recent show in Worcester.

Well, it really didn't take long for John Grisham's latest novel, The Runaway Jury to be made into a movie. He will reportedly receive more than $8 million for rights, making it the largest sum of money paid for feature rights to a novel. Joel Schumacher is rumored to direct.

According to the British tabloid The Sun, supermodel Naomi Campbell has reportedly tied the knot with her Italian boyfriend, Luca Orlandi. Orlandi is a clothing designer, so the two have much in common.

Actors Liam Neeson and Natasha Richardson gave birth to a son, Daniel Jack Neeson on Aug 27. The couple already are the proud parents of a 14-month year old, Michael Richard Antonio.

Neeson had to have emergency surgery in Italy recently, to unclog a blocked intestine.

Lisa M. Oliveri

John Travolta recently walked off the set of his new movie, The Double, directed by the exiled Roman Polanski. Polanski reportedly started an argument over Travolta's belief in Scientology. Yeah, Polanski has his religious beliefs in order, he was banned from the U.S. because of what? Oh, yeah — statutory rape.

An employee of the hit Fox show "The X-Files" has filed a sexual harassment suit against creator Chris Carter and co-executive producer Howard Gordon citing, "continuous, pervasive and ongoing offensive and unwelcome sexual conduct."

Blind Melon has decided to continue under another name, sans frontman Shannon Hoon, who died last year from a drug overdose. Great — can't wait. They were so good before.

It looks as though all Sheryl Crow wants to do is get her latest album in Wal-Mart stores. The nationwide chain has decided to ban her album due to objectionable lyrics in the song, "Love is a Good Thing," where Crow sings, "Watch out sister/ Watch out brother/ Watch our children as they kill one another/ With a gun they bought at a Wal-Mart discount store."

According to Star magazine this week, 13-year old Yvette Merriman has vowed to marry Prince William and her mother has even moved her to England to help. What's wrong here? I used to tell my mom that I was going to marry Tom Cruise when I was younger, but she didn't move me to California.

And in more royal news, Princess Stephanie of Monaco is ditching hubby Daniel Ducret after he was photographed cavorting with a prostitute on the lovely beaches of the Riviera... sans clothing. The couple has two children.

And finally, Newsweek reported that a webzine fabricated the nasty quote by Mariah Carey where she said she felt sorry for all the Ethiopian children, but she would love to be that skinny, though without the flies and death and stuff. No, of course, Carey wouldn't say that — out loud at least.

Lisa M. Oliveri is a Collegian columnist.

COURTESY STEVE COLLETI

Athens' favorite sons R.E.M. strike gold with record– breaking $80 million contract.

Garvey inspires Spear concert

By Tim Gleeson
Collegian Correspondent

BURNING SPEAR
Pearl Street
Sept. 17

"Do you remember Marcus, the Mosiah Garvey. Him no ded. Dat man no ded. De man a trod earth still. Dat man a trod earth still watching his prophecy fulfill"— Peter Tosh.

"No one remembers old Marcus Garvey," cried Burning Spear to the Pearl Street crowd, keeping alive the spirit and teachings of his idol. The show focused on the spirit of Spear, Garvey, strength, equal rights, love and peace.

Burning music, burning message, Winston Rodney is no joke. He is the original dread. Rodney, better known as Burning Spear, introduced the crowd to the root of reggae music with a shining, heartfelt performance.

Two hours of live reggae music in its peak form made for a good time. Dancing from the start, the crowd heated up in no time and the band was relentless with their heartbeat rhythm.

Spear started the night right with his tune "Peace," and went directly into a truly spectacular version of his classic tune "Nyah Keith." The tracks just kept rolling and the band was amazing. The rhythm was kept tight and the horns heralded perfection.

Spear would burn to the heart of his music. With a passion that has fueled Spear for the last 25 years, he reeled out "Columbus," "Creation Rebel" and "Cry Blood Africans."

They kept the crowd calling for more of the reggae experience every time with highlight renditions of "Postman of Africa," "Marcus Garvey" and "Old Marcus Garvey." The rasta ambassador finialed with the pleasing "Happy Day," leaving the elated crowd with the memory and the anticipation of his next visit.

The 51-year-old young man remains a reggae presence. Throughout his life, Spear has faithfully carried on the teachings of Marcus Garvey — something that should be taken with the utmost respect and understanding. Garvey remains the root of Spear's music which some may fail to see.

Marcus Mosiah Garvey was born in 1887 in St. Ann's Bay, Jamaica, many years before the births of reggae legends Winston Rodney and Bob Marley in those very same hills. It is Garvey's life and lessons that is the foundation of their blends of roots and musical message.

The life and lessons of Marcus Garvey should be taught, as Spear tells in his track "Subject in School." Born into poverty and under colonial rule, Garvey would rise up to be world leader and teacher, garnering a following of millions. He did this by speaking truths and with undying devotion to his culture and his roots.

From street corners to podiums, Garvey sent his message for men and women to pick themselves up with confidence and take what is rightfully theirs — a philosophy that was sent to all who found themselves in a state of injustice.

So as the Spear says, "Do you remember old Marcus Garvey? It is impossible to sum up the life of this man so learn yourselves on the matter and do not anticipate such subjects being widely taught. Remember old Marcus and what he said: 'A nation without its roots is like a tree without its roots.'"

Another ride on solo road for Mould

By Scott Bernard
Collegian Correspondent

Two bands emerged in the '80s from the self-destructive mess which was the punk movement. One, R.E.M., has become one of the great bands of all time. The other, Hüsker Dü, self-destructed before they were able to make it big time. Of the three members of the latter band, only Bob Mould has been able to rescue himself from the wreckage and legacy of Hüsker Dü and move on in directions which are utterly his own.

Started in 1979, Minneapolis' Hüsker Dü seemed to be more akin to a hardcore band. Although they had shown signs of splitting from the pack well before, the release of their double concept album, Zen Arcade, in 1984 signaled that Hüsker Dü was more than a little different from their post-punk, underground brethren. It was a Tommy for the '80s, with song styles ranging over the spectrum of much that had come previously.

Thus, it was no surprise that in 1985, Hüsker Dü became the first major underground band of the punk generation to sign with a major label contract. Unfortunately, after the release of their second concept album, and second major label release, Warehouse: Songs and Stories, in 1987, the band blew up. Drummer/songwriter Grant Hart's drug use was out of hand, and the band coldid no longer function.

Mould took his prodigious talent in quieter directions. His first two albums, Workbook and Black Sheets of Rain, were both introspective and largely acoustic. However, part of Mould's heart had always been given over to the power pop and punk power of Hüsker Dü, and in 1992 he formed Sugar with bassist David Barbe and drummer Malcolm Travis. In their three years of existence they released three albums: Copper Blue in 1992, Beaster (also 1992), an EP of noise rock and reductionist punk reminiscent of early Hüsker Dü, and finally, in 1994, File Under: Easy Listening. Sugar was very much known for their almost sadistically loud live shows. Mould called it quits, however, and dissolved the band at the end of 1995. His justification for this was that he felt as though the band was getting too big for its britches, that it was too willing to egotistically sit back on its popularity and no longer push boundaries.

Once again, Mould found himself without a band. Or rather, he became the band. Earlier this year, Mould released his eponymous third album, writing, playing and producing it all himself. He felt that this eliminated the need of trying to find an interpreter for his musical ideas.

Thus, in 1996, Bob Mould is one of the most celebrated guitarist/songwriters who nobody knows. Yet his work, especially for Hüsker Dü, can be seen as the true forbearer to alternative rock these days, the most direct ancestor. The proof of this is how fresh an album like Zen Arcade, now 12 years old, sounds. Neither Mould nor Hüsker Dü were meant for widespread fame, yet their influence echoes down the halls of today's musical scene like a cannon shot.

Bob Mould performs at Pearl St. tonight at 8 p.m. with Rasputina. The show is 18+. Call the club at 584–7771 for more details.

TOC Bar & Grill
Munchie Specials Daily 4-7
Dolphins vs. Colts
Catch All Your Sports At The Top!
FREE Popcorn
Lounge Hours:
Mon-Fri: 4pm - 12:30am
Sat: 3pm-12:30am
11th Floor Campus Center

take Kaplan and get into the right school.
LSAT GMAT GRE MCAT
• Highly trained, expert teachers who know the tests inside and out.
• Personalized, computerized study plans, tailored to your individual needs.
• Proven methods, guaranteed to raise your scores.
the leader in test prep and admissions counseling.
KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
www.kaplan.com

Judicial Hearing Board
A great experience for students who ◆are interested in campus leadership◆
◆wish to improve communication and listening skills◆
◆are enrolled full time◆
◆have at least a 2.0 G.P.A.◆
◆are not on judicial sanction◆
APPLY NOW TO BE A HEARING BOARD MEMBER
Training held in the Campus Center from 7:00 to 9:00p.m. on:
September 24 & September 25
Room 168C Room 165-69
Applications available at:
Residential Cluster Offices
The Dean of Students Office
Student Government Association
APPLICATION DEADLINE:
5:00 p.m. September 23, 1996
Any questions? Please contact Paul Vasconcellos or Jennifer Cooper, Dean of Students Office, 227 Whitmore, Phone: 545-2684

SEEKING
Students in Recovery
from alcohol or drug abuse
ARE YOU IN AA, NA, RR?
Are you willing to escort someone who is going to their first meeting?
If so, please call Lydia Rackenberg, LICSW
Mental Health 545-2337
All calls are confidential

EXPERT AUTO BODY REPAIRS, AUTO PAINTING and GLASS REPLACEMENT
MARSHALL STEINBECK
PROFESSIONAL COLLISION WORK
• OVEN BAKED URETHANE FINISHES
• FREE ESTIMATES & CLAIMS ASSISTANCE
• INSURANCE APPROVED GLASS REPLACEMENT
• PROFESSIONAL UNIBODY REPAIR AND FRAME STRAIGHTENING
256-8157 256-1385
53 South Prospect Street, Amherst, Massachusetts

DANCE
GAY LESBIAN BISEXUAL FRIENDS ALLIES
MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 23RD 9:00 - 2:00
Northampton's One
THE GROTTO 6
Bar, Bar, Cafe & Dance Club
23 INVEST ST. NORTHAMPTON 413-586-8660
ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES SERVED TO 21+
sponsored by the UMass
LBGA
CALL 545-0424 FOR INFO
18+ $2.00 AT THE DOOR
GET IN FREE BEFORE 10:00!!!

Women's cross country owns home meet

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Correspondent

In their only home meet of the season, the Massachusetts women's cross-country team came up big, beating out four other teams: the University of Vermont, University of Connecticut, Boston University, and Central Connecticut State. UMass' point total of 37 was far ahead of second- place Vermont, which had 58.

Junior Rebecca Donaghue had another stellar performance as she placed first out of 48 runners with a time of 17:29. Senior Katie Greenia finished fourth, with a time of 18:19, her best on this course. Christy Martin tied with Dana Devlin of Vermont for sixth place at 18:32, and freshman Sharon Tillotson came in tenth at 19 minutes even. Coming in at 15th was Molly Dunlap at 19:40. Tracy Meugher and Sally Hirsch were 20th and 21st at 19:35 and 19:41, respectively.

The team was very happy with their performance, having avenged themselves from a disappointing race last week. Despite the tough competition they were facing they were determined to win.

"We wanted it, we were geared to win," Kate Greenia said.

Having been unsure about the competition prior to the race, Coach Julie Lafreniere was especially pleased with the team's performance.

"They gave an outstanding effort," she said.

Lafreniere knew that she was set with her top three runners, but had been unsure about the fourth and fifth. The team pulled through, sacrificing individual performances for the team as a whole. Lafreniere was especially happy with Katie Greenia, who actually led the third place runner, Leslie Almeida of UConn, for the first two miles.

The meet was a tremendous improvement for the team and for individual runners as well. The coach said that Tillotson has adapted very well to college life, and she is doing a super job. Lafreniere was also pleased with Molly Dunlap and Christy Martin who have stepped up, as well as sophomore Tracy Meugher, who has improved tremendously since her freshman year.

THANG VU

Rebecca Donaghue took first place as UMass swept the field in the weekend's home meet.

SPORTS NOTICE

There will be a meeting for all WMUA sports staff TONIGHT at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 905.

■ field hockey

continued from page 10

ond half, cutting its deficit to one only 4:47 into the period. Rothenberger sent the ball home off a penalty corner after being set up by Sharon Hughes and Kate Putnam.

The Minutewomen tied the game at 2 apiece with 12:53 left in regulation on Johnston's first goal of the day. Penn State fought back to take the lead at 3–2, when Dawn Lammy scored off a penalty corner with 9:38 to go.

UMass tallied its third goal of the half to force overtime with 4:23 remaining. Putnam took the ball near the top of Penn State's circle, and carried it up Smith's right side, beating a defender and Smith for the tally.

"It seemed like we were a lot more poised for the second half, that was a big factor," Johnston said.

Hixon was pleased with the play of Johnston and Putnam.

"I think the two of them really had their best games. Erica and Kate were the catalysts today," Hixon said.

Rose and the UMass defense were responsible for keeping the Minutewomen in the game, despite the first half deficit. Anchored by the strong play of Amy Ott, the backs didn't give the Lady Lions a chance in overtime.

"[Ott] was exceptional. From the second half through the overtime, her decision making was so good today. I really think she had a career day. She stepped her game up to another level in the second half," Hixon said.

■ football

continued from page 10

the story in keeping this game close, and giving the offense a chance to keep getting back on the field.

"I think it was a very positive step for us," sophomore linebacker Khari Samuel said. "It was one we definitely needed to do, and it's finally what we needed."

The Minutemen linebackers would once again be the leading tackles for UMass making some key stops, especially one in the second quarter where Richmond had a first and goal from inside the UMass one yard line and the Minutemen held them to a field goal. Senior Justin Reimer had eight tackles on the day, with Samuel and middle linebacker Mike Dawson tallying five each.

"It was a big lesson for us as a team and individual," senior co-captain cornerback Kory Blackwell said. "To watch us come together as a team, we fought to the last whistle, and that showed a lot of character and I'm very proud of the team and everyone. We are slowly but surely defining who we are and establishing our respect, which is very important on the road to success."

For the second straight week in a row, tight end Erik Henry came through for the Minutemen, as his two touchdowns on Saturday and 35 yards receiving on three catches once again led the team. This senior transfer from Maryland has now grabbed nine balls on the year for 149 yards and three TDs.

"It just happened, it's about time we got one," Henry said. "This was a big game for us. To have this victory is huge. Confidence levels are jumping and now I can't wait for the next game, it's an unbelievable feeling."

Henry would also take one for the team on the tying touchdown, as he caught a helmet on his right elbow, losing feeling for 10 to 15 minutes he said. However, he said it was feeling OK afterwards and jokingly agreed he'll take the injury for the touchdown anytime.

Head coach Mike Hodges was happy that his team showed a lot of effort and poise in not giving up.

"I think it says a lot to me," Hodges said. "I love this football team, they're great kids, and they really care, they care about one another, and they care about playing to their potential. They just keep on playing and I'm really proud of them."

In a game that did not see much scoring until the end of the game, the score was 10–3 in favor of the Spiders at halftime. Richmond struck first just 1:05 seconds into the game when quarterback Matt Shannon found wideout Muneer Moore for a 32-yard touchdown strike. Each team would grab a field goal before heading to the locker rooms for the half.

UMass tied things up with 5:15 left to go in the third, as Catterton found Henry for his first touchdown of the afternoon, a nine–yard score to the left side of the endzone. Henry could have had a picnic before the Richmond defense showed up. However, the credit goes to the play call. UMass set up in what was called the "power I" formation, lining up fullback Brockington, Jamie Holston and Alessio directly behind Catterton in a setup with no wideouts. On a play that fooled everyone, Catterton faked the handoff, and Henry rolled out to a wide open left corner of the endzone for the score.

Richmond would then regain the lead in the fourth, only 35 seconds into the final quarter, on a drive that went seven plays for 45 yards. Shannon found tight end Matt Davis for a 20–yard score and 17–10 lead, before UMass four possessions later would start their game tying drive.

"I think everybody saw a heck of a football game out there," Spiders head coach and former UMass coach Jim Reid said. "I think we handed it to them, but they had to do what they had to do and they did it. Good for them, and they deserved to win."

The Minutemen racked up some penalty yards (64) on seven mishaps — however, that statistic would be much more pleasing than the 107 yards in penalties the Minutemen averaged in their previous two games. Richmond was penalized for 50 yards on seven plays as well.

The defense was the story for both schools. UMass was efficient only 27 percent of the time converting on third down plays, while the Spiders were only 16 percent happy. Andy Maclay was called out onto the field 13 times to punt the ball away for the Minutemen, averaging 37.6 yards a punt. Richmond had to punt 10 times on the day as well, averaging 40.4 yards.

Another key to this contest was that Richmond missed two field goals and had two turnovers, a fumble and an interception. UMass had only one turnover, a fumble.

UMass will finally get to play a home game as Northeastern comes to town to be their home opening opponent on Family Day, this Saturday at 12:00 p.m. at Warren G. McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

■ women's soccer

continued from page 10

The team wanted to turn the tables on Hartford, as they have notoriously been a team to come out fast, with Kurowski's fast–scoring start being the catalyst of the win.

"It was great, because two years ago we had a problem as a team letting goals in during the first five minutes, or the last five minutes of the games," Myers said.

The remainder of the first half was a clinic in UMass ball control, resulting in consecutive corner kicks in the 23rd and 26th minutes. Lightning's crossing percentage was high on this day, with Shimogaki and Smith's scrambling scoring attempts just missing. The ball, for the most part, was kept in Hartford's side of the pitch, leaving the Hawks defense to watch Iverson and Thompson cut through them like a knife.

For Thompson, the anchor of the UMass defense, she is now beginning to get the feel for their offensive side of the game, too. She is the one who usually stays at home while Iverson and Lynch run up field into the offense. This weekend, however, she was able to show off that side of her game.

"It was something that I saw open, but also yesterday in practice the coach told me that if I had a good shot, that I should start heading forward and use that to have some shots on goal," Thompson said. "After I made a couple, I got a little tired. I just think that now that I am a sophomore I can go forward, and Erin respects me a little more, too."

Rudy did let his defender know that she has been a defensive anchor for the backline, they have not forgotten about her on the other side of the pitch.

In fact, she was coached to take advantage of offensive opportunities that may arise.

"Actually we did tell her to do that," Rudy said. "We just said don't stand back and ask for a ball, but run up front and say 'I am going.' After you pass the player, get up there and say 'I am gone.'

It was more of the same UMass domination in the second half, as Lynch came up big with a beautiful set up play with Myers. Her free kick from over 30 yards out on the right flank connected directly with Myers' diving header attempt, making the final score of 3–0 at the 61:07 mark in the match. Lynch was in the mix all day long, colliding with the 6–foot–4 keeper from Hartford, Sloane Cox, later in the game. It was a scary moment for the Garber faithful, as she was down for a few minutes. However, she got up and shook it off, making that the only scary moment for UMass on the day.

Beauty Nail
OPEN MON-SAT 9-8
MANICURE & PEDICURE $25
We Guarantee All The Work
Student Special
Full Set of Acrylics $25 $Refill 15
31 CAMPUS PLAZA, HADLEY
(Behind Mcdonald)
253-4756

The Right Place to Be!
3 Barbers Everyday
Unisex Hair Styling
Jim & Gabe
Guys & Gals
Clipper Cuts
Layer Cuts
Razor Cuts
Flat Tops
Kid Cuts
Fades
Appointment Not Neccessary
Amherst Barbers
Tel. 253-1722
40 Main Street, Amherst, MA
(Next to Newbury Comics)
Tom & Terri
Hours: Mon - Fri 8 - 5:15pm
Sat 8 - 2:45pm
Proprietors: Jim Reed and Terri Loncrini

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Sweet Potato Fries $1.99 $2.50
Lite-Weigh Potato Skins $2.99 $3.50
Shrimp Cocktail $3.75 $2.88
New Dinner Menu . . . Come See
Watch the World Go By From Our Greenhouse!
DOWNTOWN AMHERST
Judie's
51 N. Pleasant Street
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

BURGER KING Now HIRING
We're looking for people with pride, who want to be treated fairly by people who care, to staff our restaurants.
-Good Starting Pay
-Flexible Hours
-Full Time/Part Time
-Meal Discounts
-Management Opportunities
Closing Rates up to $6.50*
Apply in Person
Rt. 9 Hadley
Rt. 5 Northampton
*See Manager for details

NETS versus Bullets
at
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst
The Return of Coach Cal!
SUNDAY, OCT. 13
7PM
$23 and $15
Tickets available through:
Mullins Center Box Office or 413-545-0505
Sponsored by:
NEWS 40
DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
TODAY'S 93

VOTED #1
THANKS UMASS
FLEX
FITNESS CENTER
AMHERST, MA
BY YOU!!

Volleyball splits weekend in RI Classic

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's volleyball team travelled south to the smallest state this past weekend, and played the smallest number of games possible, as they lost in three games twice, before sweeping a match of their own at the Rhode Island Classic.

RHODE ISLAND	3
MASSACHUSETTS	0

UMass lost in its Atlantic 10 opener to Rhode Island on Friday, 15-12, 15-9, 15-10. Saturday brought Long Beach State, ranked seventh in the nation, and Brown. The Minutewomen fell to the 49ers, 15-6, 15-6, 15-7, but managed to dismiss their annual Ivy League foe, 15-12, 15-13, 15-9.

In all three games, UMass (11-3, 0-1 A-10) fell behind early, only to fight back in each one to no avail. UMass committed 25 errors, more than double that of their previous two matches. However, despite entering the match ranked 13th in the nation in hitting percentage (.295), it was held by URI to a mere .171.

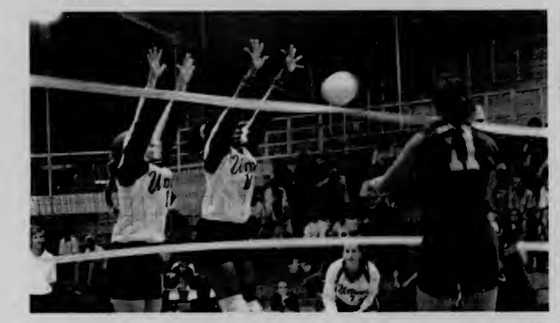
LONG BEACH ST	3
MASSACHUSETTS	0

"I didn't think we played as well as we're capable of playing," coach Bonnie Kenny said. "But Rhode Island is a better team than us.

"Dionne Nash played exceptional. She played very, very hard and very, very good. She's so competitive. She can play with anyone in that gym."

Nash, a senior outside hitter, led the way against the Rams, earning 20 kills and 13 digs, while junior outside hitter Lesley Nolan added 11 kills and 15 digs. Nolan became only the second player in school history to reach 1,000 career digs — the other is Nash — in the match.

Against LBSU (11-0), UMass jumped out in front 5-3 in game one before the 49ers struck gold, taking 12 of the next 13 points to win. In game two it was deja vu, as the Minutewomen gave the powerhouse yet another scare, going up 6-0, before eventually losing. Even in game three UMass was up 6-5, but just couldn't pull off the win.



Junior Michelle Paciorek led the team with 11 kills. For the tournament, sophomore setter Katie Pearce managed 109 assists, while freshman Kari Hogancamp registered a team- high 47 digs.

MASSACHUSETTS	3
BROWN	0

Against Brown, Paciorek, who ranks 10th nationally with a .440 hitting percentage, had 15 kills and 13 digs, while hitting a match-high .462 to lead UMass to a 3-0 win. Nash came through with 12 kills and 11 digs, while freshman Jill Meyers posted 10 kills and nine digs.

Although Kenny saw some positive throughout the weekend, particularly against LBSU, she knows her team still is far where it needs to be.

"Our blocking is just atrocious," she said. "We blocked Long Beach really well, but against Rhode Island we were horrendous, and that caused some chaos in our backcount. We have to be better at the net, make less unforced hitting errors, and block well."

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

The Minutewomen went 1-2 in the Rhode Island Classic over the weekend.

Men's cross country takes second at home

By Jim Cooley
Collegian Correspondent

The defending Atlantic 10 champion Massachusetts men's cross-country improved to 3-2 with a second place finish on Saturday in their only home meet of the season.

The Minutemen (57 points) posted victories over Vermont (63) and Maine (93), but couldn't handle an overpowering Boston University (29) squad. BU placed two runners in the top five, including Matthew Smith's winning time of 24:04 and Bernard Trommer (fifth place) at 24:25.

Entering the meet, UMass coach Ken O'Brien knew BU would be tough.

"BU will be our toughest opponent. They were ranked 15th last year and are one of the top two teams in New England," O'Brien said.

Rounding out the top five finishers were Thorodd Bakken (second) of Vermont with a time of 24:11, Derek Treadwell (third) of Maine at 24:14, and in fourth place UMass' Matt Behl coming in at 24:15. Behl said he ran an average race.

"I just didn't have any turnover for the last mile," Behl said. "I was flat, but it was a solid first race for me."

UMass' next finisher was Jonathan Way (seventh) at 24:29, followed by Walter Stock (thirteenth), who crossed at 25:50.

Competing in his first ever meet was UMass freshman Kevin Somers. Somers finished 24th overall at 26:35, on a course that coach O'Brien calls challenging.

"Our course is hilly and has many different footings. Runners must make continuous adjustments to stay in the race," O'Brien said.

Somers, out of Munson High School, is one of only two rookies on the UMass squad this season. The rookie runner sported a new hair cut for the meet. After the race, a physically exhausted Somers explained his new hairstyle.

"Everybody welcomed me by giving me a haircut yesterday. They shaved me bald," he said.

Somers and the rest of his teammates will continue on their quest to repeat as A-10 Champions as they travel to the Bronx next weekend for the Meet of Champions. The starting time is 11:30 a.m.

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

The men's cross country team took second place in its only home meet.

■ umass

continued from page 10

The Minutewomen recorded their third goal similarly as Rebecca Myers, now one goal away from tying April Kater and Rachel LeDuc's shared school record of 35 career goals, headed in a long free kick by Erin Lynch.

Myers expected opportunities like the one she converted on to be abundant Saturday.

"We did a lot of flank work on the crosses and we knew that there would be a lot of dropped balls in the six yard box and the 18-yard box would be an aerial mad house so we were just crashing the net," she said.

Meanwhile, the tactical adjustment affected all of the players, even Thompson, the team's sweeper back, who often takes her positional play as if she's shackled to the UMass defensive end of the field. While fellow defenders Erica Iverson, Lynch and Robin Smith frequently rush to the net, Thompson, as is the nature of her position, has been known to spend more time at home than a grounded junior high student.

Towards the end of last season, Thompson occasionally broke into the offensive attack, but has yet to register a collegiate point. Yesterday, the sophomore often found herself deep in Hawk territory, sending crosses and taking her first shot of the season.

"Coach told me that I had a good shot and I should start heading forward and using it," she said.

The team's least utilized offensive threat was involving Thompson in the offense, without losing a step from her strong sweeping work. With her help, the Hawks were outshot 20-1, the sole shot being a long ball by Laurie Duhrkoop that was both well high and wide of the net.

Meanwhile, crosses rained into the Hartford goal box throughout the match, and were converted by UMass attackers swifter than Bob Dole falling off a stage.

The techniques worked on throughout Friday's practice were well executed against Hartford, the team's work coming to fruition in the form of a 3-0 thumping of their long-time regional rival.

For UMass, a plan came together on Saturday.

CHANGE YOUR CLOCK

CHANGE YOUR BATTERY

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Sick of the dorms? Come and check out Iota Gamma Upsilon, the only local sorority on campus. Open House at 406 North Pleasant Street on Sept. 23, 24 and 25 from 7-9pm. Call Sara or Laura at 549-6481 for more information.

The sisters of Kappa Kappa Gamma invite the UMass women to an Open Rush Dinner, Wednesday, Sept. 25 at 5:30pm. Please call Gena @ 549-0755

CHINESE FDDD KAI CHI delivering Sunday - Thursday to 2am, Friday and Saturday to 3am

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Trek Fans!!! If you are interested in joining a group with similar interests, then call Martin @ 8-7003 . Starfleet International wants you!!!

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 Bedroom, Squire Village. Rest of month for free - looking for someone to take over lease immediately. Mike 665-7922

AUTO FOR SALE

VW Golf '89 Exc Cond. 120k Sspd. sunrf, $2,200 Call (413)562-2134

1986 Subaru GL Hatchback 114k mileage, good condition. F-Wheel Drive. $1,800 BO Call 586-3497

1982 Chevy Cavalier Wagon AC, AM/FM, new tires, plus $350.00 OBO. Call Bruce 256-1215

87 Toyota Celica AC, PS, 5 spsed Many new parts and fully tuned up. Runs Great Call 665-7373 $2,350

89 VW Golf 82,000 mi, good condition, 4 new tires, new muffler. $3,100 OBO Call Christa Mon-Fri 545-5362

GREAT CAR

1995 Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme Good running condition Best offer Call 545-3007 or 834-5722

MAZDA - '91 323 HATCHBACK 78,000 mi., very good condition; sunroof; tune up work just done; $2,900 OBO; Call 549-7286

1988 Bronco II Well maintained $3,750 BO 367-0384

1988 Mazda Reliable, 5 speed, AM/FM cassette $900 665-8246

EMPLOYMENT

INTERNS WANTED
(http://www.iakame.com) Need creative, innoveative individuals. Graphic Genius Inspired Writers, Human Net Browsers For quick cash - weekly scholarships.

Free T-Shirt + $1,000 Credit Card Fundraisers for fraternities, sororities and groups. Any campus organization can raise up to $1,000 by earning a whopping $5.00/MISA application. Call 1-800-932-0528 Ext. 65. Qualified callers receive a free t shirt

The Amherst Boys' and Girls' Club needs work study assistants for recreation programs. Friday evening 7-9 and Saturday afternoon 1-5. Workers schedule as time available. $5.25/hr UMass buses stop in front of club at 230 Main Street. Contact Richard Britt 253-3261

Business Opportunity. Need additional income? Want the energy to earn it? Earth-Friendly company looking for distributors. Wild organic food, free tape 1-800-927-2527 ext 7388

Spring Break!! Earn Cash!!! Highest Commissions! Lowest Prices! Travel free on only 13 sales! Free Info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

Cruise Ships Hiring. Earn up to $20,000+/month World Travel Seasonal and Full Time positions. No exp. necessary. For info call 1-206-971-3550 ext C50015

ENTERTAINMENT

National Parks Hiring Positions are now available at National Parks, Forests and Wildlife Preserves. Excellent benefits and bonuses! Call 1-206-971-3620 Ext. N50016

Tropical Resorts Hiring Students needed! Entry level and career positions available worldwide Call Resort Employment Services 1-206-971-3600 Ext. R50012

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS! Over 6 billion in public and private sector. Grants and scholarships are now available. All students are eligible. Let us help. For more info call 1-800-263-8495 Ext. F50014

International Employment - Earn up to $25-$45/hour teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S. Korea. No teaching background or Asian Languages required. For info call 206-971-3570 Ext. J50015

Now Hiring All Shifts. Closing shifts available with bonus program. Hadley Burger King. Ask for Tim 584-5110

Now Hiring! Great pay doing odd jobs, flexible hours, call Andrew 584-8070

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

DAKOTA: Beautiful Husky/Shepard/Retriever mix, 2 yrs., female, outdoor dog, needs lots of exercise, well-behaved, voice trained, fantastic personality - playful, sweet, good natured, great in strange environments. Loves swimming, frisbees, other dogs, outstanding around small children $150 Neg. only to good home owner. Leaving the country call Tara @ 256-6788

Futon/Couch. Thick mattress & cover Black steel frame. Very good condition $200 OBO 253-0547

Dave Matthews Tickets. 8 in 14th row. Call Aaron at 546-9562

I WILL TRADE 2 Conn. PEARL JAM TICKETS for 2 tickets to the MAINE show Call Dan 549-0388

100 Watt Samsung Stereo Receiver $75/BO 549-9672

PINBALL MACHINE. Reconditioned $1,000.00 (413) 253-5363

FOR SALE

Futon, Double frame and custom cover $200.00 080 548-9728

WATERBED Oak, Queen, Drawers. $225 549-6412

I have 4 Dave Matthews Tix Oct 4 MSG Need to sell Call Karen 549-5079

Futon Double with frame and cover $150 BO Waterbed, Queen, Semi-wave-less with headboard $150 BO 253-5350

Red-Tailed Boa 3 yrs old, 4.5 ft long, plus 40 gallon tank, needs good home $150 or B/O. Rich 548-9911

SmithCorona Electric Typewriter w/man $50/ Rollerblades - Woman's 8.5-9 $45. Call Taras 549-3994

Basement Sale! Everything must go! 549-1578

Panasonic Extra Bass Stereo, detach apeakers, CD + dual cassette BNew $200/BO. CJ 6-1810

Bar Size Pool Table by United Perfect condition Includes avarytning! Interested? Call Scott and Dom @ 256-1088

FOUND

Set of Keys in the vicinity of the church at N. Pleasant and Fearing Streets. Call 549-1550 9am-noon

INSTRUCTION

Jazz Piano Teacher - Beginners to advanced students - Call Steven Page 253-3354

WWW SUCESS.ORG Free business education From American Institute Enirepreneurship and Real Estate Investment Courses Retire rich in ten years.'

LOST

Gray Female Lhasa Apso lost 6/17 Main St. Responds to Nula 549-3947

MUSICIANS

Guitar Classes Start 9/10 Rentals and lessons available 10 wks/$40.00 FTUG Pat 545-0579

Blues Jam Toes. 8:00pm Emerson 112 Check it out!

MISCELLANEOUS

Free Discount Calling Card features best rates in the country! 17 1/2 cents per minute Anywhere in the country Anytime, night or day. Order toll free 1-888-487-4732 Specify EC 1587

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

1-900-BUSINESS Turn key program, low start-up cost. Call Conrad 564-5198

PERSONALS

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

ROOM FOR RENT

One Undergrad Needed: Share 2 bedroom, 2 full baths, ceiling fans ++ free heat/hot water. Call here @ 549-4089

2 Bedrooms Available in 4 bedroom apt. Northampton on bus route Beautiful Apt., great location Call 586-1612

ROOMMATE WANTED

Looking for room in an apartment. Anything on bus line Please call Dan 367-2047

SERVICES

Computer Consultant Hardware and Software help Web Page Creation, Marketing. Call Joseph (413)548-0853

Computer Problems? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Scream Savers 549-0083

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH Find out how hundreds of student representatives are already earning free trips and lots of cash with America's #1 Spring Break Company! Sell only 15 trips and travel FREE! Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica, or Florida! Campus Manager positions also available. Call now! Take a break! Student Travel (800)95-BREAK

TRANSPORTATION

Ride Share from Lee (or Berkshire area) MTWF @ 9:00 classes Call Jason 243-0981

WANTED TO RENT

Seeking 3 Bdr Apartment/ house needed ASAP Call 546-6077

WANTED

Mother's Helper South Amherst, Early morning, Car Required, Rates negotiable Call evenings 256-0078

Wanted 100 People New Metabolism Breakthrough Lose 5-100 lbs Guaranteed Cost $35 (800)776-9503

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
Expect a lightening of your load this week as a project moves into a different phase. Take advantage of this time to build on a personal relationship that you've placed on a back burner. Pets provide a few laughs at an unexpected moment.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
A volatile situation begins to calm down—apparently for no reason. Don't waste time questioning a good thing. Instead, work to build harmony and stability, and this grace will last longer than anyone expects. Treat yourself to a lively evening out this weekend.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
You may be feeling a little bit fragmented when it comes to your love life. Don't push yourself into making a decision you're not ready to make. A voice from the past has news that may leave you feeling ambivalent. Everything will seem clearer soon.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
If you've been frazzled lately, ask for understanding instead of just demanding it. You'll be amazed at how many more fans you can catch with honey than with vinegar. A friendship may be turning into something more—be careful if that's not what you want.

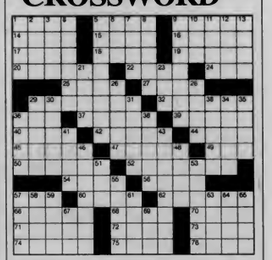
LEO
July 23-August 23
A cheerful family member has just the right take on a confusing situation. Be ready to listen and you could learn a lot. It would be easy to overlook yourself this week, so be sure to build some relaxation in to your schedule.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
Use understanding and compromise to resolve a communication problem. Your charm and wit won't always be enough, so use your head, too. Look for an epiphany in an area you can when it comes to starting a new project.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
Your renewed energy and vigor may make you seem overbearing this week. Temper your approach when in public, but when behind closed doors, go for it! Your list of accomplishments will grow at an astonishing pace. Be receptive to some new ideas at work.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
Catch up on all your correspondence before starting something new. You could be missing out on something fun if you're not checking out all your options. Listen to what a young person has to say. It could be a great idea for you.



SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
Focus on clearing up some nagging financial issues. Although you may find paperwork boring, it's the key to your peace of mind in the near future. Check your calendar to be sure you're not missing an important event.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
Take the bull by the horns this week. Your new enthusiasm will make up for what you lack in finesse. Honesty is the best policy when it comes to keeping your relationships strong, too. Don't forget to do your homework before an important meeting.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
An outdoor jaunt is just the thing to renew your energy and vitality. Take a friend along, too. You'll gain perspective on a situation that has been bothering you. Open your heart to a trusted confidante, and you'll learn something you didn't know about yourself.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
Don't underestimate your abilities. A lazy streak may have hobbled you in the past, but now is the time to break old habits and go for broke. You'll be astonished at what you can accomplish. Set your goals and then just watch others jump in.

CROSSWORD

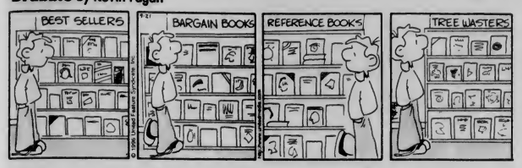
ACROSS
1. Livestock pen
6. Woody serves him beer
8. Human
14. For eternity
15. CSNAY song done in one take
16. Proprietor
17. Olin or Horne
18. ___ pres (2 wds.)
19. Cohort of Clint and Weylon
20. Garr
22. Casual attempt
24. Bridge expert Culbertson
25. Escorted sojourn
27. Thick piece
29. Allstate's s.g.
32. King Hussein's language
35. One or more preceder
37. "Medusa and the ___"
39. Bagpipe sound
40. Jewels
42. Island seen from the Bahery
44. Monoski
46. Certain berth
47. Tuna and patty
49. Mount Hood's st.
50. Of cultural minorities
52. Like the hour before the dawn
54. Hop ___ (2 wds.)
56. Novelist James
57. Type of cup or table
60. Cutting
62. African fly
66. "Good Times" actress
68. High ranking
70. Like an affluent sefiora
71. Come onstage
72. Blurt
73. Annoying insect
74. Curved letters
75. Actor Randall
76. Candied dish

DOWN
1. Stroll py
2. Affirm
3. University of Nevada city
4. Sketches
5. Evening song
6. Exclamation of surprise
7. Tatters
8. Castle defenses
9. Fusillade
10. Mother sheep
11. Regarding (2 wds.)
12. Actress Gwyn
13. Flannel colour
21. Chits
23. Montgomery's state: abbr.
26. Domain
28. View from the cooler
29. Unskilled
30. Graceful maiden
31. Angered
33. Beans' ties
34. Like some gases
35. Formally surrender
36. Slivering fit
38. Pale purple
41. "Heaven Must Have ___ You"
43. Tactics
46. Uproar causers
48. Items for mountain travel
51. U.S. spook agcy.
53. Vim and vigor
55. Parcel
57. The Hanging ___ (Gary Cooper film)
58. Long time periods
59. Heights: abbr.
61. El ___ California
63. "Private Dancer" singer Turner
64. Sing
65. Beanery fare
67. Jame ___ Curtis
68. Bart Bobbsey's sister

Rates
$2.00 minimum/day
Students 20¢ per word/day
All others 40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

50,000 EYES WILL SEE YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
THEY REALLY WORK!!
(WOULD I LIE TO YOU?)



Dilbert By Scott Adams

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Hear Say By Emeile Yang

Robotman By Jim Meddick

8 Years in Braces By Eric Peterson

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

When my friend Beeber was 10 years old she claimed she could hear a radio station playing music in her head.

If she turned on the real radio she would her the very same song. For years she would hear it.

A lot of people didn't believe her.

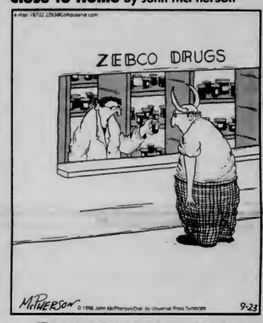
Then, when she was 15, a TV repairman told her that her teeth braces could act like a cyrstal radio and actually pick up radio waves.

I think it's amazing.

To this day.... even though her braces are off, she told us at lunch yesterday.... she can still hear Jimi Hendrix's "Purple Haze" when she sticks out her lower jaw.

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick



University² By Frank Cho

Always Wanted One of Those By A. Morse & S. Dumas

Close to Home By John McPherson

"These should clear up the condition in about 10 days. However, if you notice the slightest sign that you're growing an udder, call your doctor immediately."

Today's Staff

Chris Conner
Night Editor

Suzanne Barber
Copy Editor

Thang Vo
Photo Technician

Lorraine Urbanski
Production Supervisor

Sandra Krauss
Chris Lavin
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Chicken Sandwich
Hot Pastrami on Rye
Macaroni and Cheese

DINNER
Mandarin Chicken
Manicotti in Sauce
Quarter Pound Burger
Cheeseburger

Hampden

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Chicken Pucks
Folded Pita

DINNER
Mandarin Chicken
Manicotti in Sauce

Worcester

LUNCH
Macaroni and Cheese
Rotini/Tomato Sauce
Red Beans

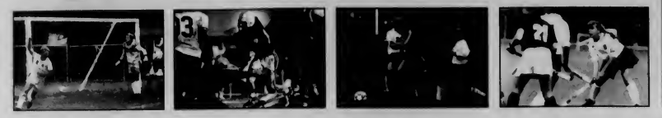
DINNER
Mandarin Chicken
Mandarin Tofu
Pastabilities
Meatballs/Grinder Roll

Berkshire

LUNCH
Macaroni and Cheese
Rotini/Tomato Sauce
Red Beans

DINNER
Mandarin Chicken
Glazed Harvest Ham
Mandarin Tofu
Pastabilities

Quote of the Day



"If you don't start paying attention, I'm going to take your foot and flush it down the toilet."

-Overheard at Riverside

MERGE
When we all work together, great things can happen.
WRAP
Muscular Dystrophy Association
1-800-572-1717

YOUR COMIC COULD BE HERE
Instead of this stupid ad TO RUN A STRIP IN THE COLLEGIAN CONTACT CHRIS CONNER, MANAGING EDITOR • 545-1672

SportsWeekend

Collegian Sports • Monday, September 23, 1996

Inside this issue:

- The UMass volleyball team went 1-2 in the Rhode Island Classic. See page 8 for the wrap up.
- The men's cross country team took second place in its only home meet. See page 8 for the run down.
- The [illegible] opponent at home this weekend. See page 7 for the story.
- The men's soccer team travelled to South Carolina yesterday. See tomorrow's Collegian for the scoop.

Minutemen squish Spiders in 23-17 overtime win

By Mike Carey
Collegian Staff

RICHMOND, VA — The University of Massachusetts football team returned from its third consecutive road game with nothing but smiles on their faces. Thanks to this past Saturday's come-from-behind, a 23-17 overtime win over the Richmond Spiders, the Minutemen didn't have much to complain about.

MASSACHUSETTS	23
RICHMOND	17

In a game that requires more than just the words exciting, thrilling and rewarding to describe it, the Minutemen came home at 2-1, and 1-0 in the Yankee Conference. However, it would take them to the last play of the game to do it.

With 36 seconds left, it looked as if the Minutemen would cap off a brilliant drive for the game tying score, trailing 17- 10. Senior tailback Frank Alessio caught a 20-yard screen pass from freshman quarterback Jeff Smith and ran it in along the right side for a touchdown. However, it would be called back for an illegal block.

Three plays later, which included Smith being sacked and throwing two incomplete passes, he would be faced with a fourth down and goal to go, from the 20 yard line of Richmond.

With eight seconds left, UMass was down 17-10 as Smith dropped back in the pocket, with a Richmond crowd of over 15,000 on its feet. Facing a blitz coming right at him through the line, he fired a 20-yard touchdown strike right over the middle to the reliable tight end Erik Henry, his second score of the day, and the game-tying TD with only three seconds left.

"I saw the blitz, and the blitz came from the middle of the field," Smith said. "I saw Henry going over and his head turn, and I just put it up, I knew he could get it."

Smith replaced junior quarterback Anthony Catterton with 5:31 left to go in the game, with the responsibility resting on him to pull this one out for the Minutemen.

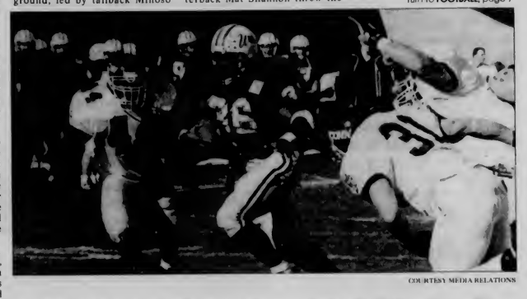
"I wanted to come in and do the best I could," Smith said. "I know the linemen were fighting all game, they were fighting real hard and they deserved to win this game. Anthony Catterton played a good game, he got us where we had to be. All credit goes to him, and all credit goes to the line. I was just thinking I needed to make the best of this opportunity to help us win the game."

After Matt Murphy sent the extra point through the uprights to tie up this contest at 17 all, it was on to the overtime frame, in which each team gets an opportunity to score from the opponents' 25 yard line. The team tallying up the most points after both have had possession wins.

The Minutemen were on defense first, and, playing as they had all game long which, they held the Spiders and forced them to kick a 32-yard field goal, which they missed.

It was then time for UMass to try, and time for Ron Brockington, who has fought through adversity his whole career — waiting his turn and fighting injuries — to step up. After Alessio made a seven-yard run to start things off, Brockington would be given the call four times in a row as this senior fullback powered his way through the line looking for pay dirt. On the fourth time, after getting the first down a play ago, Brockington ran it in from 10 yards out up the middle for the score, and the UMass victory.

"That was just the best feeling, to contribute to the team and get the victory, it feels good, it really felt good," Brockington said. "Our team goal is to win the last Yankee Conference Championship (next year the conference will be named the Atlantic 10 Conference), and it all started here with our first Yankee Conference game."



Brockington would rush for 61 yards on the day and the one score, while Allesio rushed for 73 yards on 22 carries. Once again the statistics would be deceiving, as UMass would only pick up 102 yards on the ground, as there had been 16 rushes on the day for the Minutemen with losses of 29 yards.

The Richmond defense held strong for most of the day as they stopped the Minutemen consistently. They held UMass to a total of only 244 yards of offense on the day. The Spiders would rack up 283 yards of offense, with 177 yards on the ground, led by tailback Minoso Rodgers' 94. In the air both teams were each 9 for 26 passing, the Minutemen amassing 136 yards, the Spiders 106.

Smith threw for 76 yards on 5 for 11 passing and Catterton was 4 for 15 for 60 yards on the afternoon. Five different receivers caught passes for each team, and Richmond's quarterback Mat Shannon threw the game's only interception, as Jeff Kromenhoek came down with the grab for the Minutemen.

Though it seemed like the UMass defense was on the field for most of the day, the Spiders only had the ball for just over one minute longer than UMass. The UMass defense would be

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 7

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Ron Brockington scored the winning TD on a 10-yard run in overtime to lead UMass over Richmond.

UM tactical plan crosses-out Hawks

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

Without fail, at the conclusion of every episode of the A- Team, with the bad guys vanquished, Col. Hannibal Smith would light up a fat victory stogie, turn to the camera and say "I love it when a plan comes together."

Massachusetts women's soccer coach Jim Rudy had the same look on his face, minus the stogie, after his team rolled to a brilliant 3-0 win over Hartford on Saturday at Richard F. Garber Field.

For the majority of Friday's practice, the Minutewomen worked relentlessly on their crosses, changing their point of attack from a centralized spot to one closer to the side lines, finishing off their scoring chances when they arose.

The end result was a trio of goals, all six-yard redirections of long crosses, and a resounding victory.

"Coach was trying to get us to go to the end line more and have crosses," Amanda Thompson said. "Practice yesterday helped out today."

The Minutewomen clung to their motif of taking the ball deep into the corners and crossing into the goal box throughout the contest, and wasted little time in establishing their presence.

The team's first attack came just 31 seconds into the match, before many of the 1,071 had settled into their seats and picked up their maracas. Tina Lightning stole the ball in the right corner of the field and fired it across to freshman Emma Kurowski, who redirected it into the net from the goal mouth.

Just over 12 minutes later, Kurowski tallied her third career goal on almost a carbon copy of her earlier strike, this one coming off a feed from Sandy Shimogaki.

Before the teams had completed the 13th minute of play, the UMass scheme had paid off tremendously and the Hawks looked befuddled.

"We basically worked on crossing and finishing all of [Friday's practice], and that's what we did today," Kurowski said. "It worked out that that's how I happened to get both my goals, on crosses."

Turn to UMASS, page 8

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

Freshman Emma Kurowski scored two goals in UMass' 3- 0 shutout of Hartford on Saturday.

UM shoots Hawks out of the sky

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

There was an air of silent anticipation surrounding Richard F. Garber Field on Saturday afternoon, as the No. 9 Massachusetts women's soccer team (6-0, 1-0 in the Atlantic 10) renewed its rivalry with the University of Hartford (1-5).

MASSACHUSETTS	3
HARTFORD	0

It could have been that the home crowd of 1,071 was getting psychologically prepared for another thriller like UMass' 2-1 NCAA Tournament double-overtime win last season. Or they could have thought that it was already over, which it was following freshman forward Emma Kurowski's goal just :31 into the match, which led the Minutewomen to a 3-0 annihilation of the Hawks.

The Hartford defense failed to clear this early scoring opportunity, with Kurowski (3 goals, 1 assist, 7 points) picking out of the air a tight cross by senior midfielder Tina Lightning. The Hawks did not even come close to regaining composure, and began to circle their wagons. They had to fend off consecutive attacks on goal by senior midfielder Rebecca Myers, as Kurowski once again came through with a carbon copy of her first goal at the 12:50 mark, this time scoring on a cross from senior midfielder Sandy Shimogaki's.

That score was created by the concerted run of junior defender Erica Iverson up the right flank, who combined with her back line mates of sophomores Amanda Thompson and Robin Smith, and senior Erin Lynch to completely shut down Hartford, allowing them only one marginal shot on net. The Hawks might be wearing the same colors as last year, but this squad is not the squad it used to be.

The graduation of three of their top scorers, the departure of coach Austin Daniels, and the loss of forward Stephanie Chmura to the University of Colorado, was evident. New coach Mark Krikorian's squad and plenty of cloudy excuses — and no real answers — were the result on this sunny day in Amherst.

For UMass coach Jim Rudy, he did not let his squad take Hartford's dismal 1-4 record to heart the week before this contest.

"We have had a lot of games where we felt we were the better team, and somehow Hartford found a way to tie us, or knock us out of the playoffs one year," Rudy said. "I take nothing for granted with Hartford at any point in time.

"[Emma] has expanded her game, and I think the key thing is that, unlike in high school and club ball, there are not many balls you can receive for free, and you have to make that run to make yourself open to receive the ball. Those two near post goals, there are not many players that score goals like that. Running at the near post and hitting deflections one time, that is a big time goal."

The Minutewomen concentrated on serving the ball into the box all week in practice, and it was apparent that Kurowski's two early goals were the products of that work. The freshman scoring jinx never had a chance with the former Sutton High superstar, as she started last week with an assist in the 2-0 win over UC-Santa Barbara, and a goal in the 4-0 demolition of St. Bonaventure. The coach let the newcomers know about the importance of this game, and the forward came through quickly and impressively.

"The coach was a little excited all week, you could tell it was a big game," Kurowski said. "He stressed the whole week how big this game is, and how much of a rivalry that all Connecticut teams are."

Myers (4G, 8P) continued her assault on the UMass record books Saturday, as she tied April Kater in second place for career points (92) with her second half goal.

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER, page 7

Field hockey wins in OT; Amy Ott leads Lion hunt

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

STORRS, CONN — Mother Nature held off her attack until the game was over, but the Massachusetts field hockey team created an offensive storm in the second half to put away Penn State yesterday, 4-3, on the field hockey turf at the University of Connecticut.

MASSACHUSETTS	4
PENNSYLVANIA	3

The No. 5 Minutewomen (5-1) scored three second half goals to force overtime with the No. 19 Lady Lions (2-3), and Erica Johnston put away the game winner with 3:40 remaining in the sudden death extra period to give UMass the win.

"Penn State is ranked 19th, which is ludicrous. They've played probably the toughest schedule of anyone at the beginning of the season," UMass coach Pam Hixon said.

Johnston took a pass from senior midfielder Kyle Rothenberger, and sent the ball into the Penn State cage. Lady Lion goalie Jamie Smith, who had charged out of the net to stop Johnston, couldn't reach the ball in time.

"In the overtime, I think we had our best chances of the whole game. We really dominated them in the overtime," Hixon said.

Penn State got on the board first when Tara Maguire, who spent last year away from school to play with Hixon and the U.S. National Team, beat UMass goalie Hillary Rose to give the Lady Lions a 1-0 advantage 10:53 into the first half. Sonja Volla assisted on the goal.

Penn state pushed its lead to 2-0 with fewer than five minutes before halftime, as Julie Spealter deflected Maguire's shot from the edge of the circle past Rose.

Rose kept UMass in the game in the first half by stopping one of Penn State's strongest scoring opportunities. After the ball got caught under Rose, Penn State was awarded a penalty stroke. Lady Lions' coach Char Morette called on her goalie to take the stroke. Burdened by cumbersome pads, Smith couldn't get the shot past Rose.

"It's not rare, but it's unusual for a goaltender to take a stroke. Goalkeepers, with the all the equipment they have on, have a very difficult time generating enough speed to beat Hillary," Hixon said.

UMass came out strong in the sec-

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 7

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

And the winner is?
Mike Butler and the men's soccer team traveled to South Carolina yesterday to face the Gamecocks. See tomorrow's Collegian for the story.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 15 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, September 24, 1996

UMass hunts at home for Hawks

Today Dave Siljanovski, and the UM men's soccer squad look to bounce back from their first defeat against Hartford. Check out our story (see Sports, page 8).

Yojimbo gets a new master.

Bruce Willis and Christopher Walken wow in director Walter Hill's Last Man Standing. Check out our review (see Arts & Living, page 5).

WORLD

Yeltsin's health scares Russian Communists

MOSCOW (AP) — Amid rising fears that Boris Yeltsin's health is too fragile right now to withstand heart surgery, a top American cardiovascular surgeon flew in Monday to offer his opinion. The Communists demanded Yeltsin step down if he can't govern.

Russian stocks slid 3 percent on concerns over Yeltsin's health, and the credibility of official reports on his condition crumbled. Terse official accounts of a basically healthy patient heading into routine surgery have fallen apart, challenged by Yeltsin's doctors themselves.

Television newscasts led with the arrival of heart specialist Dr. Michael DeBakey, who will join in examinations Wednesday that could set a date for Yeltsin's bypass operation.

The top Russian surgeons who invited DeBakey are now talking about delaying the operation because of related health concerns. While declaring "I'm always optimistic," DeBakey told reporters he could give no specifics because he had not seen Yeltsin yet.

Dr. Renat Akchurin, the president's surgeon, said over the weekend that the operation may have to be delayed for up to two months while Yeltsin's health is stabilized.

NATION

JFK Jr. married during top secret ceremony

BOSTON (AP) — If John F. Kennedy Jr. ever decides to follow his family into government, the tabloid paparazzi and gossip columnists have a suggestion for him: Try the CIA.

One of the country's most eligible and most watched bachelors managed to pull off a society version of mission impossible. He got married in high style and most of his media pursuers never had a hint beforehand.

And it was no small, quickie wedding, either.

Blissfully free from hovering helicopters, Kennedy married Carolyn Bessette in a private ceremony Saturday, with only a few dozen guests in a small Baptist church on secluded Cumberland Island off the Georgia coast.

"We were on the island at various times during the weekend and at various times were escorted off the island," said Steve Coz, editor of the National Enquirer, which had reported the couple would marry this month.

On Monday, the honeymooners were thought to be secreted away on the former presidential yacht Honey Fitz, somewhere off the coast. "JFK Jr. ought to run the CIA," Coz said. "He really achieved what he wanted to achieve: a private wedding."

"It was planned out so masterfully," concurred Landon Jones, managing editor of People magazine. "I think they just employed every lesson they learned in the past 20 years.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wed.	Thursday
HIGH: 70 LOW: 50	HIGH: 68 LOW: 52	HIGH: 65 LOW: 55

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 6
Comics .....page 7
Crossword .....page 6
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 8

JAMES STANLEY / COLLEGIAN

Cleaning the pond
R.J.Fijol Inc. of Westwarren was cleaning the silt out of the campus pond yesterday.

SGA Senate elections tomorrow

Polling stations to hit Dining Commons for mealtime rushes

By Raghuram Vadarevu
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Student Government Association (SGA) will hold its annual Undergraduate Senate Elections on Wednesday, Sept. 25.

"If students have concerns about the way things are run on campus, they need to get out there and vote," said SGA Secretary for Public Policy and Relations Peter Kilbourne.

"They should follow-up by addressing their concerns through their senators."

The elections will be held in the Dining Commons (D.C.) and various buildings across campus from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. to 7 p.m.

See Related Story, page 3

The elections will be held in Berkshire D.C. for Southwest Residential Area South, Hampshire D.C. for Southwest Area North.

The polling cite for students in the Northeast and Sylvan Residential Areas will be held in the Worcester D.C.

Students who live in the Central and Orchard Hill Residential Areas will be able to vote at Franklin D.C.

Commuting students must vote at the Hatch, located in the basement of the Student Union Building.

Students living within the Greek Community can vote at either the Newman Center or Hillel House.

Each of the polling stations will be operated by an SGA Election Commission member, who is appointed by each area government, and a student volunteer from the Student Council on Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA).

In addition to helping pollsters, SCERA's student volunteers will also register student voters as a part of the SGA-led voter registration drive, according to Speaker of the Undergraduate Student Senate Brian Tirrell.

In this election, there are 63 nominations on the ballot for the respective residential areas.

However, Brown Residence Hall in Sylvan and Cance and Patterson Halls in Southwest do not have nominations.

Some of the duties of the Undergraduate Senate include the allocation of $1.5 million from the Student Activities Trust Fund to student organizations on campus.

The Senate also has the ability to make formal recommendations to University administration on policy and education issues.

The election results will be made public on Friday at 10 a.m. in the SGA offices located in the 420 Student Union.

Police investigate alleged date rape in Orchard Hill

Police said yesterday that an alleged "acquaintance rape" in Orchard Hill Residential Area was reported on Sunday.

"We've had a report of an alleged acquaintance rape," said John Luippold, University of Massachusetts police chief. "Right now we are following up with the victim, and working to identify the individual."

Luippold denied further comment because University detectives are currently investigating the case.

The alleged victim has not yet decided to press charges, according to Luippold.

This is the first reported case of alleged sexual assault on campus this semester.

The Department of Public Safety is currently involved in workshops on violence awareness education being conducted in various residence halls. Officers are also in the process of organizing Rape Agression Defense training for women on campus.

— Laura Stock

Union Summer bridges gap between college student & union organizations

By Beth McCarthy
Collegian Staff

Participation in the 1996 Union Summer, organized by the American Federation of Labor and the Congress Industrial Organization (AFL-CIO), inspired a group of Five College students to continue their work through the newly formed Student Labor Action Coalition (SLAC).

"We had a great experience this summer and learned a lot about the labor movement," said Ingrid Semaan, one of the founders of SLAC. "Labor unions are being revived and we want to be a part of that, so we put together our own group."

According to Tracy Tucker, a member of AFL-CIO who will be speaking at SLAC's introductory meeting, these five students were involved for three weeks in Union Summer. They were five of only 1,000 participants selected from over 3,000 applicants to participate in this paid internship.

These interns were able to chose from 21 different cities across the country to become a part of what Semaan characterized as the revived labor movement. Accompanied by experienced union organizers, participants also served as counselors, sent to worker's homes to listen to their problems and offer advice as to available options.

Also, interns rallied, protested and distributed information about labor related issues, according to Tucker.

"There is also the educational component," Tucker said of the Union Summer training. "We bring in speakers with minority backgrounds who talk about discrimination in their work fields and people who speak about new methods and ideas."

"When I worked in a jewelry factory, all my co-workers were Third World women. We were surrounded by surveillance cameras and treated like prisoners and thieves," said Esther Song, who will also be speaking at SLAC's meeting and is a member of AFL-CIO. "I am angry when I see Latinos and Asians getting mistreated because of their race or languages in factories and offices. Unions fight that sort of garbage."

According to Semaan, SLAC will be dealing with labor problems at the national level, such as bringing out into the open the conditions that the average strawberry worker faces.

"These people work 12 to 14 hours a day," said Semaan. "They are not given water, and they're stooped over all day. It's hard, dangerous work, and they are in the process of unionizing."

"The labor movement is the place where young people can make real changes for economic justice, race and gender equality," said Patrick Scott, a member of AFL-CIO and who will also be speaking at SLAC's meeting.

SLAC will also be active at the local level, although "so far there is nothing yet," explained Semaan. As the organization evolves, however, this group plans on becoming involved with on-campus unions.

Being such a new organization, SLAC "has ideas" but "we hope to get a larger group to really decide what we want to do," said Semaan, who is looking forward to meeting students from the Five Colleges, and Holyoke Community College, who are interested in the labor movement.

Tucker supports this group which is "entirely independent of AFL. We're more here as a resource and for guidance."

"I know it was only three weeks, but I really learned a lot of, not only problems that the workers face, but also how to organize events and different kinds of strategies that are effective in supporting the workers," said Semaan.

Semaan believes that her training with Union Summer, as well as that of her four colleagues, has more than adequately prepared SLAC to begin an effective independent pro-labor campaign.

"It's a chance to be a part of the labor movement," said Semaan, encouraging students to attend SLAC's introductory meeting on Wednesday, Sept. 25 at 7:30 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge, Student Union Building.

Peace Corps looks for help

By Daniel E. Lavenson
Collegian staff

On Wednesday, Sept. 25, the Peace Corps will hold a recruitment meeting at 7:00 p.m. in Campus Center room 905.

Mike Simsik, coordinator for the Five College Peace Corps recruitment office at the University of Massachusetts, spoke to the Collegian about his time in the Peace Corps and the impact it had on his life.

Simsik, a UMass graduate with a degree in forestry management, was inspired to travel abroad by one of his professors who had been in India in the 1960's.

One day, while walking through the Campus Center Concourse, he encountered Peace Corps recruiters and decided to apply.

He was sent to Benin, a country in West Africa, where he stayed from 1986 to 1989. He worked on tree nurseries that were run by local villagers.

Funding for the operations was provided by the Peace Corps and an organization called the African Development Bank.

Simsik said that he was glad that he had the opportunity to work abroad because it was an opportunity to immerse himself in a new and vibrant culture.

"You're going there to learn, not just to share and teach," Simsik said.

With the collapse of the former Soviet Union, new opportunities for volunteerism have greatly expanded, specifically within Eastern Europe. Countries new to Peace Corps volunteers since 1990 include Albania, Armenia and Lithuania.

Peace Corps volunteers provide a wide variety of technical assistance to different groups in countries mainly in Africa, but also in South America and other parts of the world.

The organization was created in October of 1960 when President John F. Kennedy addressed University of Michigan students, offering them the task of working in "developing" countries.

Volunteer characteristics have changed between 1961 and 1996. The most noticeable difference is, of course, in the numbers of people actually working across the globe.

In 1961, the Peace Corps had 124 volunteers in the field; as of 1996, that number has expanded greatly to 6,586, despite recent threats from Congress to axe its federal funds.

The number of volunteers over the age of 50 has also dramatically increased, going form six in 1961 to 527 in 1996.

There have been 824 volunteers who attended UMass as either undergraduate or graduate students.

Applicants with degrees in certain areas such as health, math or science, are much more likely to be accepted to the program, according to Simsik.

"They tend to only take college graduates," Simsik said.

Volunteers all have health care, travel costs and a cost of living allowance, supplied by the Peace Corps.

A $200 per month "readjustment allowance," which they collect at the end of their service is also provided. The purpose of this money is to provide volunteers with funds to get them started once they return to their inevitably more expensive lives within the United States.

The Five College Peace Corp recruitment office is located in Room 12, Draper Hall. The office can be contacted during weekday afternoons at 545-2105.

Provost aims to boost academia

Editor's Note: this article is the fourth in a four part series profiling key administrators and faculty at the University of Massachusetts.

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

As Provost, Patricia H. Crosson is the Chief Academic Officer at the University of Massachusetts. She works with administrators, faculty and students on a daily basis to improve academia on the campus.

Educational background

Crosson graduated from Smith College in 1966 with an undergraduate degree in history. She then went to Italy attending both the University of Florence, where she studied history and art and the University of Siena, where she studied political science.

Crosson achieved her Ed.D. and M.Ed. from the University in Higher Education.

On the road to becoming an administrator, Crosson has also held faculty positions at several universities. Before coming to UMass, she was Assistant to Associate Professor of Higher Education at the University of Pittsburgh. In 1985, Crosson became the Associate Professor of Higher Education at UMass; presently she is a professor of Higher Education.

Crosson also worked at several UMass administrative positions before becoming the provost. After leaving two directorial positions in Higher Education, she earned the position of Deputy Provost and Associate Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs in 1989.

Four years later Crosson became the Chair of the Department of Educational Policy, Research and Administration of the School of Education. Immediately before becoming Provost she served as Interim Provost and Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs.

"I have always been interested in what happened in public universities," said Crosson. "I am comfortable and committed to the mission of public Higher Education."

Personal Perspectives

"The interest of the students, the great faculty and the commitment of the staff are some of the best aspects of the University," said Crosson.

But Crosson said that the facilities, specifically the classrooms, are one of the worst aspects of the campus.

She added, "Although it is getting better, the unevenness of state support is definitely detrimental to the University."

The Provost said that having higher education as a professional area of expertise along with experience as a faculty member has aided her in her current adminis-

Turn to CROSSON, page 3

COURTESY PEACE CORPS

Villagers and Peace Corps volunteers in the West African Republic of Benin constructed this well as part of a technical assistance program offered by the corps.

For Your Information

PIPs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PIP, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Notices

Tuesday, Sept. 24

Discussion—The Wildlife Society presents State Deer Biologist, John MacDonald, to discuss "Teaming with Wildlife" and other important issues at 6 p.m. in Holdsworth 203. Refreshments will follow the presentation.

Info–Social—The LBGA will hold its weekly info-social form 7–9 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803. There will be refreshments and announcements concerning events for October, including information on the National Coming Out Day rally. For more information, call the LBGA office at 545-0154.

Meeting—The Asian American Student Union will hold it's first general meeting at 7:30 p.m. in room 174 of the Campus Center. Non–members are welcome, and there are positions open. For more information, call the AASA office at 545-0189. Casino Night is coming!

Meeting—Alpha Phi Omega, a co–ed community service fraternity, will be holding an informational meeting in their office, room 409 of the Student Union, at 7 p.m. Refreshments will be served. For further information, call 545–2066.

Meeting—Circle K International, a collegiate community service organization, is having a meeting at 7 p.m. in room 409 of the Student Union. For more information, call Aimee at 665–7712.

Wednesday, Sept. 25

Meeting—UMass Film Society meeting is holding a meeting at 6 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge in the Student Union. New members welcome.

Meeting—The Cannabis Reform Coalition invites everyone to their first general meeting at 7 p.m. at Earthfoods. On the agenda: Hiring an office staffer, nominations for the executive board, and building faculty support. For more information, call Brian Julin at 545–1122.

Meeting—Spectrum, a student run art and literary magazine, will hold its first general meeting for all those interested at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center. For more information, call 545–2240.

Meeting—The MASSPIRG general interest meeting will be at 7 p.m. in Campus Center room 101. For more information, call Leigh at 545–0199.

Reception—The Women's Studies Welcome Back Reception for students, faculty, staff, and friends will be held from 12–2 p.m. in room 1001–2 of the Campus Center. Refreshments will be served, and all are welcome. For more information, call 545–1922, or e–mail at womens- studies@woost.umass.edu or http://www-unix.oit.umass.edu/~womtu.

Thursday, Sept. 26

Meeting—There will be an informational meeting about a UMass trip to Israel being offered on Winter Break (Dec. 23–Jan. 2), at 7 p.m. at the Hillel House.

Meeting—The Math Club will hold its first meeting at 7 p.m. in LGRT 1521D. All math majors invited. Come tour the new undergraduate reading lounge and meet other math majors. Pizza will be served for those signed up in LGRT 1521D ahead of time.

Friday, Sept. 27

Meeting—World AIDS Day Planning meeting for everyone interested in planning for the UMass community's observance of World AIDS Day will be held from 2–3 p.m. in the Campus Center. Check the Campus Center message board or call 577–5181 for further details.

Religious—The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley offers rides to students to attend the 10 a.m. service in Amherst. Drivers arrive at the Knowlton and Prince bus stops at 9:45 p.m. Please call Mark to confirm, or for other stops, at 253–0361.

Everywoman's Center—Acculturation Group for Latina Women, facilitated by Mari Vicente, Thurs. meets from 4–6 p.m. Child Sexual Abuse Survivors Support Groups: Group 1 facilitated by Sara Elinoff, Mondays from 7–9 p.m. Group 2 facilitator, day, and time TBA. Coming Out Group For Lesbians, facilitated by Lynne Schachne, Mondays 4–5:30 p.m. Lifting Your Spirits, facilitated by Carla Brennan and Diana Dalendina, Weds. 4–5:30 p.m. Eco–Psychology for Women, facilitated by Carla Brennan, Fridays 10–11:30 a.m. Post Abortion Support Group, facilitated by Peggy Warwick, Wednesdays 5:30–6:30 p.m. Self–Esteem & Assertiveness for Women, facilitated by Carla Brennan, Wednesdays 6:30–8 p.m. Single Mothers Support Group, facilitated by Amy Rosebury, Tuesdays 1–2:30 p.m. Women & Divorce, facilitated by Ali Thompson, Tuedays 6:30–8 p.m. All groups offered by the Everywoman's Center begin in October, and offer a safe and confidential space. For other groups, call 545–0883.

Meeting—The Animal Rights Coalition meetings are every Tuesday at 7 p.m. in room 306 of the Student Union. For more information, call the ARC office at 5–1925.

Dancing—Beginner classes in Cajun dancing and Appalachian clogging are starting on Sunday evenings from 6–7 p.m. No experience or partner needed, all ages welcome. Classes are held in Westfield at 132 Elm St. For more information, call Jo Sarnelli at (413) 746–9067.

Five College–REFLECT, the Five College Bereavement Support Program is a student organization devoted to helping those coping with grief. REFLECT is offering two free 8 week grief support groups this semester. Groups are forming now. Please call 577–5316 for more information.

Staff Needed—The UMass Index yearbook needs staff in all departments. Editorial positions are available in Photo, Layout, Copy, and Marketing departments. An assistant copy editor and assistant sports editor are also needed. Meetings are held on Wednesdays at 7 p.m., 304 Student Union, or call 545–0848 if interested.

Support group — Synthesis Center Associate Rebecca Reid leads an ongoing support group for single people over 30 from 7:15 to 8:45 p.m. in downtown Amherst. Single, divorced, widowed and all sexual orientation are welcome. There is a low fee. For information, call 253–5494.

Religious — The Muslim Student Association at the University of Massachusetts invites all Muslims in the Amherst area to weekly Friday prayer from 1 to 2 p.m. in the Campus Center. The room number will be posted on the Notice Board. For more information, call Utama at 256–8482 or Laili at 253–0874.

Discussion Group — "A Course in Miracles" will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for 10 weeks on Mondays starting in September. For more information, call 253–3795.

Astronomy — The Amherst Area Amateur Astronomers Association will conduct free public solar observing at 1 p.m. at the Amherst Town Common every Saturday in September. Also offered every Saturday this month will be free planetarium shows at 4 p.m. in Amherst College Bassett Planetarium, and free public observatory observing at 9 p.m. at Amherst College Wilder Observatory. Every Sunday this month there will be free public observing at Mt. Pollux, off South East St., in South Amherst.

Correction: Professor Barcey's pull qoute from the article, "Professor Bracey looks to the future" on Sept. 23, should have stated, "Live your life and do the best you can. Make a difference for the better; and if that don't get you to heaven, then I don't want to go." The Collegian regrets the error.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Personal injury
Sept. 21
There was a two–car accident on North Pleasant Street.

Animal Complaint
Sept. 20
A possum was trapped in a barrel at Durfee Conservatory.

Annoying Behavior
Sept. 21
Skateboarders were dispersed from parking lot 64.
Sept. 22
An individual was reportedly yelling obscenities from Washington Residence Hall.

Assault & Battery
Sept. 21
A party in Coolidge Residence Hall reported being assaulted by four white males; they were transported to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton.
Sept. 22
There was a report of a fight brewing in Coolidge Residence Hall.

Assist Agency
Sept. 20
An individual in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall was assisted out of a stuck elevator.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering
Sept. 20
A radio and radar detector were stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 22.

Disturbance
Sept. 21
There was a report of a fight in progress from Dickinson Residence Hall.

Drug Law Offenses
Sept. 21
The odor of marijuana was reported from James Residence Hall.

Health/Safety Hazard
Sept. 21
Brown Residence Hall reported tampering with its alarm system.

Larceny
Sept. 20
A mountain bike was stolen from Gorman Residence Hall.
Sept. 21
An antenna was stolen from parking lot 44.
Sept. 22
A computer was reported missing from Johnson Residence Hall.

Liquor Law Violations
Sept. 20
Alcohol was confiscated from underage parties in parking lots 49 and 21.
Alcohol was dumped from an underage possessor in parking lot 43.
Alcohol possessed by an underage party in Butterfield Residence Hall was dumped.

Lost/Found Property
Sept. 21
A wallet found on Russell Street was returned to its owner.
Sept. 22
A 3–speed bicycle was found on University Drive.

Motor Vehicle Theft
Sept. 20
A motor vehicle was stolen from the Campus Center Garage.

Open Window/Door
Sept. 22
There was an attempt to secure a door in Bartlett Hall.

Sex Offenses
Sept. 22
Detectives from CDU are investigating an alleged "acquaintance rape" in Orchard Hill Residence Area.

Suspicious Person/Activity
Sept. 21
Jeffery D. Desmarais, 20, of 49 Ames Ave., Chicopee, was arrested on a warrant for trespassing.

Traffic Stop
Sept. 21
Robert C. Daley, 21, of 21 Woodhaven Dr., North Andover, was stopped on Governors Drive and arrested for operating under the influence of liquor, driving outside of marked lanes, speeding and not having his license in possession.
Sept. 22
James M. Binary, 21, of 30 Lennox Rd., Peabody, was stopped on University Drive and arrested for operating under the influence of liquor and having a forged/misused registry of motor vehicles document.

Vandalism
Sept. 22
Graffiti was found in Van Meter Residence Hall.
Graffiti was found in Pierpont Residence Hall.

Are you unsatisfied with Collegian coverage?

Come join the difference.

The Collegian is currently seeking new staff members interested in writing for the Arts & Life/Features section. Experience is not a requirement for incoming correspondents. For more info, come down to the Collegian office and ask for Michael Elliott.

Additionally, paid Associate News Editor positions are available. Pick up a application in the Collegian office or call Mike at 545–0219. Applications are due in the Associate News Editor's mailbox tomorrow by 5 p.m.

A MUSICAL EVENING WITH A 20TH CENTURY MAN

RAY DAVIES

(of The Kinks) in

THE STORYTELLER

The Godfather of British Rock & Roll

September 25-29
Tickets: $25 - $35
$5 off with college I.D. for 9/25 show

Box Office: 413-298-5576
at the Berkshire Theatre Festival
Main St. - Stockbridge
(just an hour west on the Mass Pike)

Did you know

That every division of GE is either #1 or #2 in it's market?

Did you know

That GE is comprised of 12 major businesses?

- GE Capital
- GE Aircraft Engines
- GE Lighting
- GE Motors & Industrial Systems
- GE Power Systems
- GE Electrical Distribution & Control
- GE Corporate R&D
- GE Plastics
- GE Appliances
- GE Medical Systems
- NBC
- GE Transportation Systems
- GE Information Services

Did you know

That GE has ENTRY LEVEL programs for college graduates as well as co-op and intern opportunities for undergraduates?

Did you know

That GE is hosting its 1st annual CAREER DAY at U. Mass?

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 1st, 1996
10AM-3PM
U. MASS
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM

Regardless of your major, if your interest is piqued, we invite you to bring your interest and your questions. Resumes welcome.

An Environment Without Boundaries

An equal opportunity employer.

CONSTRUCTING YOUR FUTURE?

BUILD YOUR RESUME.

Come learn how you can build your resume with The Walt Disney World® College Program. You'll be able to earn college recognition or credit while gaining the experience of a lifetime! This is a unique opportunity to enhance your resume with the Disney name.

Representatives will be on campus to answer all your questions concerning the Walt Disney World® College Program.

Interviewing: All Majors! Positions available throughout theme parks and resorts: Attractions, Food & Beverage, Merchandise, Lifeguarding, and many others! Ask the Disney Representative about special opportunities for students fluent in Portuguese.

Presentation Date: Sept. 25, 1996
Time: 7:00 p.m.
Location: 231 Herter Hall
For More Information Contact: Jeff Silver
(413) 545-6267

Also visit us at Orlando Sentinel Online on AOL using keyword "Disney Jobs" or www.CareerMosaic.com/cm/wdw/wdw1.html

Walt Disney World.

An Equal Opportunity Employer • Drawing Creativity From Diversity

The following is a list of candidates running for office in the Undergraduate Student Senate. The elections will be held on Wed. Sept. 25 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Central Residential Area:
Baker Residence Hall: Dan Kitteredge, Craig Holland, Jared Brocalin
Gorman Residence Hall: Shawn Robinson
Van Meter Residence Hall: Mary H. Barrot
At Large: Stacey Shackford, Ken Picotte, Emilie Codega, James Berlinger, Justin A. Roth

Northeast Residential Area:
At Large: Michael Ciulla, Lia Wong, Jennifer Keller, Erica McIntire, Gregory Thurell, Edwin Sosh, Nicole Morris

Orchard Hill Residential Area:
Dickinson Residence Hall: Nirav Patel
Field Residence Hall: Avi Khanna, Sean Marien
Grayson Residence Hall: Stephanie Parenti, Claudia Danielle Ricker
Webster Residence Hall: Cindy Gargano, R.J. Lemar

Sylvan Residential Area:
Brown Residence Hall: None
Cashin Residence Hall: Bob Sullivan, Matt Confronti
McNamara Residence Hall: Philip Milson
At Large: Jennifer Brown

Southwest Residential Area:
John Adams Residence Hall: Gregory Lozier, Emily Livingston, Jennifer Casasanto, Brian McManius, William Serwetnyk, Takeisha G. Wilson
John Q. Adams Residence Hall: Sabrina Sherman, Stephen W. Luszcz, Natcya Madden
Cance Residence Hall: None
Coolidge Residence Hall: Jolyon Yates, Tom Singleton, Athalia Raquel Gonzalez
Kennedy Residence Hall: Jenn Corbett, Malwin Davila, Paul R. Ferro
Patterson Residence Hall: None
Washington Residence Hall: Amy Delaney, Claudette Thyme
At Large: Catherine Mahoney, Allison Murphey, Amy Pellegrino, Tom Sladowski, Monique DeLaOz, Lisa Cook, Matt Conforti

Off–Campus Commuter Area and Extra Residence On– Campus: Allison Murphy, Sky Wilber, Sarah E. Mikulis, Kreg Espinola, James Simpson, Neil P. Collins, Colin McHugh, Brian Entler, Fabio Pari–Di–Moniva, Ramy A. Eid, Bill Barney, Sophy Pich
–Raghuram Vadarevu

JAMES STANLEY / COLLEGIAN

Look Out!
Paul Sheahan, a freshman biology major, burns off some steam practicing kickflips yesterday near the Fine Arts Center.

■ Crosson

continued from page 1

trative position.

Crosson said that she enjoys working with the Deans and Administrators. "We do our best to support the faculty, students and staff," said Crosson.

"One of the worst aspects of my job is the frustration of wanting and at times needing to do more than energy or the resources will allow," said Crosson.

"When I leave UMass, I would like to leave a better place for students to learn at the every level. I would also like to provide a more supportive environment for the faculty," said Crosson.

She added that she wants more external recognition for UMass from the President's office [of UMass] the Board of Higher Education and the Board of Trustees.

Duties

As the Chief Academic Officer, Crosson reports directly to the Chancellor.

Also, she works with the management of the schools and colleges making decisions concerning resources, selection of faculty and tenure.

"I enjoy working with the faculty," said Crosson. "Some one needs to work within the collective sense of the faculty."

Another major aspect of the Provost's job is to supply support services for student and faculty.

Academic Program Review

The Academic Program Review (APR) was a comprehensive document which evaluated each academic department at UMass. The departmental profiles which resulted from the evaluations were then taken into consideration for possible changes to better the departments.

The academic departmental changes of the APR will take place over the next five to six years.

"Working with a variety of people, the Provost is essential to the basic components of the University," said Chancellor David K. Scott last semester at Faculty Senate, in reference to Crosson's APR.

"Much of the hard work which resulted from the APR, like the departmental profiles, will be updated regularly," said Crosson. "Which will allow for more efficient resource allocation and departmental changes."

In regard to students, Crosson said, "Be ambitious! Take courage, spend your time and energy well and prepare for the future."

Professional experience

Crosson has published a series of monographs, chapters and articles on the subject of higher education over the past twenty years. She has been published in The Encyclopedia of Higher Education (Oxford), The Review of Higher Education (Winter), and Achieving Quality and Diversity: Universities in a Multicultural Society (MacMillan), as well as several others.

Presently Crosson is studying the impact of the European Union on higher education in the member countries. Sabbatical research was done in the summer and fall of 1992 and 1993. The results are now being prepared for publication with continuing research in the member counties during the summer.

Also, Crosson is studying the state and system level restructuring of higher education in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. She is working on a chapter for the Jossey Bass book on mergers and restructuring in higher education. 3

Thousands fear new immigration bill

By Melissa B. Robinson
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Twenty years ago, Ratha Yem was starving in a Cambodian labor camp. His parents were dead, and he feared his Khmer Rouge captors, thinking him an intellectual, would murder him at any time.

Today, Yem, a father of six, works for the Massachusetts' attorney general and is a leader of the Cambodian community in Lowell. Having achieved success, he wants to bring his youngest brother from Cambodia to study. But he couldn't under the latest Republican immigration reform bill pending in Congress.

"I never once received welfare," Yem said. "I put myself through school by working, and I intend to do the same thing to bring my brother, just to be with me. (He's) not going to be a burden to our system."

Yem, now a citizen, is among tens of thousands of legal immigrants, refugees and naturalized citizens in New England expected to be affected by the latest Republican proposal in Congress to curb immigration.

Much of the congressional debate has centered on stopping illegal immigrants from sneaking across U.S. borders, using fraudulent documents to get jobs and taking advantage of welfare programs, schools and other services.

But legal immigrants and refugees also stand to lose under the new federal welfare law and the pending GOP immigration bill, which is hung up over the question of barring illegal aliens' children from public school.

Supporters of restrictions on legal immigration argue that it makes little sense to battle illegal immigration in isolation. Legal immigration is at record levels, except for a brief period near the turn of the century, and community schools, roads and hospitals, welfare, and other forms of aid and services all are overburdened by the influx of newcomers, whether or not they arrived legally, they say.

"It's just too much, too fast," said Dan Stein, executive director of the Federation for American Immigration Reform, which supports a moratorium on legal immigration.

From 1991-94 alone, more immigrants came here — 4.5 million — than during the entire span of the '70s, according to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service. The total is also twice the number who came from 1981-84.

In southern New England, more than 35,000 immigrants came during fiscal 1994 alone, according to the INS. Of those, about 22,900 planned to live in Massachusetts, 9,500 in Connecticut and 2,900 in Rhode Island. Another 5,000 people were admitted as refugees, nearly 80 percent of whom settled in Massachusetts.

The GOP immigration bill goes beyond the restrictions on legal immigrants in welfare law. Advocates for immigrants warn that it will plunge people into poverty, keep families apart and, moreover, destroy protections against employment abuse and discrimination that were included in earlier bills.

"This bill will do more harm than good," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.), who helped craft an earlier Senate version but opposes the latest GOP measure.

Under welfare reform, legal immigrants and refugees who have been here more than five years lose food stamps and Supplemental Security Income, which provides cash payments to the elderly, blind and disabled.

SSI benefits are $587 a month for the elderly, $572 a month for the disabled and $608 per month for the blind. Payments are lower for beneficiaries who do not have to pay housing costs.

"Many of these people are ill, some are in nursing homes, it would have a devastating impact," said Muriel Heiberger, executive director of the Massachusetts Immigrant & Refugee Advocacy Coalition.

But under the immigration bill, legal immigrants could be deported for using more than 12 months of almost any kind of needs-based assistance during their first seven years here. Such assistance could include child care, veterans' benefits, low-income heating aid, prenatal care and even English as a Second Language or job training classes that are based on need and funded in part by local, state or federal money.

Refugees would not be deported, although those here for more than five years still lose SSI and food stamps. Exemptions are also made for persons either too physically disabled to work or so mentally disabled that they require continuous institutionalization.

Another provision — the one that would scuttle Yem's plan — would limit legal immigration by setting income requirements for sponsors of new immigrants.

To bring over a spouse or minor child, sponsors would have to earn 140 percent of the poverty level. That jumps to 200 percent to sponsor other relatives, a requirement that comes out to nearly $32,000 for a family of four.

take Kaplan and get into the right school.

LSAT GMAT GRE MCAT

- Highly trained, expert teachers who know the tests inside and out.
- Personalized, computerized study plans, tailored to your individual needs.
- Proven methods, guaranteed to raise your score.

the leader in test prep and admissions counseling.

KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
www.kaplan.com

SOME THINGS ARE MEANT TO BE CLOSED
YOUR MIND ISN'T ONE OF THEM.

For decades, MDA has given new hope to people with disabilities are to namely the belief that talent, ability and desire are more important than strength of a person's muscles. The one barrier these people can't overcome is a closed mind. Keep yours open.

1-800-572-1717 MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY ASSOCIATION

BURGER KING® NOW HIRING

We're looking for people with pride, who want to be treated fairly by people who care, to staff our restaurants.

-Good Starting Pay
-Flexible Hours
-Full Time/Part Time
-Meal Discounts
-Management Opportunities

Closing Rates up to $6.50*
Apply in Person
Rt. 9 Hadley
Rt. 5 Northampton

*See Manager for details

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS...always $10.
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256.0733
145 main st. northampton 586.0155

VOTED #1
FLEX FITNESS CENTER
AMHERST, MA
THANKS UMASS
BY YOU!!

FREE THE PRESS
WRITE FOR COLLEGIAN NEWS.

ALL POTENTIAL NEWS WRITERS: YOU MUST COME TO THE GENERAL INTEREST MEETING IN THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE THIS AFTERNOON AT 2 P.M., 113 CAMPUS CENTER (BASEMENT).

IF YOU ARE UNABLE TO MAKE THIS MEETING AT THE GIVEN TIME, PLEASE CONTACT MICHAEL ELLIOTT IN THE OFFICE OR AT 545-1762.

THANK YOU TO ALL THOSE WHO HAVE ALREADY CONTACTED US ABOUT WRITING.

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

Amber Waves
FAR EAST
Asian noodle soups, salads & stir-fries
63 Main St.
253-9200
MID EAST
Arabian delights salads & sandwiches
31 Boltwood Walk
253-9299
OCMP Delivery Express

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Morse Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Mark McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Guy, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor
Michael Elliott News Editor
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Sean Horgan Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

The character of politics

With the political conventions just behind us and the presidential election around the corner, the general public has to be wondering what weight, in this world of apathy, quality of character carries in the grand scheme of things. What qualities, if any, make some candidates electable and others not?

Mark McGrath

Bill Clinton is the clear-cut favorite to win at the polls this November, despite a line of apparent character flaws which one would think would all but eliminate a candidate from serious contention. While perfection in a presidential candidate is all but unobtainable, what we see in Clinton falls far short even of respectability.

Is Clinton as bad as he is made out to be? To answer such a question is difficult for me (or any casual political observer) because I do not know the man personally. What I know of him is chopped up, rehashed and presented by a media which I trust as much as your average politician.

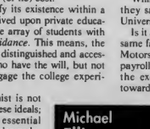
To say that Mr. Clinton is bad would be a grave injustice to both him and the political system. To say that he, at times in his life has been known to make mistakes is quite a bit more accurate. What then, separates him from you or me? Show me a person who has no skeletons in their closet and I'll show you a liar.

Ever since he became involved in his first presidential primaries, Clinton's personal life has been scrutinized. Remember Gennifer Flowers? When word came out he was able to dodge the Vietnam War and didn't inhale that puff of marijuana he had in his mouth, his critics grew claws and fangs, working to rip the political meat from the skeleton of his past. Little did they know that he would become more and more popular in the eyes of the electorate public as the dogs tried to gnaw at his character.

Since winning the election of 1992 with a measly 43 percent of the vote Clinton has steadily become more and more popular. Even through Travelgate and Whitewater he has emerged with an approval rating that is higher than ever. Surprising as it may seem, this country has really taken to William Jefferson Clinton. Now, as that popularity is tested at the polls, it seems that he has something that his main competitor lacks. Personality.

Yes, it is time to make the distinction between character and personality. Character is what makes others respect you. Personality is what makes people like you. As we have seen in the case of President Clinton, you need not be of exemplary character to be liked, and Bob Dole will tell you that character isn't all it's cracked up to be.

About as warm and fuzzy as a Brillo pad, Dole yearns for the thing that is giving Clinton his popularity. In Dole, we're talking about a man who served his country in the World War II, and was dealt an irreparable injury. We're talking durability, dependability and determination. We're talking about character. We're talking about a perfect pre-Watergate presidential candidate. We're talking about ancient history.



Since that watershed date, Americans have grown accustomed to politicians who can't exactly be equated with wholesomeness. In fact, I think shadiness has become a prerequisite for the position of president. The way the public now sees politics, any qualities that might fall under the heading of character can practically be negated at the polls.

At the Republican National Convention, Bob Dole tried to play up his character, not realizing that such a focus could have little positive impact for his campaign. Knowing that the guy just doesn't have personality, they had little choice in the matter. Because Dole doesn't have any other cards to play besides the two of clubs we know as character, he stands little chance of even contending in the race.

Meanwhile the Clinton train keeps on chuggin' along, loaded up with lots of excess baggage powered by the thing we call personality. True it may be a long ride, but considering the fact that Dole's pushing his own train, it appears the race may already be over.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

Optimize me, Chancellor Scott

Michael Elliot

Chancellor David K. Scott has plenty to say these days on the role of a Land Grant University — after all, that what's the University of Massachusetts is; an institution designed to satisfy the economic and intellectual needs of the commonwealth at a affordable (or no) cost.

For this University to justify its existence within a state that has traditionally thrived upon private education, it must provide a diverse array of students with extraordinary options and guidance. This means, the school must employ a sizable, distinguished and accessible faculty to assist those who have the will, but not the direction to seriously engage the college experience.

Unfortunately, this columnist is not convinced that Scott shares these ideals; specifically, that one of the essential functions of this school is undergraduate advising.

Within his newly finalized Strategic Action Plan, Scott will oversee the elimination of approximately 40 faculty members, this year alone, mostly through an early retirement incentive program.

Additionaly, the University has only filled 50 percent of these vacated faculty positions — an easy way to eliminate professors without firing them outright.

The Chancellor says that, with a reduced payroll, the University will have the financial leeway to invest in needed campus improvements and outreach programs.

So, we're downsizing, right Mr. Chancellor? No, he responds, we're "optimizing."

Maybe for an accountant in Whitmore, perhaps, but not from the student perspective.

This University barely survived a mass exodus of faculty during the budget crisis years of 1988–92. We cannot sustain another round of layoffs and pressured early retirements.

The reasons are so obvious they hardly require elaboration.

While many of this University's weaknesses are either exaggerated or non-existent, Scott himself can not deny that the faculty-to-student ratio is deplorable. The continued escalation of this figure will only result in larger class sizes and fewer office hours available for personal advising.

Scott points to the revamped University Advising Center and the new residential program for undeclared freshman, "Universe through the University," as solutions.

While these represent steps in the right direction, they say nothing about the simple reality that this University needs more professors.

Is it a simply matter of finance? Are we bound to the same fate of corporations, such as AT&T and General Motors who, over the past decade, had to relieve their payrolls of tens of thousands of workers because, as the executives said, their companies were headed towards certain collapse.

Unlikely.

While Scott says that UMass can not afford more faculty at this time, the University is simultaneously embarking on some significant capital expenditures, which may result in five new buildings on campus.

Even more frustrating, the administration seems convinced that private sources of funds will bring us all financial stability.

Granted, for the time being, "Campaign UMass," works for the University. If it succeeds, the state will match the $125 million which the administration will raise from independent donors, over five years.

We should be careful, however, not to assume that the state has, finally — without exception in any one branch, legitimated the importance of this University within the commonwealth by offering it consistent funding.

The state is essentially reminding the University that public support for higher education is still in doubt. To survive, UMass must become less dependent on the state's taxpayers and more dependent on the good will of cash-loaded corporations.

A precarious solution, Chancellor Scott, no doubt.

The focus of this or any plan of action for the future should be on the students — and the faculty who make our education possible, not the quasi-privatization of our funding sources (and commitments).

Michael Elliott is a Collegian Columnist

Letters to the Editor

Valuable show cancelled

To the editor:

If you happened to be watching television last Saturday night (Sept. 21), you might have seen the very last episode of "America's Most Wanted" ever. During the nine years it has run, the show has led to the capture of 431 fugitives and the location of 20 missing children. Its host, John Walsh, has founded the Adam Walsh Foundation for missing children and has testified before Congress several times advocating bills for victims' rights and stricter prison sentences for violent criminals.

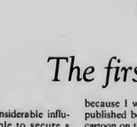
Why would the Fox television network cancel a program like this but continue to broadcast garbage like "Ricki Lake," "Gordon Elliot" and "Melrose Place" to name a few? Did it get bad reviews? Were its ratings low? Maybe, but if enough people were watching it all over the country to recognize those profiled on the show, wherever they were hiding out, then there must be a lot more people tuning in to this show than any of the critics or executives at the Fox network realize.

I think Fox made a big mistake, and I think they should put the show back on as soon as possible or risk being flooded by mail from viewers across the U.S. If anyone knows of or where to get the station's address or email account number, please write in to the Collegian so that it may be made available.

Mike Murphy
Northeast

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.



The first cartoonist

I feel Bill's plane.

Using my considerable influence, I was able to secure a place aboard Air Force One this week, after only two years of begging.

Fourteen seats on the plane rotate regularly throughout the press corps that travels with the president. Some journalists have been making these campaign jaunts with various presidents for a decade or more.

The White House wasn't sure what to do with me. They'd never had a cartoonist aboard before. But Tuesday, here I am at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington, seated in the plane and waiting for an 8:30 a.m. departure to Kansas City and then St. Louis.

Mike Luckovich

I have the same feeling I had when sneaking into the movies as a kid. I sit in the back row, periodically stroking my lush leather seat. A Newsweek photographer sitting next to me tells me I can pick a movie, any movie from a large menu by requesting it on the phone next to my seat.

"Something funny," I thought, figuring it would be funny to have Rumble in the Bronx, a Jackie Chan martial arts movie playing on Air Force One. I got my movie.

20 minutes into the flight a presidential aide interrupts Jackie and invites me up to the front of the plane. I step into a good-sized office with a large wooden desk, with President Clinton behind it. I'm in the airborne equivalent of the Oval Office.

So what do I say?

I tell him about Rumble in the Bronx playing in the cabin.

"Oh yeah. A Jackie Chan movie. Did you know he has a new one out?"

"No," I admit. I'm amazed that this guy who could probably recite the federal statutes for drainage ditch placement knows about Jackie Chan movies too.

I am nervous — not only because I'm meeting the president but also because I want to give him a just-published book of my cartoons. The cartoon on the cover shows an aide in the White House telling Clinton, "More bad news. The bloody glove fits Hillary."

Handing over the book, I tell him I hope he has a good sense of humor. But when he looks at the cover, he laughs, roars, really.

Whew! Then I ask a favor: "Mr President, would you consider doing a drawing of yourself. Ronald Reagan did a caricature of himself and look what happened to him — he got a second term."

Clinton smiles, but makes no promises.

Then Germany's Helmut Kohl called. Clinton, not me. An aide starts to boot me out, but Clinton says, "He can stay."

So I say, "Sketching Clinton with his half glasses perched on his nose, chatting with Kohl. I don't dare stop sketching, because I'm afraid I'll get kicked out. Finally, I have to leave because the plane is landing. Clinton, still on the phone, gestures to me to show him what I was drawing and laughs at the caption: "So Helmut, tell me about der weinersnitzel."

Back in my seat in the rear bowels of the plane I realize I haven't said goodbye.

Grounded in Kansas City.

Once we land, the president and the press corps travel in a motorcade. In the front of the motorcade are city cops on motorcycles. Then two presidential limos... so that no one knows which one the president will be in. Then a big black suburban known as the Battle Wagon. Inside is the C.A.T. or Counter Attack Team, muscle-bound guys dressed in black with Flak jackets loaded up with impressive automatic weapons. They look like Rambo's carpool.

Then a string of limos and vans with dignitaries (lord knows who) followed by more vans carrying us — the all important members of the press.

As we snake along in the motorcade, people stand outside of homes and businesses waving and cheering. Young and old, rich and poor. All just to see a cartoonist.

Then we're back on the plane and I'm thinking about the caricature I want from the president, and thinking about all the world leaders Clinton's going to want to talk to about the test-ban treaty. And then, the photographer next to me punches me and says, "He's here."

And he is. Up at the front of the press seating, smiling and motioning for me. In his hand, a drawing.

I get up from my seat and at that exact moment the plane takes off. I'm 20 feet from the president, but I can't get to him because I am fighting the force of takeoff. I am pulling myself forward on the seats in front of me and yelling, "I'm on my way, Mr. President."

Clinton turned from me and begins to surf into the acceleration. His body way forward, kind of suspending himself with his arms out like he's flying.

So I do that too.

So the plane levels off, and Clinton hands me a drawing. Of him. A caricature fresh from the presidential pen. Then I look at it and I say — you know, to the leader of the Free World, "Sir, it's obvious now to me why you're trying so hard to keep your day job." And he's laughing and explaining the whole cartoon to me, but I'm so shocked that it's happening and laughing so hard, not much gets through to me. And the whole press corps is taking pictures, laughing and having a good time too.

Then suddenly he's gone and I'm back in my seat, completely worn out and with a big smile on my face.

And a caricature of a president to take home.

Mike Luckovich is a syndicated cartoonist who appears daily in the Collegian. The Clinton cartoon is featured above this column.

Arts & Living

Kurosawa goes West, yet again

by Justin Daniel Smith
Collegian Staff

LAST MAN STANDING
Directed by Walter Hill
With Bruce Willis, Christopher Walken

Everything from Star Wars to Fargo has used ideas precedented by the great Akira Kurasowa. Once again homage is being paid to the Japanese director in the latest remake of his 1961 samurai classic Yojimbo.

Remade in slighter variations in films like A Fistful of Dollars and Miller's Crossing, Yojimbo is the story of a mercenary samurai that teeters between two rival gangs for personal profit. Toshiro Mifune played "The Man with No Name" that we now see Bruce Willis trying to replicate — but instead of a samurai he is a man-for-hire gunslinger that comes to a border town in the height of prohibition.

Willis plays his typical character — the laconic tough guy with a charismatic draw of women who drowns his sorrows in whiskey. It has become a role that he plays well and his better films (Twelve Monkeys, Pulp Fiction) are starting to come to mind more quickly than his abominable ones (Hudson Hawk, Color of Night).

Under the pseudonym John Smith, Willis receives a less than hospitable welcoming to the aptly named town of Jericho. Strozzi, the leader of the Italian gang and Doyle, the leader of the Irish gang reaches a truce that is quickly abolished. Smith's entrance has the gangs feuding again as each wants to hire him for his services.

Smith bounces from one side to the other as he searches for the highest bidder along the way, wiping out members of each gang respectively. Of course he satiates his overcharged testosterone needs by shacking up with Strozzi's moll and Doyle's prized possession, his Mexican slave wife.

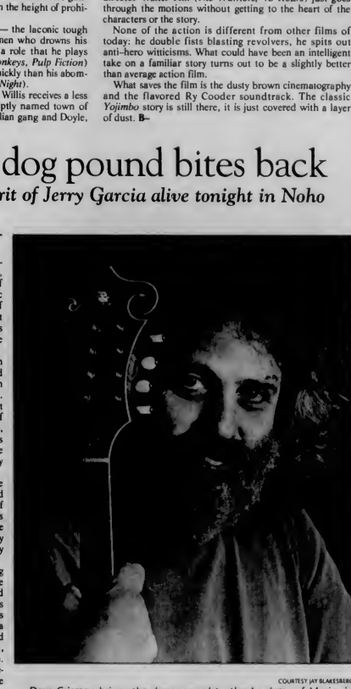
Strozzi's side is weakened by Georgio (Michael Imperioli), son of a mafioso in Chicago that defies Strozzi's leadership. Doyle's side is heavily dependent of Hickey, a homicidal psychotic played, believe it or not, by Christopher Walken.

Though Last Man Standing is a loyal treatment of Yojimbo, it lacks the vision of Kurasowa. Accomplished director Walter Hill (The Warriors, 48 Hours) just goes through the motions without getting to the heart of the characters or the story.

None of the action is different from other films of today: he double fists blasting revolvers, he spits out anti-hero witticisms. What could have been an intelligent take on a familiar story turns out to be a slightly better than average action film.

What saves the film is the dusty brown cinematography and the flavored Ry Cooder soundtrack. The classic Yojimbo story is still there, it is just covered with a layer of dust. B–

Grisman's dog pound bites back



Quartet to keep spirit of Jerry Garcia alive tonight in Noho

By Daniel Bodah
Collegian Correspondent

If a "dawg" were to play music, what would it sound like? Maybe if he were a dachshund, the music would be Bavarian drinking songs; if he were a Siberian husky, we might be treated to the guttural trumpets and drumming that accompany the Siberian shaman on his healing trip.

To find out what an American dawg's music sounds like, one need only show up at the Northampton Academy of Music tonight at 8 p.m. to see the David Grisman Quartet jam out their inimitable mixing of musical breeds. Among other styles, the band mixes rapid-fire bluegrass pickin', fiery Latin rhythms and the wild excursions of jazz into a truly American hybrid.

Grisman's picked up the nickname "dawg" from longtime friend and musical collaborator Jerry Garcia of the Grateful Dead. Grisman has taken that moniker as an apt name for his often difficult to classify music, spun as it is from so many diverse influences.

COURTESY JAY BLAKESBERG

Dave Grisman brings the dawg pound to the Academy of Music in Northampton tonight.

The quartet is on tour supporting their recent album Dawgonova. The band is also spreading the word about an upcoming release of duets by Grisman and Garcia. The tracks were left unfinished when Garcia passed away last year, but in accord with Garcia's last message to him, Grisman is completing the album. Grisman says the Dead leader is sorely missed, but will be around for the completion of the new album "in spirit."

Garcia and Grisman began working together when Grisman laid mandolin tracks on the Grateful Dead's American Beauty album. The relationship grew and eventually led to Grisman's major contributions to the infamous Old & In The Way bluegrass album.

Besides his musical prowess, Grisman has also gained notoriety as an arranger and produaer for his Acoustic Disk record label. Since its formation in 1990, Acoustic Disk has released a stream of almost two dozen albums to positive critical response.

Tonight's show will find Jim Kerwood on bass guitar, Matt Eakle playing flute and Joe Cravin keeping things hopping with percussion and violin. Concert-goers have an opportunity to experience a special treat as the band is joined by famed Argentinean guitarist Enrique Coria, formerly of the group Sukay. He brings a distinct flair to the Latin elements of "dawg," and has been somewhat of a mentor to Grisman since relocating to Washington, D.C. and beginning work with the quartet.

David Grisman performs at the Northampton Center of the Arts tonight at 8 p.m.

Pest 5000 brings the noise to Greenough

COURTESY DIRT RECORDS

Saturnine's slow tunes failed to motivate the crowd in Greenough on Saturday.

By Kristen Wilbur
Collegian Correspondent

PEST 5000
Greenough Residence Hall Basement
Sept. 21

Saturday night, the basement of the Greenough Residence Hall hosted a rock 'n' roll alternative to the popular Hawaiian luau held at Butterfield Residence Hall. The five bands who played made for a long but still enjoyable evening — following, for the most part, a very traditional indie show. The moderately filled Greenough basement crowd got exactly what they were expecting — an evening of fun bands.

Local band Ribbonandy, featuring members of Tizzy, started the evening off and had the crowd's feet stomping and the heads nodding. Smiles of recognition were brought to the crowd with their song "Orchard Hill Observatory" while the highlight of their set was a cover of the Stephen Merritt song "San Diego Zoo."

Next on the menu was Star Ghost Dog — the self proclaimed "band that can't start a song" by lead singer Ginny Weaver. Star Ghost Dog features graduates of University of Massachusetts and Hampshire College. They played an energetic and highly enjoyable set that really got the crowd moving.

The Incredible Force of Junior from Seattle, were one of the big crowd pullers of the evening and came through for their fans. Though their trio consisted of just guitar, bass and drums they were still able to tear out an, at times, angry and passionate set. The two singers switched back and forth on lead vocals varying styles from aggressive grrrl power to wimpy-boy pop. The male singer reminiscently sounded like Sean Tollefson, the lead singer of Tullycraft — they both have that almost unnatural "Muppet" voice. Playing loud and fast they continued the tempo of the night.

Unfortunately that tempo was to be disrupted by the next set, Saturnine, from New York, was reminiscent of an inspirational, Christian rock band. They managed to lull the crowd to the floor. Their set seemed particularly long which was just an added joy.

The headliner of the night was Pest 5000 from Montreal. All five members of the band jammed together in the back- corner of the basement — playing like they really meant it. After driving down just for this show, Pest 5000 opened with a noise number featuring electric violins, keyboards and a voice machine that quickly woke the tired crowd up. Their set was hard to pinpoint as the band borrowed influences from Japanese noise bands to cuddle core pop-stars, inventing a sound all their own.

MTV: the sexist voice of a generation

Michelle Hillmen

It is a sad day when the realm of music television enters into our cozy educational environment. Not too long ago, the MTV Choose or Lose bus rolled up to the Student Union trying to get students registered to vote.

MTV has become a signature of our generation, and is trying to motivate all of the lazy, uninformed Generation Xer's to get involved in politics. That might be acceptable if MTV as a network was promoting equality between the sexes.

How can I make such a statement? Not too long ago I attended a viewing of the film Dreamworlds II by University of Massachusetts Professor Sut Jhally. This film step by step effectively chronicles the methods and techniques by which women are demoralized, dehumanized and discriminated through the "sexual dreamland based on [the male] sexual fantasy," said Jhally.

In 1981, MTV first began airing music videos which doubled as adverisements for the artists, and like advertisements the videos used "provocative sexual imagery," to sell their product, said Jhally. At the same time, neither MTV, the artists, directors or the producers of the videos realized, or admitted, that they were also selling the women's bodies and sexuality along with the lyrics.

Dreamworlds II outlines several storytelling techniques commonly used in videos for the audience. Women in music videos are usually seen as passive objects, either as background dancers, back-up singers or members of the band. In each case, they are there soley to be looked at and watched, according to Jhally.

In each of the videos presented in Dreamworlds II, women were portrayed as "nyphomaniacs" who are always ready and willing to engage in sexual activity. The women are seen as constantly aroused and ready to serve men and prepared to take off their clothes at a moment's notice. The videos also displayed women as strippers, prostitutes or dominatrices but never as real working women. In the certain instances where women actually have professions, such as schoolteachers, they usually end up taking off their clothes — for teachers, often right in the middle of class.

Considering that 90 percent of music videos are directed by men it is no surprise that many of the videos involve water, which is attributed to the male fixation with the wet t-shirt contest, according to Jhally. Women either have water thrown on them, seen in the shower or elaborately bathing themselves. It seems as though a woman's job is to keep herself clean and ready for sex at any time.

Another aspect of music videos display women as a group who want to be watched, especially by men. Women continually gaze into the camera or display themselves in such a manner to attract attention. Not only are women being watched in these videos, but their "bodies are surveyed in the same way as you might look at landscapes," said Jhally. "Women are fragmented and denied their individuality and character."

Each and every example in Dreamworlds II is backed up with evidence from music videos. Devoid of the actual music in these videos, the audience is forced to concentrate only on the activity that is going on in the video. Along with narration from Jhally, the viewer is pointed out to disturbing incidents of male perversion in disguise of music videos.

The most powerful and disturbing aspect of Dreamworlds II is when a gang rape scene from the movie "The Accused" is juxtaposed with clips from various music videos. Only hooting and holloring can be heard from the men in the bar who are raping an innocent woman on a pool table. The expressions on the male participants faces are similar to those of the men in the music videos who are surrounded by barely clothed women. "The music videos did not look any different from the horrendous rape," said Jhally.

Although the theories in this video do not apply to all music videos, the general stereotype of women as objects for sexual gratification is present. My advice is to be careful of who or what is the source of moitvation. Question what you are being motivated towards. MTV may be trying to be the voice of our generation, leading us to a better and brighter America, but it is only reinforcing the male sexual patriarchy.

Michelle Hillmen is a Collegian columnist

Interested in serving your community?

THE JEWISH AFFAIRS EDITOR POSITION AT THE COLLEGIAN IS VACANT. THIS DIVERSITY DESK NEEDS YOUR HELP TO CONTINUE QUALITY COVERAGE OF JEWISH LIFE AT UMASS AND BEYOND.

TO GET INVOLVED, CONTACT CHRIS CONNER, MANAGING EDITOR, AT 545-0719 OR VISIT THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE AT 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT.

THE DEADLINE FOR APPLICATION IS FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, AT 5 P.M.

BURN YOUR BRA!!!

WRITE FOR WOMEN'S ISSUES AND LET YOUR VOICE BE HEARD. COME DOWN TO THE COLLEGIAN LOCATED IN THE BASEMENT OF THE CAMPUS CENTER AND ASK FOR MICHELLE HILLMAN OR CALL 545*1762.

■ women's soccer

continued from page 8

coming in 1–0 wins at Brown and against Temple. Fish's pair equals the total sum of her teammates' goal production as Katie Rivizzigno and Stephanie Boisvert have one apiece.

The Minutewomen ride into today's match on the coattails of a 3–0 thumping of Hartford on Saturday. The team has won 10 of its last 11 dating back to last year, and including postseason is 18–1–2 in A–10 competition.

While URI has four goals this year, so too does Minutewoman Rebecca Myers, who is closing in on several career records. Myers is second all-time in goals scored, tied for second in points, and fourth in assists. The UMass goal and point benchmarks, currently held by the legendary April Kater and Rachel LeDuc are expected to fall by Saturday, when UMass welcomes first–year program St. Joseph's to Garber Field.

The Minutewoman scoring attack is paced by Myers with eight points, while freshman Emma Kurowski is second with three goals and an assist for seven points and has looked sharp lately. Kurowski deftly converted a pair of crosses for goals against Hartford, showing a touch beyond her years.

■ water polo

continued from page 8

Engin in the net was the key to the Minuteman victory.

Engin, a senior from Ann Arbor, MI stopped 12 Brown shots while allowing just the six goals in notching the seventh UMass win of the autumn. The Minutemen improve to 3–0 in the Eastern Water Polo Association.

The Minutemen scratched out a 2–1 lead after a quarter of play, but the Bears played even with UMass in the second period as both teams notched three goals and the Minutemen held a 5–4 lead at halftime.

UMass scored three times, and Brown twice in a hard–fought third quarter and the Minutemen put the game away whitewashing the Bears in the fourth period, scoring two more goals to account for the final margin of victory.

Stahl recorded five points in the match with a pair of goals and three assists. Senior captain Ron Gonen also dished out three assists in the victory and had five assists on the weekend leaving him three behind the team leader (Staudenbauer, 17).

The Minutemen, as usual, get the week off before their next date. UMass will be hosting this weekend's EWPA league tournament at Amherst College where the Minutemen will face the Harvard Crimson, the Engineers of M.I.T. and the Brown Bears.

These three matches will be the last time the Minutemen play at home this season.

■ baseball

continued from page 8

tell anyone, but Garciaparra was more than ready to start the season in the bigs, but Duquette has a pretty decent shortstop up in Boston. A pretty decent shortstop that doesn't like the idea of moving to third or second.

Tough.

It's either gonna be second base or Chicago (maybe, I don't know, but it won't be Boston). If Valentin won't budge he's gone — Tim Naehring is much more valuable to the Red Sox than Valentin, and he's flexible.

Let's put Naehring at third, Garciaparra at short, maybe Mo Vaughn at first.

Ya' think?

Who plays second? Well, Valentin if he stops whining, and realizes that the shorter throw would help his game since his arm has been the impetus of most of his defensive problems. If not Val, then most likely Cordero who was just starting to get comfortable there when he got railroaded by Oakland's back–up backstop.

All of us would love to see Jeff Frye start there — and that is a possibility if some things fall through — but, he may not be the World Series answer that Duquette is looking for.

So, for giggles, let's play G.M.: Cordero starts at second, and we trade Valentin to the White Sox for Wilson Alvarez, an idea which isn't so far–fetched. Alvarez is known to be toward the top of Duquette's "want list." That would provide an infield that Garciaparra himself would automatically upgrade to decent defensively.

The outfield is still an anomaly. How can you get rid of Jefferson, O'Leary and Bragg? Who knows? But, Duquette will be going after Moises Alou like President Clinton after a skirt.

You're thinking: what about the Gator? Gone. I hate to see him go, but Greenwell's career in Boston is days from being over. He'd be a great bench coach, or roving instructor if he decided to retire.

Jose will not be playing in the field. That puts Jefferson in left, Alou in center and O'Leary in right with Bragg on the bench. That's not bad, but Duquette is probably looking for better defense, like Brian McRae. Okay, let's play G.M. again: we trade Greenwell and O'Leary for McRae and a minor league pitcher. We have Jefferson, McRae and Alou and Canseco at designated (home run) hitter.

Pitching is a whole 'nother column, but Roger Clemens will be coming back if John Harrington (Boston's money purse) has any sense. Tim Wakefield did a good job this season, add Alvarez, Suppan and either Sele, Gordon or Vaughn Eshelman and the starters get better.

Mike Stanley is probably gone in favor of a defensive–type catcher. The bullpen is finally shaping up with some young arms and the emergence of Heathcliff Slocumb in the second half of the campaign.

Duquette has a plan, and it's working.

Fred Hurlbrink, Jr. is a Collegian columnist.

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

On the road, finally!

Sandy Shimogaki and the Minutewomen take to the road, putting their perfect record on the line at Rhode Island against the Rams.

■ men's soccer

continued from page 8

while the Minutemen have been slow to shoot as they were out–shot by South Carolina 23–4.

Leading the offensive charge for Hartford is Rob Jachym who has scored five goals while notching three assists. The Minutemen will also have their eye on No. 13 Adrian Weeks. The Markhan, Ontario native has earned three goals in addition to a single assist.

On the other side of the ball, Hartford has had two keepers split time in the net. With 270 minutes in the net, senior Kevin Hickey is 2–1 and has been scored on three times while posting 10 saves for a .99 goals against average.

Junior Christian DiGenova is the other Hartford netminder. The Montreal, Quebec native comes into the match with 330 minutes under his belt, having been scored on three times while saving 21 for a .81 goals against average.

"Jachym is one of the best in New England," Koch said. "We've got to stop him. If you beat him, they are just an average team."

Kirsch hired aboard

The University of Massachusetts hockey team yesterday announced the addition of Rob Kirsch as a volunteer assistant coach.

A graduate of Western Michigan, Kirsch has spent the past two season as an assistant coach in the IHL, hockey's top minor league, with Indianapolis and Milwaukee, which he helped to the Midwest Division title last year.

Kirsch replaces Mark Dennehy, who left after two years with UMass for a position at Princeton. Hirsch will make his UMass coaching debut when the Minutemen open their third Hockey East campaign on Oct. 25 at UMass–Lowell.

— Leigh Torbin

VIVA LA REVOLUCION!

WRITE FOR BLACK AFFAIRS, DEVELOPING NATIONS OR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS!
COME DOWN TO THE COLLEGIAN
OR
CALL US AT 545-1851

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Sick of the dorms? Come and check out Iota Gamma Upsilon, the only local sorority on campus. Open House at 406 North Pleasant Street on Sept. 23, 24 and 25 from 7–8pm. Call Sara or Laura at 549–6461 for more information

The sisters of Kappa Kappa Gamma invite the UMass woman to an Open Rush Dinner Wednesday, Sept. 25 at 5:30pm Please call Genna @ 549-0756

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Trek Fans!!! If you are interested in joining a group with similar interests, then call Martin @ 6-7003 Starfleet International wants you!!!

KAI CHI delivering Sunday-Thursday to 2 am ; Friday and Saturday to 3 am

AUTO FOR SALE

1986 Subaru GL Hatchback 114k mileage, good condition, 5 Wheel Drive, $1 600.80 Call 586-3497

1982 Chevy Cavalier Wagon AC, AM/FM, new tires, plist $350 00 080 Call Bruce 256-1215

87 Toyota Celica AC, PS, 5 speed Many new parts and fully tuned up Runs Great Call 665-7373 $2,250

86 VW Golf 82 000 mi, good condition, 4 new tires, new muffler $3,100 OBO Call Christa Mon-Fri 8-4 545-5362

GREAT CAR

1985 Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme Good running condition Best offer Call 545-3007 or 834-5732

MAZDA - '91 323 HATCHBACK, 79,000 mi., very good condition, sunroof, tune up work just done, $2,900 OBO, Call 549-7286

1986 Mazda Reliable, 5 speed, AM/FM cassette $900 665-8246

MOTORCYCLE

Yamaha XS 400 Low miles, new battery, recent work, inspectable $400 firm 253-1725

EMPLOYMENT

The Amherst Boys' and Girls' Club needs work study assistants for recreation programs Friday evening 7-9 and Saturday afternoon 1-5 Workers schedule as time available $5.25/hr UMass buses stop in front of club at 290 Main Street Contact Richard Birrr 253-3281

Spring Break!! Earn Cash!! Highest Commissions! Lowest Prices!! Travel free on only 13 sales! free info! Sunsplash 1-800 426-7710

Cruise Ships Hiring Earn up to $20 000+/month World Travel Seasonal and Full Time positions No exp. necessary For info call 1-206-971-3550 ext C50015

National Parks Hiring Positions are now available at National Parks, Forests and Wildlife Preserves. Excellent benefits and bonuses! Call 1-206-971-3620 Ext N50016

EMPLOYMENT

Tropical Resorts Hiring Students needed! Entry level and career positions available worldwide Call Resort Employment Services 1-206-971-3600 Ext R50012

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS! Over 6 billion in public and private sector Grants and scholarships are now available All students are eligible Let us help For more info call 1-800-263-6495 Ext F50014

International Employment - Earn up to $25-$45/hour teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S Korea No teaching background or Asian Languages required For info call 206-971-3570 Ext J50015

Now Hiring All Shifts. Closing shifts available with bonus program Hadley Burger Kung Ask for Tim 584-5110

Now Hiring! Great pay doing odd jobs, flexible hours Call Andrew 584-8070

House Resident Assistant House Manager and Tutorial Supervisor wanted in Amherst A Better Chance Program, free room and board for services For application procedure call Mr /Mrs Lewis 253-3440

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-0742

FOR SALE

I WILL TRADE 2 Conn. PEARL JAM TICKETS for 2 tickets to the MAINE show Call Dan 549-0388

100 Watt Samsung Stereo Receiver $75/80 549-9822

PINBALL MACHINE. Reconditioned $1 000 00 (413) 253-5363

Futon, Double frame and cassrom cover $200 00 080 546-9728

I have 4 Dave Matthews Tix Oct 4 MSG Need to sell Call Karen 549-5079

Basement Sale! Everything must go! 549-1578

Bar Size Pool Table by Unived Perfect condition Includes everything! Interested? Call Scott and Dom @ 256-1098

13" TV/VCR Great for the dorm! Runs like new! $175 firm! 584-9608

FOUND

Walkman Found in the Campus Center Arcade Call Janet 546-1944

Attention New Students- Personal items left at the New Students Program this summer may be picked up at the New Students Office 304 Admissions Center

INSTRUCTION

Jazz Piano Teacher - Beginners to advanced students Call Steven Page 253-3354

WWW SUCCESS.ORG Free business education from American Institute Entrepreneurship and Real Estate Investment Courses Relive rich in ten years

LOST

Grey Female Lhasa Apso lost 6/17 Main St Responds to Nala 549-9947

MUSICIANS

Guitar Classes Start 9/10 Rentals and lessons available 10 wks/$40.00 ITUG Pat 545-0579

Blues Jam Tues. 8:00pm Emerson 112 Check it out!

Lead/Rhythm Guitarist looking to hook up with musicians/songwriters Call evenings 546-5282

PERSONALS

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

ROOM FOR RENT

1 Undergrad needed: Share a 2 bedroom, 2 full baths, ceiling fans, ++ free heat/hot water Call here @ 549-4089

ROOMMATE WANTED

Looking for room in an apartment Anything on bus line Please call Dan 367-2047

SERVICES

Computer Consultant: Hardware and Software help Web Page Creation, Marketing Call Joseph (413)546-0853

Computer Problems? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Scream Sweet 549-9982

LICENSED MANICURIST
Basic Manicure $10 French Manicure $12 Call Bridget for an appt @ 549-6379

TRANSPORTATION

Ride Share from Lee (or Berkshire area) MTWF @ 9:00 classes Call Jason 243-0981

WANTED TO RENT

Seeking 3 Bdr Apartment/house needed ASAP Call 546-8077

Know a 1 bdr in Boston area available Dec-Jan? Looking for under $650 Willing to work in exchange for rent Celia 546-3506

WANTED

Mother's Helper South Amherst, Early morning, Car Required, Rates negotiable Call evenings 256-0076

Wanted 100 People New Metabolism Breakthrough Lose 5-100 lbs Guaranteed Cost $35 (800)776-9503

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21–April 20

You're filled with renewed vigor and energy after an exciting weekend. Take your career to new heights by answering a simple question. Don't make the mistake of underestimating another's commitment. It's stronger than you think.

TAURUS
April 21–May 21

If work has been crazy lately, focus on enjoying your home life. Someone close to you could use a little extra TLC. An argument might have a deeper conflict at its core—be willing to dig to the heart of the matter, and you'll reap the rewards.

GEMINI
May 22–June 21

Something that seemed simple could have you on the verge of a breakdown. Take a few steps back in order to gain perspective. It's probably not as bad as it seems, just like it wasn't as simple as it seemed, either. But don't be afraid to ask for help.

CANCER
June 22–July 22

An old enemy may be in a vulnerable position. It's up to you—tell you take advantage of it, or not? You know what the right answer is—It's one you'll be able to live with. Think about making long-term gains instead of living for the moment.

LEO
July 23–August 23

Some family tension has you in knots. Be sure you have the entire story before your opinion becomes set in stone. But don't be a pushover, either. You will be able to find a happy medium—but only if you look for it. Review your short-term career goals.

VIRGO
August 24–September 22

A long-distance phone call holds the key to understanding an old quandary. Don't be afraid of your creativity this week—instead, use it to piece together a new solution to a particularly sticky problem. You'll be amazed at the results.

LIBRA
September 23–October 23

Focus on the small pleasures in life to brighten your outlook after a stressful time. Music, good food, a relaxing shower—these are all possibilities. Even better, share the time with a loved one who might have been missing out on your attentions.

SCORPIO
October 24–November 22

Sometimes it's better to make any decision than to muddle around. Now is one of those times. Set yourself a deadline, gather the information, get the advice of an expert or a professional and then—go for it!

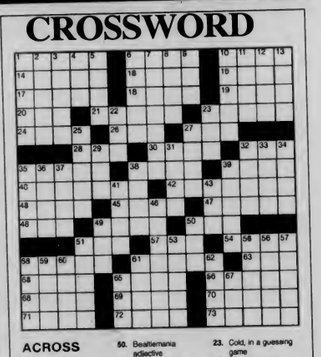
SAGITTARIUS
November 23–December 21

Your silver tongue and generous heart have won you many admirers. Now put your money where your mouth is. Are you leaving any promises unkept? Focus on a new relationship that's in need of extra attention.

CAPRICORN
December 22–January 20

A conservative streak has been just the thing to deal with recent events, but now it's time to let your hair down. Turn loose in the company of some trusted friends, and blow off all that extra steam. When the air is clear, you'll have discovered something really important.

AQUARIUS
January 21–February 18



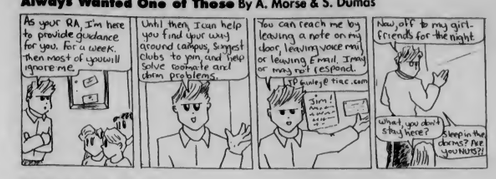
Leave the office behind when you are done with work, and you'll leave some of the stress behind, too. If you're really feeling overwhelmed, ask a loved one to pamper you a little. His or her creative approach to that task could be a revelation.

PISCES
February 19–March 20

Your open manner and honesty have planted some exciting seeds, but now it's time to do some watering—and some weeding. Focusing your interests is the best way to keep from being overextended. Consider the things that you truly love, and you'll find the task easy.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

CROSSWORD



ACROSS

1. Stink
6. Lhasa ___ (dog breed)
10. Beast's abode
14. Coal fold
15. Young deer
16. Where some work out
17. Sociologist Durkheim
18. Maja or Musketeers, e.g.
19. Harvest
20. As easy as ___
21. Night vision
23. Natives of Oulu
24. Eat between meals
26. Falklands feuder: abbr.
27. Mlle. female
28. Actress ___ B. Davis
30. General Bradley
32. Buddhism
35. In a high dudgeon
38. Don't bet ___! (2 wds.)
39. Member of an '80s pop group (2 wds.)
40. Took out
42. Weird
44. Perjured oneself
45. Disturbance
47. Salad ingredient
48. School course: abbr.
49. Props for Soupy Sales
50. Beatlemania adjective
51. D.C. lobbying gp.
52. Singing syllable
54. ___ the Top (Stallone film)
58. Express grief
61. Honestly
63. All About ___
64. ___ lacto
65. Cheese, in a mousetrap
66. "Out like a lamb" follower
68. Made a knot
69. Restless desire
70. Vulgar one's lack
71. Bassell and Mack
72. Words from Scrooge
73. Perspire

DOWN

1. Purge
2. MIA rescuer of film
3. Narrative
4. Electric ___
5. Asked for mercy
6. Ten Years ___
7. Model
8. Do the crawl
9. Artist Yoko
10. Kind of soprano
11. Hymn ender
12. Positive thinker's phrase (2 wds.)
13. Sings like Hammer
22. Algo-___
23. Cold, in a guessing game
25. Loathed
27. Inventor James
29. Clear profit
31. Moor morning feature
32. "The Twilight ___"
33. Layers' legacies
34. Ninja
35. Spin wheels
36. Tackroom item
37. Break ___ ("Good luck") (2 wds.)
38. Garfield's stooge
39. ___ Talks (1984 film)
41. Actor Bogosian
43. NYC building
46. Flightless bird
49. Certain camera shot
50. Suet
51. Nudges
53. Gordon and Roman
55. Poet's output
56. Musical set in Argentina
57. Rent anew
58. Catcher's need
59. Early Ron Howard role
60. ___ car dealer
61. Adieu
62. Boaters
65. Tucker's mate
67. Hand, informally

Always Wanted One of Those By A. Morse & S. Dumas

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown Judd Winick

8 Years in Braces By Eric Peterson

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Leold (leold@javanet.com)
by Roger and Salem Salloom ©1996

I think I've found a cure for some of these infectious diseases. Follow me closely on this.

When germs go into our bodies they are not reading books. They are eating.

They're eating us.

Maybe on Wednesday they all gather 'round the liver, then on the following Monday thay start on the lungs.....

What if we offered them someting else to eat? ....free.

We lure them out of the body with an offer of.... let's say hamburgers .... tiny weeny hamburgers..... with infitesimally small pickles. When they come out, we throw 'em on the floor and step on 'em.

I haven't worked out all the details yet, but I feel very good about the basic concept.

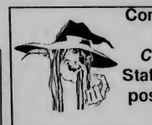
University² By Frank Cho

Generation X By Chris Lehman

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Refresh our memory. What was the problem with your car?"

To the Collegian comic readers:



I am an African–American male who lived in Oklahoma for twenty years. To my comic strip, "Generation X," I bring the humor shaped by my experiences as an African–American male having grown up in the American southwest. I apologize to those who took offense to my comic strip of Sept. 17. and did not know of its African–American viewpoint. Thank you and enjoy reading.

Sincerely,
Chris Lehman

Quote of the Day

"We are not conscious of the beginning of our lives, nor are we conscious of its end, so what we're left with is a lot of middle."

–Prof. Don Levine

Come join us at the Collegian. Staff Librarian position now open.

We want you to write for us!

Call the Collegian at 545-3500

Today's Staff

Mike Burke
Night Editor

Mark McGrath
Copy Editor

James Stanley
Photo Technician

Brian Inocencio
Production Supervisor

Thang "Dead Eye" Vo, Rob Snow
Tony "Don't hit the civilians" Morse
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH: Hamburger; BBQ Style Pork Rib; Falafel Pocket Sandwiches
DINNER: Chinese Beef; Greek Chicken; Eggplant Grinder; Snow P's

Hampden

LUNCH: Hamburger; BBQ Style Pork Rib; Grilled Chicken Sandwich
DINNER: Chinese Beef & Peppers; Snow P's; Greek Lemon Chicken; Eggplant Grinder

Worcester

LUNCH: Grilled Chicken Sandwich; Spaghetti/Tomato Sauce; Lemon Grill Burger
DINNER: Chinese Beef & Peppers; Curried Chick P's; Pastbilities; Stuffed Shells

Berkshire

LUNCH: Lemon Grill Burger; Spaghetti/Tomato Sauce; Grilled Chicken; Hot Pastrami
DINNER: Chinese Beef & Peppers; Greek Lemon Chicken; Pastbilities; Stuffed Shells

Sports

Men's soccer drops a 4–1 decision to 'Cocks of SC

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

Anytime you pit two nationally ranked opponents against one another, competition is bound to be heated. When you pit a nationally ranked team against one that was ranked in the preseason, yet opened the season 1–3 thus dropping out of the poll, things get ugly.

This is what the No. 20 Massachusetts men's soccer team learned when it fell to South Carolina on Sunday 4–1.

Coming off a disappointing 1–1 overtime tie with New Hampshire last week, the Minutemen (3–1–1) needed to be at the top of their game to face the perennial powerhouse and preseason No. 3 Gamecocks (2–3).

S. Carolina	4
Massachusetts	1

"The first 30 minutes was a great game," said UMass coach Sam Koch. "They started out dominating the first eight minutes of the game, but for about the next 20 minutes we had the ball in their end. After we scored, they came back quickly which knocked the wind from our sails."

Senior Dave Siljanovski posted the first goal of the game when he received a pass from Joe Jacobson, tore down the right side of the field and blasted a shot from 27 yards out for the goal at 27:10. Siljanovski's blast put the Minutemen up to an early 1–0 lead.

Just under two minutes later, Carolina's Clint Mathis retaliated when he curled the ball around the post past UMass keeper Tim Pearson to the upper right side.

The 'Cocks would counter once more before half time at 32:45 when freshman Ryan O'Neil put away a bobbled save by Pearson heading the ball in for the goal.

At the 54:25 mark, South Carolina's David Tart would convert on some sloppy play by the UMass defense for his squad's third tally of the game.

After collecting a pass from Chuck Prosser, Tart dribbled to the middle of the 18–yard box and let go a left–footed shot to the lower left.

"The third goal was a mistake on our part," Koch said. "Our defender cleared the ball right to them."

Mathis struck once again at 85:31 on an unassisted goal for a final 4–1 score.

"This was definitely a case of playing at a higher level. This was night and day between this game and the UNH game," Koch said.

The match was extremely physical as UMass was issued six yellow cards. Dan Chagnon picked up two cards of his own, thus getting ejected from the game. With his ejection, Chagnon will have to miss the Minutemen's next game.

"They fouled us quite a lot. As for the cards, one card was justified and two were not. The two that were not were tackles that were clean."

In a game that saw UMass receive more cards than shots on net, the Gamecocks were no choirboys, committing 30 fouls toward the Minutemen.

Chagnon has been a key cog in the UMass defense and will be missed in the Minutemen's next match.

UMass will have to chalk this one up to lack of experience and shift their attention to today's 3:30 p.m. Garber Field matchup against Hartford.

The Hawks travel to Amherst with an overall record of 4–1–1 and are 1–0 thus far on the road.

Most recently, the Hawks tied Northeastern last Saturday and will be looking to gain another New England win.

A quick glance at the stat sheet shows that Hartford has done something UMass has struggled with thus far — score. In six matches, the Hawks have out–scored their opponents 13–6.

Turn to MEN'S SOCCER, page 6

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

Junior forward Mike Butler was held in check as the Minutemen were handed their first loss of the season by South Carolina, 4–1.

Water Polo wins a pair, now 7–2

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

The UMass water polo team faced one of it's tougher tests of the season this weekend, but before that they played Boston College again.

The No. 16 Minutemen (7–2) swam off against the Eagles in a prelude to a showdown between two Northeast region powers as they squared off against the Bears of Brown University.

UMass — like in their first meeting with BC — was unrelenting, scoring five first period goals to seemingly seal the Eagles fate right at the get–go, but the young Boston College squad would have none of that, rallying for six scores in the second quarter. Consequently, the Minutemen limped into the half with a scant 9–8 lead.

Coach Russ Yarworth's club stalled the Eagle attack from the start of the third quarter to the final buzzer, allowing just one BC shot to find the back of the net in the second half.

The Minutemen didn't stall though, they "Stahl–ed", as super soph Brian Stahl (32 goals, 25 quarters played) led the eight–goal, second half charge with five tallies in the 17–9 thrashing.

Junior Marc Staudenbauer (12 goals, 29 points) continued on his torrid pace with four goals and an assist while sophomore Aldo Roman pitched in a pair of goals and an assist.

Freshman Rich Slingluff (8 goals, 12 swim–offs won) continued to impress, tallying a pair of goals in the rout as eight Minutemen tickled the twine and 14 UMass polo players scored points including goalie Paul Engin who dished out two assists.

Unlike any match between UMass and Boston College, the Minutemen–Bears contest was a struggle for the duration as the Massachusetts defense ultimately decided the outcome, a 10–6 UMass conquest.

While Yarworth got hat tricks from a resurgent Gabriel Marrero and Roman, the play of

Turn to WATER POLO, page 6

Women's soccer hits the road for the first time; faces A–10 rival URI

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

Nearly a month into the regular season, the No. 9 Massachusetts women's soccer team (6–0, 1–0 in the Atlantic 10) will finally get to leave the 413 area code this afternoon when it travels to Rhode Island (2–4, 1–0) for an A–10 match at 4 p.m.

After playing five times in the cozy, albeit mangled confines of Richard F. Garber Field, and once at Agawam High School, the Minutewomen head off today for the URI Soccer Complex with hopes of maintaining their winning ways, both this season and against the Rams.

In addition to their unblemished record this season, UMass is 8–0 all–time against their neighbors to the southeast, including a 2–0 win last October at West Springfield High School. The Rams have only scored twice against the Minutewomen in their eight meetings, the last time coming in 1990.

That contest saw the Rams play a bunker defense, keeping the entire team within 30 yards of the goal, hoping to either prevent UMass from scoring and playing to a 0–0 draw, or producing a quick counter attack strike for a 1–0 win. The bunker defense is soccer's answer to hockey's neutral zone trap.

UMass countered the suffocating tactic by having its defenders launch some long range shots, hoping for a well struck goal, or a bobble by the usually sure–handed Sarah Moon in the Ram goal. The strategy worked, as defenders Erin Lynch and Erica Iverson tallied in the 2–0 win.

Coach Karen Parker's team has continued to utilize the bunker defense this season, with the Rams allowing just seven goals in their six matches, scoring just four themselves.

"The last time we played them they packed it in," UMass coach Jim Rudy said. "They defended their end with great numbers hopping to shut us out and catch a counter attack goal. Last year we had to score two by defenders. I expect the same thing [today].

"We're working [in practice] on a team that doesn't play outside of 25 or 30 [yards from the goal]. We're working on patience."

Patience will be beneficial in cracking the often besieged Moon, who has posted some strong numbers both this year and last. Moon has made 44 saves in six matches this year, Danielle Dion and Angie Napoli combined have had to make just eight this year. Behind the Ram defense, Moon has posted a 1.05 goals against average and a pair of shutouts in 1996.

"Sarah Moon always gets up to play us because she wanted to come here, but we were already set at keeper with Dion," Rudy said. "She always seems to have a good game against us. She's a good goalkeeper, she's mature and experienced. She's faced a lot of balls over the last couple of years."

Sharon Fish has both of URI's game–winning goals this year,

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER, page 6

Massachusetts Men's Soccer • Game Preview

Coach Sam Koch

Mike Butler

UMass vs. Hartford

Today
at
Richard F. Garber Field
Kickoff at 3:30 PM

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Former head UMass men's basketball coach John Calipari was welcomed back to Amherst with open arms.

Coach Cal returns to UM to warm greeting

Fans sentiment seems fake after bitterness welled up on campus

Casey Kane

"He will forget about this place," the man said, sweeping his hand to indicate the campus. "And they will forget about him."

Perhaps, although it seems unlikely that that will happen.

When he came forth from wherever he had been hiding and onto the Campus Center Concourse last Friday, John Calipari wore his Final Four ring.

And as he flashed his million–dollar smile to the people who had been waiting to see him since nine that morning, they simply cheered.

When he left the University of Massachusetts in June to pursue his dream of being an NBA coach, there were many people who felt betrayed by Calipari.

He had taken the team, the school, the state to the highest level, and then — poof — he was gone.

He left us, they said, for money. He left us, they said, with a tough schedule and a possible scandal. He left us, they said, and when he comes back we won't root for him.

But as the saying goes, time heals all wounds. And the people who in June swore allegiance to whatever Calipari faced, started to root for him again.

There were hundreds of people outside the University Store on Friday.

They listened with enthralled looks when he spoke; they laughed when he cracked jokes. And they clapped, my did they clap.

For four hours, Coach Cal signed copies of his new book Refuse to Lose. When they reached the front of the line, nobody had a bad thing to say.

"Good luck in New Jersey," they said, referring to Calipari's new job coaching the N.J. Nets.

"Beat the Knicks, but go easy on the Celtics," one man said.

One fan walked by and shouted, "Hey Coach Cal, keep refusin' to lose!"

He smiled in response to them all. He knew what he meant to them.

Over the course of six months, Coach Cal brought the Minutemen to the national spotlight of the NCAA Final Four. He had the Amherst faithful in the palm of his hand.

He was UMass' savior. Over his years, he had brought the team from the dredges of the rankings to the top spot, No.1 in the nation.

He gave the fans the superstars they wanted: Tony Barbee, Will Herndon, Lou Roe and Marcus Camby.

He gave them the conference titles (five straight Atlantic 10 crowns) and the conference rivalries (UMass–Temple, UMass–George Washington).

They loved him for it.

And even after he departed the University for the NBA, they still loved him.

"People have to remember that he brought this school to where it is now," Annette O'Connor said. "UMass wouldn't be where it is in basketball without him.

"People were hurt when he left, but I think they realize now that it was a great move for him."

It was obvious that the people waiting realized that.

And it was obvious to Calipari's former players, who stopped by the table where he was busy nursing his writer's cramp. Carmelo Travieso, Lari Ketner, Herndon and Jim McCoy stopped to wish Calipari good luck.

While the mention of Calipari doesn't conjure up images of college basketball coaching legends like Phog Allen, Adolph Rupp or John Wooden, he has made a name for himself, in Amherst and in the coaching profession.

The years will pass, the players will change, the fans will come and go, but John Calipari's name will be linked with UMass for a long time.

It's true, over time the memory of the Mullins Center may fade from Calipari's mind and it might be harder for fans to recall the Gucci–suited man who would jump up and down on the sidelines yelling "Refuse to lose!".

But that time is a long way off. For now the fans still love Coach Cal.

Red Sox GM Duquette has a plan; Greenwell history, Alou, hello?

FRED HURLBRINK, JR. on Baseball

To wit:

Whether it be spring, summer or the beginning of fall, never, ever, make any sort of prediction about the Boston Red Sox. Never.

I tried. I failed.

In my first baseball column last spring, I picked the Sox to finish first and to emerge to rival the only true American League power, the Cleveland Indians.

Oh well.

If you take away that pesky little 6–19 debacle of an April performance, the Red Sox are one of the best teams in the league like most everyone expected them to be... even the professionals. Take a look at a March issue of the Boston Globe. I wasn't the only baseball "expert" to pick the Sox first.

On the other hand, I was one of the only fans to continue public support of the Hometowne Teame through their many droughts (yeah, I'll pat myself on the back... somebody's got to).

Anyway, Boston made a summer of it. For the past two months, the boys had people flocking to Fenway and paying for NESN to catch a glimpse of some real baseball, some good baseball. Some real good baseball.

So, they're not going to get into the playoffs, but they rushed the wild card and scared a lot of teams along the way. Don't forget that they did all of this without the help of Jose Canseco for most of the second half of the season. They did it without Mike Greenwell, Wil Cordero and a healthy John Valentin.

They did it without any semblance of consistency coming out of the bullpen. They did it without a deep starting rotation. Will the real Aaron Sele please rise.

Let us all keep these facts in mind when we jump back off the bandwagon and start speculating of off–season moves like firing Kevin Kennedy. Sure, Jim Leyland would look awfully good in the first base dugout in Fenway, but Kevin didn't do a bad job this summer. We all know the Sox couldn't have gone far in the playoffs, so to get back up over .500 and challenge the creme of the junior circuit is in itself an accomplishment.

So, what next? Good question. I'll tell you one thing: Dan Duquette does have a plan, and so far, it seems to be working.

Obviously, a wheeler–and–dealer like Duquette is going to make some mistakes (see: Mark Whiten, Tom Gordon), but he's also done his part in supplying the Hub with some talent (see: Reggie Jefferson, Troy O'Leary, Darren Bragg).

One item of interest that a majority of fans seem to neglect is the quality of the Red Sox minor league system, a system that Duquette has been able to fashion into one of the strongest in baseball (see: Nomar Garciaparra, Jeff Suppan, Carl Pavano).

And, he's taking his time with the kids. Shhh... don't

Turn to BASEBALL, page 6

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 16 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Wednesay, September 25, 1996

Identity crisis

New WORLD Theater opened its season twith Milk of Amnesia. Check out the Collegian's review about this one–woman play. See Arts & Living (page 7).

No. 8 Minutewomen beat Rams 3–0

Rebecca Myers' two goals set record, leading UMass to victory. (See Sports, page 10.)

WORLD

Controversal tunnel completed near sites

JERUSALEM (AP) — Asserting control over sites holy to Jews and Muslims, Israel broke through the last stretch of an archaeological tunnel near the Al Aqsa Mosque compound on Tuesday, a move that prompted angry Palestinians to throw stones at police and Jewish worshipers.

Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat denounced the tunnel work, carried out just after midnight under heavy police guard, as a "crime against our religious and holy places." The Al Aqsa Mosque is Islam's third holiest site.

Palestinians threw stones at Israeli police from the mosque compound, known in Arabic as Haram as–Sharif, or "noble enclosure." Jews saying prayers at the Western Wall below were briefly ordered by police to step back when stones started flying. The violence at one of the most sensitive spots in the Israeli–Arab conflict illustrated how easily the two sides can collide in the city claimed by both Israel and the Palestinians.

Arafat convened his Cabinet Tuesday evening, and later the Palestinian Authority called for strikes in Jerusalem on Wednesday morning, and protests in Palestinian territories in the afternoon. Israel claimed the narrow pedestrian tunnel would be a boon to tourism because it links the Western Wall, Judaism's holiest site, to the Via Dolorosa, where Jesus was said to have walked before his crucifixion.

NATION

Fed Opts to Leave Interest Rates Alone

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve, split over raising interest rates, opted Tuesday to do nothing six weeks before voters go to the polls. President Clinton said the decision "shows we have got a strong economy with no inflation."

The central bank's decision followed nearly five hours of closed–door internal debate by the Federal Open Market Committee, the group of Fed board members and regional bank presidents who meet eight times a year to set interest rates.

In advance of Tuesday's meeting, the last before the Nov. 5 election, a number of economists had predicted the central bank would launch a preemptive strike against inflation by nudging interest rates higher. It would have been the first increase in Fed rates in 19 months.

While some private economists worried that the central bank's inaction threatened rising prices down the road, President Clinton welcomed the decision as a confirmation of his campaign claims about the U.S. economy.

"It shows we have got a strong economy with no inflation. I am glad about that," Clinton told reporters during a campaign stop in Freehold, N.J.

GOP nominee Bob Dole complained that interest rates under Bill Clinton are still "higher in every category." His running mate, Jack Kemp, had pledged before Tuesday's meeting to "bang on the Fed" if it raised rates.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 60 LOW: 50	HIGH: 60 LOW: 40	HIGH: 60 LOW: 50

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics.....page 11
Crossword .....page 10
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 12

Strategic Action plan outlined

Chancellor's ideas for UM covers various areas on campus

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

The number one highlight of fiscal year 1995–1996 at the University of Massachusetts was the completion of Strategic Action: Towards a Commonwealth of Learning, according the Office of the Chancellor.

Strategic Action creates a framework for budgeting and planning and for investment in people, programs, physical and information technology infrastructure.

"Chancellor Scott's Strategic Action reflects much thought and work over the several years," said Provost Patricia Crosson, "Wherever the University wants to go, Strategic Action provides the blueprint."

According to Chancellor David K. Scott, "Strategic Action provides compass headings for navigating the course ahead."

Six task forces and six working groups created a document over the past three years called, Strategic Planning and Thinking; a plan which is now being put into action.

The task forces included Teaching and Learning, Public Service, Economic Development, Multiculturalism and Diversity, Research and Graduate Education and Faculty Roles and Rewards. While the working groups concentrated on financial resources, support services, student services, external relations, physical facilities and human resources.

Each group led to a report; the reports each formed chapters within Strategic Action. The results of the plan will be enacted over the next five years.

Major Initiatives of the Strategic Action plan have an allocation of $7.0M. The Organization of Colleges and Schools for the knowledge Base of a Modern Land Grant–Research University, Teaching, Learning and Curricular Reform, Interdisciplinary Programs, Scholarships and Financial Aid all received allocations of $1.0M. Advising and retention, Diversity and multiculturalism, Faculty and Staff Roles and Rewards, Creation of Community and Steps towards

> "Strategic Action provides compass headings for navigating the course ahead."
> — Chancellor David K. Scott.

the Land Grant–AAU (American Association of Universities) Model all received resource amounts of $0.9M to $0.5M.

"Strategic Action is a clear display of the University's commitment to take a major leap forward into the year 2000," said Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Tom Robinson.

One of the initiatives of the plan which is already taking action stems from the infrastructure section. Several classrooms on campus, such as 227 Herter Hall, have been completely remodeled. Over the next five years the plan allocates money to ensure that more classrooms and dormitories are revamped.

Information technologies are also moving forward at UMass. Ericsson System has successfully upgraded the campus telecommunications system which has included upgrading central processors and loading new software.

Additional PC/Lab Classroom projects are underway. Activities are taking place in the following areas: GE Computer Classroom, Math Lab Expansion (DuBois, 16th floor), Patterson Residence Hall Computer Lab (Southwest) and OIT Lab Expansion (DuBois, 7th floor).

Other projects being prepared for the second half of the academic year include Bartlett Computer Rooms (Writing Program, Journalism, Art History, Technical Writing), GIS Computer Lab (Morrill Science Center), Public Health and Nursing Computer Lab (Crabtree) and Social and Behavioral Science Computer Lab (Crabtree).

The end result of Strategic Action is continual preparation for becoming a member of the AAU.

"The goal of becoming an AAU institution, if combined in creative ways with our role as a Land Grant University, has the potential to act as a focusing and shaping force in our desire to be a distinctive global University," said Chancellor Scott, "Using Knowledge and its application in all areas to create a better and wiser world more rapidly."

With AAU acceptance, UMass would become one of only 16 institutions of higher Education in the U.S. who are also Land Grant Universities.

"There are many benefits to having AAU membership as a goal. Even in the process of getting there, we are improving the University," said Robinson.

Offering life through artist's eyes

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Correspondent

Ever dream of moving to New York City and living as an artist? The art department here at the University of Massachusetts has developed a program thatjust might make this possible.

Six years ago, when the art department recognized the need to teach students not only how to produce art, but how to survive and remain financially solvent in the New York art scene, Professor Jerry Kearn came up with a plan.

NYPOP – the New York Professional Outreach Program – was born. Every semester for the past five years, thirty or so students have traveled to New York to meet prominent artists, critics, curators, and gallery owners, and to learn how to make it as an artist in NYC.

These students, usually art majors in their Junior or Senior years, or graduate students, travel to the city four times each semester, leaving Friday morning and sharing driving duties over the four hour trip. The first trip this semester was last weekend; the next being scheduled for this Friday.

The students arrive at Kearn's studio in Manhattan, where he will share with them the weekend's plans: perhaps a trip to an art gallery in Soho or to a critic's apartment in Brooklyn.

The students must find their own lodging for the night, and will meet with another mentor on Saturday, returning to UMass around 10 p.m. that same day.

Kearn's wide experience with the New York art scene (he has lived and painted there for over twenty years) apd many contacts allow him to attract influential and current speakers for the class.

"When you're first starting out in New York, it can seem as if there's no way to break into the artistic community," Kearn said. "It's fine to think you need to suffer and be alienated to create good work, but the fact of the matter is you need all the support you can get."

In addition to their trips to New York, the students enrolled in NYPOP work on their own art work here at UMass, which Kearn will come to evaluate periodically through the semester.

As a culmination to the class, the studenis will bring a show back to UMass in the spring, often showcasing the work of New York artists they have met throughout the semester alongside their own work.

Carol Struve, the director of the Herter Art Gallery, helps the students put the show together and explains that this task allows them to learn the pratical aspects of curating a gallery; how to handle and hang the artwork, produce posters and catalogues, write press releases, make a video presentation, and write grants.

Spruve exclaimed, "That's the most exciting part to me – bringing it all back to UMass."

This spring, the students will bring the work of New York artist Papo Colo back home with them, showcasing his paintings and sculptures in the Herter Art Gallery from March 4th to April 9th.

The success fo the program is measured in several ways. Firstly, the student feedback has been overwhelmingly positive. Anne LaPrade, a third year painting graduate student, says, "I can't say enough good things about Jerry and the course – it taught me that there is life after art school and that people just like me can succeed."

Additionally, in the past four years, 25 graduates of NYPOP have successfully made the transition to living and creating in New York. Kearn's goal of bridging the professional art world of New York to the art students here at UMass has, he says, been realized.

COURTNEY SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Feed Me!

The feisty swan takes a nab at sophomore Biology Major Beth Koppel's leg yesterday by the campus pond.

Public meeting series starts on genetic tests

COURTNEY SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Representatives Jay Kaufman and Harriette Chandler converse at the University's Health Panel discussion yesterday evening.

By Daniel E. Levenson
Collegian Staff

On Tuesday afternoon in the Campus Center, the State Legislature's Special Committee on Genetic Information held the first in a series of public meetings on issues surrounding genetic information and the need for legislation.

Representatives Harriette Chandler (D–Worcester) and Jay Kaufman (D–Lexington), who are chairing the special committee, ran the meeting.

Chandler opened up by welcoming everyone and explaining the basic format for the afternoon.

Anyone who wished to give testimony on the subject was asked to fill out a short form and hand it into the two representatives, throughout the course of the meeting people who requested to speak were given the opportunity.

Chandler explained that the reason that they were here was to basically find out people's concerns on the issue of genetic testing and information.

"We are building a foundation, there is nothing in place now," she said.

The committee is also seeking to determine if there is a need for state legislation to protect individual patients and their right to privacy. Chandler called the recent advances in the field of genetic information "mind–boggling," and emphasized the need to take action on protective legislation before, and not after problems arise.

"Everyone of us will be touched by this revolution in medical science," said Chandler, "The question is, what do we do about this information."

Kaufman called the meeting an example "of government at it's best," explaining that he favored the idea of going to the public and asking them their thoughts on the issue, instead of waiting until legislation was passed to talk publicly about it. He also said that he wanted to hear people's thoughts on legislative action involving genetic information.

Ian Platner, executive director of the Massachusetts Breast Cancer Coalition was the first to testify before the meeting. Her main concern was the use and potential abuse of genetic information. She cited the enormous potential for discrimination by employers and insurance companies, not only for individuals, but for their relatives as well.

"Genetic information not only has implications for that individual, but for every blood relative of that individual," Platner said.

Professor Randall Phillis, associate professor of biology at the University of Massachusetts, spoke next. He outlined his concerns about the lack of applicability of genetic information to health care at this time.

"There really are no therapeutic cures or treatments that involve genetics at this time," Randall said.

Randall explained that since potential genetic problems can be identified but not treated that it presents a host of problems for which the medical establishment is not wholly prepared to contend with. He said that doctors should receive training on understanding genetic information and that Genetic counselors, who are trained to advise people with genetic diseases, are in short supply.

"The need for genetic counselors will far exceed the availability of genetic counselors in the near future," said Randall.

UMass biology Professor Lawrence Schwartz said that he felt strongly that insurance companies not be given access to genetic information because of the potential for abuse.

"The penalties for misappropriation of that information should be incredibly strong," Schwartz said.

Many of the same issues were raised by the individuals testifying, mainly, concerns relating to privacy and discrimination were of the utmost importance. Most cited the vast potential for abuse on the part of insurance companies, to deny insurance based on the possibility of future geneticly related disease. Insurance companies which have been represented at five previous meetings of the committee and this first public meeting, declined comment at Tuesday's hearing.

Coleman discusses Jackie Robinson

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Leonard Coleman, the president of Major League Baseball's National League and Chairman of the Jackie Robinson Foundation, took the stage in Bowker Auditorium last night and spoke.

With the auditorium filled to approximately three quarters its capacity, Sports Management department head Glenn Wong introduced Coleman.

Coleman was on campus as part of a guest–speaker series that is running in conjunction with the "Baseball in Modern America" class. The class, which is a first–time offering at the University, is an inter–departmental class combining the Sport Studies, History, African–American Studies and Political Science departments.

"[The class] is super," Coleman said. "In a way Jackie foreshadowed the greatest social events in this country in this century. So I think it's fantastic to have this class."

"I enjoy getting back to college campuses, and I wish I could do more of it," he said.

Coleman focused his speech on Robinson and the upcoming 50th anniversary of Robinson's breaking of the major league baseball color barrier. He became the first black major leaguer in 1947, playing for the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Coleman, a man who described the day the Brooklyn Dodgers moved out of Brooklyn as "one of the worst days of my life," opened his presentation by recalling his own memories of Robinson and telling of his love for baseball which laid the foundation for his future work. He then relazed stories of racial segregation and intolerance that were common in the early days of baseball.

He spent a considerable block of time speaking about Branch Rickey and his work trying to break baseball's color barrier.

"The seed for Jackie Robinson's breakthrough was laid by Branch Rickey," Coleman said. "Rickey searched the Negro Leagues for the person he thought would be best capable for making the breakthrough to the Major Leagues, and rightly he picked Jack Roosevelt Robinson."

"Baseball was a forerunner of social movement," Coleman said. "Baseball stumbled into it because of Branch Rickey."

In a year when Truman was just integrating the armed services, when the legendary Brown vs. the Board of Education decision was still seven years away, Robinson wore a Brooklyn Dodgers uniform as the first black major leaguer and went on to be named the Rookie of the Year.

"Every kid in my neighborhood wanted to be No. 42 (Robinson's number)," Coleman said. Later in the evening, Coleman mentioned that Boston Red Sox first baseman Mo Vaughn wears No. 42 because of Robinson.

Coleman went on to tell about the Jackie Robinson Foundation, an organization that was set up by Robinson's widow, Rachel. The Foundation is responsible for giving out numerous scholarships to college–bound students in need.

After concluding his speech, Coleman took many questions from the audience. When he stepped down from the stage he then spent nearly a half an hour answering questions on a one–on–one basis.

Before being named as the President of the National League in March of 1994, Coleman served in a number of governmental positions, including in the cabinet of the Governor of New Jersey. He also worked for various municipal financial organizations.

Coleman holds an undergraduate degree in history from Princeton, and two graduate degrees from Harvard.

Coleman was the second speaker that the "Baseball in Modern America" class has brought to the University. There will be several more speakers throughout the semester.

For Your Information

PIYs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PIY, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Monday, Sept. 23

Meeting — The Golden Key National Honor Society will be holding a general meeting at 7 p.m. in room 805–809 of the Campus Center. All are encouraged to attend. Any questions, call Michelle at 549-0189.

Meeting — The Asian American Student Union will hold it's first general meeting at 7:30 p.m. in room 174 of the Campus Center. Non–members are welcome, and there are positions open. For more information, call the AASA office at 545–0189.

Meeting — Alpha Phi Omega, a co–ed community service fraternity, will be holding an informational meeting in their office, room 409 of the Student Union, at 7 p.m. Refreshments will be served. For further information, call 545–2068.

Meeting — Circle K International, a collegiate community service organization, is having a meeting at 7 p.m. in room 409 of the Student Union. For more information, call Aimee at 665–7712.

Wednesday, Sept. 25

Meeting — The Cannabis Reform Coalition invites everyone to their first general meeting at 7 p.m. at Earthfoods. On the agenda: Hiring an office staffer, nominations for the executive board, and building faculty support. For more information, call Brian Julin at 545–1122.

Meeting — Spectrum, a student–run art and literary magazine, will hold its first general meeting for all those interested at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center. For more information, call 545–2240.

Meeting — The MASSPIRG general interest meeting will be at 7 p.m. in Campus Center room 101.For more information, call Leigh at 545–0199.

Reception — The Women's Studies Welcome Back Reception for students, faculty, staff and friends will be held from 12–2 p.m. in room 1001–2 of the Campus Center. Refreshments will be served, and all are welcome.For more information, call 545–1922, or e–mail at womens–studies@wost.umass.edu or http://www–unix.oit.umass.edu/~wostu.

Thursday, Sept. 26

Meeting — There will be an informational meeting about a UMass trip to Israel being offered on Winter Break (Dec. 23–Jan 2), at 7 p.m. at the Hillel House.

Meeting — The Math Club will hold its first meeting at 7 p.m. in LGRT 1521D.All math majors invited. Come tour the new undergraduate reading lounge and meet other math majors. Pizza will be served for those signed up in LGRT 1521D ahead of time.

Notices

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley offers rides to students to attend the 10 a.m. service in Amherst. Drivers arrive at the Knowlton and Prince bus stops at 9:45 a.m. Please call Mark to confirm, or for other stops, at 253–0361.

Everywoman's Center — "Acculturation Group for Latina Women," facilitated by Mari Vicente, Thursday from 4–6 p.m. "Child Sexual Abuse Survivors Support Groups:" Group 1 facilitated by Sara Elinoff, Mondays from 7–9 p.m. Group 2 facilitator, day and time TBA. "Coming Out Group For Lesbians," facilitated by Lynne Schachne, Mondays 4– 5:30 p.m. "Lifting Your Spirits," facilitated by Carla Brennan and Diana Dalendina, Wednesdays from 4–5:30 p.m. "Eco–Psychology for Women," facilitated by Carla Brennan, Fridays 10–11:30 a.m. "Post Abortion Support Group," facilitated by Peggy Warwick, Wednesdays 5:30– 6:30 p.m. "Self–Esteem & Assertiveness for Women," facilitated by Carla Brennan, Wednesdays 6:30–8 p.m. "Single Mothers Support Group," facilitated by Amy Rosebury, Tuesdays 1–2:30 p.m. "Women & Divorce," facilitated by Ali Thompson, Tuesdays 6:30–8 p.m. All groups offered by the Everywoman's Center begin in October, and offer a safe and confidential space. For other groups, call 545–0883.

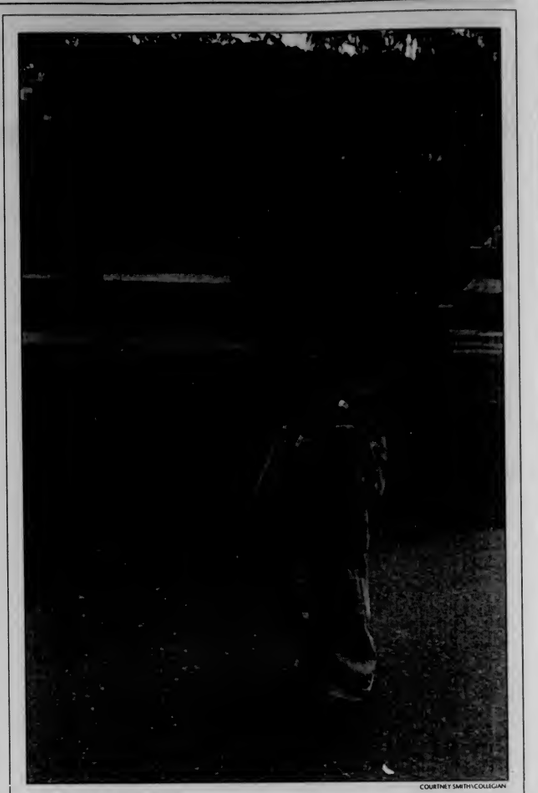
Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition meetings are every Tuesday at 7 p.m. in room 306 of the Student Union. For more informatlon, call the ARC office at 5–1925.

Dancing—Beginner classes in Cajun dancing and Appalachian clogging are starting on Sunday evenings from 6–7 p.m. No experience or partner needed, all ages welcome. Classes are held in Westfield at 132 Elm St. For more information, call Jo Sarnelli at (413) 746–9067.

Five College–REFLECT, the Five College Bereavement Support Program is a student organization devoted to helping those coping with grief. REFLECT is offering two free eight week grief support groups this semester. Groups are forming now. For more information, call 577–5316.

Staff Needed—The UMass Index yearbook needs staff in all departments. Editorial positions are available in Photo, Layout, Copy and Marketing departments. An assistant copy editor and assistant sports editor are also needed. Meetings are held on Wednesdays at 7 p.m., 304 Student Union, or call 545–0848 if interested.

Community — Womanshelter is a battered woman's shelter located in Holyoke serving the Holyoke/Chicopee area and parts of Hampshire County. Womanshelter has an extensive community education program providing speakers and workshops on the following topics: domestic violence, teen– dating violence, date rape, sexual harassment, domestic violence and children, and many more. The services are free of charge, but the Womanshelter will gladly accept donations. For information concerning these programs or to arrange a program date for a group, call Edith Jennings from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday at 538–9717.



Support group — Synthesis Center Associate Rebecca Reid leads an ongoing support group for single people over 30 from 7:15 to 8:45 p.m. in downtown Amherst. Single, divorced, widowed and all sexual orientation are welcome. There is a low fee. For information, call 253–5494.

Religious — The Muslim Student Association at the University of Massachusetts invites all Muslims in the Amherst area to weekly Friday prayer from 1 to 2 p.m. in the Campus Center. The room number will be posted on the Notice Board. For more information, call Utama at 256–8482 or Laili at 253–0874.

Discussion Group — "A Course in Miracles" will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for 10 weeks on Mondays starting in September. For more information, call 253–3795.

Astronomy — The Amherst Area Amateur Astronomers Association will conduct free public solar observing at 1 p.m. at the Amherst Town Common every Saturday in September. Also offered every Saturday this month will free planetarium shows at 4 p.m. in Amherst College Bassett Planetarium, and free public observatory observing at 9 p.m. at Amherst College Wilder Observatory. Every Sunday this month there will be free public observing at Mt. Pollux, off South East St., in South Amherst.

Dance — The Northeast American School of Dance Studio in Northampton will hold a dance spree every Friday from 8:30 p.m. to midnight every Friday. People can dance to variety of music in a smoke and alcohol–free environment. All ages welcome. Sliding scale. For more information, call 584–8167.

COURTNEY SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Hackin' It Up

Keyon Spence plays hacky–sack with some friends on campus yesterday afternoon. Keyon is from St. Vincent, Grenadines, and can be found working at the campus pizza shop.

OUTSTANDING ADVISOR AWARD

COLLEGE OF FOOD AND NATURAL RESOURCES
students, faculty and staff are invited to submit nominations for this new award for 1996-97

NOMINATION FORMS ARE AVAILABLE IN ROOM 113 STOCKBRIDGE HALL OR IN DEPARTMENTAL OFFICES

Faculty in the following majors are eligible for nomination:

Animal Science • Building Materials and Wood Technology

Apparel Marketing • Entomology • Environmental Design

Environmental Sciences • Family and Consumer Sciences • Food Science

Forestry • Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration

Landscape Architecture • Natural Resource Studies

Plant and Soil Sciences • Plant Pathology • Resource Economics

Sport Management • Wildlife and Fisheries Conservation

CAMPUS GEAR
FOR ALL YOUR COLLEGIATE NEEDS

WELCOME PARENTS!
BUY YOUR UMASS MERCHANDISE AT CAMPUS GEAR
AND
RECEIVE A CARD GOOD FOR 20% OFF YOUR NEXT PURCHASE
ALSO
CHECK OUT OUR GREAT DEALS ON FLEECE & JACKETS

including Champion U.S.A.

VISIT CAMPUS GEAR TODAY!
255 Triangle Street•Amherst, Ma 01002
(413) 549-0944

Between Dairy Mart & Northhampton Co-operative Bank

Book & Plow Fest. to bring fun to Amherst Commons

By Beth McCarthy
Collegian Staff

For three days in September, the Book and Plow Festival of Amherst will yet again stimulate towns folk and students alike with a impressive array of cultural offerings.

"Nobody's allowed to be bored," said Robin Jaffin, coordinator of the Book and Plow Festival, "If they are, they haven't looked hard enough for something to do."

Indeed, Jaffin is only half joking, as there will be a tremendous amount of activities and attractions available at the festival.

The weekend will begin with "an evening of tasting" on the Town Common, Friday, Sept. 27, from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m., will hold regionally produced beer, wine and coffee tasting accompanied by jazz music.

Down the road at the Black Sheep Cafe, viewers can witness the unique, "Cops and Kids poetry slam" from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Here children under the age of 17 and police officers will be theatrically delivering poetry.

Jaffin hopes that this event will allow kids to see intimidating police officers in a more relaxed environment. Additional, prizes will be offered to participants young and old.

Saturday, Sept. 28, from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m., will concentrate on agriculture and conservation. There will be a variety of local and regional products, antique farming equipment and farm animals.

Hampshire College will be bringing herd dogs and sheep to demonstrate sheep herding.

There will also be many displays by different departments of the surrounding colleges and universities.

"This is actually a venue to showcase what everyone is doing," said Jaffin, referring to the projects that the universities are working on.

"We want to bring out what's normally behind closed doors and make it more accessible because its really amazing what goes on behind those closed doors."

The University of Massachusetts will be there to contribute by having 4,000 ladybugs shipped from California for a ladybug exhibit.

"One purpose of this is to show kids that farmers use a variety of control methods and one of them is biological control," said Craig Hollingsworth, extension educator at UMass.

Not only will these ladybugs be used for the exhibit, but some will be also be distributed to children so they can take a piece of what they learned home with them.

There will also be musicians performing all weekend under the tent ranging in styles and origins. Sister Carol, who is a well known reggae artists from the Boston area, will be performing Saturday.

In addition, Vance Gilbert, a noted folk artist also from the Boston area, will perform on Sunday, Sept. 29.

Sunday will also focus on literature and history from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Events such as the "Emily Dickinson look alike contest," and the "Uncle Wiggly story hour" will once again attract the festival younger audiences.

The local African–American history display and tour will also make it a very memorable day. The tour will lead the followers to local residences, of which some are still inhabited by the original African–American families that moved in over a 100 years ago.

Stories will go with each house visited, only this year the stories will be telling the negative aspects of being black in this area, as well as the positive that the Book and Plow has previously limited itself to last year.

"We're really proud and grateful to the contributors for this," said Jaffin referring to the tour and displays.

Shirley Hebb, who lives in one of the houses on the tour, thinks this is a wonderful idea.

"It'll help other people as far as culture," said Hebb. "Because lots of times you find out interesting things you didn't know before when you get their version and ideas."

Another added feature to this year's festival is a translator for the hearing impaired which will make this event even more accessible. UMass has volunteered its services by translating a large portion of the literature competition which is open to all languages.

"Every year we'll be able to add a new translation," said Jaffin.

Tickets will be sold in the form of buttons, which can be purchased for $4 per adults and $1 for kids under 14 and senior citizens.

These lower rates start Sept. 10 and will be available at Jones Library and Hastings in Amherst, Beyond Words Bookstore in Northampton, Greenfield's Market in Greenfield and Odyssey Bookstore in South Hadley, or call 413–253–0700.

These buttons, when purchased early, can also go towards discounts at participating business and are good for the entire weekend of activities.

Buttons can also be purchased at the door all weekend for $5 for adults and $2 for kids and senior citizens.

MASSPIRG meeting tonight

Hopes to get 150 students involved on five different campaigns

By Daniel E. Levenson
Collegian Staff

The University Of Massachusetts at Amherst chapter of MASSPIRG, the Massachusetts Public Interest Research Interest Group, will be holding a general interest meeting tonight at 7 p.m. in room 101, Campus Center.

Christina Maginnis, a student volunteer who is the secretary of the UMass–Amherst chapter, spoke to the Collegian about the group's plans for the year.

She said that there are about 25 active student interns and volunteers who are the driving force behind the chapter.

"We're working to get over 150 students involved," Maginnis said.

The group has five organizational campaigns in the works, each one dealing with a different and controversial issue.

The "Right to Know Campaign," which focuses on raising student and consumer awareness about undocumented and potentially dangerous chemicals used by industry, is a primary MASSPIRG issue this year. This campaign also includes efforts to pass legislation to educate consumers about the use of these chemicals.

The "Youth Vote Campaign" calls on interested students not only to register to vote, but also to get learn more about the political process which they can become a part of, according to Maginnis.

The "Water Watch Campaign" seeks to make people aware of the issues facing America's streams and rivers. In relation, a stream cleanup near Sylvan is planned.

The "Hunger and Homelessness Campaign" will conduct a variety of activities, including clothing and food drives to assist local shelters.

The "Free The Planet Campaign" involves recycling efforts and working with endangered species. Last year they organized an Earth Day celebration in the town of Amherst.

MASSPIRG is totally funded by a line–item option on their tuition bill.

According to Maginnis, the group is involved with efforts to work with other groups on campus, especially with voter registration efforts.

Whitewater pardons raises a storm

By Mike Feinsibler
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton's refusal to rule out pardons for his former Whitewater partners raised storm warnings Tuesday. Some observers said a Whitewater pardon would cause as much outrage as President Ford's act of clemency toward Richard Nixon.

Clinton was noncommittal when asked Monday about a potential post–election pardon for Jim McDougal, his former wife Susan McDougal and former Arkansas Gov. Jim Guy Tucker. But he didn't slam the door shut. He said he would review such requests "after there's an evaluation done by the Justice Department."

But that was enough to arouse strong reaction from Republicans. "It would be an unprecedented use of the pardon power when you pardon someone who is involved in a matter in which you yourself are being investigated," said Joseph diGenova, who was U.S. attorney for the District of Columbia in the Reagan and Bush administrations. He said it could be grounds for impeachment and "would doom his presidency — doom it, no matter what his other accomplishments."

"There would be a storm of outrage and indignation," agreed Robert Goldwin, a constitutional scholar at the American Enterprise Institute. Goldwin served in the Ford White House and observed the protests following Ford's pardon of Nixon for crimes he "committed or might have committed." Some historians think the pardon cost Ford re–election in 1976.

In 1992, President Bush's last days in office were dogged by reaction to his pardons of former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and five other former officials in the Iran–Contra affair.

Bush's own vice presidential conduct could have become an issue at Weinberger's trial. Bush's role had been under investigation by the prosecutor's office at the time Bush pardoned Weinberger, a fact the prosecutor emphasized in his final report on Iran–Contra. At the time, Clinton, awaiting his own inauguration, commented, "I am concerned by any action that sends a signal that if you work for the government, you're beyond the law or that not telling the truth to Congress under oath is somehow less serious than not telling the truth to some other body under oath."

On Tuesday, the president did not elaborate on his remarks concerning his former business associates. His press secretary, Mike McCurry, said Clinton was "absolutely not" holding the door open for pardons, adding: "He said he hadn't given it any consideration."

Industries polluting H_20 legally

By Melissa B. Robinson
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Industries legally dumped more than 794,000 pounds of toxic pollutants directly in state waterways over a recent five–year period, according to a new study.

Almost half of the pollutants went into Muddy Cove Brook in southeastern Massachusetts, while another 6.65 million pounds of toxic chemicals were likely released into waterways after passing through sewage treatment plans, it said.

The analysis of U.S. Environmental Protection Agency data, reported by the polluters themselves, was released Tuesday by the Environmental Working Group and the Public Interest Research Organization, both nonprofit environmental watchdog groups. The data on toxic discharges, which covered the period 1990-94, have previously been available.

"The vast majority of this pollution was, and is, legal," said Ken Cook, Environmental Working Group president.

"As a result of this continuing pollution, thousands of water bodies nationwide are damaged, as are the economies that depend on them, from tourism to fisheries," he added.

Some of the chemicals have been linked to cancer, reproductive problems, neurological disorders or other health problems. Toxic chemicals may also harm the environment, particularly if they accumulate over time.

In Massachusetts, Zeneca Inc.'s former Dighton facility reported the greatest amount of toxic discharges to water — 418,526 pounds — in the state over the five years, the report showed.

The vast majority of those toxins — 381,118 pounds — was released into Muddy Cove Brook, located near Dighton in southeastern Massachusetts.

Judith Auchard, spokeswoman for Zeneca Inc., based in Wilmington, Del., said the Dighton facility, which was used for textile-color manufacturing, was closed more than a year ago. "We do have responsibility for cleaning up the site," said Auchard, who said cleanup efforts are ongoing.

The toxic chemical discharged in the greatest amounts in Massachusetts was ammonium sulfate, at 373,300 pounds. The environmental groups did not list that substance among its carcinogens or chemicals affecting reproduction.

The 6.65 million pounds in sewer discharges are based on an estimate.

A total 26.6 million pounds of toxic chemicals were discharged to sewer systems in Massachusetts over the five-year period. EPA estimates a quarter of those pass through treatment plans to receiving waters.

COURTNEY SMITH/COLLEGIAN

"Tools for the Road"

Karen Knight of the Career Center leads an Employment Options Workshop at the University Career Center's Fall Open House held in the Student Union Ballroom yesterday.

COLLEGIAN graphics

THE BEAVER COLLEGE LONDON SEMESTER
AT CITY UNIVERSITY

Spend fifteen weeks getting to know London studying with British students at City University. Classes are available in dozens of subjects. You can also opt for one or more of our special classes that explore the theaters, the museums and the heritage that prompted Samuel Johnson to observe, "When a man is tired of London, he is tired of life." There's so much going on, you might want to stay for the whole year!

Speak to your study abroad advisor about Beaver College programs.

Call for a free catalog today.
1.888.BEAVER-9
cea@beaver.edu
http://www.beaver.edu/cea/

BURGER KING® NOW HIRING

We're looking for people with pride, who want to be treated fairly by people who care, to staff our restaurants.

-Good Starting Pay
-Flexible Hours
-Full Time/Part Time
-Meal Discounts
-Management Opportunities

Closing Rates up to $6.50*
Apply in Person
Rt. 9 Hadley
Rt. 5 Northampton

*See Manager for details

Correction

The article, "Peace Corps looks for help," published yesterday did not include the new location of the Peace Corps recruitment office, which is located in 112 Stockbridge Hall, University of Massachusetts.
The Collegian regrets the error.

THE TOASTERS with S.M.A.

7:30 show

18 + CLUB METRO

492 PLEASANT ST., NORTHAMPTON MA
413.582.9698

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief — Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager — G. Tony Morse Production Manager — Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager — Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor — Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor — Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor — Sean Horgan Systems Manager
Mark McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor — Eric B. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Jamie Simsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor — Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor — Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor — Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Michael Elliott News Editor — Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor — Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor — Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor — David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Fair warning to a group of posers

Each and every last one of the born–again hippies aimlessly frolicking upon our slowly degenerating campus ought to have a wide rubber band strapped around their head.

Then, someone (any volunteers?) should stroll by and place their forefinger and thumb around each elastic one–by– one, pull as far as can be stretched, and then release without feeling even a remote particle of guilt.

Now hear this you time–warped members of the present generation: SNAP TO IT!

Enough apathy. Enough allowing our campus to unfold and fall apart before our very eyes.

Enough merely gazing at national and world events. Enough impassivity.

Henry J. Brier

Enough meandering barefoot on a college campus where broken glass beer bottles abound. Enough littering our once–charming and immaculate campus with Earthfoods' plates, spoons and forks. Enough disguising uncleanliness with that ozone–unfriendly and putrid scent known as patchouli.

The true, bona–fide and original hippies from the '60s admirably distinguished and strongly identified themselves by being on the forefront of political activism: they accomplished; they achieved; they were motivated; they were proud of and forthright in their opinions and stance; and they were the impetus of a civil and social movement that, to the present day, still persists and continues.

They had that ever–vital skeletal component known as a spine vertically lining their back.

The false hippies infesting our campus are either completely oblivious in regard to their surroundings within this bubble known as the Pioneer Valley, or these timid amoebas are plagued with yellow–bellies (which most probably have pierced navels).

The imitation hippies here have a common goal. The impostors hanging out on Hippie Beach serve the same purpose. The fraudulent hippies do the same actions. And it is for one aspect which they all collectively stand, passionately encourage and vigorously fight.

Nothing.

One need not look any further than the gradually crumbling buildings on campus to understand the dire conditions under which we presently study and attempt to retain knowledge.

Severely neglected chairs and ruined desks fill the classrooms and lecture halls of "The Pride of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

We all know about our sorrowful central edifice — the W. E. B. DuBois Tower Library — and its insecure bricks. So, let us consider another building.

Although no courses are conducted in Memorial Hall, this building has molding on its east side that is deteriorating and on the brink of crashing to earth.

Is this what we want to make of ourselves? Is that an admirable way of defining ourselves? Is this how we want to be remembered? The generation of people who stands for nothing, who lacks motivation and experiences difficulty accomplishing and becoming distinguished.

So instead of emerging as a distinctive generation with unique goals and ideals, some would rather fill the footsteps and emulate a past generation, but only as far as appearance goes.

On the national and global spectrums, there is so incredibly much happening that fathoming the reality that people idly sit like totem poles waiting for the world to come to them is nothing other than insane.

Where to start. Troop movement. Elections. Peace processes. Civil uprising. Nuclear development and proliferation, to name but a minuscule sampling of the wide array of examples.

What shall be done in order to repair and correctly adjust this overly–lethargic segment of campus?

If the rubber band scheme previously described proves to be ineffective, then perhaps the solution lies at the very entrance to campus.

In addition to the two flagpoles situated at Haigis Mall, a third should be added. Let's flaunt the new pride of this University.

Hoist one of those random hippies high, and let it wave in the wind.

Henry J. Brier is a Collegian columnist.

Awakening the prophet within

In the first year of Belshazzar, King of Babylon, Daniel had a dream and visions of his head upon his bed: then he wrote the dream and the sum of the matters.

Daniel 7:1

Have you ever had deja vu? Have you ever experienced a strange, yet unexplained feeling about something for no apparant reason? Or maybe you've dreamed of being somewhere with someone, only to see it actually come true.

Well, you are not alone. These and other similar phenomena are becoming increasingly common among a myriad of different people. Many people will agree that the world is now experiencing an explosion of supernatural tendencies as we aproach the coming new millenium.

The art of predicting the future is as old as civilization itself. While such matters provide great material for shows like Unsolved Mysteries or continue to fuel the multi–million– dollar psychic networks industry, there are documented prophecies in hundreds of books spanning the the history of this subjective art over the last 10,000 years. For decades, premonitions bureaus in America and England have recorded hundreds of certified cases of people accurately predicting the future.

Martin F. Jones

When most people think of prophets, they think of biblical figures such as Daniel, the medeval Nostradamus or more recent seers such as Edgar Cayce and Jean Dixon. For a long time I was totally skeptical of such claims to see into the future. Nostradamus' quatrains were somewhat confusing and vague, and Jean Dixon sold out to the tabloids. Many others who claimed to see the future turned out to be complete frauds. Nevertheless, in today's information age, people still want their prophecies just like fast food: on time and exactly how they were ordered up.

Well, it just so happens, believe it or not, that yours truly has indeed seen some prophecies of his own. But first, let me start by reflecting on an event which changed my life forever and was followed by incredible visions of the future, a few of which will be revealed in this very column.

My journey began early on the morning of October 16, 1995. I was traveling to Washington D.C. to attend the Million Man March and was riding in a carpool with four friends. I had felt uneasy all evening and had to be heavily persuaded to attend the march by my significant other at the time. Before departing from Amherst, I told one of the other passengers that I felt "something bad was going to happen."

And something "bad," sure enough did take place. I can recall sitting in the back seat, listening to late night soul music with everyone, except the driver, sound asleep. I was about to close my eyes too, but suddenly, a mysterious force compelled me to stay awake. I did. The next thing I knew the car was driving off the road at 70 mph. I screamed out loud as I realized the driver was also sound asleep.

And I continued to yell until just before impact when he awoke and began to regain control of the car. However, we hit a road sign and the car began to spin dangerously out of control, nearly colliding with the bus we were following to the march. It was against the sound of screeching tires that I closed my eyes and accepted transition into the next world. It was a brief, unnatural, and yet peaceful feeling as I prepared myself to meet my maker.

And then, a miracle occured. The car came to a halt at the side of the road. The rear side window had a head–sized hole in it as my thick afro was littered with tiny cubes of the broken window pane. Everyone else was alright, too. We all got out of the car and surveyed the damage, and one of the guys even talked about getting to the march on time.

We never made it to the march that day, but we did make it back to Amherst in time to watch Farrakhan's speech on television. To this day, I am convinced that we were spared death by the intervention of a higher power. Whatever it was that kept me awake before the crash occured must definitely have a greater life purpose in store for me.

All said, the accident was a lesson. It taught me that if one sees catastrophe approaching, it is destined for him to intervene and warn the world. While I did not prevent the near–fatal crash which disabled our vehicle, I was able to affect the outcome by awakening the driver prior to impact. It was a lesson which I will always remember.

In the movie The Dead Zone, actor Christopher Walken portrays a man who survives a truck accident and begins to see into the future. The film ends with him intervening into one of his visions and changing its outcome. Following the car accident, I too began to experience such visions, and they have been growing ever more numerous and vivid during the past few months since then.

In a December 1995 column, I wrote of a dream in which I traveled through time and saw Massachusetts governor William Weld accepting the 1996 republican nomination for president, with New Jersey governor Christine Whitman nominated as his running mate.

I also saw Whitman and New Jersey senator Bill Bradley engaged in a debate with Bradley being introduced as "Vice– president of the United States." Since then, I have received new visions which confirm that this is a true and accurate picture of our future. I've continued to receive even more messages about the near future. The most recent one involves an imminent shake–up within the GOP ticket in which a damaging scandal surrounding Jack F. Kemp results in his being replaced by Governor Weld as Bob Dole's running mate.

It is not easy carrying such prophecies within one's heart as there is nothing save blind faith upon which they stand. Nevertheless, I am totally convinced that these events will indeed take place. At present, the art of psychic prediction is an enigma beyond our rational understanding, and to that end it does mirror much of the universe itself or even the vast potential of human Intelligence. Now, more than ever, the time has come to reassess our limits and reawaken the prophet within us all.

Martin F. Jones is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Minority or not?

Jew, an African–American and a homosexual were filling out college applications. No, this is not leading into a joke.

The Jew, when asked if he was a minority, put down "yes" because of his religion. The African–American, when asked the same question, put down "yes" because of his race. The homosexual, when asked the same question, put down "yes" because of his sexuality.

The Merriam–Webster Dictionary defines minority as "the smaller in number of two groups" and "a part of a population differing from others (as in race)." So, what does it mean to be a minority? Can anyone be a minority?

"The Merriam–Webster Dictionary defines minority as "the smaller in number of two groups" and "a part of a population differing from others (as in race)." So, what does it mean to be a minority? Can anyone be a minority?"

Christopher Hassett

I met a friend of mine in the dining commons. He was eating with someone I had not met. I thought he was white. He opened his mouth and spoke with an accent easily discernable as Hispanic and told me his name was Pedro. So now he is not white, but Hispanic. Had this same person not spoken with an accent, my perception of him, meaningless as it might be, would have remained the same.

I once worked with a beautiful girl named Allison. Light skin, dark hair, melodious voice. Her full name, as I later found out, was Allison Feinstein. So, now she was not white, but Jewish.

The above mentioned classifications were merely notations in my mind, as they should be. But why should they be there at all? The same friend who introduced me to Pedro also introduced me to Jeff, who in turn introduced me to his boyfriend, Zephyr. So these three people, Pedro, Allison and Jeff, all off whom I thought were white, turned out to be minorities. But they are still white, aren't they, or aren't they?

If you lined up a dozen "white" people, I could tell you if they looked French or Italian or Slavic or German or Irish or Swedish or any other "white" group. If you lined up a dozen Asian people, I could tell you they are Asian. That's about it. Could an Asian person say, "Oh he's Korean, she's Japanese, that kid's from China, oh, and he's Vietnamese?"

In the long run, does this system of classification really matter? Not really. We are all homo sapiens, belonging to the same species. But then what divides us into minorities? Culture does not seem to be the divider. French, Italian, Russian and German culture are all different but are all considered "white."

Oppression is not it either. Women have been oppressed since men existed and the poor have been oppressed since the rich existed, yet they are not minorities. Religion does not seem to be the key either. Jewish people are considered a minority, and in some places being Protestant or Catholic are means of classification into majority and minority. However, Protestant religions number in the dozens, or hundreds.

Sexuality does not seem to be the definer either. There are gays of every race, religion, social class and gender. There are some that would consider the elderly or handicapped classifications for minority. The ambiguity grows.

Bob Dole gaffed when he did not address the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. These days, it seems there is some confusion, at least in my own mind, on what it means to be a person of color. While the NAACP was created to help African–Americans, I hear Hispanics, Middle Easterners and Indians (from India) calling themselves people of color. While we are on the subject, I may not have the best tan in the world, but I am no Snow White. Am I a person of color too? Hey, my editor's cheeks get really red quite often. Red is a color. My Irish editor is a person of color!

In a time when the reaction, funding and votes of many different minority groups steer government campaigns and election promises, what exactly a minority is bears some scrutiny.

Christopher Hassett is a Collegian staff member.

Educational Ignorance

On a sunny day in early September, a student at the University had just taken a seat in his final class of the day. In this class, his professor asked the students to interview each other and, when called upon, act like the person you interviewed.

He embarked on the task with a genuine curiosity about the life of his interviewee. A few minutes into the conversation, she asked him what his country of origin was. The student quickly replied, "I am from India."

"How long have you been in this country," she asked, slowing her voice to help the newly discovered immigrant understand "her" English.

"I've been here since 1979 and have gone to school in this country ever since," he responded in his "American" accent.

Raghuram Vedrevu

One week later, the same student returns home to the dorms from an evening out with his friends. He notices a large congregation in the floor lounge. He decides to go in and take part in the floor's festivities.

Shortly thereafter, a floor resident enters the lounge. Caught up in the jovial atmosphere, he remarks about the river bathers in India's holiest river, the Ganges, while motioning like a monkey.

Stunned by the total lack of respect for his religion, the student quietly stepped out onto the balcony to ponder the events of the night and the first week of the semester.

Why did this happen? What did he do to deserve this? Why were people telling him to take the comment less seriously? Why don't they understand what he is going through? He was just joking. He didn't mean it. Anyway, his best friend is "black," so the comments should be excused because he has made an attempt at friendship with someone who is categorized as something "other" than white.

The frustration. The pain in the realization that the events of the past week do occur on a college campus which boasts (falsely) about its commitment to teaching students about diversity in a vastly multicultural world in which we live.

These are just some of the many questions and feelings hovering over the heads of people of color in this society.

The student quickly realized that (in addition to other factors) society's system of education is to blame for the two incidents (as well as many others like them).

Whether one wants to believe it or not, there is a major educational crisis in this society that fuels lack of understanding between groups of people. From the first steps of a child into a classroom, they are taught to "play the game" which is another way of ordering them to "assimilate."

These educational institutions place too much emphasis on coping with events in day–to–day life, rather than helping people understand why someone acted the way they did.

For example, if a person of color is assaulted in a high school, they are forced to cope with the event rather than, the more productive, understanding the societal causes which lead to the assault.

The only way to enable people to understand each other is to expose them from an early age to "experiential learning" as well as learning from textbooks. The transition from all learning based on textbooks to a 50–50 split with experiential learning has been attempted on this campus.

Recently, students enrolled in the International Program in Thatcher Residence Hall mounted a petition drive to restructure a mandatory class for those in the program.

The students contended that the curriculum lacked a social and cultural interaction.

A resident and participant in the program said the students believed that they could offer more to each other from their life's experiences and multicultural backgrounds.

"We have a lot more to gain this way. They [the students] felt that the only good learning is book learning," the resident said, who believes a combination of "book learning" and experiential learning will benefit society.

The idea of experiential learning is not a new one. In 1967, R.D. Laing wrote the Politics of Experience in which he detailed how an individual's life experiences can help people from completely different parts of the world relate to each other.

An expansion from all book learning to include experiential learning will be the first step for the educational system in this society to foster a real understanding between people and better prepare them to live in a "global village."

In the end, experiences are what makes us who we are, to disregard them in education and daily life is to deny ourselves.

Raghuram Vadarevu is a Collegian staff member.

Have something to say?

Write a letter to the editor. Just make sure it's no longer than 400 words typed and includes names (first and last) and phone numbers for verification purposes. Have a nice day!

Out of this world

As you may have heard, scientists have discovered evidence of life on Mars.

Rather than tentacled, slimy Independence Day–style aliens, these "new" forms of life are slug–shaped and look about as threatening as Bambi. And oh yeah — they were alive billions of years ago, so we don't have to worry about any alien invasions.

And since scientists have discovered that at one point in the history of the universe, Mars was capable of supporting life, I propose that we pack our bags and shuttle over to Mars to colonize the planet. After all, there isn't much left here on Earth for us to discover and it's getting kind of crowded. There looks to be plenty of room on Mars.

Seema Gangatirkar

Of course it would take a lot of work. There's that slight problem of lack of oxygen and water on Mars, not to mention that gravity would also be a little tricky to manage. But that's nothing — give our scientists a few years and plenty of funding and Mars can be turned into an inhabitable place. Pretty soon, it will be the new place to go on your honeymoon or rather than jaunting off to Europe after graduating from college, you can make a trip to Mars, via the moon of course.

Just think of all the possibilities. We could use the new colonies to supply us with all the materials we need that are not available on the homeworld. And the more we spread out and encounter other forms of life, we can impose our wills and philosophies on those in the way.

Sound familiar? It should. It's called Manifest Destiny and it was the driving motivation for expansion during the 1800's in North America and other parts of the world.

In the past, humans have been pretty cavalier about running over anyone whose ideas have been remotely different or who operate their civilizations on a level that did not mesh with a particular philosophy.

The New World opened up all sorts of possibilities. For the discoverers, finding the Americas was like discovering the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. The wealth of resources in this country and the opportunities were endless. And unfortunately, greed conquered any semblance of compassion for others.

In European eyes, the Native Americans were not "civilized." And the fact that the Native Americans practiced their own religions was a thorn in the Europeans' backside. These two reasons provided enough rationale to destroy entire tribes and severely weaken others. Entire cultures — such as the thriving Aztec empire — were wiped out.

Yet there were few who questioned what was happening to the peoples native to the Americas. It's only now in this era of political correctness that people even consider what was done to the Native Americans when Columbus and his friends overran the New World. And still, there is no agreement on how to assuage the guilt for destroying other human beings on the basis that they had something that the rest of the world wanted.

Have our attitudes really changed in the 500 years since the discovery of the Americas?

If there was indeed life on Mars or anywhere else in the galaxy, would we show it respect or would we promptly annex the planet and its inhabitants as an expression of imperialistic attitude?

And even if we didn't feel the need to make Mars the 51st state, would we get along with Martians?

After all, there would be a new language to decipher, new foods to digest, new cultures to absorb. It would lend a whole new meaning to the expression "global community."

Perhaps it's good a thing that we haven't discovered who else is out there.

As it is, we can't even get along with each other, let alone aliens with different customs. And there are times when openess between different cultures is blocked and minds and eyes are closed. If we can't learn to communicate effectively with each other, there is no way that we would be able to express ourselves to the aliens. If anything, I can envision the aliens throwing up their arms and leaving in disgust.

The lack of communication, understanding and compassion is a sad comment on our society. While we're far from being the happy, unconflicted people envisioned in Gene Roddenberry's "Star Trek" universe, we've come a long way. Acknowledging what happened in the past can only help with what is to come in the future.

History has taught us valuable lessons. Let's only hope that the lesson was learned.

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian columnist.

Diagnosing the e–mail disease

Hello, my name is Eliza Berkowitz and I am an e–mail addict. My addiction started one year ago when I first got an e–mail account here at UMass. I had never used e–mail before and I thought that e–mail would be a good way to keep my phone bills down and still stay in touch with my friends who were also away at school. Boy, what a mistake. If I'd have known then what I know now, things would have been different. My grades suffered. My social life suffered. Even my eyesight suffered from the countless hours spent squinting at my roommate's computer screen (in the dark) while I should have been sleeping.

Eliza Berkowitz

Trust me, e–mail addiction is not normal. It sneaks up on you. Before you know it, you're caught in a downward spiral of events that could have been avoided, if only you never made the hike to Lederle to get "on–line."

E–mail addiction happened to me and it could happen to you. Seek professional help if you notice any of the following symptoms in yourself or anyone you know.

You give your friends your password, so that they can check your e–mail when you're not around. My friend, who lived down the hall from me last year, would check my e– mail for me a million times a day. You know you're in trouble when you come back from using the ladies' room and your friend says, "You got two new messages while you were gone."

You make excuses for your habit. I would leave parties to check my e–mail. I'd say that I was expecting an important phone call or that I had to wake up early. In actuality, the only thing I ever had to wake up early to do was get on the computer.

You get into fights with your friends over e–mail. Once, my friend was typing a paper and I decided that her paper could wait and that I needed to do e–mail right then and there. She didn't agree, so I beat her senseless until she did.

You start hallucinating from lack of sleep. After pulling all–nighters every night in the month of November, simply to write letters to people I didn't really like, I started seeing this life–sized penguin all over campus. First I saw him at the pottery wheel in the craft center, making a beautiful vase. Then I saw him in line in the Campus store, buying condoms. Finally, I saw him driving a PVTA bus. Scary, huh?

You'll do anything to get more mail. My friend put her name on an Indigo girls mailing list. She got thirty messages a day from other Indigo Girls fans, but never read any of them. I started corresponding with my friend's parents. Hey, they always wrote back. Besides, we were just happy that we always had new messages.

You start doing favors for people who let you use their computers. My friend would give people cookies in exchange for computer time. Eventually, the cookies weren't enough and she was forced to give sexual favors in addition to cookies. It was very sad.

E–mail starts taking precedence over your classwork. If only I had a dollar for every time I said, "Let me just check my e–mail and then I'll start my work."

You start becoming e–mail buddies with people you don't even like. I rekindled friendships with many people I had lost touch with and many people I didn't even like, just so that I would get more messages. You can imagine how interesting those messages were.

If you notice any of these symptoms in yourself, or your friends, I urge you to seek professional help immediately. E– mail addiction is not a joke. Thankfully, I have identified my problem and I am on the road to recovery. With support from my family and friends, I will get better. In the meantime, I have to go, um ... I'm expecting an important phone call.

Eliza Berkewitz is a Collegian columnist.

What happened to manners?

Every morning my roommates and I herd onto the bus to class. I think they manufacture the PVTA buses at the same factory where they make clown cars because any normal transportation service would refuse to pick up any more passengers, but the PVTA always welcomes more.

Suzanne Barber

For my roommates and me, a packed bus means a captive audience. "Hey Missy, aren't you glad you used Dial? Don't you wish everybody did?" No one ever laughs at that. Once I risked life and limb by standing well beyond the white line at the front of the bus. Sometimes, when I am on the bus I think it's funny to say, "Hey ever see Speed?" That day, it really wasn't a funny thing to say because I wasn't aware that Skippy Handelman was driving the bus and he freaked out: "What do you mean?" That's when the sagging bus careened into the curb and I realized why I should be behind the white line.

Last Tuesday, with great determination I shimmied my way through the crowd on the bus and managed to find a seat. Little did I know, I had just boarded the bus bound for Rudeville.

It was pouring rain that day, I was already a little cranky. My crankiness turned to fury when an elderly woman climbed aboard the magic bus and couldn't find a seat. There were so many people pinned against me that it took awhile for me to vacate my seat for her. In the meantime, though, other able–bodied passengers just sat and watched her struggle. Where are people's manners? Is it really worth sitting for the two minute bus ride to campus? I'm all for women's lib and everything but I appreciate gentlemen and think that women would too.

It's not even a matter of men respecting women or whatever. The women on the bus were just as lazy. It's a matter of respect for older adults. It's just plain indecent for physically capable young students to sit while an older person stands. I was embarrassed by the behavior of the spoiled students on the bus that day.

When one of my friends met my 10-year-old cousin, Patrick, she was impressed that he took her hand and said, "Nice to meet you." She thought it was cute that he took his hat off when he greeted my grandmother. I am not saying that Patrick isn't extraordinary — he is — but he shouldn't be. Manners should be standard operating procedure. A polite little boy should not be considered exceptional.

It may not be the norm for men to take their hats off for women anymore. I am not suggesting that the custom come back into society, but our grandmothers are used to that respect and they deserve it. So next time you visit your grandmother or even meet an elderly woman, take off your hats (especially if it's one of those "Cocks" hats or a UMass cap with the "M" cleverly taken out).

So, to the students riding the bus last Tuesday morning, if you think that having bills in your name and maybe a lease for an apartment makes you an adult, you are as naive as you are rude. You're still a punk kid who won't get off his fat ass for a lady.

Bottom line, get some class. Offer your seat to an older woman standing on the bus. If you think you're tough and strong, prove it by getting up and standing on your own two feet. Being polite will make you appear taller, more gallant and brawny. If you sit while someone's grandmother clings for dear life on the bus hoping that Skippy's sober, that makes you a sloth and you should slither to class instead of taking the bus.

Suzanne Barber is a Collegian staff member.

Attention Collegian columnists.

Mug shots for editorial columns will be taken on Monday, Sept. 30. That's next Monday if you're not mathematically inclined. Please wear your Sunday best and don't forget to bring a smile!

THE SKETCH I DREW FOR CLINTON DURING HIS 15-MINUTE CHAT WITH HELMUT KOHL.

Letters to the Editor

Molitor insults welfare recipients

To the editor:

This letter is in response to Erik Molitor's Sept. 18 editorial entitled "Making Welfare Work." We understand that the welfare system has not been conducted or supported correctly in the past. It is our consensus that you have no compassion for the people on welfare whom are not abusing the system. In our opinion, instead of trying to make the welfare system work, you spend the majority of the article criticizing everyone on welfare.

Anticipating that everyone will have an equal opportunity to get a job is highly unlikely. It is condescending to assume that "anyone who is able to drag their lazy butt to a welfare office certainly has the ability to sweep up a city street or lend a hand building and repairing housing in poor neighborhoods." Your degrading tone continues when you refer to welfare recipients as lacking character. Just because people may not have worked hard in their lives does not mean they do not have character. What about those who have enough money and do not need to work? Do they also lack character? Financial status does not depict what kind of a person one is. You need to realize that building character consists of more than just one quality. It refers to personality traits, goals, and past experiences.

Welfare recipients are simply being stereotyped as lesser human beings. It is not fair to assume that all people on welfare are "getting a welfare check and spending it on various substances, getting high, getting knocked up every time they aren't already pregnant and raising kids that will grow up to be trash just like them." Your approach to making the welfare system work is very insulting and negative. Identifying these problems in the welfare system as a part of the system and not as a whole, will help to avoid stereotyping.

It is important and clear to us that you are trying to recognize the problems of the welfare system, but you approached the situation in an irrational way. We would prefer to have seen more ideas on making the welfare system work instead of criticizing those on welfare.

Leah Orfanos
Holly Boatwright
Amherst

Attack on FSO unwarranted

To the editor:

This is in reference to an article by Shyamala Ivatury and Hussein Ibish (Incivility Particularly Odious) dated Sept. 18. While most of the article dealt with a Task Force report on Barbara Burn, head of the International Programs Office, I think the authors hurriedly generalized their impressions about Ms. Burn to include the entire staff of the Office of Foreign Students and Scholars. I chose not to agree or disagree with the authors on their opinions about Ms. Burn, however, I feel a claim such as "dozens of bloodcurdling accounts of abuse of students by FSO staff" calls for a difference of opinion.

In my five and a half years of graduate study here, my experience with FSO staff has been nothing short of exemplary comfort. I have always been treated with a smile by FSO officers and I have always wondered at their inclination to assist expeditiously. In my long stay here, surprisingly I have only heard everything contrary to the "bloodcurdling accounts of abuse" from my colleagues and friends.

One recent incident should provide a good example. A fresh Indian graduate student had the misfortune of catching malarial fever the day after he landed at UMass! In his own words, he was treated with "utmost care and genuine concern" by one of the FSO advisors. The FSO advisor personally drove the student to UHS, sought immediate medical attention, bought prescriptions and even made arrangements to allow the student to talk to his parents back home. The student feels that he was really fortunate to find a caring person during his hour of extreme distress.

So, it makes me wonder if the authors got it all mixed up. The depiction of the FSO as an insensitive group of individuals because they are part of the IPO is a brazen display of abuse of generality. I hope the authors will be more sensitive and open–minded in their future pursuits of multiculturism for the campus.

Rajeev Koodli
Amherst

Stop the poster police

To the editor:

Most college students missed the August 23 Amherst Bulletin, where local video–producer Margot Parrot editorialized how plans to gradually restrict postering in the downtown to small kiosks (to be constructed over a span of years) would have an adverse impact upon our diverse, student–enriched, information–hungry community. Unrestricted postering was part of the charm of Amherst, just like free newspapers, weekly–changing banners and open–access television. The recent announcement of a new display kiosk and accompanying restrictions, she argued, was done as a "while–the–students–are–away" kind of change — just like earlier attempts to stifle posters in summer 1993.

I really resonated to her "herstorical" point, because 1993 is when I took notice of this issue — from reading about proposals for the Gestapo–like "Poster Police" to go around and rip down posters. I am an avid 50–year–old Hardcore and Punk fan, and I like my music live. Posters equal vitamins to me, an essential source of free and low–cost alternative music events at UMass and Hampshire College. The town paper isn't receptive, and non–student radio is dominated by the club scene. Alternative music has to find its own voice: word of mouth and posters.

During the past three years, poster constriction has starved me for music, especially the dorm shows. There seem to be informal "town flyer fuzz" who rip down every poster in sight (not just the out–dated ones), and in the fall of 1995 the PVTA set up its own "goon squads" to strip the bus stops several times each week. Because of disappearing posters I've missed Doc Hopper, hardcore bands from Virginia and Washington state, and probably much more.

After I started noticing the new, untimely removal of posters in fall 1995, I started attending meetings of the relevant town committee. The then–chairman denied me a seat on the kiosk–planning subcommittee and did not have the courtesy to show me the August 1995 "Report on Postering" issued by the Town Commercial Relations Committee and published by the town Planning Office. Not until August 1996 did I get to read that report with its pseudo–plans and over–controls.

I doubt that the majority of students in Amherst's three colleges would appreciate any gradual or sudden decrease in the availability of posters in the heart of town. And I urge "the principal posterers and consumers" to find out for themselves about Amherst's plans for display kiosks and accompanying controls — so that summer 1997 will not mark the death of downtown posters. The banner by the Common has survived several onslaughts, and community TV is expanding — so it's sad and mal–nourishing to think that the vital information artery of postering could disappear or become severely restricted. Posters are part of the vitality of this charming college town. Let posters be seen and heard!

John Furbish
Amherst

Olver does good

To the editor:

Does the fact that our congressman, John Olver, chooses rock–climbing for his recreation help to explain his relentlessness in fighting to protect environmental and other hard–won and essential laws from attack?

Without a subscription to the Congressional Record it is hard to keep track of all that Rep. Olver does in Washington. I do know that he serves on the House Science and Technology Committee, where his Ph.D. helps him to puncture the assertions of witnesses who argue that we don't need to worry about climate change or about conserving energy.

Sometimes I can catch him on C–SPAN, speaking on the House floor in support of crucial issues. (His rating with the League of Conservation voters is 100 percent.) In recent speeches he supported civilian R&D to ensure that America remains competitive in the global economy (May 29), the participation of the EPA in studies of climate change (May 30), the Conte Fish and Wildlife Refuge along the Connecticut River (June 11), restoring the threatened funding for the Park Service's National Recreation and Preservation Program (June 19) and the Studd's Amendment to assure that the label on tuna cans as "dolphin safe" means what it says (July 31).

How fortunate we are to have Congressman Olver fighting for us, beating back the attempts to destroy the laws that protect our health, our jobs, our schools and our environment.

Ellen Knox
Amherst

Arts & Living

Doyle Bramhall goes ad nauseam

Sugar Plant sweet music to the ears, Groovasaurus falls flat

DOYLE BRAMHALL
DB II
Geffen

There is a rumor that Doyle Bramhall, a guitarist from Stevie Ray Vaughn's Double Trouble band, has come out with an exciting new solo album. There is also a rumor that a huge, hairy man–beast roams the wilds of British Columbia and answers to the name Sasquatch. The moral of this ridiculous comparison? Camp fearlessly in Canada and don't buy Bramhall's new album.

"Song From the Grave," the first track, is a deceptive start to the album. It is a passable song, with a typical bluesy–rock feel to it that sounds fine and doesn't irritate. The next twelve tracks, however, heartily make up for this initial lapse.

The titles are perhaps the most accurate preview of what is in store for the hapless listener: "True Emotion," "Bleeding From a Scratch," "Jealous Sky," "Close to Me," and "The Reason I Live." The specific lyrics don't even need to be mentioned here (go ahead a take a wild stab at it) but the singing does. Besides the fact that Doyle has nothing to say which five million love–scorned songwriters haven't already said, it sounds like he's close enough to gargle with the microphone.

While "He Stole Our Love Away" deserves special recognition for its spacey "whoop" noises, wretched lamenting lyrics, and Doyle's remarkable all–alone–in–the– shower falsetto, the whole album is an experiment in how to make boring, bad music. Mix formulaic blues progressions, melodramatic lyrics, weak vocals, backup singers droning "just stay a while" ad nauseum, and you have DBII, straight from Geffen's studios to your trash can. D– (Panagiotis Gianopoulos)

SUGAR PLANT
Cage of the Sun EP
Pop Narcotic

Imagine a jar of warm honey poised at your lips. You dip your head back, the jar tilts, and the honey slides into your mouth. Your eyes shut and the honey, soothing, languid, flows sweet and uninterrupted. You have just imagined what it's like to listen to Sugar Plant's EP Cage of the Sun.

Everything about Cage of the Sun is soft and smooth and intoxicating. The vocals float ethereally, the lead guitar sings with a distorted Velvet Underground hallucinative quality, the rhythm guitar chants mellow chord over and over... even the masked bass line prompts a sluggish heartbeat.

From the first track, the delirious "Purple Bike," Sugar Plant is determined to aurally hypnotize you. The title track,"Cage of the Sun" picks up where "Purple Bike" stops, with a persistent catchy groove that hooks you and drags you around the house humming it. By the time the last song rolls around (right after the utterly melancholy "Turn It On") there is no doubt left about the affecting appeal of the album.

And while each song remains distinct, the album blends into a wave of seductive noise. For an impossible task, try to stop the album once you've begun to listen. Okay, try again. Give up?

Sugar Plant has easily avoided the pitfalls of sleep–inducing pop and crafted instead a mesmerizing album that keeps the listener dreamily engaged and aurally ecstatic. A (P.G.)

FACE TO FACE
Face To Face
A & M Records

For quite some time now, it seems Face To Face has been tring to climb that punk rock corporate ladder to fame and fortune. After the success of their first album, originally on Dr. Strange records and then re–released on Fat Wreck Chords, they made the move to A&M. Their latest self–titled album is their third release on the major label and is a major improvement over last year's disappointing Big Choice. This time around Face to Face is equipped with a new bassist and has constructed an incredibly decent new record.

Frontman Trevor Keith has written 12 new songs and for the first time, the band has not included their previous hit "Disconnected," which has appeared on all their previous albums. The band is however still chanting about familiar things such as standing up for yourself and making the right choices in your life. The albums most impressive song tjtled Complicated contains lyrics like, "you can't have what you wanted, so make up your mind and come to your senses."

This album does not live up to their debut, but it is an impressive record nonetheless. The songs are well constructed and the messages are important, but overall this album doesn't contain the fire of their first release Don't Turn Away. The best thing for Face to Face is to stop playing shows like the warp tour and try to get back to the roots they left behind. B– (Adam Levine)

GROOVASAURUS
Groovasaurus
Pea Patch

It is almost sad that 1995's winner for Outstanding Local Rock Band in the Boston Music Awards was Groovasaurus. It is even sadder with the fact that they are probably the best out of the other nominees (Tracy Bonham, Machinery Hall et al). This album is complete alternative–rock, the kind that kids just coming of adolescent age may find cool because they were too young to remember when Pearl Jam and Nirvana first broke big five years ago.

Some songs on the album present a Led Zeppelin–esque taste to it which, further developed and mixed in with some sort of individual sound (which Groovasaurus also still has to work at getting) can lead to greater, more adventurous music. The middle song of the disc, "There," is the best song and the one that sticks out

Turn to TRAX page 8

Groovasaurus

COURTESY PEA PATCH

Cultural identity subject of play

By Chanel Dubofsky
Collegian Correspondent

On Sept. 20, the New World Theater began its 1996–7 season with a unique production — a one woman show/monologue entitled Milk of Amnesia.

The show features the interesting perspective of a Cuban–American woman suffering from amnesia due to a loss of cultural identity.

The theater was completely dark and people were stumbling over one another, trying to get to their seats without the assistance of flashlights. A tiny sphere of light peeped out from behind the curtain and on the stage there was a white kitchen chair and nearby a cluster of balloons. The audience chatters with anticipation. Suddenly from the darkness, a clear, buttery voice made everyone jump. The voice came from above, resounding throughout the theater.

Carmelita Tropicana came to the United States as a young girl. Her first experience with amnesia occurred when she accidently spilled her milk during grade school, due to her hesitance to assimilate to American culture.

The perspective from which the plot unfolds is exclusively Tropicana's. All the other characters are revealed from Tropicana's point of view and contain unique aspects of her personality. These characters include a male cab driver who tries a number of hilarious stunts to jog her memory, a pig about to be slaughtered and a horse who becomes the property of a colonial conquistador.

In order to help her memory return, Tropicana takes a trip back to her native Cuba and spends several weeks there visiting the house in which she grew up — now a business. In this part of the play, she narrated slides with her own brand of vivid, exaggerated humor, managing to strike in the audience not only an opportunity to laugh, but also to re– examine themselves as Americans and as people.

Tropicana also related the confusion she experiences from feeling like a "tourist in my own country." She became frustrated that she was getting no closer to regaining her memory. Throughout her adventures in her native land, Carmelita saw Cuba "through American eyes" and slowly began to recall things in bits and pieces, while realizing

Turn to PLAY page 7

COURTESY PINE ARTS CENTER

Carmelita Tropicana in one-woman play, Milk of Amnesia.

Sinclair & Shepp mix poetry, melodies

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

How long have poetry and jazz been lovers? Was it in the '50s when "beat" writers like Jack Kerouac and Gregory Corso read their revolutionary works with the backup of professional jazz artists like Al Cohn? Does it have a genesis even before that great period of literature and jazz that was the '50s? Regardless, they came together, like Romeo and Juliet, they're eternally linked.

Another chapter in this long saga of literature and music together in overall celebration of the arts will happen Wednesday night at the Iron Horse when poet John Sinclair meets with saxophonist, composer and University of Massachusetts professor Archie Shepp.

Sinclair has been a prominent face in news, poetry and music for more than three decades. In the late 1960s, he was a member of the White Panther party, who were for the legalization of marijuana. On Saturday afternoon he spoke at the Massachusetts Cannabis Reform Coalition's rally on Boston Common, along with the ever–illustrious UMass comparative literature professor David Lenson.

In 1969, Sinclair was arrested for possession of two joints and was sentenced to ten years in a Michigan state prison, but after 28 months, he was released, thanks to a campaign to free him led by drinking and smoking buddies like John Lennon, Yoko Ono and Stevie Wonder.

After his release he held the most charming of occupations: rock'n'roll band manager. He led the Detroit pre–punk band MC5 to prominence as they went on to become post–mortem legends. Sinclair has since been a music history teacher, journalist, radio DJ and recording poet. Through it all he has always helped the fight to, as Peter Tosh sings, "legalize it."

This man of many jobs' poetry deals with evoking the spirits of jazz deities like John Coltrane and Thelonious Monk as well as his late friend Lennon. "Oh, sweet giant of song/with heart of huge dimension," he writes of the Beatle, continuing on with love and tribute in the poem "friday the 13th." Coltrane is possible the largest inspira-

Turn to POETRY page 8

UMass' student athletic booster club, the Minutemaniacs, is looking for new recruits for the '96-'97 season!

UMass Athletic FUND MEMBER

New Member Registration

Applications will be accepted at the conclusion of UMass Women's Volleyball vs. Duquesne

$25.00 to Join!
New Members Will Be Picked By A Lottery System

September 28, 1995
7:00 P.M.
Mullins Center

Minutemaniac* Benefits:
- Advance Ticket Pickup
- Minutemaniac T-Shirt
- Game Receptions
- "The Maniac" Newsletter
- Membership Card

Look for an entry form in the September 26 issue of: The UMass Daily Collegian

Minutemaniacs Minutemaniacs

© 1996 AT&T

Studying in the USA

Sure, it's tough. That's why every International Student needs this.

NAFSA'S International Student Handbook
A GUIDE TO UNIVERSITY STUDY IN THE U.S.A.

It's free when you sign with AT&T. Call 1 800 533-6198.

NAFSA AT&T

Interested in serving your community?

THE JEWISH AFFAIRS EDITOR POSITION AT THE COLLEGIAN IS VACANT. THIS DIVERSITY DESK NEEDS YOUR HELP TO CONTINUE QUALITY COVERAGE OF JEWISH LIFE AT UMASS AND BEYOND.

TO GET INVOLVED, CONTACT CHRIS CONNER, MANAGING EDITOR, AT 545-0719 OR VISIT THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE AT 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT.

THE DEADLINE FOR APPLICATION IS FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, AT 5 P.M.

Visit
Israel
during Winter Break for $500

Be a part of a UMass Group as we join over 500 College Students in ❖Hiking In the Mountains❖
❖Bicycling through the Judean Hills❖
❖Working on Archaeological Digs❖ ❖Dining in the Moonlight and❖ ❖Dancing Through the Night❖

INFORMATIONAL MEETING
Thursday, September 26, 7pm
UMass Hillel House / 388 N. Pleasant St.

❖❖20 UMass students will receive a special UMass-Grinspoon subsidy, making the trip total $500.
❖❖20 more will receive a United Jewish Appeal subsidy and pay $1400 (regular cost is $2100)

FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL 413 - 549 - 1710

Artist returns after 11–year hiatus

By Kira L. Billik
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Eric Johnson is a first-rate perfectionist.

The 41-year-old Austin, Texas, guitarist is so picky that he'll run a song ragged until it either becomes something amazing or doesn't become anything at all.This quest for perfection means records take awhile. Quite awhile. Halley's Comet comes around more often. One guitar magazine recently gave him its good-natured "We'll Wait As Long As It Takes" award, because it's been SIX YEARS since he put out his last record, Ah Via Musicom, which contained the Grammy-winning hit single, "Cliffs of Dover."

The wait is over. Johnson finally has allowed his third album in 11 years, Venus Isle, to see the light of day, and for guitar-heads everywhere, it's worth the wait. Its five vocal tracks and six instrumentals are loaded with Johnson's ethereal, one-of-a-kind sound.

"It's definitely important to think about people that are waiting and be respectful of that," Johnson said in a telephone interview from Austin. "Sometimes it's a fine line, balancing that with doing (the) absolute best you can at that particular time, but there is a balance there."

He started Venus Isle in 1992, but threw out the work because he thought he was repeating himself.

"I had to kind of ... metamorphose a little bit," the soft-spoken, intense guitarist said. "It was important to me to try to just shift gears a little bit with the way I was playing."

That included orchestrating mixes so the guitar wound up being a bit lower, a bit softer.

"I wanted to make a musical record instead of a guitar record," he said. "That was a way that I could personally impart something to somebody that they can enjoy musically, rather than going, 'Check out my guitar playing.' ... In the past, I haven't really practiced that — it's just been let's go crazy and reckless abandon."

Johnson's playing changed in more ways than one. He began to experience tinnitus, the hearing disorder that's made The Who's Pete Townshend nearly deaf. Because of the ringing in his ears, he turned everything down in the studio and his condition has improved, although he continues to be careful.

"I still have it a little bit, though, but it's enough to scare you for life," he said. "I used to play extremely loud, just because of the thrill of it — it's very exhilarating. (But) I just really want to keep it down — I never want to play that loud again."

His notes almost sound like bubbles; they're round and fat, blending one into the other with no audible seams. He spoke of his picking technique, which he borrowed from steel guitar players.

"I try not to have too much pick sound," he said. "The tone really does mostly come from the way you pick and the way you fret the note. The most important part is that beginning where the sound is initiated.

Steel guitar players, he said, "actually pick up and away from the instrument, rather than picking sideways. It gives you a smooth bounce of the tone."

One instrumental, "S.R.V.," pays tribute to Stevie Ray Vaughan; it's uncanny how Johnson mimics Vaughan's tone while keeping his own intact.

"I was trying to honor it," he said. "I didn't want to duplicate it, but I wanted to have a certain percentage of that tone put in with my normal sound."

Another, "Song for Lynette," features Johnson on what he admits is his favorite instrument — the piano.

"I started on piano, I've always enjoyed piano," he said. "Other than listening to all the musicians I admire, the way that I feed my guitar thing is to play piano."

Johnson longs to be on a par with his heroes, even though most critics say he's already there and then some.

"There're so many musicians I admire. I just wish I could find a little bit of what they have," he said. "I just get confused — should I just be what I am or should I keep trying to strive for something I'm not, even though it takes a long time? And I don't really know what the most healthy, wholesome thing to do is."

Next month, Johnson starts the "G3" tour with space-age experimenter Steve Vai, and the elegant blues-rocker Joe Satriani.

Listeners may find Johnson, by necessity, playing a bit softer than the others, though. And he may look a little funny.

"If it's really loud, I'll just wear ear plugs," he said, then added with a chuckle, "earmuffs, and a scarf around my head. I'll tie a parka up over my chin."

Write for Arts so you can sit in class and listen to people make fun of your musical tastes, send you hate mail and threaten to kill you ... sounds like a lot of fun, huh.

MUSIC · SOFTWARE · MOVIES · BOOKS
MEDIA PLAY
MORE CHOICE. LESS PRICE. EVERY DAY.

BOOKS
35% off New York Times HC Bestsellers
DESPERATION Stephen King Viking - HC List 27.95 — NEW! 18.17 35% OFF
THE REGULATORS Richard Bachman Dutton - HC List 24.95 — NEW! 16.22 35% OFF
THE GREEN MILE BOXED SET Stephen King Signet - Set List 18.84 — NEW! 12.25 35% OFF

MUSIC
SHERYL CROW Sheryl Crow — NEW! 11.99
WEEZER Pinkerton — NEW! 11.99
ELTON JOHN Love Songs — NEW! 11.99
SOUL FOR REAL For Life — NEW! 11.99
SET IT OFF Soundtrack — NEW! 12.99

MOVIES
FREE X-Files pin with the purchase of any X-Files Video. While supplies last.
THE X-FILES Wave 2 3-pk. Fox — NEW! 24.99
THE X-FILES Wave 1 3-pk. Fox — NEW! 24.99 27.98
SEVEN Turner — 12.99
THE USUAL SUSPECTS PolyGram — WINNER
THE FIRM MAG — NEW! 12.99 14.98
CHOOSE FROM: Abs, Hips, Thighs Sculpting; Complete Aerobic Weight Training; Time Crunch Workout for Tough Aerobic Abs

Hampshire Mall, Hadley, (413) 582-0410•Newington Commons Plaza, Newington, (860) 594-7272
Stateline Plaza, Enfield, (860) 253-4777•Crossroads Buckland Hills, Manchester, (860) 648-5871
STORE HOURS ENFIELD: MON-SAT: 8AM-10PM, SUN: 10AM-7PM
ALL OTHER STORES: MON-SAT: 10AM-10PM, SUN: 10AM-6PM

Playwright discusses race, gender

By Ali Pearson
Collegian Correspondent

SOUTH HADLEY — On Friday, Sept. 20, Anna Revine Smith took the stage in Chapin Auditorium at Mount Holyoke College in front of a hushed and excited audience. Outside in the cold, stood a large crowd who could not get into the full auditorium.

The actress, playwright, author, feminist, professor and warrior for racial equality smiled at her audience and began to speak. About two minutes into her speech she cleared her throat and said, "Do I sound like Bob Dole?" — for the first and certainly not last time during the evening she had the audience laughing.

The evening was not all laughter. Through a brief synopsis of her life, various pieces of her work, and a question/answer session, Smith sent her message to the 1,200 plus audience members.

Her message is not a new one — to bring together races and genders in a peaceful society. However, her means of expression is unique and judging by the standing ovation at the end of her program — an effective one.

The Stanford theater professor and winner of the McArthur Genius Award told her audience the pain of racial and gender strife through a variety of voices that came from actual people whom Smith had spoken to throughout her life. She titled this program "Snapshots: Glimpses of America in Change."

The snapshots were not pictures, but words showed America's troubles through real people and words.

The main theme running through her works is broken sentences.

"Amen, Amen for broken sentences," she said about the pattern of her work. "We all live in humaness. We speak without beginnings, middles and ends. Broken sentences show character. If you speak in full, complete, absolutely perfect sentences then you are not really speaking — you are acting."

The works she performed certainly contained the aspect of broken phrases. Her first poem was a medley of incomplete thoughts, strings of unconnected words, and space fillers that sought to explain one man's feeling about being black and how difficult the concept is to explain. Smith's colorful language and sporadic movements had the audience laughing once more.

Smith's acting talent was apparent as she moved from light humor to dark reality by performing monologues spoken by women in a Baltimore prison. The monologues have not yet been published or performed in a play format, and the material was harshly raw in its honesty.

The first was titled "Wicked Women" and was told in the voice of a prisoner disillusioned by the women in prison. There were humorous aspects to the speech, but the mood of the evening had taken a sharp turn.

In the second monologue from that series, Smith spoke in the voice of a quiet, broken woman who had seen her daughter brutally murdered by her second husband. She is in prison for covering up the murder. She spoke in a sad regretful tone and her story unraveled the horror of domestic violence. The audience was silent but for the sniffles of the people touched by the story.

Smith switched from happy to angry to sad in a span of minutes, showing her audience the different shades of feeling about today's society and its problems.

The question and answer session came at the end of her performances and allowed Smith to connect with the admiring audience. She spoke about her goals in regards to gender and racial equality citing her final goal as making a bridge between all walks of life in order to communicate better.

How do we do this? Smith did not have all the answers. She ended by telling a story about a teaching experience at Stanford. She taught a theater class that involved acting out different genders and races. Smith assumed the gender aspect would be the most difficult because it involved confronting sexuality. However, her class was most concerned with race — they were scared to cross the race boundary. Smith cited the reason for this problem as fear of the unknown. She says that this country — even this world — is too concerned with political correctness and fear of trampling on something we are not sure of.

"The only way we can fully understand the problems and overcome them is by standing in someone else's shoes. We can only have a bridge if we build steady relationships and we have to be patient because it is going to take a long time."

■ play

continued from page 6

that everyone is connected. Her memory is finally reconciled when she learns to drink "two kinds of milk," namely the sweet, condensed milk of Cuba and the bottled milk of the United States.

"Is Cuba my wife and America my lover?" she pondered at the end of the show. She had learned to make it such that she can both remember her past, and appreciate her future as a strong, Cuban–American woman.

The lights came on, making the audience wince and rub their eyes. The theater drained itself of its contents — a mass of people chattering amongst themselves, excited about the unique and absorbing show. The general consensus seemed to be that Milk of Amnesia was a great start to the New WORLD Theater's season and left its audience anticipating future productions of an equally impressive caliber.

SOME THINGS ARE MEANT TO BE CLOSED
YOUR MIND ISN'T ONE OF THEM.
For disasters, MDA has shown how valuable people with disabilities are to society. We believe talents, ability and desire are more important than strength of a person's muscles. The one barrier these people can't overcome is a closed mind. Keep yours open.
1-800-572-1717 MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY ASSOCIATION

SLOWER TRAFFIC KEEP RIGHT

Your support keeps lifesaving research in the fast lane.
MDA
Muscular Dystrophy Association
1-800-572-1717

A+
...for the teacher.

OUTSTANDING TEACHER AWARD

COLLEGE OF FOOD AND NATURAL RESOURCES
students and faculty invited to submit nominations for the 1996-97 award

NOMINATION FORMS ARE AVAILABLE IN ROOM 113 STOCKBRIDGE HALL OR IN DEPARTMENTAL OFFICES

Faculty in the following majors are eligible for nomination:

Animal Science • Building Materials and Wood Technology
Apparel Marketing • Entomology • Environmental Design
Environmental Sciences • Family and Consumer Sciences • Food Science
Forestry • Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration
Landscape Architecture • Natural Resource Studies
Plant and Soil Sciences • Plant Pathology • Resource Economics
Sport Management • Wildlife and Fisheries Conservation

Connick Jr. latest still funk influenced

By David Bauder
Associated Press

ALBANY, N.Y. — Don't get in the way of Harry Connick Jr. once he gets an idea in his head.

Like the star turtle, an impossibly goofy story Connick weaves throughout his new album about an extraterrestrial reptile he takes on a tour of New Orleans. Programming keys on compact disc players are born to eradicate such efforts.

But it's going to take more than the boos of a few disgruntled Big Band fans to get the funk out of Connick's music.

When Connick switched gears from Big Band music to New Orleans funk on a 1994 album and subsequent tour, he and his band watched from the stage as some audience members angrily walked out.

"I figured eventually they'd get used to it and come around," he said. "That's kind of what happened. I don't like to upset anybody. I did my best to inform everybody that I was going to be changing musical styles, but not everybody got the message and some people were misled."

He said he was amused by people who walked out.

"We knew it was all going to settle down eventually," he said. "It wasn't World War III. It was just a change in musical styles."

Connick, the son of a district attorney and husband of a fashion model, sits benevolently above controversies over his music that began soon after When Harry Met Sally... made his Sinatra-like stylings popular.

Many critics disdain him, particularly jazz experts. It's partly because they know he was making music that wasn't true to his talent, said Geraldine Wyckoff, a New Orleans jazz critic who watched Connick grow up there.

Wyckoff said she's constantly telling Connick to show off his piano playing more — a request echoed by one of Connick's teachers as a teen-ager.

"Harry's very talented," said Ellis Marsalis, father of Wynton and Branford, a jazz pianist and an educator who said Connick was his only serious student. "I hope he spends as much time as he can on the piano and lets people know how good a player he is."

Jazz purists hadn't even settled their debate over whether Connick could be considered a jazz artist when he took the left turn into funk and rock 'n' roll.

That, too, has left many critics unimpressed. Bill Milkowski, a music producer and critic who contributes to Downbeat magazine, said Connick is popularizing "sanitized" funk compared to mentors like James Booker. He likened Connick's funk explorations to Paul Simon's use of African music.

"It's sort of like Pat Boone doing Chuck Berry tunes," Milkowski said.

Connick deserves credit for being unafraid to experiment, Wyckoff said. But much of Star Turtle bears the mark of an artist with handlers afraid to push him or say "no" to him, she said. Connick has responded to some of his critics by noting that he's an entertainer, and that most of his fans take music far less seriously than critics.

He seems to address the topic in song on his new album. "How Do Y'All Know," sparked by an encounter with a drunken fan who insisted Connick should be doing jazz songs, is about how fame increases the number of people who tell you how to live your life.

The ever-genial Connick, far from using it as an occasion to lash out, takes care in an interview to blunt the song's impact.

"The song sounds kind of spiteful, like I'm upset by it," he said. "My life isn't like that at all. It makes it sound like I'm being tormented by people constantly. It isn't like that at all. It was just a funny concept for a song."

Mould slashes way through Pearl St.

By Scott Bernard
Collegian Correspondent

BOB MOULD
Pearl Street
Sept. 23

NORTHAMPTON — Bob Mould seemed to be on a mission to prove that an acoustic set need not mean a laid back set. Backed only by bassist Andy Duplantis, Mould slashed his way through a 19 song set covering his career, but focusing on his solo material. The setting may have been spare but the richness of Mould's songcraft was expressed best in this way, and the connection that he had with his fan was immediate and vital.

The first song, "Wishing Well," established the tenor of the evening, it is a powerful and passionate song about hope and hopelessness from his first album, Workbook. From then on, the excitement spread with the sweat dripping off Mould's forehead and spreading through his shirt. By the third song, "Needle," he and Duplantis were drenched in sweat, showing the amount of energy they had so far thrown into the set. But Mould showed no signs of slowing down as he started in on "Fort Knox, King Solomon" off his newest album, vitalized by the stripped down setting and the interplay between the two musicians.

Of particular interest at this point was a darker and slower version of another song off the Workbook album, "Poison Years." Duplantis segued perfectly from the previous song "Hardly Getting" with a dark series of notes which danced around Mould's crashing guitar. Mould sang with a brooding bitterness about a relationship gone wrong, and ended the song by passionately giving the mike a parting kiss. Mould ended his regular set with two Hüsker Dü songs. The first, "Charter Trips," hailed from Zen Arcade days and ended as Mould and Duplantis chanted then screamed in counterpoint, "Said there's no returning from this charted trip away!"

For the first encore, Mould sang "Eternally Fried" then "Brasilia Crossed with Trenton," a song of social protest, which slowly built in intensity until Mould was virtually throwing himself off his chair in fits of impassioned singing. Then, generously, Mould came out and gave a second encore, a solo and reworked rendition of "Thumbtack" which was both quieter and more majestic than the recorded version off the Bob Mould album.

Overall, in spite of a brief moment when some sweatshirted hoodlum tried to start a mosh pit and then a fight, the audience was utterly riveted by the stage and Mould's presence. He gave himself utterly to his songs, and many of the fans were fairly in rapture, as his personal and impassioned singing hit home. His invocations were highly personal, and he seemed to be singing and playing exclusively for himself, which created an intensity which could not be denied.

Opening act Rasputina was an interesting ensemble consisting of a drummer. They sang surreal songs, including a gloomy cover of the song Jessica Rabbit sings in Who Framed Roger Rabbit, amongst monologues dealing with diverse topics such as Howard Hughes' strange habits, and dating Snoopy.

■ poetry

continued from page 6

tion on his work, though. Take this snippet from "consequences:"... the music moves inside and stays there/a part of what you are," lines that evoke the soulfulness of The Last Giant's sax playing.

Shepp was lucky enough to be in Coltrane's presence many times, both of them playing the Newport Jazz Festival in 1965 (which yielded the great Impulse! disc, A New Thing At Newport, with clips from both saxophonists sets there), among other '60s meetings. Shepp is from that grain of saxophonists which Ornette Coleman helped to harvest: avante-garde jazz players. Shepp's music is from a haunting vein many times, and is also at another instant wild like some great volcano blowing its top with the beautiful, intriguing sounds of chaos. It shall be a fiery evening with these two gentlemen together, celebrating the fruits of the love affair between poetry and jazz.

John Sinclair with Archie Shepp performs at the Iron Horse tonight at 7 p.m.. Tickets are $12 at the door. Call 584-0610 for more details.

"Law & Order" begins with fresh faces

By Frazier Moore
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Football. Leaves turning. Someone new in the "Law & Order" cast. All sure signs of fall.

Carey Lowell should be grateful for such autumn signposts, at least that last one: She is the most recent in the "Law & Order" of succession.

"Law & Order," of course, is the splendid cops-and-lawyers drama that launched its seventh season last week, and - with the passing of "Murder, She Wrote" — won bragging rights as prime time's longest-running drama, all the more so after NBC recently renewed the show through 1997-98. It airs Wednesdays at 10 p.m. EDT.

Meanwhile, making "Law & Order's" fall tradition tenable is a corresponding springtime custom: the departure of a cast member.

Last spring, it was Jill Hennessy who left the show — which meant the demise of her character, Assistant District Attorney Claire Kincaid, after a car crash in the season finale.

Now Jamie Ross, played by Lowell, has become the new partner for Assistant District Attorney Jack McCoy (Sam Waterston). The series' six-member ensemble thus has its 14th inductee.

Jamie had been a criminal defense lawyer, Lowell explains between scenes at the show's Manhattan studio, "but she became very disillusioned representing scumbags and getting them off, and getting rich doing it."

She also became disillusioned with her marriage to another defense lawyer. Now a single mother working the other side of the courtroom, this seasoned, tough-as-nails attorney isn't subject to "that mentor-protege thing that Sam's and Jill's characters had," Lowell says.

"Sam and I are more on equal footing. We have a bit of a contentious rehionship, along with mutual respect."

Fine. But of no less importance to the "Law & Order" faithful is what measure of attraction might crackle between them. The series' gritty stories don't leave much time for romance but, still, during three seasons working together McCoy and Kincaid clearly had shared more than a counsel table.

Well, then: Will history repeat itself with McCoy and Ross?

■ trax

continued from page 6

of the rest the most. The rest of the disc lazily imitates the current alt-rock sound that Republica probably conveys best with their popular tune "Ready To Go." Nothing new here. C– (Joshua Boyd)

THE LOW & SWEET ORCHESTRA
Goodbye To All This Interscope

It is too bad that such a producer as David Briggs, whose name was synonymous with most of Neil Young's albums, has to be remembered with a final album such as Goodbye To All This. Briggs passed away last year and so the music world lost one of its greatest sound sculptors. True, his production on The Low & Sweet Orchestra's debut album is clear and flawless, but that's not to say that the music is as such.

The Orchestra has potential, but they've buried their debut in commonplace folk rock (such as the opener "Pencils & Shades," as well as "Worst Day" and the closer, "I Had To Leave A Friend Behind.") The band won't be able to rely on their star power (actor Dermot Mulroney, with film credits such as Young Guns II, and Where The Day Takes You plays mandolin, cello and dobro) to carry them through the music world, nor should they continue to imitate Life's Rich Pageant–era R.E.M. They should stick by the low & sweet sound of ballads like "Take A Long Look" and "There I Thought I Saw You Once Again." That is where their musical strength lies. B– (J.B.)

COURTESY POP NARCOTIC

Sugar Plant shines on new album.

It takes a certain kind of person to write for Arts. A person with that je ne sais quois. A daring, exciting, fly-by-the-seat-of-their-Batman-underoos type of person. A person not afraid of man, or beast, or sucky shows. A person who can tackle the best life has to offer with a sneer and razor sharp wit. If you can fit that description, and you can find the time, come on down and talk to Mike Burke.

CONSTRUCTING YOUR FUTURE?

BUILD YOUR RESUME.

Come learn how you can build your resume with The Walt Disney World® College Program. You'll be able to earn college recognition or credit while gaining the experience of a lifetime! This is a unique opportunity to enhance your resume with the Disney name.

Representatives will be on campus to answer all your questions concerning the Walt Disney World® College Program.

Interviewing All Majors! Positions available throughout theme parks and resorts: Attractions, Food & Beverage, Merchandise, Lifeguarding, and many others! Ask the Disney Representative about special opportunities for students fluent in Portuguese.

Presentation Date: Sept. 25, 1996
Time: 7:00 p.m.
Location: 231 Herter Hall
For More Information Contact: Jeff Silver
(413) 545-6267

Also visit us at Orlando Sentinel Online on AOL using keyword "Disney Jobs" or www.CareerMosaic.com/cm/wdw/wdwLhtml

Walt Disney World.

An Equal Opportunity Employer • Drawing Creativity From Diversity

"I got mine at Zanna"

John Fluevogs

ZANNA downtown
Amherst

SEEKING
Students in Recovery
from alcohol or drug abuse

ARE YOU IN AA, NA, RR?
Are you willing to escort someone who is going to their first meeting?

If so, please call Lydia Rackenberg, LICSW
Mental Health 545-2337
All calls are confidential

SINCE 1984
La Cazuela
RESTAURANT
The Cuisines of MEXICO and AMERICAN SOUTHWEST

Since 1984 La Cazuela has been winning acclaim and awards for its hand made cooking and outstanding design. We prepare food that is representative of fine dining in the many regions of Mexico and the American Southwest. Our menu changes seasonally to take advantage of the freshest available foods and to reflect the cultural traditions of the food we serve. We offer an extraordinary tequila list, superb margaritas, a tasteful wine selection and the warm hospitality that reflects a western heritage. Please join us.

Dinner Every Night
Downtown Northampton
Across From The Parking Garage

LIVE RIGHT EAT WELL COOK WITH CHILES!

■ minutewomen

continued from page 12

Yesterday afternoon though it served as a backdrop for something of historical importance as UMass midfielder Rebecca Myers scored twice in her team's 3-0 victory, supplanting Rachel LeDuc and April Kater from the school record books in the most career goal and point categories.

The goals were her 35th and 36th, passing the mark of 35 shared by her former teammate, LeDuc, and her former coach, Kater, now the head coach at Syracuse. The four points give the native Georgian 96 on her career to push her past LeDuc's 95. For good measure, Myers assisted on the team's third goal, moving her into a tie with LeDuc for third on the all-time list, three behind Carolyn Micheel.

UMass has produced several three–time All–Americans, including four–timer Kristen Bowsher. Kater won the 1990 Hermann Trophy as the National Player of the Year. UMass' six final four appearances are the most of any school other than 11–time national champion North Carolina. Many skillful players helped the program accomplish this feat, but none outscored Myers.

A consummate team player, the humble tri–captain shunned her accomplishments afterwards. Myers is more concerned with wins and losses than her own tallies, concerning herself more with the end than the means.

"The only record I'm worried about is the one that says 7– 0," Myers said. "The rest don't even faze me right now. I'm more worried about the 7–0 mark and continuing that.

"November for the Atlantic 10 Championships.

COURTESY MELISA KELLATIONS

Senior midfielder Rebecca Myers became UMass's all–time leading scorer yesterday as the Minutewomen railed the Rams 3–0.

■ soccer

continued from page 12

and with crisper play through the center of the field, the team began to bust through the ten player backline of the Rams. At the 52:40 mark, the ball control of UMass' attackers finally emerged from underneath the bunker. Senior midfielder Julie Magid served a perfect ball through to Kurowski to the right of Moon, which resulted in her strike on goal being deflected to the foot of Myers. It was an easy tap–in for the go–ahead, and game winning score, as the senior tri–captain tied both Rachel LeDuc and April Kater for the all–time UMass goal record (35).

It did not take long for Myers to break that record, and the all–time points scored record. A minute later, she collected a cross from Kurowski on the far left post to make the score 2–0. She surpassed the previous mark of 95 career points set by Rachel LeDuc.

To wrap up the scoring for UMass, junior defender Erica Iverson took advantage of a sleeping URI defense, and moved up from her fullback position to beat Moon to the far left post at the 62:58 mark. The score was heaven for her, as she finally was able to revenge a certain little own goal in the 2–1 season–opening win against Fairfield, the only one scored against UMass this season.

"It was one of those things that you just see half way across the field, and go, 'hey, I think I can beat her,'" Iverson said. "One of the nice things about playing fullback is you can run from behind, when nobody is facing your way, and no one can see you."

For the man with the second half plan, he was satisfied with the patient ball movement of his team after an unenigmatic first half.

"In the second half, we did a much better job of controlling the center of the midfield, especially with [senior midfielder] Amy Powell," Chamides said. "Our flank penetration got more into their half, instead of starting out on our side, and making 30–yard runs."

■ NFL

continued from page 12

that went 13–3 last year. Currently, they're 4–0, their best start ever.

On the other hand, there are teams like the Jets, who can't seem to figure out free agency to save their collective lives. After spending over $70 million on offensive personnel, the Jets are off to another wonderful season, starting 0–4.

Free agency will never build a team into a true contender. Players need time, sometimes more than a year, to gel and be able to truly function as a strong team. That is why so many gifted players go to different teams and promptly flop. Instead, GMs need to find one person who can improve a specific position and try to work him into the team — a la Paup and Early.

While they may not be as successful in free agency, one area the New England Patriots have had enormous success with in the last couple of years is the draft.

Of the seven players drafted two years ago, five are still with the team. Four of them (Ty Law, Ted Johnson, Curtis Martin and Dave Wohlabaugh) are starters, and the fifth (Jimmy Hitchcock) is probably the most improved player from last year.

This year, nine of the 13 drafted players made the team. Two of them have made an immediate impact on the team, winning starting jobs. Terry Glenn has caught 17 balls in his three games, quickly becoming one of Drew Bledsoe's favorite targets. Devin Wyman earned the first sack of his career on Sunday, when he ... to Mark Brunell in the second quarter. Several other rookies have helped give the Patriots one of the best special teams units in the league.

The Patriots are still bringing in too many free agents and expecting them to start — Willie Clay, Monty Brown, Mark Wheeler and Shawn Jefferson — but they are improving. No longer does the team bring in every ex–Giant or expect each player to bring them to the Super Bowl, something they did with Myron Guyton, Jeff Dellenbach, and all the fat folks they called defensive linemen.

*****

The Jimmy Johnson era in Miami hit its first stumbling block Monday night as the Dolphins were defeated by the Indianapolis Colts. Worse than the loss, for Dolphins fans, was the sight of Dan Marino on crutches on the sideline. Marino will be out of action for three or four weeks with a severely fractured ankle.

Last year, after Marino was hurt in a Monday night game with Pittsburgh, Miami had a miserable time with Bernie Kosar leading the way. Johnson's test now is to see if his newly established running game, which only got 28 yards in the loss to Indy, can make up for the absence of the future Hall of Famer. The one break for Miami is that next week is a bye week, giving Kosar a chance to practice with the team and Marino a chance to heal.

Speaking of missing quarterbacks, Atlanta will voluntarily be without their starter Jeff George after he was suspended for conduct detrimental to the team — yelling at coach June Jones after he was pulled from the game against Philadelphia. This could turn into a long term situation as George may be traded or released.

If the latter happens, it could pay dividends to another team in the National Football League. George, despite his reputation for causing problems, is an immensely talented quarterback. Teams like Arizona, the New York Giants, Tampa Bay or Seattle could get another two or three wins with George under center. Other teams, like Baltimore, St. Louis and Pittsburgh would be improved with George at the helm, but aren't likely to make the move, preferring to work with the guys they already have.

Just when it seemed like it couldn't get any worse for Dallas, it did. Not only did the loss to Buffalo mean they were off to their worst start in years, but they lost wide receiver Kevin Williams for six to eight weeks with a broken foot. Michael Irvin comes back in two weeks, but next week Troy Aikman won't have any real NFL–caliber wide receivers to throw to. The Eagles have to be licking their chops as they plan on revenge for their playoff loss when through the first before controlling the play in the final minutes.

■ men's soccer

continued from page 12

A suffocating Hartford defense slowed down UMass ball progression from the midfield. Each time a breaking Butler or Siljanovski collected the ball, three or four Hartford defenders collapsed on them, leaving the Minutemen without support.

With 17:35 to go in the first half, the Hawks' offense walked through a disoriented UMass defense and Kyle Dulude fired a shot on the UMass net, identical to the one that hit home early on. Though Dulude caught Pearson out of the net, Massachusetts defender Rob Cairo came tearing in from the back post to clear the ball out of the area.

UMass came back with less than 20 minutes to go in the first frame to control the ball in the Hartford end of the pitch.

With 16:20 remaining in the first, Siljanowski fired a perfect corner kick into the Hartford 18 yard box, setting up a three–shot UMass barrage by Jake Brodsky and Tobias Bremke. Hickey managed to get a hand on two of the close range shots and the Minutemen couldn't put it away.

The second half was a repeat performance of the first, where UMass slowed down in the middle third of the period before firing up for the final 20 minutes of the game.

"They put so much pressure on us that last 20 minutes, I felt fortunate to come away winning one nothing. They just threw everything at us. Butler's head almost put us away, our keeper just came up huge," Hartford coach Jim Evans said.

With less than 10 minutes to go, Cairo managed to set up a few offensive runs for the Minutemen. The first came with 9:16 remaining in the game when he found Butler 20 yards out. Butler got a shot off, but went wide right. A minute later, Cairo tore down the right flank, sending a Hartford defender the wrong way with a sweet step–over before rocketing a shot that was deflected out of bounds.

The Minutemen offense didn't let down as the clock began to run out. With under eight minutes to play, a UMass cross found Butler inside the 18. After getting a head on the ball, junior Ioenal Castma followed suit on the deflection, sending the ball over the crossbar. The ball didn't leave Hartford's end of the field for the rest of the game.

■ minutemen

continued from page 12

season.

Another aspect of the game where UMass was outplayed was with team defense, usually a strong point for the Minutemen.

"When I brought the team up to see UMass and Duke play, I told my team that both of these teams are defending the way that we want to defend," said Hartford head coach Jim Evans. "We really took a page out of UMass' playbook today," Evans added.

This was most evident in the midfield. Every time a Massachusetts player touched the ball, there were three Hartford defenders around them, frustrating the UMass midfielders. They worked extremely hard to get the ball, just to have it taken away. Along with the physical play of the Hartford defense, the collapsing on the ball made it impossible for Massachusetts to control the ball.

"The way to beat this method of defense is by switching the ball quickly, which is something that we did not do. Too many times we moved the ball away from the defenders, just to pass it back into a pressure area," Massachusetts head coach Sam Koch said.

On the other side of the field, every time a Hartford defender got beat his help was right there to step in. When you defend as a team you cut down on the other team's offensive output, and that is what they did.

Now comes the most crucial part of the Minutemen's schedule. The rest of their games are against Atlantic 10 foes. In order for UMass to make the postseason tournament, they must win the A–10. This is not an impossible task for the team, because they are easily one of the top two teams in the conference.

"Everything else outside of the A–10 doesn't really mean anything. The way to the NCAA tournament is through the A–10. That's why we have a pretty good outlook, because if we can come out with the same intensity as today no one in the conference can touch us," Senior forward Mike Butler said.

■ field hockey

continued from page 12

offensive attacks. Laura Phelan, Amy Ott and Jen Gutzman join Gore in the backfield.

Rhode Island (1–5, 0–1 A–10) is looking for its first win in four games. The team has dropped two of its past four decisions by only one point, including a double overtime 3–2 loss to Harvard. The Lady Rams have been outscored and outshot by their opponents, 18–9 and 140–100 respectively.

On the offensive side Rhode Island is lacking a deep scoring attack. Only three players account for the team's nine goals, with senior captain Dorian Reigner leading the list with five goals. Senior captain Heather Daly and junior Erin Murphy each have two goals for the Lady Rams.

Freshman goaltender Jackie Pizzi has allowed 15 goals and stopped 56 shots in her five games this year. Junior Keri Saccoia, who has started one game in net, has allowed three goals and saved three as well. The Lady Rams have allowed their opponents 74 penalty corners, while facing only 39 themselves.

MDA
Muscular Dystrophy Association
1-800-572-1717
People help MDA...because MDA helps people

PRUDDY'S CRAZY Wednesday
Our bartenders are going MAD. Every Wednesday from 8:00 'till 10:00.
FREE NACHOS, FREE WINGS, $1.00 SANGRIA and who knows what else !
Main St. Amherst • www.pruddys.shorebreak.com
tel. 253 - 4940

CHANGE YOUR CLOCK
CHANGE YOUR BATTERY

take Kaplan and get into the right school.
LSAT
• Highly trained, expert teachers who know the tests inside and out.
• Personalized, computerized study plans, tailored to your individual needs.
• Proven methods, guaranteed to raise your score.
Class starts Tuesday, October 1st!
the leader in test prep and admissions counseling.
KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
www.kaplan.com

Welcome Back Students!
From the Information Data Bank
Rights and Responsibilities 1996-97 is here!
Located on the 2nd Floor Whitmore Lobby
545-1555
Hours: 8:30am - 6:00pm Mon. - Fri.

Miller Lite Night!
TIME OUT
Giving away lots of prizes!
Free chicken wings
The fun starts at 9:30

• Haircutting
• Hair Color
• Permanent Waving
• Tanning
• Extensive Professional Products Available
REGENCY HAIRSTYLISTS
253-9526
189 N. Pleasant St., Amherst

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $179 $341
PARIS $224 $427
ROME $288 $549
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA $235 $446
Scheduled flights.
Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave. NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

■ Fuchs

continued from page 12

responsibility as a center forward to score the goals."

Fuchs' field hockey roots run deep. Both of her parents, Paul Fuchs and Nieske Turner, played the game and her two older sisters are involved in the sport as well.

"I started when I was ten years old. My parents both played and my sisters played," Fuchs said.

Fuchs spent a good deal of time playing for the club team in her native Maastricht.

Her commitment to the game led to Fuchs' being chosen for the Dutch National Under-18 team. Playing against the best age-group teams Europe had to offer, Fuchs honed the speed, skills and scoring touch that she has put to use on the UMass front line.

"In Europe once a year you have the Seven Countries Tournament, and you play against Germany and France and Spain and other countries," Fuchs said. "And we played also a few games against Germany and a lot of European countries."

Hixon knew that her freshman would have the necessary skills for the college game after playing in the Netherlands.

"The Dutch start playing hockey at a very young age, so that by the time any Dutch player wants to play hockey in college, they've played for ten years," Hixon said. "They play co-ed, club, they play with people younger than they are, older than they are. Plus, they play on their age-group teams.

"And they all play on turf."

"That really gives them a huge experience advantage over the Americans."

Saskia Fuchs

Although she says she loves her new team, Fuchs' original plan for her collegiate career was not to attend UMass. Through a friend in the Netherlands, Fuchs was told of the field hockey program at the University of Maryland. When a letter to Terrapins coach Missy Meharg revealed that no scholarships were available in College Park, Fuchs' name was passed on to Hixon.

"An acquaintance of hers played at the University of Maryland," Hixon said. "When Saskia was interested in coming to the United States, her friend told her 'I went to Maryland, so why don't you call the University of Maryland. It's a great place, I had a great time.'

However, due to the restrictions placed upon her by her position as coach of the U.S. National team, Hixon was unable to recruit Fuchs. So the UMass head coach turned the responsibilities over to her assistants, Amy Robertson and Ainslee Press.

"But Maryland didn't have any scholarship money left," Hixon continued. "The Maryland coach was my assistant coach with the Olympic team, so she said, 'Hey look, I've got a kid who's interested.' I said that I couldn't have anything to do with recruiting because I couldn't wear two hats, so I faxed Saskia's letter to Amy and Ainslee."

"Amy jumped in with both feet, picked up the ball and ran with it, and she kept me abreast of what was happening."

Fuchs liked what she learned about the Massachusetts program, and she came to the U.S. in August to play in Amherst.

And in a Minutewoman uniform Fuchs has performed strongly, earning Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Week honors for three consecutive weeks.

"It's an honor as long as I play good," Fuchs said. "It feels good, but I don't know how the other rookies are."

While she has adjusted to the team's rigorous practice and game schedule and she is now prepared to switch from grass to turf and back, Fuchs is still convinced her teammates and coaches are, well ... crazy.

"You need it when you're here in America," Fuchs said.

Men's tennis railroads R.I.

By Stephen Reich
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's tennis team came within a game of sweeping Rhode Island, and coasted to a impressive 6-1 victory last Sunday.

The match was the Atlantic 10 opener for both teams, and with the win the Minutemen improved to an unblemished 3- 0 on the season.

The University of Massachusetts swept all three doubles and took five out of six singles matches, with the only casualty coming from No. 1 singles's player Todd Cheney, who lost a tough four set match to University of Rhode Island's Chris Bender.

Freshman Bo Navarro, playing No. 2 singles, defeated John Spears and also teamed with Cheney in No. 1 doubles to overpower URI's top duo of Bender and Spears 8-3.

Junior captain Alex Aller and sophomore Mark Huckins moved to 3-0 as a doubles tandem, easily beating Keith Mattes and Toney Enlow 8-2 at No. 2 doubles. Aller and Huckins also won their singles matches, with Aller defeating Mattes 6-2, 7-6 (7-4), and Huckins cruising to a 6-0, 6-1, victory over Enlow.

The Minutemen are on a torrid pace to start this season, with victories over Wesleyan, Fairfield and URI. These wins are invaluable to a team consisting of all underclassmen and should give them confidence for the rest of the long season. The collegiate tennis season lasts through April.

The Minutemen freshmen have been impressive thus far, with especially strong play coming from Navarro and Rob Manchester. Navarro was highly recruited out of San Diego and has already shown head coach Judy Dixon what a talent he is.

"Bo is a very talented player, and has the potential to be excellent in years to come," Dixon said.

Manchester, who is from Attleboro, has also played very well in his first year of collegiate tennis. He defeated Chris Ranson of Boston University, 6-1, 4-3 (ret.) on Friday and torched Rick Ray of URI 6-0, 6-1.

The freshmen have provided a much needed depth to the Minuteman lineup and will give the team a chance to contend for the Atlantic 10 title this year.

UMass next takes the courts on Wednesday, Sept. 25 when the squad makes a junket to Storrs, Conn., to take on the University of Connecticut.

You like to drink lots of Gatorade. You think more companies should have endorsed Olympic athletes. You believe that Shaq will eventually win an Oscar. You have a set of Flo Jos nails and you honestly think that being a beach mascot is a life time goal. So if you believe in these things and you love sports, Why not Write about it? Come do it in 113 Campus Center and talk to Casey. Free Gatorade and shin guards with every proof of purchase. Sports -- it's a Way of life ... for some people.

Collegian Graphics . . . Because we said so.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Sick of the dorms? Come and check out Iota Gamma Upsilon, the only local sorority on campus. Open House at 406 North Pleasant Street on Sept. 23, 24 and 25 from 7-9pm. Call Sara or Laura at 549-6461 for more information

The sisters of Kappa Kappa Gamma invite the UMass women to an Open Rush Dinner, Wednesday, Sept. 25 at 5:30pm. Please call Gerisa @ 549-0755.

Attn: Animal Science PraVet Club is having there first general meeting on Thursday 9/26 @ 7:00 in Paige 202. Call 546-1947 for more info

ANNOUNCEMENTS

KAI CHI delivering Sunday-Thursday to 2 am. Friday and Saturday to 3 am.

Seeking interested people to help plan activities for World AIDS Day at UMass Meeting Fri. 9/27 at 2pm Campus Center 577-5181 for details

AUTO FOR SALE

1986 Subaru GL Hatchback 114k mileage, good condition, F-Wheel-Drive, $1,600 BO Call 586-3497

1982 Chevy Cavalier Wagon AC, AM/FM, new tires, plus $250.00 OBO Call Bruce 256-1215

GREAT CAR

1985 Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme Good running condition Best offer Call 545-3007 or 834-5732

1986 Mazda Reliable, 5 speed, AM/FM cassette $900 865-8246

MOTORCYCLE

Yamaha XS 400 Low miles, new battery, recent work, inspectable $400 firm 253-1775

EMPLOYMENT

Spring Break!! Earn Cash!!! Highest Commissions!! Lowest Prices! Travel free on only 13 sales! Free Info! Sunsplash 1-800 426-7710

Cruise Ships Hiring Earn up to $70,000+/month World Travel Seasonal and Full Time positions No exp. necessary. For info call 1-206-971-3550 ext C50015

National Parks Hiring. Positions are now available at National Parks, Forests and Wildlife Preserves Excellent benefits and bonuses! Call 1-206-971-3620 Ext. N50016

Tropical Resorts Hiring - Students needed! Entry level and career positions available worldwide Call Resort Employment Services 1-206-971-3600 Ext. R50012

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS! Over $ billion in public and private sector Grants and scholarships are now available. All students are eligible. Let us help. For more info call 1-800-283-8495 Ext. F50014

International Employment - Earn up to $25 $45/hour teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S. Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For info call 206-971-3570 Ext. J50015

Now Hiring At Skirts. Closing shifts available with bonus program. Hadley Burger King. Ask for Tim 584-5110

Now Hiring! Great pay doing odd jobs. flexible hours Call Andrew 584-8070

Counter Help and Daytime Delivery Persons. Counter help must be able to work 15-20 hr nights and weekends. Apply at D.P. Dough

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-5142

FOR SALE

I WILL TRADE 2 Conn. PEARL JAM TICKETS for 2 tickets to the MAINE show. Call Dan 549-0388

100 Watt Somsung Stereo Receiver $75 BO 549-8072

PINBALL MACHINE Reconditioned $1,000.00 (413) 253-5363

Futon. Double frame and custom cover. $250.00 (586) 546-9728

FOR SALE

I have 8 Dave Matthews Tix Oct 4 MSG. Need to sell Call Karen 549-5079

Bar Size Pool Table by United Perfect condition Includes everything! Interested? Call Scott and Dom @ 256-1088

12" TV/VCR Great for the dorm! Runs like new! $175 firm! 584-9808

Laptop 486DX 8mRAM 360 Hard Drive, loaded with fax modem, MS Office, preloaded with software and case $1,300 or best offer. 6-1469

Waterbed King, new, waveless mattress/heaters. 4 drawers, bookcase, lamps. Must sell! $300 549-1813

Four Dave Matthews tickets for Oct. 6 Spectacular seats on the floor. Please help me get rid of these 546-3310

FOUND

Welkman Found in the Campus Center Arcade. Call Jarret 546-1944

Attention New Students- Personal items left at the New Students Program this summer may be picked up at the New Students Office 304 Admissions Center

INSTRUCTION

Jazz Piano Teacher - Beginners to advanced students Call Steven Paga 253-3354

WWW.SUCESS.ORG Free business education from American Institute Entrepreneurship and Real Estate Investment Courses Retire rich in ten years

PC/MAC Tutoring Cheap instruction for computer Patient, valuable help and advice Set-ups, software, Internet (413)772-0633

MUSICIANS

Guitar Classes Start 9/16 Rentals and lessons available 10 wks/$40.00 FTUG Pad 545-0579

Blues Jam Tues. - 8:00pm Emerson 112 Check it out!

Lead/Rhythm Guitarist looking to hook up with musicians/songwriters Call evenings 546-9282

MISCELLANEOUS

Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about Subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

PERSONALS

Choices Not Chances Free contraception education. Every Mon & Thurs 3-4:30 and Tues & Wed 7-8:30pm in Rm 302 UHS. Med and Women welcome For more information call Health Education Office 577-5181

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

ROOM FOR RENT

1 Undergrad needed: Share a 2 bedroom, 2 full baths, ceiling fans, w/ free heat/hot water Call here @ 549-4089

ROOMATE WANTED

Looking for room in an apartment. Anything on bus line Please call Dan 367-2047

SERVICES

Computer Consultant Hardware and Software help Web Page Creation, Marketing Call Joseph (413)546-0853

Computer Problems? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Stream Savers 549-0063

LICENSED MANICURIST Basic Manicure $10 French Manicure $12 Call Bridget for an appt @ 549-8378

TRANSPORTATION

Ride Share from Lee (or Berkshire area) MTWF @ 9:00 classes Call Jason 243-0981

WANTED TO RENT

Seeking 3 Bdr Apartment/ house needed ASAP Call 546-6077

Know a 1 bdr in Boston area available Dec-Jan? Looking for under $600 Willing to work in exchange for rent. Cris 546-3506

WANTED

Mother's Helper South Amherst, Early morning, Car Required, Rates negotiable Call evenings 256-0076

Wanted 100 People New Metabolism Breakthrough Lose 5-100 lbs Guaranteed Cost $25 (800)776-9503

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
As you approach a decision, try to ignore outside interference. A clear head will point you in the right direction. An explosive situation bursts up—using tact may be your only hope for resolution.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
Beat the heat with an outdoor activity. A fresh insight at work prevents burnout for you and your colleagues. When a friend approaches you for advice, consider carefully before you speak. Double meanings may work against you this time.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
A cheerful companion is in need of support this week as a difficult time reaches its peak. If you feel taken-for-granted, consider all of the demands on that person's time and attention before voicing your complaint.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
A great opportunity approaches from an unexpected direction. Use a light touch in breaking some news to superiors at work—your tact will earn you extra respect and influence.

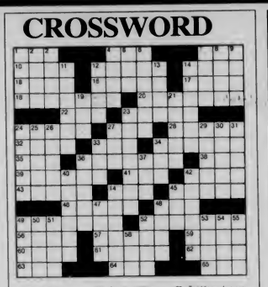
LEO
July 23-August 23
If it seems like there are a million things to do, just try to get the most important ones done. Perseverance pays off eventually. Curb a tendency to worry by focusing on the positive aspects of a situation.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
It's a good time for reviewing all of your options, rather than for making large decisions and commitments. Make a small, healthy change rather than a sweeping lifestyle alteration.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
Spending extra time with a family member means increased closeness and renewed insight. A tense situation at work may worsen. Try to regain perspective at home, away from the politics.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
A domestic dispute that you thought was resolved may still be simmering beneath the surface. Make the extra effort to ask another how they feel, and you'll reap the benefits in the form of goodwill and decreased tension.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
A fragile mate or companion is in need of extra TLC this week. Do not allow professional and personal commitments to interfere with your relationships. This could be an unusually important time in your life.



CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
A successful event has you flying high as the week begins, but beware an eventual letdown. Plunge into work to keep occupied, but rely on a close companion to ease the quiet dismay you feel.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
A special treat for the one you love the most pays dividends for both of you. They'll feel renewed and appreciative of your thoughtfulness, and you'll know you were a source of support.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
If an older person is cranky, allow extra time to listen to what's really bothering them. You may have the power to solve their problems. An innuendo may indicate cause for followup—it's a good week for romance.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1. Dalek's cowboy hubby
4. Flower-power gesture
7. Chariey of horror films
10. It often follows "once"
12. "Rigoletto" role
14. Monopoly, for one
15. Chronicle
16. Frankincense or myrrh
17. Amos of baseball
18. NY restaurant that's a favorite of Woody
20. Moses' burden
22. Move with difficulty
23. Allotted
24. Jeeves, to Bertie Wooster
27. Land of ___
28. Fable writer
32. Remotely
33. Rotating machine part
34. Gaudy
35. Bird's beak
36. Like certain shirts
38. Govt. agcy.
39. Wore away
41. Sonja Henie's homeland: abbr.
42. Dookie
43. Antitoxin
44. From ___ Z (2 wds.)
46. Concerned kitten sounds
48. Stimulates
49. Enthusiasm
49. Sign of the future
52. Maypo grain
56. Man from Muskogee
57. Dives
59. French pronoun
60. He played Shane
61. Speak publicly
62. Basketball net holders (2 wds.)
63. Alkali
64. Cli's forerunner
65. Mountain road

DOWN
1. Trick
2. Australian gum
3. Mystical exercise
4. Competes
5. High railways
6. Revised copy
7. What procrastinators often are
8. Pass over
9. Criminal-catcher Elliot
11. Carpenter, at times
12. One of the Brady boys
13. Gray's subj.
14. ___ Gate Bridge
16. Filbert, e.g.
21. Bas texture
23. Twinklings of an eye
24. Wind indicators
25. Flaming
26. Pregnancy culmination
27. Toddler's timeout
29. 60 Minutes man
30. Playful swimmer
31. Eats chicken-style
35. Scoundrel
36. "___ the fields we go ..."
38. Arizona city
37. Joey's nickname
40. Prepared for the white-glove test
42. Philadelphia parader on 1/1
44. Conductor Toscanini's
45. Excavation area
47. Loosen
48. Ming Dynasty relic
49. Opinion survey
50. Stingy assent
51. Get a lift
52. Picks
53. Night author Wiesel
54. Donations
55. To a smaller degree
58. Pas' partners

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students 20¢ per word/day

All others 40¢ per word/day

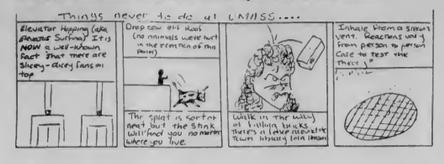
NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted



50,000 EYES WILL SEE YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE CLASSIFIEDS

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Always Wanted One of Those By A. Morse & S. Dumas

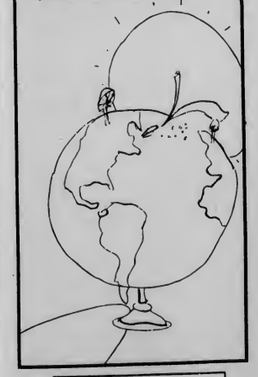
Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Duh . . . By Maura and Micaela

Robotman By Jim Meddick

8 Years in Braces By Eric Peterson

Leold (leold@javanet.com)
by Roger and Salem Salloom ©1996



Everybody knows that things are not always what they seem.

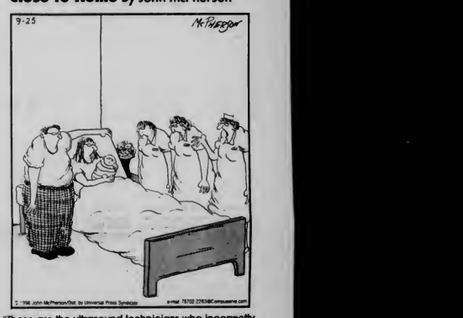
Did you ever leave an orange out for a long time? Green mold starts to grow in little spots at first, but eventually, it completely covers the orange.

Basically the orange disappears. The living mold is the only thing that remains..... but the mold has nothing left to eat so it dies.

We think the earth was created for us, but what if.... we are only a growth on the earth. We eat the earth, ... then the earth lets us die.

Sometimes the mold-orange-earth thing reminds me of my girlfriend and me... except I'm not sure which one of us is the mold.

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick



University² By Frank Cho

The Joopus Crow Show By Lindholm & Campbell

Close to Home By John McPherson

"These are the ultrasound technicians who incorrectly told you you'd be having a girl. Grace has offered to re-wallpaper your nursery and Brenda will return any gender-specific gifts that you received."

YOUR COMIC COULD BE HERE
instead of this stupid ad
TO RUN A STRIP IN THE COLLEGIAN CONTACT CHRIS CONNER, MANAGING EDITOR • 545-1672

We want you to write for us!
Call the Collegian at 545-3500

Quote of the Morning

"Can a person with no fingers, point you the right direction?"

DA FACEMAN

Quote of the Afternoon

"We hate picking the quote of the day!"

Collegian Staff

Today's Staff

Tara MK Connelly
Night Editor

Lisa Chiu
Copy Editor

Courtney Smith
Photo Technician

Marc Dionne
Production Supervisor

Kelvin L. Torres
Christopher Brown
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Chicken Cutlet	Turkey Tenderloin
Monte Cristo Sandwich	Roast Beef
Meatball Grinder	Beans and Rice
Wheatball Grinder	Grilled Chicken

Hampden

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on a Roll	Roast Beef/Blk Pepper
Chicken Cutlet	Turkey Tenderloin
Taco
Beans and Rice

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Tacos	Turkey Tenderloin
Ziti/Tomato Sauce	Beans and Rice
Veggie Taco	Pastabilities
	Veal Parmesan

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Taco	Turkey Tenderloin
Ziti/Tomato Sauce	Roast Beef
Veggie Taco	Beans and Rice
	Pastabilities

Sports

Minutewomen take own time with Rams; win 3-0

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

KINGSTON, R.I. — Yesterday afternoon at the University of Rhode Island Soccer Complex, the No. 8 Massachusetts women's soccer team (7–0, 2–0 in A–10) came back from an unemotional start, posting three goals within ten minutes in the second half and cruising to victory over the Rams (2–5, A–10 1–1), 3–0.

It was not as if the Minutewomen did not play well in the first half, rather they did not appear to play wisely. The bunker defense, with ten defenders back, employed by coach Karen Parker stymied any high percentage scoring opportunities in the first twenty minutes. But in the 23rd minute, sophomore defender Melanie Fiske's back save on senior Rebecca Myers' header started a series of near misses for the Minutewomen.

A few minutes later, freshman forward Emma Kurowski's attempt was tipped away by a leaping dive from junior keeper Sarah Moon. In the 28th minute, a free kick by senior defender Erin Lynch on the far right flank connected with another header attempt from Myers, but just glanced off the top of the crossbar. The veteran twosome must have been looking to repeat history, as they capitalized off of a similar set play in last Saturday's 3–0 win over Hartford.

The rest of the first half was more of UMass vs. Moon. For the entire match, the visitors amassed a 18–2 shot advantage over the offensively anemic Rams. But at the half, coach Jim Rudy wanted the team to step back and rethink what it was doing, and see if a different strategy could prevail.

"We changed a few things, and Chris [Chamides] put me on to one of these things," Rudy said. "One, we had to use the center of our field better. So, what we wanted to try to do was push players up front. What it meant was when the balls got in, we would arrive with more people."

At the start of the second half, Rudy used a three forward front, turn to SOCCER, page 9

Myers mightiest of them all; senior breaks two UM marks

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

KINGSTON, R.I. — There is nothing special about the University of Rhode Island Soccer Complex, where No. 8 Massachusetts (7–0) drubbed Rhode Island (2–5) yesterday in women's soccer action.

The field has one ordinary set of bleachers, lacks a press box and has a drab, windowless brick and concrete building for a backdrop in the east end zone. The view of flat Rhode Island wilderness from the bleachers only serves to astound the fans who might not have realized that the state is actually large enough to have a middle-of-nowhere.

The "Complex" lacks any sort of big-time feeling, has less charm and personality than Bob Dole, and has no more of an aura to it than most area high school fields.

turn to MINUTEWOMEN, page 9

UMass shutout at home, Hartford wins

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

Too little too late.

That was the name of the game on Garber Field yesterday afternoon, as the Massachusetts men's soccer team fell to the University of Hartford 1–0.

The lone goal of the game came just 7:15 into the match when Hartford's Todd Sadler tore down the right side of the field and found the Hawk's leading scorer Rob Iachym (5 goals, 8 assists). Receiving the leading pass from Iachym, Adrian Weekes took the feed across the eighteen yard box, unloaded, and found the back of the net past UMass keeper Tim Pearson.

The Minutemen experienced bursts of energy in the first half, but couldn't muster a goal early in the game. UMass' first big opportunity came at 26:45 when a Hartford foul prompted an indirect kick for the Minutemen. Dave Siljanovski sent the ball inside the box to a breaking Mike Butler, whose shot was deflected by Hawk's keeper Kevin Hickey. Massachusetts couldn't convert the ensuing corner kick.

In what would become a mirror image of the second half, the Minutemen fell apart half way

turn to MEN'S SOCCER, page 9

Minutemen sync out; Hartford takes game

By Jason Rubin
Collegian Staff

In most cases you need to play 90 minutes of solid soccer to win. In yesterday's 1–0 loss to the University of Hartford, UMass seemed to forget this basic principle. During numerous portions of the game, the team seemed to be playing flat, frustrated and out of rhythm. However, the most disappointing aspect of the loss was how easily UMass could have won.

Although they were outplayed and outhustled throughout parts of the game, UMass had the better scoring opportunities. The ball just did not roll Massachusetts's way in key instances. Twice in the game the Hartford goalie was beat, only to be saved by a fullback who was in the right place.

A perfect example of the bad luck that UMass experienced came with 14 minutes left in the first half. It began with a good run down the wing. After receiving a quick centering pass, left midfielder Jake Brodsky fired a shot towards the crossbar. The Hartford goalie got a hand on it, and sent it out into the 8 yard box. Defenseman Tobias Bremke, following on the play, sent the rebound right back at the netminder. Somehow he got a piece of it, and it ended back up on the foot of Brodsky. He directed a low, hard shot at the net that a defender somehow got in front of. Three shots from well within 18 yards and no goals.

Despite the bad luck, all the blame for this loss can't be written off as bad fortune. Although there were some periods where UMass completely dominated, they were far too infrequent. But for all these spurts, there were also ten minute stretches where every ball was won by Hartford. There were instances in the game where it appeared that UMass had stopped playing. It is these lapses in concentration that become dangerous late in the turn to MINUTEMEN, page 9

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

James Redmon and the UMass men's soccer team took it on the chin at Richard F. Garber field yesterday, losing to Hartford 1–0.

Fuchs fits right in with UMass field hockey

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

When freshman Saskia Fuchs first came to the United States from the Netherlands to play for the Massachusetts field hockey team, there was much more to adjust to than the language and time changes.

Fuchs faced the added difficulty of becoming part of a team which not only practiced every day, but also played on grass as well as artificial turf and with different rules. The new way of doing things was, to say the least, strange.

"First of all I was kind of shocked that we practice so much here," Fuchs said. "In Holland we practice two or at most three times a week."

"If I told them [about the practice schedule] in Holland, they'd be shocked."

UMass coach Pam Hixon knew the transition that her freshman faced.

"Oh yeah," Hixon said laughing. "She thinks we're crazy, in probably every sense."

"When she first got here she said 'We only practice three times a week and we would never practice twice in one day.' But she takes it as a challenge," Hixon said.

But now, with over a month of practice and game time under her belt, Fuchs has settled into her role, both as a scorer and as a team player.

"She's a very good forward," Hixon said. "And I think she's both willing to pass the ball and challenge one-on-one herself in order to make things happen.

"She's very skillful and I think other players will try to emulate her and do some of the things she does, which in essence is why we bring foreigners to the U.S., so that our players can learn more quickly by playing next to someone who might have different skills, better skills, and might be better," she said.

Because of the rigorous game practice schedule during preseason training, Fuchs suffered a bad groin pull. Now that she has become accustomed to the schedule, the injury has healed and she is at full strength again.

"She was injured because she wasn't used to all the practicing and all the training," Hixon said. "But I think she's adapting and adjusting very well."

In her collegiate debut against Wake Forest, Fuchs scored two goals, including the game winner, within 32 seconds of each other.

"We're not prolific scorers, so if she brings scoring to our team that will be a real bonus," Hixon said.

Hixon wasn't the only one to notice Fuchs immediate impact. Senior midfielder and All-American Kyle Rothenberger, who assisted on Fuchs' second goal, also took note of Fuchs' performance.

"She's adjusted very well," Rothenberger said. "She's been a great spark for this team, exactly what we need on the front line."

Sophomore forward Erica Johnston, who plays on the front line with Fuchs, has also felt Fuchs' effect on team.

"She's a very, very good player," Johnston said. "I can read her well, and I like playing with her."

While she didn't score against New Hampshire, the talented freshman did assist on Rothenberger's game-winning goal. At Boston College, Fuchs netted her third career goal, her second game winner.

Two weekends ago against then-No. 4 James Madison, Fuchs tallied her third career game-winning goal. In her next game, she notched another assist.

"She shares the wealth," Hixon said. "She does a really fine job at not taking over the field. She's a really good team player. But at the same time, she accepts her

turn to FUCHS, page 10

COURTESY SASKIA FUCHS

Freshman Saskia Fuchs has had an immediate impact on the UMass field hockey team this year.

Field hockey opens A–10 season today

By Jen Ryder
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts field hockey team hits the road for the sixth consecutive game as it travels to Kingston, R.I. to face the University of Rhode Island at 3:30 p.m. today.

This is the first meeting of the two teams this season. Last year UMass defeated URI in the regular season, but lost to the Rams in the Atlantic 10 Tournament. Massachusetts is 18–1 all time against Rhode island, dating back to 1978.

For the No. 5 Minutewomen (5–1) today's game marks their first conference tilt. Last Sunday, the team bounced back from a loss to Iowa by defeating Penn State 4–3 in overtime.

Providing the offense for UMass will be sophomores Eric Johnston and Kate Putnam, and senior Kyle Rothenberger. The three combined to score all four goals against Penn State.

Johnston scored two goals, including the game winner in overtime. Putnam tied the game, sending it into overtime, and Rothenberger converted a penalty corner for her third goal of the season. Johnston leads the team with four goals, with junior Courtney MacLean and freshman Saskia Fuchs close behind with three goals apiece.

Once again the defense needs to look no further than senior goaltender Hilary Rose. Through the first six games Rose has allowed only eight goals, recorded two shutouts and 79 saves. She has also yet to allow a penalty corner or penalty stroke goal this season, as she has stopped 48 corners and three strokes. Rose's save percentage of .908 is near-perfect.

The UMass defense has been solid on the year in front of Rose. Anchored by senior co-captain Melanie Gore, the backs have been responsible for stopping opponent's

turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 9

No free agents; Phins phall phlat

JACOB W. MICHAELS on the NFL

Perhaps the biggest criticism of free agency and the salary cap in the National Football League is that it has created parity, eliminating any dominant teams and any team (even the Cardinals) can win on any given Sunday.

In some ways, this is true. No longer can a team expect to have the creampuffs of the NFL come into their stadium and roll over. Every game is a contest, even if some are still easier than others.

Perhaps nothing shows this as clearly as the "expansion" Carolina Panthers. The Panthers, in just their second year, convincingly beat five-time Super Bowl champion San Francisco, leaving them in sole possession of first place in the NFC West.

The 49ers inability to keep all of their premier players (they lost pro bowl CB Eric Davis in the offseason) has hurt them enough for other teams to catch up and challenge them.

It isn't just the loss of the players that hurts teams, but the fact their star players go to other teams. So, not only does a team become worse when they lose players, but other teams can become better by picking them up. Davis, for example, now plays for Carolina, and helped them beat his former team.

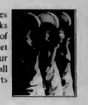
However, Carolina is fortunate in the fact they have General Manager Bill Polian, last year's Executive of the Year. Polian was the man who crafted the Buffalo Bills team that won four straight AFC titles, and he's doing the same in Carolina.

Polian has managed to do so by using the expansion draft, the college draft and free agency to mix a group of veterans and young players into a cohesive unit.

Polian's Panthers, however, are the exception to what seems to be the rule in free agency. He has managed to take a lot of different players and mold them into one unit, because he had to.

However, the model most teams want to follow is that of two of the other best GMs in the league — John Butler, who took Polian's job in Buffalo, and Carl Peterson, GM of the Kansas City Chiefs.

They keep the core of their teams intact, continue to build through the draft, and try to find one or two players that can fit into the system and contribute.



The Bills have continued to excel in the last two years by holding onto Bruce Smith, Jim Kelly, and Thurman Thomas, drafting players like Darick Holmes, Rueben Brown and Eric Moulds, and bringing in people like Quinn Early, Bryce Paup and Chris Spielman, who can quickly be fit into the Bills' system.

The Chiefs have tried to do the same, and managed to keep almost every player from the squad

turn to NFL page 9

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 17 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Thursday, September 26, 1996

Peace and harmony

UMass welcomes nine Tibetan monks next week as part of its Festival of Tibet celebration, and our cover section has all the info (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Field Hockey beats URI

Senior goalie Hilary Rose stopped four penalty strokes in two games as UMass beat Rhode Island 3–1 yesterday (see Sports, page 16).

WORLD

Russia's Boris Yeltsin faces bypass surgery

MOSCOW (AP) — Boris Yeltsin's bypass surgery will have to wait six to 10 weeks to give his damaged heart time to heal, and then he'll need two months to recuperate from the operation — meaning Russia will likely be governed from a sickbed into the new year. Doctors said yesterday that Yeltsin must remain in a hospital or health resort until he undergoes the triple or quadruple bypass surgery, although he can do paperwork and see visitors.

"He's mentally as alert as he can be," said American specialist Michael DeBakey, who consulted with Yeltsin's Russian doctors for three hours yesterday and will return for the operation.

"There is no reason why he cannot function in his capacity as president" while awaiting surgery, DeBakey said at a news conference.

However, new details of Yeltsin's ill health, including recent internal bleeding and the length of his expected recovery, are certain to bring new demands for his resignation by the Communist-led opposition.

NATION

Police break up riot over Duke appearance

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police in riot gear, some on horseback, moved in and fired flash-bang devices to disperse demonstrators protesting a campus appearance of former Ku Klux Klan grand wizard David Duke.

There were eight to 10 arrests, police said, and at least one protester was clubbed over the head by baton-wielding police in helmets and flak jackets.

Duke was at the California State University, Northridge, to debate civil rights leader Joe Hicks on a state ballot measure barring racial or gender preferences in public hiring, education and contracting.

Police said the arrests came after about 185 campus and Los Angeles police pushed the crowd away from the student union building where the debate was held.

Campus police Lt. Mark Hissong claimed several hundred protesters had tried to storm the front door of the building. Inside, Duke told a crowd of 800 that affirmative action programs are unfair to whites. An overflow audience of 430 watched on closed-circuit television from another campus building. Inside, Duke was shouted down, booed, hissed and laughed at when he said that affirmative action programs constitute "discrimination against better qualified whites."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 65 LOW: 45	HIGH: 65 LOW: 45	HIGH: 65 LOW: 45

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 14
Comics.....page 15
Crossword .....page 14
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News.....page 3
Sports.....page 16

JENNIFER JUTRAS \ COLLEGIAN

Teach an old dog new tricks...

Tom O'Conner, a junior natural resource studies major, fed his dog, Free, in front of the Student Union yesterday.

Off campus students cause of town's gripes

By Beth McCarthy
Collegian Staff

Relations between the University of Massachusetts and the town of Amherst may soon turn sour after recent complaints from Amherst Selectman Hill Boss.

This summer, representatives from UMass and the town of Amherst made efforts to improve traditionally strained relations through the creation of "impact committees." The plan was that when problems arise, each party would come together, through the committees, in search of solution.

One of the top concerns of the town is off campus students' behavior, which many residents allege is disturbing and determining what role UMass will play in dealing with the students.

Six days into the fall semester, Boss said, police were called several times to break up off campus students' parties.

Boss cited one incident in particular where the police were called to a Main St. house three times in one weekend, the last visit resulting in the arrests of five UMass students for illegal possession of kegs.

According to Boss, this particular house has gotten a reputation over the years, with Amherst residents, as the "Animal House."

"This is a perfect model for exactly the kind of things we're talking about," said Boss, who did not expect to see these types of incidents until vacation time neared. "This is exactly what is up for negotiations and we will continue to pound on this issue."

Boss said he has been trying to convince UMass administration that they must be more accountable for their students, no matter where they live. It is an issue, he said, which has sparked controversy for years.

"The decision makers are reluctant to make policy," said Boss.

What is up for debate is the one sentence in the Undergraduate Rights & Responsibilities handbook that addresses the University's role in the lives of students who live off campus.

The handbook says: "The University may apply the standards set forth in the [Code of Student Conduct] to serious violations of the law or acts of misconduct which occur on other locations when the behavior distinctly and directly effects the University community."

Boss feels this should include off campus parties and incidents when non-student town residents are bothered by students.

The Administration at UMass interprets this line as being strictly referring to serious criminal acts such as rape, assault and murder.

"In no way shape or form is this office about to go around following students downtown or monitor off campus behavior," said Jo-Anne Vanin, assistant vice chancellor for student affairs.

Tom Robinson, vice chancellor of student affairs, who said he has not dealt with this issue directly, would like to see this problem resolved by bringing all parties affected together.

"When any behavior concerning students arises, then students should be there to represent themselves," said Robinson, who believes this situation can be settled.

John Feudo, associate vice chancellor of UMass advancement, who has been a direct participant in the discussions between the town and UMass, said he was not aware of the problems that have arisen from off campus students.

There have been no direct conversations between UMass and the town of Amherst up to this point in regards to recent reports of disturbances.

Feudo said he is waiting to address any issues that the town may have at their meeting. This conference is not scheduled at this time, but Feudo expects to have a scheduled date within the next couple of weeks.

Former advisor to FDR, JFK to speak on status of social left

This afternoon at 4:00 p.m., the noted economist John Kenneth Galbraith will speak in Memorial Hall, at The University of Massachusetts.

Galbraith is the Paul Wrburg Professor of economics at Harvard University and will speak on "The Social Left Today; The World View Today."

He has written many books including The Affluent Society and The New Industrial State. His most recent book The Good Society was published earlier this year.

Galbraith's academic career includes positions at the University of California at Berkeley and Princeton University. He joined the economics department at Harvard in 1948 and retired in 1975. His government service encompassed administering the wartime system of price controls in the early 1940s and served as director of U.S. Strategic Bombing Survey in 1945.

For public service, he received the Medal of Freedom in 1946 and in 1960 served as an advisor to Sen. John F. Kennedy during the Presidential election and was later appointed by Kennedy to be ambassador to India.

– Joe Fountain

UMass receives $200,000 grant

Scholarships go to high school valedictorians and saludatorians

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts Board of Higher Education recently awarded the University of Massachusetts a $200,000 Performance Improvement Program Grant.

With the grant, the Office of Student Affairs has created a scholarship program for valedictorians and saludatorians.

The program will enable UMass to attract more highly qualified students by providing scholarship grants over four years to selected valedictorians and saludatorians who are Massachusetts residents and graduates of state high schools, according to Tom Robinson, vice chancellor for student affairs.

"We are very proud that our proposal has been funded, said Robinson, "This is an important piece of our scholarship program to attract quality students from the commonwealth to UMass Amherst."

Scholarships, valued at $8,000, will be awarded to 25 students over four years.

The Performance Improvement Program is designed to provide incentive funding to promote priorities of the Board of Higher Education and the Commonwealth.

The priorities include the improvement of academia through technology, improving student retention and promoting collaborative projects between campuses, especially through distance learning.

"These grants are investments in innovation," said Sen. Stanley C. Rosenberg (D–Amherst), Chairman of the Senate Ways and Means Committee. "By committing ourselves today to enhancing our use of technology, fortifying our academic programs, and improving campus efficiency we are giving our students the advantage they will need in tomorrow's increasingly competitive economy."

Board of Higher Education Chairman James Carlin said. "There should always be a pool of funds available for the Board to promote innovation and improve academic programs. This is a key role for the Board of Higher Education."

The Performance Improvement Program allocated $3.8 million in grants to 25 (out of 40) institutions of public higher education in Massachusetts.

Chancellor of the Board of Higher Education, Stanley Z. Koplik said that campus interest in the program was enormously high and resulted in some outstanding innovation.

"Most of the grant proposals were extremely well conceived. My only regret is that more could not be funded," added Koplik.

Other University of Massachusetts campuses also received grants. The Boston campus received $124,000 in order to develop a joint assessment, placement and advising program with Massasoit Community College.

The Dartmouth campus will be creating a cooperative education program option (similar to the program at Northeastern University) with their $120,000 grant.

UMass Lowell received $35,380 to create a program in which faculty will work with high school juniors to test their level of math knowledge and advise students on the courses they should take senior year.

Koplik said, "This grant program is designed to bring our campuses to the forefront of American higher education, where we can lead by example. This is a great step in pursuing that goal."

The Performance Improvement Program was funded through the General Appropriations Act for the Fiscal Year 1997.

Reported rape victim won't press charges

The woman who reported being raped in a residence hall in Orchard Hill Residential Area Sunday night has opted not to press charges, university police sources say.

John Luippold, University of Massachusetts Police Chief, confirmed the report.

"Sunday evening we received a report of a rape which occurred in a residence hall in the Orchard Hill Area early Sunday morning," Luippold said. "We have had an interview with the victim, and classified it as an acquaintance rape."

According to Luippold, during that interview, the victim decided not to press charges.

However, there is still an ongoing police investigation into the situation.

"We will continue to speak with her about her options," Luippold said. "We will make sure she receives appropriate medical care, and is informed about the court and campus judicial system, the Code of Student Conduct and services offered by the Everywoman's Center Counsellor/Advocate program."

The Everywoman's Center, located in Nelson House, provides services for victims of sexual assault, such as short- term counselling and support groups.

The Everywoman's Center also staffs a 24–hour hotline for people who have been or know someone who has been sexually assaulted.

– Laura Stock

Open house educates students

Center assists students in job hunting, resumes & interviews

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

Junior Stephani Wallerman was one of the 2,000 students to attend the Mather Career Center Open House on Tuesday.

Wallerman, a sociology major, received information on job openings, writing resumes and what to expect during an interview.

"I found the open house very informative. I learned a great deal and also realized that I need to get started on building a resume," said Wallerman.

The open house offered useful information to students preparing to enter the work force, took the form of a "highway," a user friendly metaphor for career choice that encourages job planning, exploration, destinations and U–turns.

The event was held in the Student Union Building Ball Room.

Along the "highway," students found informative stops like Drive–in workshops, Credential Crossing, Employment Options Park, Community Service Corner, Field Experience and Career Boulevard.

Lenora Maxwell, the campus relations representative for Electronic Data System, an information technical service corporation helped students with their resumes.

"We have been very busy today. We have had many company specific questions, but mostly we have been answering questions about the interview processes, and resume styles," said Maxwell.

The only businesses allowed to attend the Center's open house are Mather's "Partners in recruiting" companies.

At "Employment Options Park," Dr. Pro, a job referral program, was for sale.

Dr. Pro can perform job hunts in two ways; campus recruiting and electronic resume referrals.

Turn to CAREER, page 2

JENNIFER JUTRAS \ COLLEGIAN

We want the world...

Chris Roncarati, a junior art major, tries to make it to the top of the world with a little help from Lynda Short, a senior natural resource studies major.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Thursday, Sept. 26

Meeting — The UMass chapter of Pi Sigma Alpha (the national political science honor society) will be holding a welcome/informational meeting with faculty and students at 5 p.m. in 6th floor of Thompson. All political science majors and minors are encouraged to attend, and free pizza will be served.

Meeting — The UMass Objectivist Club, an organization for admirers of Ayn Rand's novels and philosophical writings, is sponsoring a videotaped presentation, "An Introduction to Objectivism" by Dr. Leonard Peikoff, along with its first meeting. For more information, please contact Keith at 546–1862.

Meeting — There will be an informational meeting about a UMass trip to Israel being offered on Winter Break (Dec. 23–Jan 2), at 7 p.m. at the Hillel House.

Meeting — The Math Club will hold its first meeting at 7 p.m. in LGRT 1521D. All math majors invited. Come tour the new undergraduate reading lounge and meet other math majors. Pizza will be served for those signed up in LGRT - 1521D ahead of time.

Friday, Sept. 27

Education — The UMass Library Workshops are offering an educational series on ERIC, PsycINFO, Dissertation Abstracts, and the World Wide Web. The course, taught by Lori Mestre, the educational librarian, will be held from 11:30 a.m.–12:30 p.m. For more information, call 545-0150.

Meeting — World AIDS Day Planning meeting for everyone interested in planning for the UMass community's observance of World AIDS Day will be held from 2–3 p.m. in the Campus Center. Check the Campus Center message board or call 577-5181 for further details.

Open House — The Student Union Craft Center is sponsoring an open house from 5–7 p.m., with demonstrations of pottery, jewelry making, batik dying, button making and other crafts. The Craft Center is located across form the Hatch in the Student Union.

Saturday, Sept. 28*Community* — Hillel is sponsoring an open house from 1:30–4 p.m. For more information, call 549–1710.

Fund–Raiser — Bags of 10 top-quality Holland tulip bulbs in UMass colors will be offered to the UMass community and the public for a $10 donation. Proceeds form the sale will be used to fund beautification projects throughout campus. The sale is being held from 9 a.m.–1 p.m. at the Campus Center concourse, 8:30–10:30 a.m. at Memorial Hall, and at McGuirk Stadium (Alumni Tent) from 11 a.m.– noon.

Music — The Wild West and Brahms performed by the University Orchestra, Mark Russell Smith, director. Tickets are $8; $4; UMass students free with valid ID. UMass Concert Hall, 8 p.m.

Sunday, Sept. 29

Forum — The public is invited to a forum on the recent church burnings sponsored by the United Christian Foundation and Hillel Foundations at UMass, and by the Amherst Interfaith Service Council members. Speakers include the Rev. Ann Gere of the Greater Springfield Council of Churches and the Rev. John C. Ike, III of Goodwin Memorial African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church. The forum, at Wesley United Church, 367 N. Pleasant St. from 7–9:30 p.m., will be followed by a candlelight walk to the town common and a brief vigil and prayers. For more information, contact Rev. Kent Higgins at 549–3501.

Meeting — Are you from the Caribbean or West Indies, or have parents from there? A new RSO is forming for those interested in learning about the culture, food, festivals and people of the Caribbean. Everyone is cordially invited to attend at 7 p.m. in room 804–8 of the Campus Center. For more information, call Nizam at 546–3967.

Notices

Auditions — The UMass Theater Guild's auditions for the Fall 1996 musical The Pajama Game will be held on Friday 9/27 at 7 p.m., Saturday 9/28 at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. Callbacks are Sunday 9/29 at 10 a.m. For more information, call 545–0415.

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley offers rides to students to attend the 10 a.m. service in Amherst. Drivers arrive at the Knowlton and Prince bus stops at 9:45. Please call Mark to confirm, or for other stops, at 253-0361.

Everywoman's Center — Acculturation Group for Latina Women, facilitated by Mari Vicente, Thurs. from 4–6 p.m. Child Sexual Abuse Survivors Support Groups: Group 1 facilitated by Sara Elinoff, Mondays from 7–9 p.m. Group 2 facilitator, day, and time TBA. Coming Out Group For Lesbians, facilitated by Lynne Schachne, Mondays 4–5:30 p.m. Lifting Your Spirits, facilitated by Carla Brennan and Diana Dalendina, Weds. 4–5:30 p.m. Eco–Psychology for Women, facilitated by Carla Brennan, Fridays 10–11:30 a.m. Post Abortion Support Group, facilitated by Peggy Warwick, Wednesdays 5:30–6:30 p.m. Self–Esteem & Assertiveness for Women, facilitated by Carla Brennan, Wednesdays 6:30–8 p.m. Single Mothers Support Group, facilitated by Amy Rosebury, Tuesdays 1–2:30 p.m. Women & Divorce, facilitated by Ali Thompson, Tuesdays 6:30–8 p.m. All groups offered by the Everywoman's Center begin in October, and offer a safe and confidential space. For other groups, call 545-0883.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition meetings are every Tuesday at 7 p.m. in room 306 of the Student Union. For more information, call the ARC office at 5–1925.

Dancing — Beginner classes in Cajun dancing and Appalachian clogging are starting on Sunday evenings from 6–7 p.m. No experience or partner needed, all ages welcome. Classes are held in Westfield at 132 Elm St. For more information, call Jo Sarnelli at (413) 746–9067.

Five College–REFLECT, the Five College Bereavement Support Program is a student organization devoted to helping those coping with grief. REFLECT is offering two free 8 week grief support groups this semester. Groups are forming now. Please call 577–5316 for more information.

Staff Needed — The UMass Index yearbook needs staff in all departments. Editorial positions are available in Photo, Layout, Copy, and Marketing departments. An assistant copy editor and assistant sports editor are also needed. Meetings are held on Wednesdays at 7 p.m., 304 Student Union, or call 545–0848 if interested.

Support group — Synthesis Center Associate Rebecca Reid leads an ongoing support group for single people over 30 from 7:15 to 8:45 p.m. in downtown Amherst. Single, divorced, widowed and all sexual orientation are welcome. There is a low fee. For information, call 253–5494.

Religious — The Muslim Student Association at the University of Massachusetts invites all Muslims in the Amherst area to weekly Friday prayer from 1 to 2 p.m. in the Campus Center. The room number will be posted on the Notice Board. For more information, call Utama at 256–8482 or Laili at 253–0874.

Discussion Group — "A Course in Miracles" will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for 10 weeks on Mondays starting in September. For more information, call 253–3795.

Dance — The Northeast American School of Dance Studio in Northampton will hold a dance spree every Friday from 8:30 p.m. to midnight every Friday. People can dance to variety of music in a smoke and alcohol–free environment. All ages welcome. Sliding scale. For more information, call 584–8167.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Leaving the Scene
Sept. 24
A vehicle was struck while parked in parking lot 63.

Animal Complaint
Sept. 23
There was a report of a moose heading into the woods by the observatory from Orchard Hill Drive.
Sept. 24
A moose was sighted in the north end of parking lot 11. Environmental Police, Hadley Police and Amherst Police were notified.

Annoying Behavior
Sept. 25
There was a report of a female screaming in Sylvan Residential Area courtyard; police checked and found it to be OK.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering
Sept. 24
A notebook was stolen from Patterson Residence Hall.

Drug Law Offenses
Sept. 23
The odor of marijuana was reported from John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.
Sept. 24
The odor of marijuana was reported from Crampton Residence Hall.

Larceny
Sept. 23
Four balance scales were reported stolen from Goessmann Laboratory.
A VCR was reported stolen from McNamara Residence Hall.
A telephone was reported missing from the Student Union Building.
The rear wheel of a bike was stolen from Van Meter Residence Hall.
A license was stolen from Franklin Dining Hall.

Lost/Found Property
Sept. 23
Keys found in the Campus Center were turned in to Public Safety.
IDs found in Boyden Gymnasium were turned in to Public Safety.
Sept. 24
The owner of a wallet found in Flint Laboratory was notified.
A CD face plate was found at Boyden Gymnasium and turned in to the police.

Noise Complaint
Sept. 25
A loud explosion was reported from Sylvan Residential Area courtyard.

Suspicious Person/Activity
Sept. 23
Student security staff was assisted in Gorman Residence Hall.
Sept. 24
A caller from McNamara Residence Hall reported a substance leaking from the sprinkler system. Environmental Health & Safety were informed.
An individual was reportedly upset about having to pay at the Campus Center Garage.

Vandalism
Sept. 24
A vehicle in parking lot 47 was damaged by a paint ball.

career

continued from page 1

Through campus recruiting, employers came to campus with a list of anticipated openings. Students may participate in a screening interview. After the interview, students call the job line, available through Dr. Pro, to see if they have earned a second interview.

Electronic Resume Referral is commonly used by second semester seniors and employers with immediate openings who can not visit the campus.

Over 100 jobs a week become available through the Center and Dr. Pro.

Resumes are matched to companies by the student's major, skills and employer types. If a company is interested in a student's resume, they will personally contact the student.

Bruce Tulgan, a graduate from Amherst College, spoke at the open house at 4 p.m.

He is the founder of Rainmaker Inc., a company that studies the working lives of young people by helping them develop strategies to succeed in the job market and helps managers recruit, motivate and keep those just entering the career force.

Tulgan said that he sees significant possibilities for young people today, which he refers to as "Generation X."

"I say Generation X with a smile because I know what our generation is really capable of doing," Tulgan said. "Our generation for better or worse has been named Generation X. We need to redefine what that term means."

Tulgan serves in a advising role to large corporations, relaying to them the opinions and sentiments of 20–somethings towards management and the workplace.

"Many managers tell me that Generation–X'ers are disloyal, they don't want to work hard or for a long time, they want every thing right now, not later," he said.

Tulgan stressed that the world is changing everyday and "the decisions you make every day, every hour, every minute will make or break you. If you want to succeed, it's no longer just the decision you make right after college."

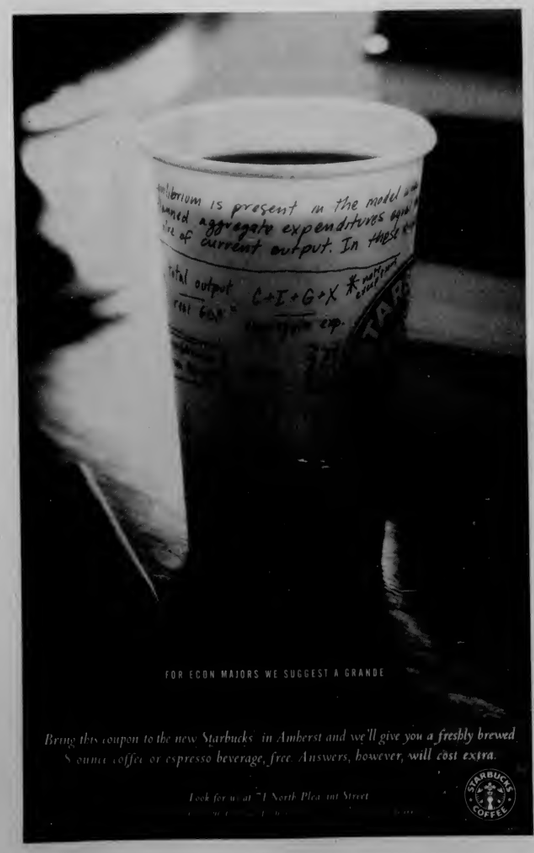
According to Tulgan, everyone should have a five year plan.

"You have to know where you want to end up, and from there map your way back to the present. You must have daily, weekly, monthly and yearly goals in order to reach your five year plan."

He also stressed the importance of communicating with people.

"You can't make anything happen in this world today unless you deal effectively with other human beings... Don't go deal with people unless you know what you want from them," he said.

Tulgan also said that it is important for college graduates not to let their education end after they receive their degree.



He shared the following fact with the audience: "more than half of what you know is going to be obsolete in five years. In addition, more than half of what you are going to need to know in order to succeed in five years has not yet been invented."

Finally, he said, students must learn to market themselves.

"In order to succeed you need to learn to market the value you have to add... you need to sell yourself inside and out, then you need to deliver what you promise and if you don't you'll never get another chance."

Wallerman said she found Tulgan's speech very informative.

"I am realizing that I have a long way to go before I graduate. I don't know where I want to be next year, never mind five years from now," she said.

These Co-Op Employers are Coming To Campus this Fall And Looking for You!!
Spring & Summer 1997 Co-Ops

WALT DISNEY - HRTA
DIGITAL - EE, COMP. SCI.
EMC CORP. - BUSINESS, COMP.SCI.
MICROSOFT - COMP.SCI, ENG.
LOCKHEED MARTIN - ENGINEERING
IBM - BUSINESS
PRATT&WHITNEY-ALL MAJORS
MONSANTO - CHEM, CHEM E., FOMGT
CABLETRON - COMP.SCI.,EE

Other Exciting Co-op Opportunities

BOSTON GLOBE - JOURNALISMS, PHOTO
REEBOK - COMMUNICATIONS
WASHINGTON POST - JOURNALISM

Welcome to Field Experience Workshops are being held on:
Mondays - 2:30pm
Wednesdays - 3:00pm
Thursdays - 4:00pm
For Further Information Call
545-6265

Change Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
40 Some U-Turns
THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE
DETOURS
30 No Limits
NO ONE-WAY
20 CONSULT MAPS

Hillel House sponsors Israel trip

By Scott Jason and Bryan Schwartzman
Collegian Correspondents

There will be a meeting at 7 p.m. tonight at Hillel House for students interested in travelling to Israel over winter break.

The trip planned for Dec. 23 to Jan. 2 will take students to one of the most culturally rich and controversial countries in the world. The group will travel by bus and spend time in Jerusalem, Tel Aviv, Yaffo, Golan Heights, Galilee, Masada, Judean Desert and the Negev, the Dead Sea, and more sites throughout Israel.

"Going to Israel is very special for a Jewish person" said Hillel director and Rabbi Saul Perlmutter. "[The University of Massachusetts] is one of only a handful of campuses that can make something like this happen."

Kim Richman, Program Director of Hillel, described the trip as "a recreational and educational experience." Students will get the opportunity to hike places described in the Bible, explore archaeological sights and view diverse landscapes.

The UMass group will be joining students from over 150 universities. "It will be a nice experience in building the Jewish community amongst UMass students and other students around the country," Richman said.

He also said that he hopes students "bring back the incredible experience and continue to be in touch with the community and help build the community on campus."

Forty students will be selected to take part in the trip, which costs $2,100. However, 20 of those selected will receive subsidies from the United Jewish Appeal lowering the cost to $1,400. The other 20 will have the cost lowered to $500 through a subsidy provided by Harold Grinspoon, a Hillel House supporter.

In light of recent clashes between Palestinians and Israelis, Perlmutter said the areas selected for travel are considered secure. In addition, he said, the size of the group will diminish any possibilities of danger.

Tonight's meeting will discuss the details of the trip and the application process. Those not able to attend can call Hillel House at 549–1710.

JENNIFER JUTRAS \ COLLEGIAN

Welcome back.
Tammi Mack (center), a social justice education graduate student, talks to (from right to left) Nicole Lisa, a senior women's studies major, Jodi Bucknam, a senior English major, and Tina Cincotti, also a senior women's studies major, at the Women's Studies' Welcome Back reception yesterday in the Campus Center.

YOUR PAPER —
THE MASSACHUSSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN!
Cover news — for the Collegian!
Interview bands — for the Collegian!
Put your opinions in a column—for the Collegian!
Interested? Call 545-3500 TODAY! Don't Delay!

JENNIFER JUTRAS \ COLLEGIAN

Duck... duck... goose?
Gates Turner, a freshman Chinese major, finds a quiet place to study in front of the Campus pond.

House votes to crackdown on immigration

By Cassandra Burrell
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Cracking down on illegal aliens, the House passed two bills yesterday — one focusing on law enforcement and the other letting states deny public school education to illegal alien children. Only the first had a chance of getting President Clinton's signature.

The Senate was expected to reject the second bill — passed 254-175 — and Clinton has said he would veto the measure, even though it would allow currently enrolled illegal aliens to stay in school.

Supporters in the House said the bill would remove an incentive for foreigners to come here illegally and allow voters to decide whether they want to bear the expense of educating children who shouldn't be in the country.

"This bill says, 'Don't come to America and think the taxpayers of America are going to take care of you if you're here illegally,'" said House Speaker Rep. Newt Gingrich (R-Ga.)

Opponents said it would it would punish innocent children for the behavior of their parents and push thousands of young people into the streets.

"This is a foolish piece of legislation," Rep. Sheila Jackson-Lee said.

The far larger bill, which would nearly double the number of border patrol officers and speed deportation procedures, passed earlier in the day, 305-123.

"This bill secures America's borders, penalizes alien smugglers, expedites the removal of criminal and illegal aliens, prevents illegal aliens from taking American jobs and ends non-citizens' abuse of the welfare system," said Rep. Lamar Smith (R-Texas) who introduced the legislation.

Some Democrats have urged Clinton to veto it as well, saying the legislation is too hard on legal immigrants and too soft on unscrupulous employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens.

The president has asked Republican leaders for some changes, said White House spokeswoman Kathleen McKiernan. Nonetheless, she called it "a major step forward."

"We still would like to see improvements in the provision concerning the treatment of legal immigrants and worksite enforcement," she said. "We've asked the leadership to take that under consideration and make some adjustments."

Seventy-six Democrats joined 229 Republicans in approving the bill and sending it to the Senate, which was expected to vote on it later this week. Voting against the bill were 117 Democrats, five Republicans and one independent.

Republicans — who worked for two years to bring the immigration bill to a final vote — said the bill was Congress' first serious action against illegal immigration in years.

"Every three years enough illegal aliens enter the country permanently to populate a city the size of Boston or Dallas or San Francisco," Smith said as the House voted on the measure that was a compromise of separate bills passed last spring by the House and Senate.

But Democrats called the bill a ruse that does not attack the true causes of illegal immigration. Some also suggested that Republicans were using the issue to score points with voters weeks before the election.

"The problem with this bill is that it cons the American people into thinking major new steps are going to be done," said Rep. Howard Berman (D-Calif.).

Under the bill, local police and other law enforcement officers would have new powers to detain and remove illegal aliens and foreigners would have a tougher time winning U.S. asylum by claiming persecution in their home countries.

Penalties for alien smuggling and document fraud would be increased. U.S. sponsors wanting to sponsor foreign family members into the country would be required to earn 140 percent to 200 percent of the poverty level. Under current law, sponsors must earn at least 100 percent of the poverty level.

CAMPUS GEAR
FOR ALL YOUR COLLEGIATE NEEDS
WELCOME PARENTS!
BUY YOUR UMASS MERCHANDISE AT CAMPUS GEAR AND RECEIVE A CARD GOOD FOR 20% OFF YOUR NEXT PURCHASE
ALSO
CHECK OUT OUR GREAT DEALS ON FLEECE & JACKETS
including Champion U.S.A.
VISIT CAMPUS GEAR TODAY!
255 Triangle Street•Amherst, Ma 01002
(413) 549-0944
Between Dairy Mart & Northhampton Co-operative Bank

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring, Blue Moon "Pumpkin Ale" $17.99/case
Jim Beam $13.99 1.75 liter
Hornsby's Cider $4.99 6/PK
Keystone Light $9.99 30/PK. cans
"The 6/PK. Bonanza"!
Smutty Nose - Shool Pale Ale, & "Old Brown Dog Ale"!
Brewery Hill - Cherry, P. Ale, Blk + Tan, Rasp. Ale &"Honey Ale"!
Rhino Chassers- Amber Ale, Roasted Lager & "Peach Wheat"!
Catamount - Porter, Wheat, Gold, P. Ale, & 8th "Octoberfest"!
Blue Moon - Belgian White, Blonde, Nut Brown, Rasp., & "Pumpkin Ale"!
Mix/Match "two" 6/Pks . . . $9.95
Santa Marina Pinot Grigio, Sangiovese Merlot $4.99 1.5 liter
Vodka 80° $8.49 1.75 liter
All Beers Plus Deposit OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD •Delivery Available•

REDKEN
5TH AVENUE NYC
Voted Best Salon by the UMass College Reader's Poll 1996
HAIR EAST
mon-fri. 9-8
sat. 9-5
sun. 12-5
256-0438
103 N. Pleasant St.
(next to bart's)

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Morse Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Mark McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Smuhetmer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor
Michael Ellicott News Editor
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Sean Horgan Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1934 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Dole's conspiracy theory

It's at times like these I start to wonder if Bob Dole has developed such a taste for his own foot that he simply can't wait for any opportunity to put it right in his mouth.

As reported in Wednesday's Boston Globe, when Dole was pressed about his ability to pay for his proposed tax cut, he made a startling announcement. He announced that Clinton had his own "secret" tax plan.

Huh?

That's right, at about the same time that Dole said implementing his tax plan would be "easy" simply because he had the "will" to do so, he offered up the allegation that Clinton has a "secret" plan instead of explaining his own.

The Globe also reported that while Dole spoke for an hour, he didn't have time to go into any specifics of his plan.

Gee, talking for an hour and not saying anything. After he loses the election, there's a big future for him in infomercials, I suppose.

But the intrigue of it all is too much to resist. Secret plans! Unanswered questions! Quick! Call Scully and Mulder! Call Oliver Stone! We got ourselves one of them ol' fashioned conspiracies!

Bob Dunn

With Dole's rampant allegations about Clinton's supposed plan and his buttoned lip about his own, you'd think Clinton was trying to tax the Roswell aliens or something.

Wait, that's it! It's so simple! It's devilishly clever!

• Clinton is going to naturalize the aliens, retroactively, making them American citizens and charging them for back taxes dating back to 1947.

• Clinton will then use the discovery of life on Mars to provide extra funding for the space program, making it easier to find the aliens' home planet and bill them for expenses. Everything ranging from storage to manpower fees to equipment costs. Not to mention collateral damage to the base, costs of cleaning up the crash site, etc. And of course, we could charge lots of juicy interest, and the exchange rate between here and the second star to the right works to our advantage as well.

• Once the aliens get the bill and discover we have the bodies, then we can charge them for landing fees and extradition costs, to retrieve them.

• As a final move, Clinton will copyright the number 51 (after the hanger that the aliens were residing in) and the government will collect royalties every time the number is used. It's flawless!!

Give me just a small break.

It smacks of just another attempt by Dole to draw attention away from the one great flaw in his tax plan.

It won't work.

Reuters news service reported that 546 economists, including seven Nobel laureates have determined that Dole's plan not only won't work as promised, it will inflate the budget deficit (which we wouldn't have to worry about at all at this point if it wasn't rung up to nightmare proportions during the last two Republican administrations) but will severely diminish the investment capital for both public and private interests. Investments that Dole, supposedly, would be in favor of.

So Dole, in addition to being perceived as unlikable, mean-spirited, too old, out of touch, closed-minded and unelectable is now making the centerpiece of his campaign a plan that is pretty much guaranteed not to work.

Way to go, Bob!

His campaign is fascinating in that respect. It's like watching a driver's education car wreck film in slow motion. You know the car is going to hit the wall completely destroying itself and everyone inside of it but you can't look away, either. We sit there watching in rapt anticipation of his next wrong move.

Even his token conservative trophy woman, Christine Todd Whitman hasn't been much help lately. Dole held both her and her state of New Jersey up as shining examples of how you could lower taxes and deficits at the same time.

Well, sort of.

Most analysts have agreed that while Whitman's tax plan may have helped the Garden State out of its rut, the plan won't translate to the rest of the country. Not to mention that she didn't exactly get elected by promising Jersey-ites lower taxes. She did it by running against a really unlikable opponent.

So, my advice to the soon-to-be-private-citizen would be this:

If you'd like to be working in politics after Nov. 7, lose the conspiracy theories, quit yammering on about how you've "earned" the presidency and how you can simply "will" a tax cut. Quit trying to translate a small scale economic plan (whose long term results haven't been seen yet, by the way) into the larger, national scale, and come up with an idea! Quit the name calling and rhetoric. If you don't like the crotchety old man label then quit acting like one and get to work. Answer questions when you're asked, and quit running scared.

Jeez, you act like you've never done this before.

Bob Dunn is a Collegian columnist.

Can't beat meat

C. Taylor Conner

Back in the day, there were cavemen. But you knew that already.

They were big, hairy mothers whose personal hygiene was literally all but non-existent, yet whose fashion sense still bettered that of most Phish fans. Neanderthals, Cro-Magnons, rugby players — they all lived and died, peddling their stone-wheeled, Bronto Burger-toting cars into that Bedrock drive-in in the sky to make way for superior beings.

Although these mammals' intelligence and physiology may have differed over the course of their evolutionary development, one trait was shared by all — the love of meat.

Prior to the discovery of fire allowing for cooking (which was known as "not cooking" before its invention), primitive folks would often sit down to a hearty meal of raw meat, served at cave temperature, and some lightly killed cockroaches on the side. The feast would be preceded by the ancient prayer, "Mama say mama sa mumakisa," which loosely translated means, "May there be fewer worms in tonight's raw meat."

Soon enough, time passed (as it tends to do from time to time), and the new flame-knowledgeable homo sapiens learned how to grill, bake, fry, deep-fry and deep-fry like my relatives in Texas. And God saw that it was good.

However, some people didn't.

These party-poopers whined and moaned about the ill effects of red meat — The clogged arteries and cardiac arrests; the murder of innocent animals; the low quality of fast food. The griping approached from all sides, slowly suffocating meatophiles, like yours truly.

Yeah, that's right, ye of self-righteous stature — I dig meat. There are millions out there like me. I am fully aware of all sides of the anti-meat crusade, and have determined myself 100 percent, FDA-approved Pro-Choice.

Consider the most striking piece of health-concerned evidence in my favor: the leading cause of death in black males between the ages of 18 and 25 is murder, and black males die an average of six years before white males.

Thus, the way I see it, if you're not dead by the time you're 26, and you're going to die sooner anyway, there are a lot of burgers, t-bones and cheese steaks to pack into that interval.

And by the way, those "cheese steak" things I mentioned above lead into my next health argument. As a Philadelphia native, I've had to endure not only the collective naivete of 48.5 other states (the exception being South Jersey) who ignominiously refer to the delicacy as a "steak and cheese," but also the poor excuses at many eateries which are intended to pass for our culinary delight.

Everyone should have a real cheese steak before expiring. Everyone. You'll die happier and healthier. Period.

As for the vegetarians, vegans, vegomites and veggiesexuals, I apologize for what I'm about to say — humans are carnivores. We are not giraffes, rhinos, triceratops or any other sort of true leaf-eaters.

While I acknowledge and respect our ability to choose on a conscious level not to consume animals, the decision conflicts sharply with the nature of the beast. And let's not think so loftily that we conveniently forget that we are indeed beasts.

To put it succinctly, the only three major differences between us and monkeys are the abilities to speak, walk erect and to know that having sex in a zoo cage while children are watching is bad.

In a perfect world, we'd all manage to be civilized, yet indulge in our most base animal desires when appropriate. In my perfect world, I'd capitalize on those instincts with an entrepreneurial venture, aptly titled Conner's House of Meat.

In keeping with the idea of simplicity, my restaurant's menu will feature just one selection — meat. You can have it either raw or cooked. There will be no medium rare, well- done or Cajun-style. You do not have your choice of animal.

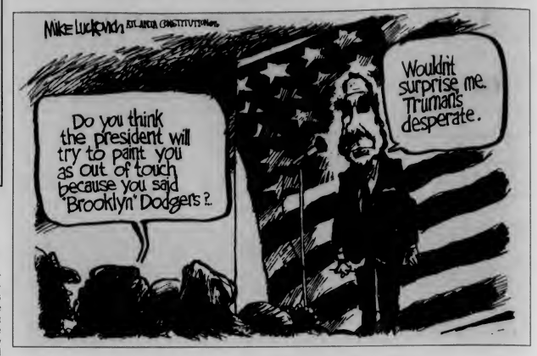
The side orders available: chipped, chopped, creamed or whipped meat. Sorry, no rabbit food.

The drink list: meat juice, served hot off the grill or chilled.

If all goes well, similarly themed restaurants — like Nitrate Delight, Fried Things-O-Rama, Pork Park, etc. — will follow for those of hearty heart.

While several customers may suffer premature heart attacks as they dine in my establishments, many will probably suck that last bone in a blissful state of primal ecstasy.

And, hey, in a cruel world where your unwitting demise may lurk just around the corner, why not meet your maker with a meat-made smile?

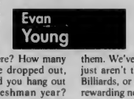


C. Taylor Conner is a Collegian columnist.

Have something to say?

Write a letter to the editor. Just make sure it's no longer than 400 words typed and includes names (first and last) and phone numbers for verification purposes. Have a nice day!

Opinion/Editorial



The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

This year's thoughts

Now that I am a senior, I look back at this University and the things that have happened to me over the years. I look at the way UMass has changed, I look at the ways my friends and I have changed, and I look at how much I have learned and how little I know. I look to the future and I become as scared as hell. I don't know what I want to do with my life, but I know what I don't want to do.

To the rest of the class of 1997, this may make sense. Think of how much this school has changed. When we were freshmen, you could not only smoke cigarettes in the dining commons, but they gave you ash trays in your own special sections. UMass had a different president. There were A, B, C, D, and E lots. There was a big black french fry on the steps of the Performing Arts Center, as well as a beautiful mural on the wall facing Haigis Mall. The Mullins Center was brand new. There was no Bueno y Sano, or Starbucks, or Chili's, and there was a bad nightclub on Rt. 9 called the Vertex. That year we got about 600 feet of snow.

Evan Young

Think of the friends you had your freshman year. How many of them are still here? How many are graduating in May? How many have dropped out, transferred, fallen out of touch? Who did you hang out with on the very first night of our freshman year? Remember the convocation (if you went), when we all laughed at the Chancellor for about 10 minutes like a bunch of complete wise-asses?

But, for as much as things may change, they will always stay the same. When I first wrote for this paper, I wrote something that I thought was a brand new idea. It may have been a pretty bad idea, but at least I had the energy enough to write the article and go down to the paper to have it published. This year, I read some of the stuff that has appeared on this page. You know what I realized? I realized that I haven't really come up with an original thought or column yet.

I've already said a lot of the things that younger columnists are saying now. When I was a bright-eyed sophomore, other Ed/Op writers before me had already said what I thought was so new. But the really scary thing that dawned on me a few days ago, is that the pages of the Collegian are not the only places where this kind of cycle of repetition is taking place.

Think about it, seniors... Look at the freshmen right now. They are pretty much the same as we were when we were freshmen. We got hammered all the time. We smoked lots of dope, slept through classes and enjoyed the freedoms of being away from home with our parents footing the bill. We got involved in all kinds of activities. We had no idea where any of the buildings on campus were. When I was a freshman, I didn't even know how to get to Northampton. I thought tower wars were funny. I thought I had clout.

Every year, the new class of freshmen are pretty much the same; they have the same experiences as the class before. They make new friends, they lose friends, they hate their roommates. This continues for the rest of the college career. The paths that people take are so much the same that when every class eventually becomes a class of seniors, they are all confused about what to do with their lives. Or, they all know exactly what grad school they want to go to.

We groan about taking the GREs. So has every senior before us who has had to take them. We've seen it all, and Brown House and frat parties just aren't that much fun anymore — a night at Mike's Billiards, or a beer at the Northampton Brewery are more rewarding now.

Seniors four years ago felt the same way as we do. Seniors 10 years ago felt the same way. Seniors five, 10, and 20 years from now will all experience the same things. For as many superficial and inconsequential changes that may occur on or around our campus, the true experience of college will remain for years and years, and has been in place for years and years. Barnelotti's may change names and become Joe's Downtown Bar & Grill, but UMass students will always wait in line to get in on Friday nights.

There is really no way to break out of this cycle; there is no need to. College, and life, is nothing but a long line of learning experiences. A 60-year-old person is wise because of their years, whether they are 60 in 1956 or 1996. A college freshman will always be a college freshman. A senior who writes articles like this for the Collegian will simply be repeating the thoughts and words of generations of seniors before him.

Evan Young is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

AT&T Looms

To the editor:

In a country where your worth as a human being is measured in your ability to be a consumer, it is easy to understand why the campus is bombarded with corporate hucksters and there's a Young Republican's Club.

There's talk, however, that in the years ahead it won't be the government that will jeopardize our personal freedom, but corporations. We saw evidence of this disturbing phenomenon on the recent AT&T survey. "Information is power," and included among the information the communications giant wanted to know was a space marked "social security number." Did you pause for a moment and wonder why AT&T needed your social security number, or did you turn it over to them for a funky T-shirt?

Roy Rutanen
Sylvan

Wildlife act a good idea

To the editor:

Hunters and trappers are trying to associate the animal rights group PETA (People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals) with the Question 1 campaign in Massachusetts, but the fact is that PETA has nothing to do with this campaign.

Question 1, "The Massachusetts Wildlife Protection Act," is supported by the Commonwealth's two oldest and largest animal protection groups — The Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and the Massachusetts Audubon Society — not PETA.

It is obvious that the campaign to defeat Question 1 will be based on scare tactics and outrageous statements. I, for one, have read the proposed law, and I support it. It will prohibit in most instances the use of certain cruel traps, but it does not ban trapping. Humane traps will be the preferred method of catching wildlife when necessary. It will ban the hunting of bears and bobcats with packs of dogs. Hounding is downright cruel and unnecessary. Hounding will end, but bear and bobcat hunting will continue.

Finally, Question 1 will eliminate the majority quota of hunters on the Fisheries and Wildlife Board which is supposed to manage wildlife for all of us. How does purchasing a hunting license make one qualified to set wildlife policy? I would rather have professional biologists and environmental scientists on this board so that the decisions are based on sound science, not the desire to satisfy trappers and hunters.

I say "yes" to Question 1, and urge my friends, neighbors, and everyone else to vote likewise.

Mary Kelly
New Ashford

Biology TA voices concerns

To the editor:

When I started my graduate studies in the biology department four years ago, I had to TA one session of Biology 102 (Introductory Zoology). At that time, coming from a University where there were never more than five to 10 students per TA in a single lab, I thought keeping track of 25 students who had never sat at a lab bench before was a great challenge. The rumor existed among some "old TAs" that "in my time, we used to have two TA's per lab session," but those were the "good old days."

The years went by and to our surprise and delight the interest in biology grew. Unfortunately, we did not see the same rate of growth in the state funds for education, nor in the TA funds for our department. The result was immediate; we did not have enough TAs to cope with all the incoming UMass students who thought that the question "what's life about" was an interesting one. Given the funds for the biology department, a series of different creative solutions were tried. First, we increased not only the number of lab sessions per TA but also the number of students per session, some TAs having two sessions with up to 30 students per session. However, teenage curiosity proved to be hard to battle and this first measure was not enough. The second one was to "hire" undergraduates to teach undergraduates, which although very economical, turned out not to be the best for the students. The third and almost inevitable strategy then came about: each graduate student will have three sessions or the equivalent!

The current measure raises many questions. First, considering that the main motive for having more labs per TA is the increased number of students and given that these students are paying tuition which is quite high for a state university, how is this money being used? Second, does the measure strictly respect the graduate appointment which establishes 20 hours of work per week? Every TA I talked to agreen that two sessions, plus lectures, grading, class preparation, and TA meetings can easily meet the 20 hour requirement. Third, how does the teaching load affect the general performance of graduate students? In other words, how much time is left for research if you TA three sessions of 25 students each? This is a major concern when we consider that graduate students are only warranted four years of funding through teaching assistantships. Fourth, how long will this system work? How long until the word spreads that the biology labs are poorly taught and that the graduate students have large teaching loads and little time for research?

All these questions are extremely important and the answers relevant for the future of our department. However, the most important question we should probably answer is what kind of education do we expect the biology department to offer. Every student that enrolls in a biology laboratory course and pays tuition and laboratory fees has the right to a well taught laboratory. Despite the efforts of all the graduate students, this right is not respected in the biology department of our state university.

Horacio O. de la Iglesia
Amherst

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
ARTS & LIVING
Thursday, September 26, 1996
Weekend Edition • Volume CVI Issue 17

Festival Schedule of Events

THE FESTIVAL OF TIBET
Oct. 1 – Oct. 6

Key to Rooms:
HG: Hampden Gallery
HT: Hampden Theater
HL: Hampden Lobby
SS: Southside Room
FAC: Fine Arts Center

Tuesday, Oct. 1
• 11 a.m. (HG, HT & HL)
Consecration.
Ceremony & Reception.
Free, public.
• 1 p.m. – 4 p.m. (HG, HT, HL & SS)
Workshop for UMass students, 5 college students & faculty. Free, first come, first serve (ID needed).
• 5 p.m. – 9 p.m. (HG, HT & HL)
Public hours, mandala & crafts exhibition & sale. Free.

Wednesday, Oct. 2
• 9:30 a.m. – 10:15 a.m.
10 a.m. – 10:45 a.m.
10:30 a.m. – 11:15 a.m.
(HG, HT, HL & SS)
Public School tours & Workshops. (pre-reg required 545-0680)
• 1 p.m. – 4 p.m.
(HG, HT, HL, & SS)
Workshop for Public School Teachers.
(Pre-reg)
• 5 p.m. – 9 p.m.
(HG, HT & HL)
Public hours, mandala & crafts. Exhibition & sale. Free.
• 7 p.m.
(SS)
"The Ancient Arts of Healing" talk by Geshe Lobsang Tenzin, suggested donation $10 at the door.

Thursday, Oct. 3
• 9:30 a.m. – 10:15 a.m.
10 a.m. – 10:45 p.m.
10:30 a.m. – 11:15 a.m.
(HG, HT, HL & SS)
Public School Tours & Workshop. (pre-reg required)

Turn to SCHEDULE, page 10

FESTIVAL OF TIBET

OCTOBER 1-6, 1996

QUESTIONS ABOUT TIBET ANSWERED

By Tara MK Connelly
& Seema Gangadirkar
Collegian Staff

Tibet.

You'd have to be living in a cave for some time not to notice the significant increase in interest in this small Asian country. Everywhere you go "Free Tibet" stickers grace the back ends of cars; this summer Amherst recently held a benefit concert on the commons in honor of this country. Who has not seen Hollywood celebrities like Richard Gere wax long and poetically about the strife and conflict Tibet has endured? And who has not seen the Dalai Lama, Tibet's spiritual leader, standing beside Gere and other well known celebrity activists.

Where in the world is Tibet?

So exactly where is Tibet? Sounds like a stupid question, but we all know that there is no such thing as a stupid question. However, if you guessed somewhere in Asia that means you've gotten past the introductory paragraph or you're incredibly well versed in geography.

Either way, the country is situated almost in the center of Asia bordered by Nepal, India, China, Burma and Cambodia. Its strategic, if not frigid, position in the Himalayas has earned it the quasi-romantic nickname "Roof of the World." This country's size is somewhere between that of India and Pakistan. Tibet's population is approximately 6 million, according to The Tibet Fund. The country's main source of income is herding and its occupants are mostly nomadic.

According to Ranjanna Devi, head of the Asian music and dance department, Tibetan culture is unique because of its "friendliness, a sense of humor, following the Buddhist precepts of loving kindness and compassion towards others."

Why does Tibet need to be freed?

We all know why we have been sending troops to Bosnia and deploying planes to Iraq, but why is the United States concerned about Tibet? Granted that Tibet isn't an oil rich country nor does it boast beautiful beaches or anything else that people might be interested in, so why the interest in freeing Tibet?

Turn to TIBET, page 10

A behind the scenes look

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

Ranjanna Devi is the director of the Asian Dance/Music Program at the University of Massachusetts. She, in collaboration with Martha Hauston, director of Hampden and Wheeler Galleries was responible for bring the Festival of Tibet to UMass.

Devi said she learned about the world tour of the Drepung Lamas from the director of the Shedrup Loseling in Atlanta, Ga., one of the U.S. branches of the Drepung monastery in India.

"Funding for the many events of the festival of Tibet have come form varied sources. For the creation of the sand mandala, the Asian Dance and Music Program received funding from the UMass Arts Council and the Student Affairs Cultural Enrichment Fund," she said. "The Asian Dance and Music Program received funding from the Massachusetts Foundation for the Humanities and the Beyond Words Bookstore... to research, develop and produce 500 copies of a study guide on Tibetan art."

The study guides will be used for the programs geared towards elementary students and their teachers. They contain information on Tibetan culture, art and ritual and will be distributed to the Pioneer Valley elementary and secondary teachers and their libraries, said Devi.

One of the more popular activities that Devi commented on was the workshops that involved student art activities with the lamas.

"There has been an overwhelming rush of calls for the students to sign up for the workshops with the

Turn to INTERVIEW, page 10

Where in the world is Tibet?

HAMPDEN DIRECTOR DISCUSSES ROLE IN FESTIVAL OF TIBET

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

The Festival of Tibet is coming to the University of Massachusetts as part of the fifth World Tour funded by Losel Shedrup and Richard Gere productions. The festival was sanctioned by the Dalai Lama in order to "promote world healing and sharing Tibetan culture with the West." The five day celebration of culture will run from Oct. 1-6 at various venues around campus. It will include live performances, lectures and workshops. The Asian Dance & Music Program and the Residential Arts programs of the Fine Arts Center are the group responsible for bringing such a monumental event to UMass.

Success is in the making

Martha Hauston, director of Hampden and Wheeler Galleries believes that the event will be a success.

"It just has such a broad appeal. I think it is a multi-faceted event that highlights many aspects of a culture thought their arts," she said.

Hauston thinks that it will appeal to students because of the increase in interest in Tibet on many different levels.

"Its appeals are culture of Tibet, the religion of Buddhism and the artistry of their crafts and music. The mandala [sand painting], is a healing tool and beautiful piece of art," Hauston said. "I think it will be really interesting for the university to experience a culture with eastern philosophy."

Nine Buddhist lamas, from Tibet's Drepung Loseling Monastery, will be on campus for the five days of the festival. According to Hauston, this an excellent opportunity for students to interact with the artists.

"I think there is a lot of multicultural programs at UMass. The Fine Arts Center does a lot and at Hampden Gallery as well. The distinguishing point of this event is that it is a residency. People will be able to interact with Tibetan monks one on one. The art is not static. People are actually creating the arts — it's not just pictures on walls — the artists will actually be here for five days," she said.

Turn to FESTIVAL, page 10

~ CALENDAR OF EVENTS ~

THURSDAY, SEPT. 26

Academy of Music — Bill T. Jones presents an evening of dance and conversion with special guests from the Bill T. Jones Arnie Zane Dance Company at 7 p.m. Tickets are $14.50, $20.00 and $35.00. Tickets are available at the Northampton Box Office or by calling 1–800–THE–TICK. Proceeds benefit the Family Diversity Projects.

Bezanson Recital Hall — Faculty Recital: Trombone Infusion: An evening of baroque, classical, romantic, contemporary and jazz music. David Sporny performs on trombone with Nadine Shank on piano. The show begins at 8 p.m. and is free to UMass students with valid ID. All others $2.50.

Iron Horse — Hip Bop: A B–3 Extravaganza. Dr. Lonnie Smith, Joey DeFrancesco and Doug Carne perform at 7 p.m. Tickets are $14. Percy Hill takes the stage at 10 p.m. Tickets are $6. Call 584–0610 for more information.

Smith College — The Dance department presents a multi– media concert by Joyce S. Lim at 8 p.m. at Hallie Flanagan Studio Theater, Mendenhall Center. Tickets are $3 for students, $5 all others. Call 585–2787 for reservations.

Maceo Parker brings his sax to Pearl Street this Sunday evening.

COURTESY NOVUS

Ska band The Toasters perform tonight at Club Metro.

COURTESY FALK & MORROW

FRIDAY, SEPT. 27

Amherst College — Pee Wee's Big Adventure shows at 7:30 & 10 p.m. at the Campus Center. Tickets are $2. Also Susan Werner performs in the Campus Center Frontroom at 8 p.m. Tickets are $2 for Amherst College students, $8 all others and are available at the Northampton Box Office or by calling 1–800–THE–TICK.

Club Metro — Ska band, The Toasters, along with S.M.A., take the stage at 7:30 p.m. for an 18+ show. Call 582–9898 for more information.

Hampden Theater — H.I. Vato, a play written and performed by Beto Araiza, will be presented Friday at 8 p.m. and Saturday at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. Tickets are $8 general and $5 for students, children and senior citizens.

Iron Horse — Magic Hat Brewing presents Breakaway plus Eddie from Ohio, a bluegrass group from Burlington, Vt. The show begins at 7 p.m. and tickets are $8. Also, The Tube Tour: Atlantic Surf Essentials at 10 p.m. Tickets are $5. Call 584–0610 for more information.

Northampton Center for the Arts — Medeski, Martin & Wood, an alterna–jazz trio will perform a special concert at 8 p.m. The show is all ages. Tickets are $12 in advance and $14 at the door.

Pearl Street — The Machine, a Pink Floyd tribute band, performs at 7 p.m. The show is 18+ and tickets are $6 in advance, $8 at the door.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 28

The Big E — Country musician Tracy Lawrence takes the stage at 8 p.m. The show is free with admission ticket. Call 737–2443 for more information.

Fine Arts Concert Hall — The University Orchestra performs "The Wild West & Brahms," directed by Mark Russell Smith at 8 p.m. Tickets are $8, $4 and free for UMass students with a valid ID. 545–2511.

Iron Horse — Blues musician Junior Wells plus special guest performs at 8:30 p.m. Doors open at 7:30 p.m. and tickets are $12.50.

Montague Book Mill — Uke Expo 1996, a day–long celebration of the ukelele which features Jim Beloff, Fred Fallin, the Pinetones and Tiny Tim. Tickets are $15. For more info call 367–9206.

Pearl Street — Blues Attack Dance–A–Thon, a benefit for the Friends of AIDS Care Hampshire County. The show begins at 8 p.m. and is 21+.

Shelburne Falls — First Annual African/Caribbean Dance and Drum Celebration of Western Massachusetts. The two day festival will take place at the Art Bank in Shelburne Falls. Dance, drum and singing classes will be held 10 a.m.– 8 p.m. Drum circle will be held at 8:15 p.m. both Saturday and Sunday nights after dance classes. 253–4297.

Smith College — From the Salon of Sophia Smith: Music of 19th–century New England. Works by MacDowell, Paine, Beach, Loeffler, Chadwick and others. Concert starts 8 p.m. at Sweeny Concert Hall at Smith College. Free to the public. 585–3150.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 29

The Big E — Dance music stars, LaBouche, of "Be My Lover" fame perform at 3 & 8 p.m. The show is free with admission ticket. Call 737–2443 for more information.

Iron Horse — Folk singer Patty Larkin plus Chuck Brodsky at 7 p.m. Tickets are $15. Call 584–0610 for more information.

Pearl Street — Saxophonist Maceo Parker, to benefit the Northampton Community Music Center at 8 p.m. Tickets are $15 in advance, $17 at the door. Call the club at 584–7771 for more information.

TUESDAY, OCT. 1

Iron Horse — Canadian singer/pianist Diana Krall performs along with Giacomo Gates at 7 p.m. Tickets are $8. Call 584–0610 for more information.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 2

Iron Horse — Acoustic–based rockers Disappear Fear plus Mindy Jostyn perform at 7 p.m. Tickets are $10. Call 584– 0610 for more information.

ONGOING EVENTS

Augusta Savage Gallery: Upcoming photography exhibition titled "How Many Witnesses?" by Ellen Eisenman opens Sept. 25. Reception is 5–7 p.m. Gallery hours are Mon–Tue 1–7 p.m., Wed–Fri 1–5 p.m. The Augusta Savage Gallery is located in the New Africa House in the Central Residential Area at the UMass campus. 545–5177.

Hampden Gallery — Hampden Gallery starts its season with the "Festival of Tibet: mandala sand painting and multi–arts festival." Festival opens week of Oct. 1–5. Public viewing hours are Tue–Fri 5–9 p.m., Saturday, 10 a.m. Regular gallery hours are Mon–Fri 3–7 p.m., Sun 2–5 p.m. Hampden is located in Hampden Commons in the Southwest Residential Area at the UMass campus. 545–0680.

Hampshire College Art Gallery — Hours: Mon–Fri 10:30– 4:30 p.m., Sun 2–5 p.m. 582–5544.

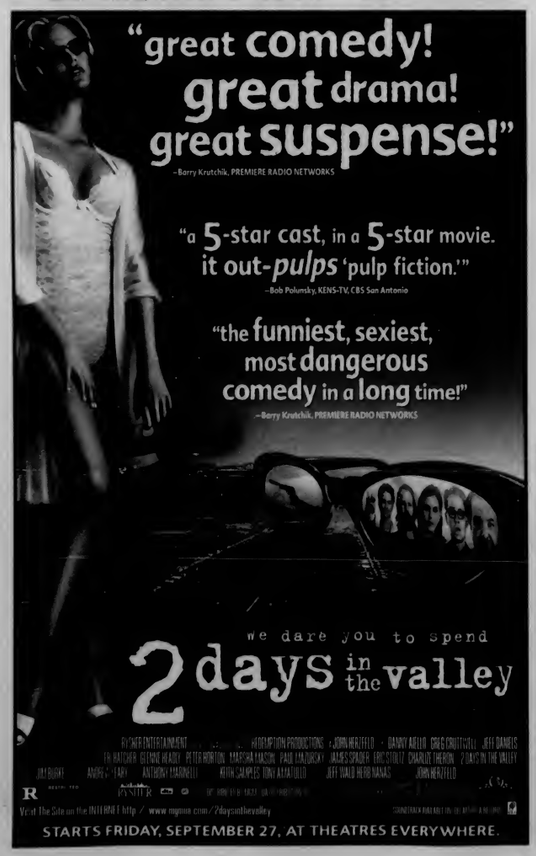
Herter Gallery — "Foundations" exhibit opens Sept. 18, featuring works by first and second year BFA students. Reception 4–6 p.m. Gallery hours are Mon–Fri 11–4 p.m., Sun 12–4 p.m. Herter Art Gallery is located at 125A Herter Hall on the UMass campus. 545–0976.

Mead Art Museum — Current displays include "Medieval to Modern," "The Art of Ancient Peru," "Built and Unbuilt: Amherst College Architecture and "Impressions of American Architecture." The Mead Art Museum is located on the Amherst College Campus. Hours are 10 a.m.–4:30 p.m. on weekdays and 1–5 p.m. on weekends. 542–2335.

Mount Holyoke College Art Museum — The museum's current exhibition focuses on three contemporary abstract paintings. Works by Gregory Amenoff, John L. Moore and Katherine Porter will be on display at the museum until Dec. 13. Tomorrow, Amenoff will deliver a lecture titled "From the Grand Vision to the Intimate Moment: One Artist's Notes on American Landscape Painting." The lecture will be followed by an opening reception and jazz concert featuring the Tom McClung Duo. Regular hours are Tues–Fri 11 a.m.– 5 p.m., Saturday and Sunday 1–5 p.m. 538–2245.

Smith College Art Gallery — Check out "Roma Antica: 18th Century prints by Piranesi" at the Smith College of Museum of Art. Hours are Tue, Fri & Sat 9:30–4 p.m., Wed & Sun 12–4 p.m. & Thur 12–8 p.m. 585–2760.

Student Union Art Gallery — On display now is "My Life, My Soul, My Sorrow," an exhibition by Yeon Choi. Gallery hours Mon–Thurs, 11 a.m.–6 p.m. and Fridays 11 a.m.–4 p.m. The Student Union Art Gallery is located in the Student Union on the University of Massachusetts campus. 545–0792.



University Art Gallery — Check out three different styles at the University Art Gallery. Current displays include artwork by Daisy Youngblood, Dawoud Bey and Nina Payne. Gallery hours run Tue–Fri 11–4:30 p.m., Sat–Sun 2–5 p.m. University Art Gallery is located in the Fine Arts Center on the UMass campus. 545–3670.

Wheeler Gallery — Vertical Horizons is a photography exhibit that explores the spirit of daily life in small towns by artists Carlye Woodard and Josh Weil. Wheeler Gallery is located at Wheeler House in the Central Residential Area at the UMass campus. Call 545–0680 for more info.

Woonkuo Soon prepares for the "Wild West & Brahms" concert at the FAC.

COURTESY JOE KUSHKA

Pearl Jam rebounds with striking originality

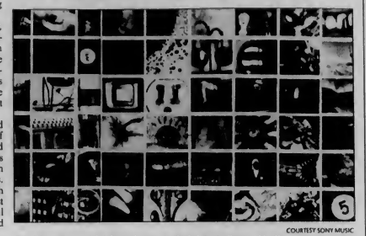
By Rob Stevens
Collegian Staff

PEARL JAM
No Code
Epic

The album name says it all — Pearl Jam's latest release, No Code, simply has no code or rules or patterns or reason. Finally Pearl Jam has released an album that tests the boundaries of the popular band's sound and style.

"I'm Open," the album's strangest song, mixes poetry over music a la Jim Morrison collaboration with the Doors' on An American Prayer. "Sometimes," the opening track, starts the album off mysteriously slow and eerie serving as an introduction for "Hail, Hail," a radio–friendly rocker.

Continuing with the more mellow approach, "Who You Are" results from the band's jamming with Middle Eastern players. Twangy guitars reminiscent of the Beatles' Revolver evoke a meditative tribal feeling largely due to a spurted rhythmic percussion and vivacious bass lines courtesy of Jeff Ament.



Nevertheless, Seattle's favorite sons don't forget their alternative roots which brought the band to the forefront of the popular music scene with their albums Ten and Versus. "In My Tree" strikes a ferociousness similarity to older tunes such as "Rearview Mirror" and "W.M.A." Lead singer Eddie Vedder's lyrics offer simple and reflective thoughts that ponder growing up and dealing with society.

The most unique song on No Code, "Present Tense," starts off with a soulful blues pitch, but builds into a stronger and quick paced "Porch"–like instrumental jam. "Mankind," a sarcastic call–back to the spirit of 70s rock, is sung by Stone Gossard — the first Pearl Jam song on record without Vedder on lead vocals.

Much like "Blood," "Habit and Lukin" rips into a bizarre mix of hard–core punk and Led Zeppelin–esque riffs. Vedder leads the band with his sly and often harsh vocal delivery over thrashing guitars. As if it weren't obvious enough already, many of Pearl Jam's newest tunes continue to sound like Neil Young, who the band has recorded and toured with.

Throughout the album, the band borrows a page out of Young's rulebook (see Rust Never Sleeps) offering a wide range of hard electric songs as well as numerous acoustic tunes.

No Code finds Pearl Jam taking on several new directions. Even though Ten established the group as a holy rocker of gutty anthems, No Code proves the band's openness to create new twists to standardized grunge — creating an album more diverse and even better than their multi– platinum debut. Besides its new musical directions, No Code shows the band taking another step deeper into the art world — the CD cover contains over 144 distorted photos taken by the band. AB

COURTESY SONY MUSIC

Pearl Jam doesn't let fans down on their latest album, No Code.

Anthology looks at youths' life during Holocaust

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

LAUREL HOLLIDAY
Children in the Holocaust and World War II: Their Secret Diaries
Washington Square Press

When many people think of memoirs from World War II, one name comes to mind — Anne Frank. She has perhaps the most famous diary from that period, if not of all time. But she was just one voice; there were many others who also suffered and took solace in writing. Laurel Holliday has compiled a collection of excerpts from diaries of other children who survived the Holocaust.

Children in the Holocaust and World War II: Their Secret Diaries is a haunting collection of children's writing. It encompasses not only the stories of children who were in the camps, but also those who lived in hiding. The writers are from all backgrounds — Jewish, German and Polish — and are all ages. They share one common thread — their lives were torn apart during the most horrifying time of our decade.

The collection's impact lies in the nativity and truthfulness of the children's writing. The children's journals were sometimes their only friend, and their accounts are poignant and unabashed. Though they lived in fear, their writing was fearless. The excerpts contain their innermost thoughts and feelings.

Holliday captures the haunting and somber sentiment of the children with grace, the collection is neither biased nor racist. Her choice of excerpts represents a wide range of lifestyles and experiences.

While all the excerpts are strong, one stands out as the most descriptive and powerful. Werner Galnik, a 12–year–old German writes about his time spent in the Riga Ghetto in Latvia and then in two concentration camps near Danzig. He and his brothers are the sole survivors from his family.

Though he was young in years, he captures the pain that he and his family experienced so eloquently, that it's impossible to not be moved. His descriptions are dynamic and his thoughts are profound.

Galnik writes, "Hitler loves only the Germans, but no other people, and particularly not us Jews. Does it follow that because we are Jews we must be prisoners? Did my father perhaps steal or murder that he should be arrested... and what did we children do?"

Children in the Holocaust is perhaps the most chilling recollection of this time, partly because it is from the youth. Our culture tries to preserve innocence and this collection is a constant reminder of how it was destroyed. A–

COURTESY WASHINGTON SQUARE PRESS

Laurel Holliday's latest anthology chronicles children's lives in the Holocaust.

More tips to help recycle

Donations help support local groups

Clean out your dorm room before Health & Safety condemns it. Help the environment by recycling in Amherst's numerous environmental programs. The town of Amherst not only recycles paper, plastic and glass products but household paint, hazardous waste products and used "stuff" as well.

Alfresco News with Liz Anderson

Now that you are settled into your dorm room or off campus you may have discovered that you have more "stuff" then you have space for. Don't worry, many businesses in Amherst accept used products and recycle them.

Libraries and book stores in Amherst encourage used book donations. Camera dealers and photo processors accept film canisters. The Salvation Army accepts all types of used clothes and furniture. Local drycleaners accept wire hangers.

This Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon, the Public Works Department is sponsoring a paint collection and exchange at the Amherst landfill on Belchertown Road.

This recycling program will accept all latex and oil based paints tightly sealed in their original container. All of the paints must be labeled and tightly packed in a carton or box. Unmarked paints that are mixed or packed in a garbage bag will not be accepted at the collection.

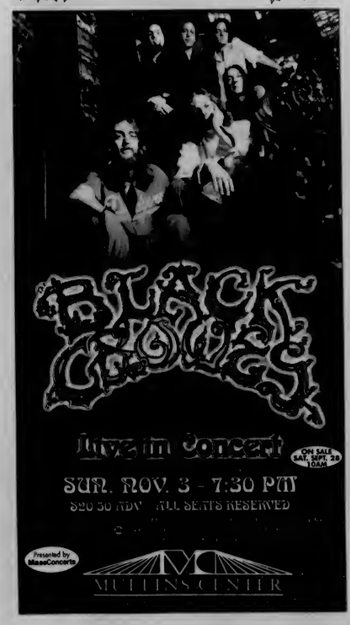
A $1 donation per every gallon of paint will enable Amherst's paint reuse and recycle program to provide high quality, recycled paint products to non–profit organizations such as Habitat for Humanity. Empty paint cans will be accepted for recycling, and non–usable paints will be handled by environmentally responsible methods such as fuel blending.

Amherst is one of more than 100 cities and towns throughout Massachusetts that organizes hazardous waste collection days. The Public Works Department holds day long events designated to the collection of antifreeze, motor oil, oil filters and polystyrene. Once these hazardous waste products are collected, they are delivered to the regional processing facility in Springfield.

Community groups such as local theaters, scouts and shelters encourage donations of unwanted lumber. Used car batteries and tires can be recycled at car dealerships and junk yards throughout the valley.

Finally, if you have a car or truck that is surviving on its last legs, then "Recycle for Gold" with Massachusetts' Special Olympics. If you call their toll–free number (1–800– 590–1600) the Massachusetts' Special Olympics will tow away and recycle your automobile free of charge. The money they make from recycling your vehicle will fund sports training and competition for individuals who are mentally challenged.

So complete the recycling circle, buy only what you need, plan to use it up and get involved in community sponsored recycling programs.



"I wish more people knew more about Amherst's recycling programs and recycled. Recycling is not just another nauseating trend," said Lisa Fillion, a senior at the University of Massachusetts. "The world is deteriorating and it will only improve if we start cleaning up after ourselves."

For more information about Amherst's paint reuse and recycling program, hazardous waste collection days or general recycling call the public works department at 256– 4049.

Liz Anderson is a Collegian columnist

Write for the Collegian, We Do. And so should you.

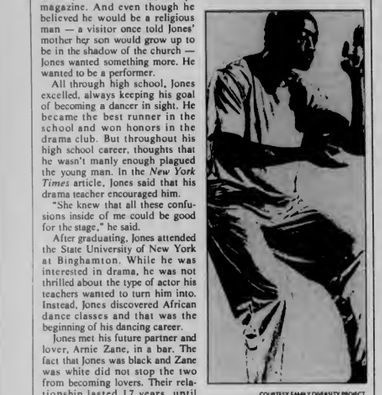
Jones' dancing displays confusion from his life

By Seema Gangotirkar
Collegian Staff

Bill T. Jones is the type of man who isn't afraid of anything. Jones, described by Time magazine as the "most versatile and inventive of America's black dancer-choreographers," will perform tonight at the Northampton Academy of Music, along with special guests from the Bill T. Jones/Arnie Zane Dance Company.

Jones was born in upstate New York. According to The New York Times Magazine, Jones received his inspiration to become a dancer and choreographer when he saw a photograph of African-American dancer, Arthur Mitchell, in Life magazine. And even though he believed he would be a religious man — a visitor once told Jones' mother her son would grow up to be in the shadow of the church — Jones wanted something more. He wanted to be a performer.

All through high school, Jones excelled, always keeping his goal of becoming a dancer in sight. He became the best runner in the school and won honors in the drama club. But throughout his high school career, thoughts that he wasn't manly enough plagued the young man. In the New York Times article, Jones said that his drama teacher encouraged him.



"She knew that all these confusions inside of me could be good for the stage," he said.

After graduating, Jones attended the State University of New York at Binghamton. While he was interested in drama, he was not thrilled about the type of actor his teachers wanted to turn him into. Instead, Jones discovered African dance classes and that was the beginning of his dancing career.

Jones met his future partner and lover, Arnie Zane, in a bar. The fact that Jones was black and Zane was white did not stop the two from becoming lovers. Their relationship lasted 17 years, until Zane's death in 1988 from complications of AIDS. Jones was diagnosed as HIV- positive in 1986.

Jones' choreography reflects the turbulence and confusion of his life. One of his more complex pieces, Last Supper at Uncle Tom's Cabin/The Promised Land, takes three hours and 50 dancers to complete. After tackling issues like religious faith or whether AIDS is God's punishment for homosexuality, the piece ends provocatively, with the entire cast standing on stage, nude. It's just another example of Jones' fearlessness and innovation when it comes to dance.

Bill T. Jones' performance begins at 7 p.m. tonight at the Academy of Music. Tickets are $14.50, $20 and $35. For more information call 586-8686 or 1-800-THE-TICK.

COURTESY FAMILY DIVERSITY PROJECT

Bill T. Jones and company perform at the Academy of Music in their only area appearance.

Hip hop & Fugees survive shaky summer

COURTESY DEF JAM RECORDS

L.L. Cool J.

Chris Maher

Nature tends to run in cycles, and so does music. When one species overpopulates it runs out of resources and makes another species thrive. Every action has an equal and opposite reaction, and recent times proved this is also true for hip-hoppers. Many who felt invincible have felt drastic consequences for their careless actions.

Lesson one: Real Gangsta's do real things and accordingly face real penalties. "What you think all the guns is for?," asks Biggie Smalls on Ready to Die, as his big plans go sour from the two infrared scoped assault rifles he bragged about — now he's facing 5 to 10 years. The modern gangsta lifestyle showed us all that you need your Lifestyles as Eazy-E passes on. Tupac shows a lack of respect for his colleagues — even the man who made him what he was — so his fate is no Shock G.

Lauryn Hill of the Fugees complains that too many white people buy her album. Her frustrations are understandable. The evil ploys of commercial airplay and the greed of the rap industry has resulted in the band losing a bit of respect as black musicians. As De La Soul says, "That's the Brakes." Lauryn exposed herself to the public and can't handle it. She needs to check The Score — either keep your thoughts to yourself or go play in your basement. Deal with it honey.

Look at Ice Cube — he had the same problem, now he tours with the alternative group Korn and makes corny attempts at dissin' the cast.

Through all these tragedies of character, people still hold an overwhelming urge to fake the funk and encourage the falsehoods that kids replicate, as well as the truths that have put many rappers' lives in dire straits. Look at Nas living vicariously through Italians on It Was Written. He was right three years ago on the classic Illmatic — better luck next time, buddy.

L.L. Cool has become an entertainer controlled by Hollywood's favorite playboy, Mr. Smith. He leaves his hip hop days behind to catch ladies he already had, by fine tuning his vocab with commercialized, overused, and all too familiar record selling phrases.

Then, to talk about first class poor taste, Bone Thugs and Harmony make serious cash off of a song that endorses getting bombed off the welfare check on the first of the month.

As a reaction to all the diseases that plague the industry, many positive vibes have been instigated. The Native Tongue has officially been reinstated as Tribe Called Quest and De La Soul return strong with albums that teach people the virtues of life leaving the B.S. for everyone else.

KRS-ONE's last release still attempts to settle the emotions of today's riley youth and Outkast drops positive vibes on ATliens. The Jungle Brothers, Common Sense, The Roots and Wu Tang Clan get ready to drop a new spice of flavor with a slight blend of intelligence.

Wu Tang Clan used an ingenious business technique this summer with the single "Wu Wear." Throughout the business world, people pay billions for advertisement. They have a song that promotes their clothing line so they are getting paid to advertise their own product, while Method Man's hypnotic grasp chants "It's what you want baby, it's what you need baby!".

Wu Tang Clan also donated their time to Red Hot's album, along with a dozen other artists. They did the title track "America Is Dying Slowly," as Red Hot's sixth album is created to benefit the war on AIDS. Too bad the Clan can't seem to find time to play any of their scheduled New England tour dates, even though the crowds are too blitzed to respond the way they should to hip hop's craziest stage show (I should know — I saw in Springfield in '93).

Hopefully these negative events are helping us learn what not to do. Even if they don't, let's give thanks to these real heads who keep it going 'cause we gotta get over it.

Chris Maher is a Collegian staff member.

The Collegian Graphic Department:
We do what others won't even dare to do.

MIKARA'S
MUSIC ROOM & NIGHT CLUB
270 Cooley St. Springfield (413)796-7127
Presents
ROCK THE VOTE 96
with
The Urge
Phunk Junkeez
Too Skinny J's
Saturday Oct 5 · 9PM · 18+
Register to Vote and Win CD's T-shirts and More!
Free Snowboard Raffle!
99.3 Modern Rock | Advocate Newspapers | Ski Haus E. Longmeadow | Samual Adams Beer
Tickets $8.00 advance, $10.00 door
Available at Strawberries, Protix or The N-Hampton Box Office

SOME THINGS ARE MEANT TO BE CLOSED
YOUR MIND ISN'T ONE OF THEM.
For decades, MDA has shown how muscle people with disabilities are to society. We believe brains, ability and desire are more important than strength or a perfect muscle. The one barrier these people can't overcome is a closed mind. Keep yours open.
1-800-572-1717 MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY ASSOCIATION

WorldTeach is looking for people who have a mind to travel.
WorldTeach
Call 1-(800)4-TEACH-0

EXERCISE!? ARE YOU NUTS?
PLAY HARD!
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS CLUB
AMHERST
256-6446

BURGER KING® NOW HIRING
We're looking for people with pride, who want to be treated fairly by people who care, to staff our restaurants.
-Good Starting Pay
-Flexible Hours
-Full Time/Part Time
-Meal Discounts
-Management Opportunities
Closing Rates up to $6.50*
Apply in Person
Rt. 9 Hadley
Rt. 5 Northampton
*See Manager for details

Over ~500~ Microbrews
Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Attention Grad Students: Take 10% off Regularly Priced Fine Wines

MICROBREWS
Magic Hat Ale, #9, Blind Faith $5.99/six
Smuttynose Pale Ale, Brown Dog Ale $4.99/six
Pilgrim 64 oz bottle Blueberry Ale, E.S.B., I.P.A., Nut Brown $4.99
1/4 Keg Harpoon Oct. Fest $45.00
Oregon Summer Gold $4.99/six

BEER SPECIALS
Red Dog & Icehouse 12pk bot $6.99
Bud 16 oz. Bottles $14.99/case
Keystone Light 30-Pack $10.99
Natural Light & Ice 12 Pack Cans $4.99

LIQUOR SPECIALS
Jim Beam $8.99/750ml
Gordons Vodka $5.99/750ml
Jagermeister $8.99/375ml
Cuervo Gold $11.99/750ml
Boones All flavors, 5 for $9.99/750ml

VISA MasterCard DISCOVER
Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers · Ice · Mixers Mini Kegs · Beer Glasses
Rt. 9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E

Webzines on the 'net

Webzines are taking the Internet by storm. At the end of 1994 the Web was inundated with over 450 on-line publications.

Webzines are basically on-line magazines. It is so unbelievably inexpensive to publish an on-line publication, even a few friends could produce one about their favorite hobby.

Topics range from hobbies like computers, fishing and mountain biking to traditional magazine contents such as entertainment and literature.

Although hobbyists originally created the webzine, today these publications are also produced by major publishing houses. A few companies exclusively publish on-line magazines like New York's Marinex Multimedia.

Last year Marinex appeared on the Internet with an on-line soap opera called the East Village at http://www.theeastvillage.com and an entertainment webzine entitled the Biz at http://www.bizmag.com.

The Biz's equivalent on the newsstand is Entertainment Weekly minus the book reviews. Like most entertainment magazines, the Biz covers everything else under the sun that is considered entertainment. The primary sections are film, television, music, interviews with stars and the ambiguous "new media." A few features accompany and complement the standard sections. The page is updated on a weekly basis.

Each section has columns and standard amenities like release dates and links to feature articles that are related to the subject. The site also includes up to date entertainment news from Reuters wire service and Business Wire. A feature that the Biz prominently sports that most entertainment magazines do not offer is a list of influential executives and producers in Hollywood.

The page is beautifully laid out with small colorful graphics, and easy to follow links. It also takes full advantage of the multimedia aspect of the Web by accompanying simple text with photos and even video clips. The only drawback is its speed. It was slow.

For readers of the New Yorker who are of a higher brow, Microsoft's Slate at http://www.slate.com is ideal for them. Just because this place is sponsored by the software titan does not mean it's solely about computers.

COURTESY THE BIZ

Webzine The Biz is a wealth of entertainment information

Like the New Yorker, Slate is chock full of stories on varying subjects. It follows a standard formula of a half dozen features that are primarily but not exclusively political, accompanied by a moderated discussion (this weeks includes members of the "MacLaughlin Group" like Fred Barnes, and political dilettante Ariana Huffington). Accompanying the features is "the back of the book section" where readers can find book, movies and fashion reviews and a little poetry.

The articles are longer than in most publications, and expect the readers to actually think, unlike a lot of other magazines. This site is significantly more sophisticated than most on the Internet. However, it tries too much to emulate the New Yorker not only in content, but in style. The site is filled with little cartoons that resemble those that can be found in the New Yorker. The graphics are usually of a somber tone and hue, but the whimsical layout is eye catching. The only drawback is that billion dollar Microsoft is going to start charging a subscription fee in January.

Finally the Internet is — as expected — home to a slew of computer oriented webzines. Cambridge based Ziff-Davis Publishing Company operates a webzine entitled ZD Net at http://www.zdnet.com.

The stories on this site are originally from their dozen plus magazines that cover the full gamut of systems from Windows to Mac to Unix. A few late breaking news stories even appear on the webzine before they see the printing press. The site sports over eight features, and four up to date computer news stories. Some stories even include links to referenced businesses and software.

A nice touch to the page is the interactive weekly polls. In the past polls include subjects like the web browser wars, and big brother in the work place. The polls displays results in fancy graphs with colorful icons.

The only drawback to this site is that a subscription is necessary to read stories from Ziff-Davis magazines which are not feature stories on ZD Net.

Evidently there is a webzine for everyone on the Internet. It is only a matter of knowing where to look.

Matt Wurtzel is a Collegian columnist.

The Roots heads down new road

By Chris Maher
Collegian Correspondent

THE ROOTS
illadelph halflife
DGC

COURTESY GEFFEN RECORDS

No sophomore slump for the Roots.

The Roots have returned with an interesting twist to anoint the heads who hold high, Do You Want More??!!! — the temple of organic hip hop jazz. On their latest album, the Roots take it deep into the jazz on a couple of tracks but also explore a new futuristic sound.

Finally they carry strong bass-heavy tracks backed with an interesting chemistry aided by the use of various background vocalists, guest musicians and lyricists.

The theme of illadelph halflife is clearly represented lyrically on "No Great Pretender" — "Change your strategic plan my man's gettin bored!/ Your vocal cord is fraudulent/ and not the true porcelain/ I bring the fire, earth and the sorcerer when/ the force of sin endorse the pen/ We on the search for sanity but I think that it was lost again/ Now which stick up artist, could be the smartest / My beam of sunlight shines the brightest and the farthest."

"No Great Pretender," one of the tightest tracks on the album, features lyrics that are as tight as a viper's clutches, all sung over the soothing background vocals and human trumpet of Rahzel, "The Godfather of Noize."

"It Just Don't Stop" is placed well, carrying the same type of futuristic sounds featuring noises more familiar to the techno genre than modern hip hop that creates a hypnotic effect of overlapped piano riffs nearly symbolizing infinity. The song profiles the never ending quest of hate and violence on Earth.

"What They Do" is accompanied by a George Benson- style guitar playing with Angela Slates on 'angelic vocal inflations,' as mentioned in the linear notes. Vocalist Black Thought, in a somber voice, tells the listener to ignore fakes fornicating on mics, advising them never to do what they do.

"Concierto of a Desperado" is ill as the violin and hard strings mix over the operatic enchantment of Amel Larrieux's sopranic voice.

"UNIverse at War" features Common Sense and Black Thought whom come correct as they let emcees know they can't come around on some B.S. 'cause the intellect of the man on the mics is reaching new intensities.

"No Alibi" is dope — it plays a vibe loop that gets you lost in the music like a freshman in Morrill, as Black Thought traces his roots to facing the music "Exhibit the truth because I'm livin proof why/ I have no disguise-no verdict-no alibi/ Exhibit the truth because I'm livin proof why/ because I have no disguise tryin' to vocalize."

"The Hypnotic" featuring D'Angelo is a great story rap about a true love tragedy and shadows "Silent Treatment" by the mood it sets.

Ursula Rucker reveals the answer to the question posed at the end of the last album on the spoken word of "The Adventures in Wonderland". She raps "F@%#, Killi and Prosper is the Gospel of Wonderland/ Where Street sands are quick to suck you down to the Abyss with the Lure of Pure Bliss!"

"? vs. Scratch" again brings up the relevant fact The Roots seem to reinforce, DJ's are not a necessity!

"Ital (The Universal Side)" shines with Q-Tip, and "Push up Your Lighter" is highlighted with Bohamadia, the engineering of Bob Power and appearances by Dice RAW, M.A.R.S. and DJ Scratch. The inclusion of such clearly separates this album from their last — The Roots have built connections through the world of true hip hop. They show enormous chemistry, both within themselves and the artists they work with. The beats also show a change for the better as they are organized with the time — the true sign of longevity and prosperity within hip-hop.

The album ends in connotations reflecting artistic frustrations but overall there is more of a head nodding' hip hop vibe. The act seemed to shy away from the abnormal towards the new and improved hoping to blow up the spot and catch the respect and recognition they deserve.

The only slight weakness in the album centers on Black Thought's complex vocals causing a repetitive vibe on occasion to give you a lazy ear. In the linear notes he admits, "Peace to my people who need pure hip-hop to breathe. To those who can't really understand my music... I don't really make it for you." A

The Collegian was brought to you today by the number 16, and the letters L and X.

Welcome Back Students!
From the Information Data Bank
Rights and Responsibilities 1996-97 is here!
Located on the 2nd Floor Whitmore Lobby
545-1555
Hours: 8:30am - 6:00pm Mon. - Fri.

take Kaplan and get into the right school.
LSAT
• Highly trained, expert teachers who know the tests inside and out.
• Personalized, computerized study plans, tailored to your individual needs.
• Proven methods, guaranteed to raise your score.
Class starts Tuesday, October 1st!
the leader in test prep and admissions counseling.
KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
www.kaplan.com

Amber Waves
FAR EAST: Asian noodle soups, salads & stir-fries, 63 Main St. 253-9200
MID EAST: Arabian delights salads & sandwiches, 31 Boltwood Walk 253-9299
OCMP Delivery Express

Pearl Street Nightclub
Live Music & Dance Club
EVERY WEDNESDAY
ANYTHING Goes
Check the Vibe
DJ's Scarty & Bam-Bam
Spinnin' Jungle, Techno, House, Dub, Hip-Hop, etc... From 10-2am
EVERY THURSDAY
THE AREA'S BIGGEST
HIGH ENERGY Dance Party
Great Giveaways from BIGGEST 91
Like Ultimate Laser Storm Toy Game
Hosted by Adam Wright of Today's 99.3
EVERY FRIDAY 9-2am
FREE BEFORE 10:00
RETRO NIGHT
WIN TWO MONTH-PASS TO HAMPSHIRE FITNESS CLUB
MUSIC FROM THE 70's, 80's & 90's
EVERY SATURDAY 9-2am
FREE BEFORE 10:00
gay dance night
THIS WEEK LIVE
Thurs. Sept. 26th @ 9:00 pm
ICP Presents
THE COYOTES
Fri. Sept. 27 @ 8:30 pm
THE MACHINE
PINK FLOYD TRIBUTE BAND
Sat. Sept. 28 @ 8:00 pm
DANCE-A-THON WITH BLUES ATTACK
Sun. Sept. 29 @ 8:00 pm
MACEO PARKER
To benefit the Northampton Community Music Center
Tues. Oct. 1 @ 7:30 pm
LIKE JUST SWINGING TONIGHT Featuring
LET'S GO BOWLING
CHERRY POPPIN' DADDIES/ REEL BIG FISH
Thurs. Oct. 3 @ 7:30 pm
H2O
CROWN OF THORNZ/10 YARD FIGHT
FOLLOW THROUGH/DISPLAY
SEBADOH
First Brattleboro Show Since Bad Religion
Fri. Oct. 4 @ 9:00pm
SCARCE
FUZZY/THE MAGGIES
FREE SHOW WITH SEBADOH TICKET
COMING TO PEARL STREET
Sat. Oct. 5 16+ AQUARIUM RESCUE UNIT / Unicorn Burns
Sat. Oct. 12 21+ GRAHAM PARKER & THE FIGGS
Mon. Oct. 7 18+ THE SPECIALS / Bingo Rock
Tues. Oct. 8 21+ LOS LOBOS / W/ LAVA
Tues. Oct. 15 18+ BLACK UHURU
Sat. Oct. 19 21+ J. GEILS BLUES TIME
Sat. Oct. 26 ALL AGES PRO PAIN
Sun. Oct. 6 18+ SPECIAL CLUB APPEARANCE PORNO FOR PYROS SOLD OUT
Advance tickets available at the Northampton Box office 586-8686 1-800-THE-TICK Strawberries Record Stores For The Record in Amherst About Music in Greenfield Tra Unlimited of Mass
10 PEARL STREET, NORTHAMPTON
http://www.turnpt.edu/pearl.html
413-584-7771

Called home lately?
1-800-COLLECT®
Save up to 44%
Savings based on a 3-min. AT&T operator-dialed interstate call.

Tibet

continued from page 5

China took over Tibet in October of 1950, shortly after the Communists came into power. Tibet, unprepared and lacking allies, fell to China after a mere 11 days. Part of China's attraction for the mountainous country was that it provided a strategic buffer between China and its rival, India.

According to Pierre-Antoine Donnet, author of Tibet: Survival, Chinese government documents, written in October of 1949, provide another clue to the invasion. The document reads in part, "the people of Tibet were longing for the arrival of the [People's Republic of China] to help bring an end to their sufferings..." However China justified its actions, China's military presence in Tibet was not for benevolent reasons, according to the assistant to the representative of the Dalai Lama, Glen Kelley.

"The Chinese are not interested in co-existing with the Tibetan people," Kelley said. "The Chinese want to wipe out the Tibetan people."

Nearly 1.2 million Tibetans were killed when the Chinese took over the country — mainly educated and wealthy members of society.

Kelley said that the Chinese government has limited the number of births to Tibetan women and have also forced abortions or sterilization. Chinese settlers — mostly prisoners — are paid to live in Tibet and Kelley said that Chinese officials in Tibet are paid three times the salary that they would have received if they had stayed in Peking.

"[The Chinese] are pushing out all opportunities, economic and educational," Kelley said. "It's not possible for the Chinese and Tibetans to coexist."

Currently, Tibetans live under tight Chinese surveillance. The increased security has fueled responses from human right groups like Human Rights watch, Amnesty International and the US State department.

In addition to physical stress of living under oppressive rule, environmental problems such as huge snowstorms cause tens of thousands of people to contract frostbite and snow-blindness. More than 200 died when the crisis also caused a drop in livestock — the main source of income.

A more recent action taken by the Chinese government is the kidnaping of a six-year-old boy, believed to be the reincarnation of the Panchen Lama. The child, who has been recognized by the Dalai Lama, remains under house arrest.

Who exactly is the Dalai Lama?

You've seen him everywhere from magazine covers such as National Geographic and Time, and in a way he has become the cause célèbre of the '90s, but who is the Dalai Lama?

The Dalai Lama's stature in Buddhism is comparable to the Pope's influence on the Roman Catholic religion. He is the leading religious leader and advisor of the country and top authority on Buddhism.

In 1959, rumors of assassination attempts on the Dalai Lama caused Tibetans to surround his house, making it possible for the Dalai Lama to sneak out and escape to freedom. His exile has caused more than 100,000 Tibetans to follow in his wake. The current Tibetan population in exile numbers 140,000.

Since being exiled, the Dalai Lama has fought constantly for a democratic system in Tibet. In Tibet: Survival in Question, Donnet states that "almost every section of Tibetan society requires an overhaul; the political system, the economy, the role of religion, the judiciary. For Tibet to survive, the status of the Dalai Lama himself will have to be reviewed, according to him."

Since leaving Tibet, the Dalai Lama has worked very hard to negotiate with the Chinese government, said Kelley. Kelley said that His Holiness' goals have included increasing the international community's awareness of the Tibetans' plight as well as being able to sit down and discuss issues with the Chinese government. Kelley said that the Dalai Lama's intentions are contradicted in statements issued by the Chinese government.

"The Chinese have issued statements that the Dalai Lama won't negotiate," Kelley said.

In the past, the Dalai Lama had met several times with Mao Tse-tung to discuss the situation in Tibet. In Donnet's book, Tibet: Survival in Question, the Dalai Lama recounts the occasion of their last meeting in which Mao described religion as a poison.

According to Kelley, the Communists see "religion as a delusion."

The Chinese implemented their doctrine throughout Tibet, starting in the eastern part of the country for two reasons: it was closer to the Chinese border and far enough from the influence of the Dalai Lama. As the Chinese strengthened their hold on the country, Kelley said that monasteries were burned and that monks, who tended to be the most educated members of Tibetan society, were put in prison, tortured or killed.

As for freedom, Kelley isn't so sure.

"The Tibetans may hope for independence," Kelley said. "But all demonstrations are stopped by the Chinese."

He said that the Dalai Lama hopes to gain some sort of autonomy for Tibet.

Tibet "was actually a just country, very Buddhist" before the Chinese took over, Kelley said.

What is the Tibet Fund?

The Tibet fund is a non-profit organization created in 1981 with the blessing of the Dalai Lama dedicated "to preserving Tibetan culture and to improving all aspects of life for the Tibetan people living in Tibet and for those now living in exile."

Tenzing Chhadak is a director at the Tibetan Fund office in New York.

"The Tibet fund is a nonprofit organization that helps Tibet refugees. It does not back up religious figures, but basically aids refugees in India and Nepal," said Chhadak. "We help set up health and education programs in large cities along with financing reception centers. Most recently we aided 1,000 Tibetan refugees three years ago relocate into cities and start their lives."

They currently administer more health, education and economic assistance in Tibetan refugee communities than any other single aid organization. Programs include education, housing for the elderly, education of children and benefits like immunization and TB control programs.

According to the organization, funding is provided through private donations, large federal government grants, humanitarian assistance and through the Fulbright student exchange program in India which shelters many Tibetan students. A large amount of the money goes to helping Tibetan refugees in India, but they hope to expand their energy into Tibet itself.

Those interested in finding out more about the situation in Tibet can contact The Tibet Fund and The Office of Tibet at (212) 213-5011.

schedule

continued from page 5

• 1 p.m. – 4 p.m.
(HG, HT, HL & SS)
Workshop for Public School Teachers..
(pre-reg required)
• 5 p.m. – 9 p.m.
(HG, HT & HL)
Public hours, Mandala & crafts. Exhibition & sale. Free.
• 7 p.m.
(SS)
"Home To Tibet," Documentary ary film, 55 mins. Suggested donation $5 at the door.

Friday, Oct. 4
• 9:30 a.m. – 10:15 a.m.
10 a.m. – 10:45 p.m.
10:30 a.m. – 11:15 a.m.
(HG, HT, HL & SS)
Public School Tours & Workshop. (pre-reg required)
• 1 p.m. – 4 p.m.
(HG, HT, HL & SS)
Workshop for UMass, 5-college students & faculty. Free first-come with ID (space limited).
• 5 p.m. – 9 p.m.
(HG, HT & HL)
Public hours, Mandala & crafts. Exhibition & sale. Free.
• 7 p.m.
(SS)
"Arya Tara Empowerment: Teachings with his Holiness Rizong Rinpoche." Part one of mandatory three parts. Suggested donation $25 at the door for all three sessions.

Saturday, Oct. 5
• 10 a.m. "Arya Tara Empowerment: Teachings with his Holiness Rizong Rinpoche." Part two of mandatory three parts.
• 10 a.m. – 3:30 p.m.
(HG, HT & HL)
Public hours, Mandala & crafts. Exhibition & sale. Free.
• 3:30 p.m.
(HG, HT & HL)
Processional begins to campus pond, closing ceremony for mandala. Crafts exhibition. Free, public.

Sunday, Oct. 6
• 10 a.m. "Arya Tara Empowerment: Teachings with his Holiness Rizong Rinpoche." Part three of mandatory three parts.
• 3 p.m.
(FAC)
Sacred Music Sacred Dance Concert
Gen. Adm. $15; students, senior, children $5. Tickets at 545-2511.

interview

continued from page 5

lamas for the art activities," she said. "So the Tibetan visual arts will be a big draw. I think the students will be equally interested in the concert of Sacred Music, Sacred Dance."

The Sacred Music, Sacred Dance will combine "mystical ritual and pageantry in a concert of sacred dance and music by the famed multiphonic singers of Drepung Loseling Monastery."

It will be held Oct. 6 at 3 p.m. and was produced by the UMass Asian Dance and Music Program.

According to Devi, the lamas will be residing in the Valley with an anonymous couple who have offered them lodging.

Because the festival spans such a large time frame and involves so many activities, Devi had to pay a lot of attention to details.

"[There was] special emphasis on the publicity design of the invitations to the sand Mandala opening, gallery decorations — a special hand painted scroll in Tibetan calligraphy by a local Tibetan artist, two graduate students in Professor Nancy Garrabrants class in the department of Floriculture will create wallhangings that will be displayed in the Hampden Gallery," she said.

Other preparations included a graduate student creating a mural of a Tibetan landscape which will be displayed in the lobby of the Hampden theater.

"Another activity that has been especially demanding is creating Tibetan prayer flags stencils for school children to make during their visit to see the sand Mandala. In addition, we have organized a Tibetan volunteer committee that will greet the public at the Fine Arts Center concert hall for the Sacred Music Sacred Dance," Devi said.

Devi hopes that students and the public understand "the wholeness and seamless blending of the art, religion and culture of Tibetan tradition. An understanding [of] Buddhist principles through the teaching. The friendliness and generosity of the lamas through interaction with them and an awareness of the local Tibetans in the area."

Presenting the festival, Devi said, will give her "A great satisfaction of being able to present this kind of Asian cultural programming on campus, especially since Tibetan art, music and dance have not been presented before in an integrated residency format."

She said she hopes that the festival will encourage more Tibetan related events not only on campus, but in the Valley as well.

"I hope that the interest generated from this event will be an impetus for the development of other related activities on Tibet, on campus and the Valley," she said. "I hope the teachers will use the Tibetan study guide in their study of world communities with their classes. So, the effect of bringing the lamas will carry over a long term period through that study. Should the interest among students, faculty and staff indicate so and the funding permits, the Asian Dance and Music Program will certainly consider other Tibetan events in the future."

festival

continued from page 5

Personal interaction

One of the highlights of the festival will be the creating of the mandala, an enormous sand painting.

"The mandala will begin Oct. 1," explained Hauston. "A six by six platform will be set up and an outline of it will be drawn by the monks. Millions of grains of colored sand will be used to fill in the design."

According to Hauston other exhibitions of lamas' arts and crafts will also be featured, particularly weaving and tangka painting.

For UMass students there will be sessions where they can interact with the lamas. No preregistration is required for the events and lectures (see schedule), but students must present IDs at door. The events will be open on a first come, first serve basis and doors will open at 1 p.m.

Umass

continued from page 16

Yale and Radcliffe before defeating Brown in the Beantown Tournament held at UMass Sept. 5 and 6.

The UMass women will be in action this weekend as they face local powerhouse Amherst College at 12:30 p.m. at Amherst College.

Flag football and soccer to kick off

• Intramural soccer and flag football kicked off this past Monday on the intramural fields opposite Boyden Gym.

Want some cash?

• There is one last chance to become a flag football official. A Mandatory clinic will be held Monday, Sept. 30 at 6 p.m. in Boyden 223.

In the future

• There is still time to compete in the Track & Field Meet. Report to Derby Track on Oct. 1 at 3:30 p.m.

• Spots are still open in the Badminton Singles and Racquetball competitions. A player's meeting will be held tonight at 6 p.m.

• The intramural office is accepting teams for this season's Field Hockey action. There will be a meeting on Oct. 2 at 5:30 p.m. in Boyden 223.

We will pump you up — longer

• Boyden and Totman Main Gym hours have been extended Saturday evenings until 9:30 p.m.

Sports Briefs was compiled by Collegian staff member Chris Stamm.

garden

continued from page 16

I'm stunned those shells aren't up for sale too.

Tomorrow and Saturday the venerable old barn on Causeway Street and literally everything inside of it will go up on an auction block.

Sixty-eight years of athletic and political history will go to the highest bidder much like Jack Kennedy's golf clubs.

Cam Neely's mouthpiece will be auctioned as will a cigar three-quarters smoked by Red Auerbach, but those are just the small items. The Bruins' Stanley Cup banners are all for sale as is the organ where John Kiley would belt out Dead and Billy Joel tunes during intermissions, not to mention everything from the Celtics' time out horn to the zamboni.

Bids on that horn are expected to reach $400 by the way.

Some of this I can almost expect from an aristocratic society, which will pay 25 bucks a head just to get into the auction to be held on the Garden floor, provided of course some lawyer from Brookline doesn't scoop that up.

This is America in the '90s, after all, and everyone's out in their Grand Cherokees and Acuras for their slice of the pie, even if that means paying $3,000, a good chunk of a UMass tuition, for Eddie Shore's retired No. 2 banner.

Leland's auction house chairman Joshua Leland Evans said, "We came to feel a little like Howard Carter searching through King Tut's tomb," in reference to the scavenging for things to hawk this weekend.

Along this line, what truly frightens me is Saturday's "Garden Sale Flea market." First-aid screwdrivers will be on sale. It surprises me that they aren't putting up doobie confiscated from the Dead's last show there or Dave Cowens' socks. Things like brooms and trash barrels will be laid out on Causeway Street like junk on a street corner in Greenwich Village, right around St. Mark's Place.

Broken seat backs will be sold in the flea market, and I can't help but think that there's something wrong with half of a red wooden seat with a number 11 stenciled at the top will go for a few bucks as if it was a busted lava lamp.

That seat was uncomfortable and would leave your butt and legs with the worst cramps by the midway point in the second period. There was literally less than six inches of space between you and the seat in front of you; less leg room than the back seat of a Mazda Miata. If the person next to you was overweight, his or her gut would often bulge into your narrow seat making things still less bearable.

But, that was my happy place until April 30, 1995, when I saw the Bruins down Pittsburgh in my final game in that seat that was a veritable slice of heaven. My own happy place.

Now the chunks of wood formerly known as section 100 row C seats 10–11 of the Boston Garden will probably wind up in a Back Bay insurance agent's waiting room.

Thank God we still have Fenway, and may it go more decently.

Leigh Torbin is a Collegian columnist.

Vikings start season with undefeated streak

By Ron Lesko
Associated Press

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — This all seems so familiar to Dixon Edwards. A young, underrated defense. An impressive start to the season.

The unbeaten Minnesota Vikings remind Edwards of the Dallas Cowboys in 1992, the season they won their first Super Bowl championship of the '90s, and New York Giants coach Dan Reeves agrees.

"They're awful good on defense," Reeves said yesterday. "In fact, I was telling our team that they remind me a great deal of the way Dallas' defense was as far as its speed and quickness about three or four years ago."

That's what Edwards has been saying about his new team for weeks. He was a backup linebacker for the Cowboys in '92, when they opened 3-0 on the way to a 13-3 regular-season record. Edwards is a starter in Minnesota now, tied for the team lead in tackles with Jeff Brady.

True to Minnesota's style, this year's defense is built for speed. But there also is more size than in the past, along with a physical presence that had been missing.

"We've got a lot of smaller, quicker guys, guys just flying around," Edwards said. "There's a lot of guys making plays, confusing people with our speed."

That's exactly what happened last Sunday when the Vikings (4-0) overran the Green Bay Packers to take over the NFC Central lead. With the possible exception of Carolina (3-0), Minnesota is the league's biggest surprise this season (the Panthers visit the Metrodome on Oct. 6).

England

continued from page 16

modern English football history was Manchester United capturing of The Double– Double last season. United came back from 12 points behind Newcastle in three months to lift high the FA Carling Premiership Crown, which is like the 1978 Boston Red Sox collapse to the Yankees; while then beating the Scousahs (i.e. Liverpool) on an Eric "Ooh Aah" Cantona strike in one of the most anticipated FA Cup Finals in recent years.

The Reds had done the same thing a few years back, but the amazing thing about it was that the Double–Double had never been done before. I really do not think you truly realize... never before... in a sport that was born and bred in the cradle of the language I am now trying to use.

To give you a little more playoff suspense than this country's version of "football", the FA Cup, which is the sporting competition in England, is a round robin tourney that starts in September, and ends in May. Over 350 club teams, both amateur and professional, face off for the right to hoist the Cup in the incomparable, immortal and inimitable confines of Wem–ber–lee, Wem–ber–lee... in Wembley Stadium in history-rich London.

Where was the Super Bowl played last year? In American football's history–poor Tempe, Ariz. Ouch, that has got to hurt. Vince must be rolling over in his grave.

Whether it is the fan, or the sport, loyalty for your local team runs thick as pea soup in the land of the foggy skies. Finding out the hard way about fan loyalty, I almost got mugged by some football fans in the Manchester Hilton last year when the issue of where your blood flows came up.

In a proper English fashion, three blokes at the hotel bar verbally accosted me when I said I was torn between United and City, the two club teams in Manchester, and Arsenal, a London team. I had followed United beforehand, but I did that PC thing (you know, frolic around the May–pole), and all I ended up doing was almost royally screwing myself. They said to go with your heart, or some fans (I think called "hooligans") will rip your heart out for it.

A few pints later, we were "brothahs for United, mate," and now I always will be.

I will admit, before all of your anticipating, blood–shot eyes, that I did not really support the Patriots when they went through the maniacal debacles of 1–15 seasons.

Really, I do not kid here. Putting all references to who I did support aside, guilt (just a little) has now filled me because I was not there for my home team; especially when I had the chance to finally get 50–yard seats in the immoral confines of Schaefer, I mean, Sullivan Stadium.

But, if you think this column is all over, it is now.

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

• Haircutting
• Tanning
• We Take Your Hair Seriously.

REGENCY HAIRSTYLES
253-9526 • 189 N. Pleasant St.

Don't Let The Marshall Catch You Going Anywhere Else!
Marshall
STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTO BODY
53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center
• Imports and other unibody vehicles are our speciality.
• Users of Sikkens paint products
• Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass repair.
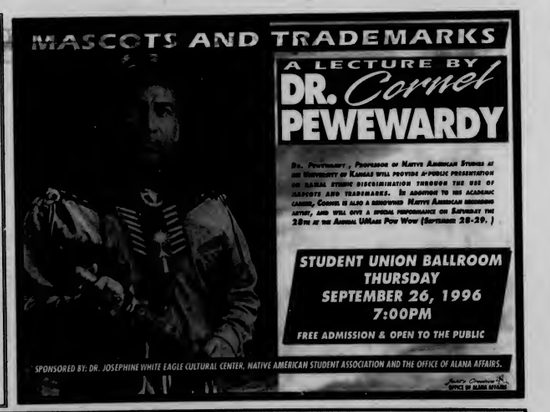
256-8157 256-1385
Shop Reg # RS1212



Mike on Thursday Nite
Free Hourdouvres at 9:00
MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
Win Tee Shirts & Mikes Money
GIVE AWAY PARTY FOR HORNSBYS AMBER CIDER
Cocktail of the Week 16 ounce Madras $1.50
Beer Bargain 16 ounce Natty Lite $1.00 Bud or Bud Lite $1.50

Discover
THE FINEST SINCE 1976
Handmade diamond engagement rings & featuring ideal cut
Lazare Diamonds®
Setting the standard for ...BRILLIANCE™
Full in-house repair service. We buy diamonds & gold. Free ear piercing with purchase of studs.
silverscape designs
GOLDSMITHS GEM GALLERY
One King St., Northampton 584-3324
264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-3324

LONDON $190
PARIS $215
AMSTERDAM $275
ZURICH $275
BARCELONA $299
CANCUN $183
ATHENS $349
COSTA RICA $225
CHICAGO $100
FARE WILL VARY MAY NOW BOSTON (MAY OR A ROUNDTRIP PURCHASE. TAXES DO NOT INCLUDE PASSENGER FACILITY CHARGE OF $3 PER SEGMENT. SOME RESTRICTIONS APPLY. SUBJECT TO CHANGE AND AVAILABILITY. SOME DESTINATIONS CHARGE ONE WAY. ©STA TRAVEL
CALL FOR A FREE STUDENT TRAVELS MAGAZINE!
Council Travel
44 Main Street
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-1261
http://www.ciee.org/travel.htm
EURAILPASSES ISSUED ON-THE-SPOT!

DID YOU KNOW?
The University Health Services offers Contact Lenses!!!
With all these great features:
• Same day fitting or replacement in many cases
• Wide variety of lenses available (including disposables)
• Convenient On-Campus Location
• Free sample start-up solutions
• Contacts mailed FREE!*
*normal delivery
WHAT ARE YOU WAITING FOR?
Call the Eye Care Services of the University Health Services.
577-5244

AMHERST BOOK AND PLOW FESTIVAL
A CELEBRATION OF LITERATURE AND THE LAND
Performances at The Book and Plow Festival
Come hear some of New England's finest performers.
Just one of the many events featured at The Book and Plow Festival.
Friday Sept 27
Friday Evening Jazz 6-9pm with:
Kim Zombek & Tom McClung
On the lawn adjacent to The Lord Jeffery Inn
Tickets for all day events: Adults $5.00 - Children $2.00. Performances run throughout the day
For more information call: The Amherst Chamber of Commerce at 413-253-0700.
This Community Event was brought to you by: The Amherst Area Chamber of Commerce, WHMP Radio, Pepsi-Cola, Amherst College, UMASS & many more.
PERFORMERS INCLUDE:
Saturday Sept 28
Opening Ceremony 12:00pm
•Dawnland Singers
•An Honest Calling
•Chanterelle
•Four Score
•Ujama
•Cambodian Musicians
Freddie Moreno Band
Giacomo Gates
Mariachi Bustamanet Azteca
and
SISTER CAROL
Sunday Sept 29
Alicia Mathewson
The Gospel Stars
Erica Wheeler
Cordelia's Dad
and
VANCE GILBERT
Sponsors include:
Daily Hampshire Gazette
Broad & Circus
We'd love to show you around.
MASSACHUSETTS

NETS versus Bullets at
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst
The Return of Coach Cal!
SUNDAY, OCT. 13
7PM
$23 and $15
Tickets available through: Mullins Center Box Office or 413-545-0505
Sponsored by:
NEWS 40 DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE TODAY'S 99

4 SEASONS
RTE. 9 HADLEY 584-8174
Monday-Saturday 9:00am-11:00pm
Not Responsible for typos
Visa, Mastercard & Discover accepted
DISCOUNT LIQUORS
BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE • CIGARS
NEW! BEER DISPLAY AREA ... WE NOW STOCK OVER 100% MORE ICE COLD MICROS & IMPORTS!
KEG OF THE WEEK!
RED DOG $38.99 + DEP.
"KEGS"
BUD, BUD ICE MICHELOB - ICEHOUSE, MICHELOB LT, LOWENBRAU DK., MICHELOB DK., LITE, LITE ICE ... $39.99 +DEP.
NATURAL LT, NATURAL ICE $34.99 + DEP.
MICRO KEGS
SAM ADAMS $89.99
OREGON $89.99
SARANAC $89.99
J.W. DUNDEE $69.99
PLUS MANY MORE
PETE'S WICKED 24-12 oz. Bott. $17.99 + dep.
RHINO CHASERS 24-12 oz. Bott. $18.99 + dep.
RED HOOK 24-12 oz. Bott. $18.99 + dep.
BASS ALE 24-12 oz. Bott. $21.99 + dep.
MOOSEHEAD 24-12 oz. Bott. $13.99 + dep.
ICEHOUSE • RED DOG 18 PK-CANS $7.99 + dep.
BUSCH & LT. "30 pk" $11.99 + dep.
MILLER "HIGH LIFE" 30 pack cans $11.99 + dep.
KEYSTONE LT. "30 pk" $10.99 + dep.
BUD DRY 24-12 oz. Bar Bott. $9.99 + dep.
M.G.D. & LT 24-12 oz. Bar Bott $9.99 + dep.
NATURAL LT & ICE 24-12 oz. Cans $8.99 + dep.
ABSOLUT VODKA $20.99 1.75L
SEAGRAM'S 7 $12.99 1.75L
CUTTY SARK $24.99 1.75L
TANQUERAY GIN $21.99 1.75L
CLUNY SCOTCH $12.49 1.75L
JAGERMEISTER $13.99 .750 ML
FOUR SEASONS VODKA $8.99 1.75L
JIM BEAM $8.49 .750 ML
PASSPORT SCOTCH $19.99 1.75 L
JOSE CUERVO GOLD TEQ. $10.99 .750 ML
MONTPELLIER VINYARDS CHARD. & CAB. $8.99 1.5L
ROUND HILL CHARD. & CAB. $5.99 .750 ML
WOODBRIDGE CHARD & CAB. $10.49 1.5L
GLENN ELLEN CHARD & CAB. $7.99 1.5L
M/D 20-20 $1.99 .750 ML
BOONES FARM $1.99 .750 ML
FRANZIA "BAG IN A BOX" $6.99 5.0 L
T.G.I.F. "COCKTAILS" $3.99 .375ML
LET'S GO UMASS FOOTBALL
BEERBALLS $22.99 + dep.
WE DELIVER 584-8174
ICE
10 LBS. $1.29
50 LBS. $5.99
100 LBS. $9.99
SALE GOOD THRU 10/3/96

Minutemaniacs
UMass' student athletic booster club, the Minutemaniacs, is looking for new recruits for the '96-'97 season!
UMass Athletic Fund Member
New Member Registration
Applications will be accepted at the conclusion of UMass Women's Volleyball vs. Duquesne
$25.00 to Join! New Members Will Be Picked By A Lottery System
September 28, 1995
7:00 P.M.
Mullins Center
Only one application per person will be accepted.
[Applications will also be accepted at the Athletic Ticket Office on Thursday 9/26 & Friday 9/27]
Minutemaniac Benefits:
• Advance Ticket Pickup
• Minutemaniac T-Shirt
• Game Receptions
• "The Maniac" Newsletter
• Membership Card
Lottery Application for New Minutemaniacs
GREAT VALUE AT ONLY $25 - LIMITED TO ONLY 500 UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS
Student Name:
Student #:
Local Address:
Local Phone: ( ) Year at UMass:
Home Address:
City: State: Zip:
Home Phone: ( )

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 9a.m.-11p.m. Tel: 549-2692
Scott's is your tailgating headquarters
Shop Scott's & Save Lots!
THANK YOU FOR YOUR PATRONAGE
Coors & Coors Light 30 packs $15.99 +dep.
Natural: Light & Ice 24-12oz. cans $8.79 +dep.
Harpoon I.P.A. 12 packs $8.99 +dep.
Sam Adams Boston Lager 24-12oz. bottles $17.79 +dep.
Evil Eye Brews all flavors 6 packs $4.19 +dep.
Milwaukee's Best: Reg & Light 30 packs $9.99 +dep.
Check Out Our Other In Store Specials!
Cider Jack 6 packs $4.99
Romana Sambuca 750 ml $14.49
Jose Cuervo Tequila 750ml $11.49
Seagrams Gin 1.75 L $12.49
Southern Comfort 750ml 7.99
Bud, Bud Ice & Bud Light Kegs $39.99 + dep.
MasterCard VISA MasterCard
Tele-Check for your personal check
Check Out Our Other Great In Store Specials
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
Subway Moe's Southwest Grille Blockbuster Video Victory Market Staples

Strained hamstring keeps Brisby benched

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

FOXBORO — How long HAS it been since Vincent Brisby, the Patriots top wide receiver last season, has been out with a hamstring strain that just won't go away?

Leave it to coach Bill Parcells to put it in perspective. "I told him this morning I recovered from open heart surgery faster," Parcells said yesterday with a smile. "That's the truth."

"Bill's Superman," said New England quarterback Drew Bledsoe, who is eager to get a healthy Brisby back. "He does those kind of things. Just ask him."

And how did Brisby feel about his boss's barb?

"It was funny," he said with a slight grin. "Bill, he's got a sense of humor."

Brisby has tried seemingly everything — ice, heat, massage, ultrasound — but nothing had worked well enough to get him back into a game.

He was hurt late in July but did play in the first exhibition game, a 24-7 loss to Green Bay on Aug. 2 in which he scored the Patriots only touchdown on a 41-yard pass play.

He re-injured his right hamstring practicing for the Aug. 12 exhibition against Dallas and hasn't played since. Several times, he's tried to run hard and once he ran eight routes at full speed — only to hurt himself again on the ninth one.

"It's been a depressing season so far," Brisby said.

Parcells said his heart surgery took place on June 2, 1992 and he ran two miles on Aug. 4. The following Jan. 21, he was named coach of the Patriots.

New England is in a bye week, and Brisby hopes to return to practice next Tuesday for the game the following Sunday at Baltimore. He and Parcells aren't sure he can do it.

"We'll see. I've got my doubts," Parcells said. "He's trying to get better. It's not really funny, but I was kidding him this morning. Hey, the player wants to play, but we're at the point now where if he comes back and were to injure it again, that's it for the year."

Brisby tried to run full speed before the Patriots' last two games, victories that improved their record to 2-2, but wasn't ready. He's worried about aggravating the strain.

"It's kind of scary," he said. "Every time I think it's ready, I go out there and try to run, then it's like I'm starting back over again. That's the frustrating part of it.

"I don't know how to prevent it from happening," he said.

The Patriots passing game has done well without Brisby. In three of their games, Bledsoe completed passes to seven receivers and in the other he hit six.

The addition of first-round pick Terry Glenn and free agent Shawn Jefferson gives the Patriots two deep threats they lacked last year, when Brisby led all their wide receivers with 72 catches. Will Moore, who was waived this season, was second with 33.

Glenn hasn't needed as much time to recover from a hamstring injury that sidelined him for the entire preseason and the first regular-season game. He is the Patriots leading wide receiver with 17 catches in three games.

Brisby would make the improving passing game even stronger. In his three previous NFL seasons, he started 40 of 46 games, missing just two, and had 169 receptions and 10 touchdowns.

"I've been telling him all along, 'I need you, but I don't need you to come back and try and play too soon and get hurt and miss a bunch more of the season,'" Bledsoe said. "It's frustrating for me not to have him and it's extremely frustrating for him not being on the field."

Notre Dame tries to out Pace Ohio

By Nancy Armour
Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — There's nothing small about Ohio State offensive tackle Orlando Pace. Not his size, and certainly not the way he plays.

The Notre Dame coaching staff and defense describe the 6-foot-6, 330-pound junior as the best offensive tackle in football. That's football, period, not just college.

So does that mean Irish defensive end Melvin Dansby is worried about lining up across from Pace on Saturday when No. 5 Notre Dame hosts No. 4 Ohio State?

Nah.

"I don't listen to everything that goes on, like, 'This is the bogeyman, he's coming to get you,'" Dansby said. "I just try to get my own house in order, try to think about my assignment. I worry about what happens on the field, on the field. It shouldn't be that bad."

While Dansby may be confident, he's not stupid. The senior has followed Pace's career with interest since Pace was a freshman, hoping that one day he'd get a chance to play him. Dansby missed all of last season with a neck injury, so he wasn't there when the Irish lost to Ohio State.

But he's talked to Renaldo Wynn, who lined up against Pace last year, and has watched hours of film on the behemoth lineman. Pace didn't allow a single quarterback sack last year, and already has 15 pancake blocks in Ohio State's first two games this season. The Pittsburgh defense decided it didn't even want to test him last weekend, leaving him virtually uncovered for most of the game.

"He's a pancake guy, but he does it in a different way," Dansby said. "He doesn't come right off and try to knock you 15 yards back into your own backfield. He'll take you, stand you up, block you out, slam you."

"I've never been pancaked yet and I don't plan to Saturday," he added. "I don't think I'm too bad myself, so I think it's going to be a good match up."

Dansby's confidence comes from the rest of the Irish defense, which is off to its best start since coordinator Bob Davie joined the team after the 1993 season. Davie was the architect of Texas A&M's "Wrecking Crew" defenses, and this year's Notre Dame squad looks pretty similar.

The Irish rank eighth in the nation in total defense, allowing 213.7 yards a game. They're ninth in scoring defense, allowing just 10.3 points per game.

And best of all, Notre Dame's strength has been in protecting against the run — the heart of Ohio State's offense. The Irish are allowing an average of 60 yards a game rushing, ninth best in the country.

"I think they're more physical on the defensive side of the ball than they have been in past years," Ohio State coach John Cooper said. "They're athletic, they all can run. And the people up front are all 275, 280 up front. They're a pretty physical defensive team."

Ohio State has put up big numbers in its first two games, routing Rice 70-7 and Pittsburgh 72-0. The Buckeyes are averaging 617 total offensive yards per game, best in the country.

The key for the Irish is simple: stop the run.

Yankees bomb Brewers, win clinches AL East title

By Tom Withers
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Yankees ended any suspense left in the AL East race and started their party a little early.

New York clinched its first AL East title since 1981 with its highest-scoring game in 34 years, a 19-2 rout of the Milwaukee Brewers in the first game of a doubleheader yesterday.

The Yankees came in needing only one win to lock up the division title, and they got it with an awesome offensive display.

After scoring four runs in the first inning, the Yankees scored 10 more in the second to open a 14-1 lead. The most productive first two innings in the club's 94-year history, and its highest run total since 1962, finally allowed the Yankees to relax following two tense weeks.

The crowd, which trickled in during the first game, stood from the first pitch of the ninth inning to the last, a fly out by Fernando Vina to center fielder Bernie Williams.

After the catch, confetti poured out of the upper deck as the Yankees celebrated in the infield. New York City police in riot gear, however, ringed the field and prevented any fans from joining in.

"It's just a great feeling," Williams said during the festivities. "We battled hard all year."

The win gave David Cone (7-2) a chance to fine-tune his mechanics before the playoffs begin next week.

The right-hander, whose dramatic return after missing four months following surgery on an aneurysm in his right shoulder gave the team an emotional lift earlier this month, allowed two runs and four hits in six innings. He walked five and struck out six. Tino Martinez's three-run homer off Tim VanEgmond (3-5) helped New York take a 3-0 lead in the first before the Yankees sent 15 batters to the plate in the second to score 10 times — their largest one-inning output in more than three years.

The blowout was welcomed relief for the Yankees and their fans who had watched the team's 12-game division lead in late July shrink to 2 1/2 games over second-place Baltimore. But New York won two of three against the Orioles in a crucial home series last week to open a four-game lead.

Although their magic number remained at one with the win, the Yankees are assured the AL East title because of a 10-3 record in head-to-head matchups against Baltimore this season.

With the outcome decided after two innings, fans in right field chanted, "We want Texas... We want Texas" in anticipation of New York's likely first-round playoff opponent.

Tim Raines homered and Williams drove in three runs for the Yankees, who set a season-high for runs.

Martinez's three-run shot, his 25th, followed two walks by VanEgmond. After Martinez returned to the dugout it was clear from the high-fives that greeted him that the Yankees were anxious to wrap up the division title.

Panthers overage defense opens eyes around NFL

By Joe Macenka
Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — They don't have a catchy name like the Steel Curtain. At the rate they're going, they don't need one. Everyone in the NFL is starting to take notice of the Carolina Panthers' defense.

They have six starters over 31, and they admiringly refer to their leader, 37-year-old linebacker Sam Mills, as Pops. Their numbers are solid but in most cases unspectacular.

Put the second-year franchise in a position where it needs a big play, though, and the defense has been delivering. It has come through often enough to help make Carolina (3-0) one of the four remaining unbeaten teams in the NFL.

"We feel like we have a chance to do some special things," cornerback Eric Davis said.

The San Francisco 49ers can vouch for that. The five-time Super Bowl champions have played Carolina three times — and lost twice. The Panthers went to San Francisco last November and forced five turnovers on the way to becoming the first expansion team to defeat a defending Super Bowl champion.

On Sunday, the Panthers held San Francisco to 66 yards in the first half, building a 17-0 lead on the way to a 23-7 victory. The outcome gave Carolina sole possession of first place in the NFC West, a spot occupied by the 49ers for 42 of the previous 45 weeks. Coach George Seifert had a blank expression when he faced reporters after the game.

"I'm struggling for words," he said, "because I don't know what the hell to say."

It's a familiar predicament for many teams that face the Panthers' 3-4 alignment. The scheme rose to prominence in Pittsburgh, where Dom Capers was the defensive coordinator from 1992-94. No team in the league gave up fewer points during that span.

The 3-4 features an array of blitzing schemes and lineups. For example, at one point during Sunday's game, the Panthers lined up with two down linemen, five linebackers and four players in the secondary.

"We're able to confuse some teams," Mills said. "When you look at us in the huddle, we look like any average defense. But then when we line up, we're in something different."

After being named the Panthers' first coach, Capers molded his first defense into the seventh-ranked unit in the league, helping the Panthers win an expansion-record seven games.

This year, Carolina is ranked 15th in overall defense. The Panthers have allowed just eight rushing first downs in three games. They held the 49ers to 2-of-11 third-down conversions. Capers shifts uncomfortably when asked if he senses his latest defense developing into something special, but he also makes it clear he likes what he's seeing.

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

CONSTRUCTION AHEAD
With your help, MDA is building a tomorrow without neuromuscular diseases.
MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association
1-800-572-1717

HAS YOUR AUTO BEEN ...
MASSACHUSETTS STATE INSPECTION STICKER
REJECTED
MASSACHUSETTS STATE INSPECTION STICKER
OR CONCERNED IT WILL BE?
WE CAN HELP!!
Let the Experts at Midas Repair Your Cars'
EXHAUST • SUSPENSION • BRAKES
-STOP BY OR CALL TODAY-
HADLEY 397 Russell St. (Rte. 9) 586-9991
NORTHAMPTON 143 King St. (Rte. 5) 586-4840
90 days same as cash

SINCE 1984
La Cazuela
RESTAURANT
Fine Cuisines of MEXICO and AMERICAN SOUTHWEST
Since 1984 La Cazuela has been winning acclaim and awards for its hand made cooking and outstanding design. We prepare food that is representative of fine dining in the many regions of Mexico and the American Southwest. Our menu changes seasonally to take advantage of the freshest available foods and to reflect the cultural traditions of the food we serve. We offer an extraordinary tequila list, superb margaritas, a tasteful wine selection and the warm hospitality that reflects a western heritage. Please join us.
Dinner Every Night
Downtown Northampton
Across From The Parking Garage
LIVE RIGHT EAT WELL COOK WITH CHILES!

CELEBRATE THE RHYTHMS OF LIFE
1996/1997 SEASON
Fine Arts Center
University of Massachusetts Amherst
Stomp, Grease, The Festival of Tibet, The San Francisco Mime Troupe, Having Our Say, The Everett Dance Theatre . . . From dance to music to theater and beyond, some of the best performances in the world are as close as the Fine Arts Center stage. And for only $5 a ticket, you can't afford not to take your seat.
So what are you waiting for? Come see what the noise is all about!
For tickets and information on our full season
ALL THIS FOR 5 BUCKS A SEAT? GET BUSY!
The Fine Arts Center University of Massachusetts Amherst

"I got mine at Zanna"
John Fluevogs
ZANNA
downtown Amherst

SEEKING
Students in Recovery
from alcohol or drug abuse
ARE YOU IN AA, NA, RR?
Are you willing to escort someone who is going to their first meeting?
If so, please call Lydia Rackenberg, LICSW
Mental Health 545-2337
All calls are confidential

Seven Revelations

by Martin F. Jones

I

Three years shall pass when the lion and the lamb stand together in the garden of roses,
Heralding the promise of a greater peace between the followers of Mohammed and Moses.
The people will come to mourn the loss of the one named JFK,
A man of great courage and conviction, who lived in a special way.
And ten days after the Day of Atonement, a bird shall fall from the sky.
The world will react with deep sorrow to learn
The king's successor and his wife were inside.

II

He leads the herd when the elephants march, but soon will be struck down.
Another shall arrive from the beacon of a hill. He will wear a crimson crown.
With forty days to spare he'll declare his entry to the people's race,
As the herd of elephants meet to choose a new selection place.
And on the seventh day of the eleventh month, he'll give his greatest speech
In the Athens of the new world, at the center of the fleet.

III

A new successor will soon be gained with seven characters in each name.
He will have seen victory in the beloved game.
Each wife will call him and the king the same.
Time will pass while he does serve the king with all his might.
One day the king's great deputy will inherit a nations plight.

IV

The ass and the elephant shall duel with galore as they fight to settle the endless score.
And though the elephant does valiantly soar,
In the end, the ass will triumph once more.
And soon after the elephant returns to his tent, the ass will build a new covenant.
With stately poise, he'll bring aboard
The one who led the eagle through the great desert storm.

V

The dove once left the great nest in shame.
This time he returns with the highest acclaim.
With the colors of the sky under his command,
He will be honored and respected in many lands.

VI

The bear will strike at those from beneath who defy his lethal claw.
Death will arrive to meet all who refuse to accept his sacred law.
But soon one day the bear will be slain.
To the west there will be great despair.
The defiant ones, however, will gather and rejoice
At the fall of the white-haired bear.

VII

The world will enter a dark new phase as his majesty takes the center stage.
Standing before his court he declares, "War is in place! Let the enemy beware!"
And so his subjects take arms for soon
They will battle the star and the crescent moon.
The prophet's followers will gather once more
As the hour draws near for the great holy war.

paid advertisement

football

continued from page 16

watching our beloved Minutemen pound Northeastern, right? (You best be down there, tough guy.)

Mack the Knife... An early battle for ACC supremacy will be waged this weekend when No. 2 Florida State hosts No. 11 North Carolina. Coach Mack Brown's Tarheels have looked sweet early on, pounding the likes of Clemson and Syracuse. If any of you saw last Thursday's fiasco up in Raleigh, N.C., you know how good Florida State is. North Carolina wants respect, and beating the Seminoles in Tallahassee is a good way to get it. It just ain't gonna happen, though. FSU hasn't even hit stride yet, and they looked pretty bad in their home opener against Duke two weeks ago. Bowden's boys don't look bad at home two weeks in a row, ever. Look for the Heels' Cinderella train to derail on Saturday.

Booty Schwag of the Week Award... I don't even know if I should give this out anymore. The last two recipients, Villanova and Arizona State, have gone on to shut out their opponents the next week, winning by a combined score of 49-0. But the schwag must go on. This week, Pitt gets the statuette (which I've now determined will be a three-foot statue of my ex-girlfriend).

Quick question, Coach Majors. What the hell happened to Panther football? A school that produced Tony Dorsett and Dan Marino lost to Ohio State by 72 points. Along with Temple, Pitt is now the laughing stock of the Big East, and you have to really suck to be the laughing stock of that conference. They're even worse than Boston College, for crying out loud.

Speaking of BC, can you believe that they actually played a decent game up in Ann Arbor? Matt Hasselback went 17- 28 with 165 yards against one of the best defenses in the country, and the whole team showed hustle for 60 minutes. I know I dis BC on a regular basis, but I'll give 'em props. They could have cashed in the rest of the season and gone through the motions, but they didn't do that. Now they go to Navy, who hasn't been good since the Roger Staubach era. If they can't beat the Midshipmen, we'll know it's not the effort, it's the talent that's keeping them back.

Tonight's game... Duke vs. Georgia Tech. If Stephon Marbury gets hot, and Jon Barry can contain Jeff Capel, the Jackets could very well...

Oh, yeah. It's September, not March. This looks to be about as exciting as Bob Dole's last speech. It doesn't matter anyway, because "Seinfeld" and "Friends" finally have new episodes. Thursday night's real question is this:

When is Rachel gonna dump Ross and get with me? Hey, Rach, drop the chimp-daddy and get with the pimp-daddy, baby.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian staff member.

THANG VO \ COLLEGIAN

Down the line
Jake Brodsky (17) and Brad Kurowski (23) will look for their first win on Garber Field when they meet St. Joe's on Friday.

Alessio

continued from page 16

win football games."

This week's roadblock is Northeastern. The Huskies, a program that has struggled in recent years, is 2-1 in 1996.

More importantly, they beat Connecticut last Saturday 21- 13. UConn is a top 25 Division I-AA team, and the win, in conference, is a huge step for the Huskies.

"They're a real good football team," Alessio said. "They've always come ready to play."

As for Alessio, he is level-headed about life when his UMass career ends.

"If I get the opportunity, yes, I'll work my hardest to see it through," said Alessio, referring to a pro career. "But I know how it is. I'm concentrating on getting my degree, and we'll see what happens from there."

Alessio is a sports management major and expects to get his diploma in May.

UMass has had a tradition of great running backs, and Frank Alessio has carried on the tradition quite nicely. Let's just thank our lucky stars he followed his older brother to practice one day, and never left.

field hockey

continued from page 16

yesterday's game.

Senior goaltender Hilary Rose made nine saves on the day in net, while URI goalie Jackie Pizzi stopped 13 shots. Before yesterday's game, Rose was ranked fifth in the nation in both save percentage (.908) and saves (79).

Rose turned back her fourth penalty stroke of the season, and her second in as many games. Rose has not allowed a penalty stroke or penalty corner goal yet this season.

Youth has paid its dividends for the Minutewomen, as Johnston, Putnam, Fuchs and sophomore Katherine McClellan account for 13 of the team's 21 goals. Rothenberger and junior Courtney MacLean supply the firepower of the upperclassman attack, scoring three goals apiece.

UMass returns to action on Saturday when the team travels to Philadelphia to take on Temple in Atlantic 10 action.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Arts: Animal Science PreVet Club is having their first general meeting on Thursday 9/26 @ 7:00 in Paige 202 Call 546-1942 for more info

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CHINESE FOOD KAI CHI delivering Sunday-Thursday to 2am, Friday and Saturday to 3am

Seeking interested people to help plan activities for World AIDS Day at UMass. Meeting Fri 9/27 at 2pm Campus Center 577-5181 for details

AUTO FOR SALE

1988 Subaru GL Hatchback 152K miles, some rust, mechanically sound $1,250/BO Call Eric 545-6344

1983 Dodge Aries 92k miles, good condition $800 BO Call Jen 549-7850

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

1985 Buick Skylark Dependable. Asking $1,000 Call (413) 774-2107

1987 Dodge Caravelle Excellent condition AC, Cassette Automatic 80 545-1253 Ask for Adel

1982 Chevy Cavelier Wagon AC, AM/FM, new tires, plus $250.00 OBO Call Bruce 256-1215

1986 Mazda Reliable, 5 speed, AM/FM cassette $500 665-8216

MOTORCYCLE

Yamaha XS 400 Low miles, new battery, recent work, inspectable. $400 firm. 253-1775

EMPLOYMENT

Business Opportunity. need additional income? Want the energy to earn it? Earth-friendly company looking for distributors. Wild Organic Food, Free Tape 1-800-977-7577 ext. 7368

Spring Break!!! Earn Cash!!! Highest Commissions! Lowest Prices! Travel Free on only 13 sales!! Free Info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

Cruise Ships Hiring. Earn up to $20,000+/month. World Travel. Seasonal and Full Time positions. No exp necessary. For info call 1-206-971-3550 ext. C50015

National Parks Hiring. Positions are now available at National Parks, Forests and Wildlife Preserves. Excellent benefits and bonuses! Call 1-206-971-3620 Ext. N50016

Tropical Resorts Hiring. Students needed! Entry level and career positions available worldwide. Call Resort Employment Services. 1-206-971-3600 Ext. R50012

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS! Over 6 billion in public and private sector Grants and scholarships are now available. All students are eligible. Let us help. For more info call 1-800-263-6495 Ext. F50014

International Employment - Earn up to $25-$45/hour teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S. Korea. No teaching background or Asian Languages required. For info call 206-971-3570 Ext. J50015

Now Hiring All Shifts. Closing shifts available, with bonus program. Hadley Burger King. Ask for Tim 584-5110

Now Hiring! Great pay doing odd jobs, flexible hours. Call Andrew 584-8010

Caumer Help and Daytime Delivery Persons. Counter help must be able to work 15-20 hr. nights and weekends. Apply at D.P. Dough

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-9740

FOR SALE

All you can carry for $99. Computers, software, hard drive, color monitors Steve (413) 586-3324

FOR SALE

Platform Bed with mirrored headboard, bookcase and mattress $25. Upholstered chair. Red tweed in good shape $10.00. 584-9264

Laptop 486DX 8mRAM 360 Hard Drive, loaded with fax modem, MS Office, preloaded with software and case $1300 or best offer. 8-1469

Waterbed King, new, w/wireless mattress/heaters. 4 drawers, bookcase, mirrored headboard. $300 549-1813

Four Dave Matthews tickets for Oct 6 Spectacular seats on the floor. Please help me get rid of these 546-3310

INSTRUCTION

Boxing Lessons w/Opra Bumpus Call for brochure 732-9817

Jazz Piano Teacher - Beginners to advanced students - Call Steven Page 253-3294

WWW.SUCCESS.ORG Free business education from American Institute Entrepreneurship and Real Estate Investment Courses! Retire rich in ten years

PC/MAC Tutoring Cheap instruction for computer. Patient, valuable help and advice. Set-ups, software, Internet (413)772-0833

MUSICIANS

Guitar Classes Start 9/16 Rentals and lessons available 10 wks/$40.00 FTUG Pad 545-0579

Blues Jam Tues. 8:00pm Emerson 112 Check it out!

PERSONALS

Chances Not Chances Free contraception education. Every Mon & Thurs 3-4:30 and Tues. & Wed. 7-8:30pm in Rm 302 UHS. Med and Women welcome. For more information call Health Education Office 577-5181

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

ROOMATE WANTED

Looking for room in an apartment. Anything on bus line. Please call Dan 367-2047

SERVICES

Computer Consultant Hardware and Software help. Web Page Cression, Marketing. Call Joseph (413)546-0853

Computer Problems? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Scream Savers 549-0080

LICENSED MANICURIST
Basic Manicure $10 French Manicure $12 Call Bridget for an appt @ 549-6379

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK! Earn cash! Highest commissions/lowest prices! Travel free on only 13 sales!! Free info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

FREE TRIPS AND CASH Find out how hundreds of student representatives are already earning free trips and lots of cash with America's #1 Spring Break Company! Sell only 15 trips and travel free! Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica, or Florida! Campus Manager positions also available! Call now! Take a break! Student Travel 800/95-Break

TRANSPORTATION

Ride Share from Lee (or Berkshire area) MTWF @ 9:00 classes Call Jason 243-0981

WANTED

Mother's Helper South Amherst. Early morning. Car Required. Raise negotiable. Call evenings 256-0076

Wanted 100 People New Metabolism Breakthrough Loss 5-100 lbs Guaranteed Cost $35 (800)776-9503

50,000 EYES WILL SEE YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE CLASSIFIEDS

Rates
$2.00 minimum/day
Students 20¢ per word/day
All others 40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20 The subtle approach is a difficult situation may prick your conscience, but it will save heartache in the long run. Just make certain that you are completely honest down the road with yourself, and with everyone involved.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21 A clever remark makes you think. Follow up on whatever idea you come up with—there may be a real diamond in the rough there. Great success can be made if you make the extra effort.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21 Fast-thinking action prevents a minor disaster from becoming a major one. You ought to consider taking the initiative more often. A new idea turns out to be OK after all.

CANCER
June 22-July 22 Putting an old friend is a good idea. You'll reforge old bonds, which could be useful in the future. Besides, you might have fun. A good day for other communications efforts, also—should you write a letter?

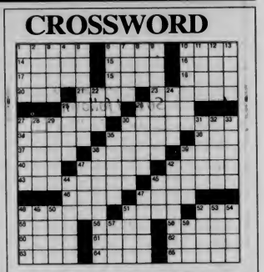
LEO
July 23-August 23 An unusual assortment of coworkers or friends could help you solve a problem you thought was impossible. Lavish them with appreciation if things work out, and be ready to return any favors in kind.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22 An unexpected long-distance phone call brings welcome news. Pass it along and make another's day, but don't gossip. A work-related dispute comes to a head over an unrelated issue.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23 Your enthusiasm and leadership create an ideal environment to accomplish great things this week. Allow an intellectual to take the lead, and you'll go even further.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22 An innovation on an old routine may seem threatening, but it's a change for the better. Ease into the new pattern slowly, and you may be surprised at how easy it is to adjust.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21 A club meeting is a good forum for tackling a complicated subject—in theory. Be careful that the ideas you come up with are practical before you try to put them into action. It might be wise to wait awhile.



CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20 A frivolous acquaintance gets on your nerves with their chatter, but be careful not to complain directly. Rather, distract them with an excuse, and then get back to work. You'll be more productive in a quiet environment.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18 Set up an appointment with an expert to discuss a problem that's been worrying you. Your difficulties may be more easily solved than you think, so it's worth the expense to calm your mind.

PISCES
February 19-March 20 A sporting event is fun for a larger group, but beware a group member who may not value moderation as you do. A tactful approach will prevent embarrassment.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1. Silkwood of Silkwood
6. Before circle or sweet
10. Handy with one's hands
14. Of a piece
15. Learn (of)
16. Tint
17. Shangri-la's locale
18. Ancient Peruvian
19. Railroad, e.g.
20. Ayer
21. Throw, in cards
23. Tidy up
25. Too bad!
26. Canon role
27. Biblical language
30. Police networks
34. Elk with twisted horns
35. Young and O'Casey
36. Asian people var.
37. Grow dim
38. Garners
39. Temporary calm
40. Actor Jaffe
41. Stain of the West
42. Pendleton Roundup, e.g.
43. Assuages
46. Break in legal proceedings
48. The ___ times
49. Abundant
50. Advanced medical student
51. Power
52. Sound like a stepped-on puppy
55. Precious
58. Accompaniments
59. Endangered atmospheric layer
60. "Hi Lo"
61. Orphan who loved Rochester
62. Help for ashen cheeks
63. Colleague of Dinah and Sarah
64. Studies
66. Master

DOWN
1. "___ Bell" (Stephen Foster song)
2. "I cannot tell ___" (2 wds.)
3. Lung protectors
4. Mare de
5. Vexed
6. Moves suddenly
7. Counting out word
8. Big ___
9. Middle Easterners
10. Hinder
11. Dagger
12. Bus rider
13. Certain Feds
22. "The ___ and the Cookoo" (Lee Strauss)
24. Easter Bunny's goodies
25. Eliza composer
26. Part of a chatter
27. Rail-splitter, for example
28. Fill with glee
29. Hotshotted
30. Emulates Donald Trump?
31. Chemin composition
32. Legends
33. Farm structures
35. Monica of tennis
38. Sought retribution
39. Inverness lagoon
41. Order at Cheers
42. Church functionaries
44. Part of Europe
46. Reason to discard hose
47. Involves in difficulties
48. Van
49. First name in NASA history
50. Lanka
51. Shoot
52. Swing ___ Lady (Bogart film)
53. Little Shiloa's creator
54. ___ Gyrl
57. Feature of a needle
59. Bronx attraction

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

Robotman By Jim Meddik

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winck

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

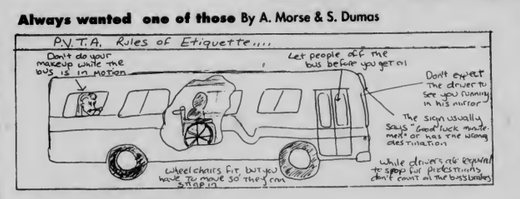
8 Years in Braces By Eric Peterson

University² By Frank Cho

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloum

I met this girl at summer camp.

We really liked each other.



She lived a long way from me. So that following school year we talked long distance by phone every day for an hour.

Dad said it was very expensive. He said that we should invite a representative from AT&T to the wedding.

I told him we should also invite someone from MCI and Sprint.

Always wanted one of those By A. Morse & S. Dumas

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Beautiful! Now all we need to do is sit back and wait for that jerk downstairs to crank up his stereo!"

Generation X By Chris Lehman

Bastards By Matt & Gregg

The Joopus Crow Show By Lindholm and Campbell

Quote of the Day

"You are invited to take advantage of the chambermaid

–Sign in a Japanese Hotel"

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Improvements made to UMass over the summer

10) DC food? Now made with patented suckifying process.
9) Whitmore completely revamped to allow for slower, more confusing service.
8) I signed a contract forcing me to refrain from any sort of talking dolphin joke.
7) Special guest Neil Young coming to FAC to speak on how to ruin a perfectly good band.
6) HSCN now with several new channels that aren't ESPN.
5) New technology allows dorm residents to smell ham 24 hours a day.
4) The free stuff kits now come with a bowl of cottage cheese.
3) More parking lots that you can't park in.
2) Mr. T now working for campus security.
1) The whole campus has been Oprah-fied!

Today's Staff

Jacob W. Michaels
Night Editor

Lisa Chiu
Copy Editor

Jennifer Jutras
Photo Technician

Josh Sylvester
Production Supervisor

Joylyn Lombard
Dan Bodah
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Cheese Pizza
Fiesta Rice & Cheese

DINNER
Chicken Tenders
Brocc. Stuffed Flounder
Lemon Grill Burger
Bagel Dog

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Grilled Chicken Sandwich
Mac. & Cheese

DINNER
Breaded Chicken Tenders
Broccoli Stuffed Flounder

Worcester

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Fiesta Rice & Cheese
Bow Ties/Meat Sauce
Oatburgers

DINNER
Chicken Tenders
Lentil Chili
Pastabilities
Baked Ziti

Berkshire

LUNCH
Cheese Pizza
Fiesta Rice & Cheese
Hamburger, Bow Ties
Spicy Blk. Bean Burger

DINNER
Chicken Tenders
Brocc. Stuffed Flounder
Lentil Chili, Pastabilities
Baked Ziti

The kickoff for Saturday's UMass–Northeastern football game at Warren G. McGuirk Alumni Stadium has been moved to NOON to accommodate television.

Sports

Massachusetts field hockey trounces Rhode Island

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts field hockey team put its first regular–season conference matchup under its belt yesterday, as the Minutewomen beat Rhode Island, 3–1.

Massachusetts	03
Rhode Island	01

The No. 5 Minutewomen (6–1, 1–0 Atlantic 10), who have only dropped one game to the Lady Rams in the 18 year history of the series, were led by a trio of underclassmen as the team won its third straight on the road. Rhode Island drops to 1–6, 0–2 in the A–10 with the loss.

Sophomore Erica Johnston continued her offensive output, scoring her team–leading fifth goal of the season 20 minutes into the first half. Johnston scored a pair of goals, including the game winner in overtime, in last Sunday's victory over Penn State.

Sophomore Kate Putnam, who is tied with Minutewoman senior Kyle Rothenberger and several other players for 20th in the nation in assists, put a notch in the goal column with under two minutes to go before halftime. The eventual game winner gives Putnam three goals this season.

Putnam was also a key factor in last Sunday's defeat of the Lady Lions. Putnam sent home the third UMass goal of that game, an unassisted effort, which sent the game to overtime.

Rhode Island got on the board early in the second half, when Mary McCloskey netted an unassisted tally.

UMass wasn't content with a one–point lead, and seven minutes after McCloskey's goal, Minutewoman freshman Saskia Fuchs gave her team a two–point cushion. The insurance goal marked the fourth score of the season for Fuchs, who was tied for 13th on the nation's assist list going into

DAYMON SMITH \ COLLEGIAN

Kate Putnam scored the game winning goal in field hockey's 3–1 A–10 opening win over URI.

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 14

Gators numero uno, booty schwag to Pitt

Well, Well, Well...

Nebraska went out west as the big dog, and came back a whimpering puppy.

Tennessee was supposed to be the big dog after Saturday, but they forgot about the Gators.

Notre Dame went to Texas as a question mark and came back a legitimate Top 10 team.

And North Texas lost, again.

An interesting week in college football.

LUKE MERIDETH on College Football

Faster than you can say "Whoa, Nellie," the top 25 experienced the first of what will be many shake–ups in the coming weeks. Florida is our new No. 1, the Vols are now second, in the SEC, and two–time defending national champion Nebraska was shut out by Arizona State, falling out of the top five for the first time since 1837.

First of all, you can't be shocked by what happened up in Knoxville Saturday. Florida is one of the three or four best teams in the country, and if you sleep on the Gators they'll bite. The Vols looked more nervous than Kip Winger on a windy day, which is what happens when you have 107,000 people screaming for you to crucify another team.

As for Peyton Manning, leave the poor kid alone. He never should've had all that hype, but when you have a national media as unoriginal as ours, a storyline such as "Archie Manning's son carrying on a legacy" is too hard for these idiots to pass up. It's like I said before, Peyton's really good, but he's not all the way there yet. Like most young, strong armed quarterbacks, he sometimes forces the ball, and the result is usually a lot like Manning's first half on Saturday. Whether Peyton becomes an All–Pro ten years from now is still up for debate, but for God's sake, let him develop like anyone else.

A Priest, a Nun and a Rabbi walk into a bar... America's holiest football team, Notre Dame, is in pretty good shape after beating Texas over the weekend. Ron Powlus won't win any beauty contests with his play, but he got it done. The big test for the Irish is on Saturday, when the Ohio State Buckeyes come calling, and don't think the Irish forgot their second half choke job down in Columbus last October. Ohio State has pounded Rice and Pitt so far, but that doesn't prove anything. It'll be tough for the Bucks to go to South Bend and pull off the upset in their first real test of the year. Don't change the channel on this one. Of course, you'll be taping it anyway because you'll be down at Warren G. McGuirk Stadium

Turn to FOOTBALL page 14

UM club teams kick off season looking for respect

UMass club lax falls in war games with Navy

• "We don't duck any opponent, no matter how good they are. We love a strong challenge," said UMass club lacrosse coach Judy Dietel.

Last Sunday, in its first full–field game of the season, the UMass JV–level men's club team tested itself against a big challenge, losing to Navy's Div. 1 freshmen post–graduates in heavy rain. Navy came out on fire to win the first quarter, while UMass stormed back in the third quarter tying up the score 5–5. Dietel praised the team's great intensity and effort which was inspired by captains Roberto Torres, Tom Brunette, Brendan Keenan, and Joe Ruggeri.

The hardworking Minuteman defense did all it could to stave off the Midshipmen, but to no avail. In between the posts for UMass was Jon Martinelli. While two frustrating pipe shots didn't count, the UMass front line managed goals from Chris Ellis, Jeff Olszewski, Greg Resnick, Sean Sibley, and Gurmeet Singh.

The Club Lacrosse squad is back in action on Sunday at 1:30 p.m. on the Boyden Lower Fields.

Men's rugby earns respect in 35–25 win

• UMass drubbed Northeastern 35–25 as the Huskies return from a very successful 1995–1996 season. Last year they won the North East Rugby Union's Div. II Championship in November of '95 and the Div. I trophy at the Beast of the East Tournament in Providence last April.

Last week in divisional play, Northeastern took the measure of a traditionally strong Boston University side 35– 0. League competition began this weekend as the Huskies travelled to Amherst to meet UMass, the cellar–dwellers of last year's Premier League now competing in the Green League of the North East Rugby Union's First Division.

Massachusetts may have been an enigma for Northeastern, given last fall's mediocre performance in the league and their apparently one–sided loss to Dartmouth 8–40 last week. The matchup between UMass and Northeastern was to improve the understanding of the surprising results of the divisional interleague play of last weekend where the presumably stronger White League members lost four of the divisional contests.

Massachusetts kicked off to start the match as its pack, equal in size but greater in mobility, took control and drove Northeastern back to within five yards of the goal in the opening minutes. Off a throw–in ball UMass set Dikko Nwachukwu off for the first of his three tries. Northeastern came back nailing a penalty goal to bring the score to 5–3.

The UMass forwards led by Warren MacCallum did not let up on the restart and kept pressure on the NU inside backs. From a line–out NU goal, second jumper Jon O'Brien stole the ball and with the UMass pack's drive went in to score. Nwachukwu converted and UMass took a 12–3 lead.

Northeastern was not to be denied and managed to step up the pace of its game with many quick tap penalties as UMass could not keep up with the NU pressure which resulted in a forward try. The score at halftime stood at 12– 8.

The second half began with a Northeastern kick–off into a touch. UMass restarted with a scrummage where they drove the bigger NU pack back for several yards and Nwachukwu kick behind the NU right wing put Northeastern immediately and continually under pressure. The Pressure eventually resulted in an unconverted try by flanker Joel DeCosta setting the score at 17–8.

Nwachukwu later kicked a penalty goal and set the UMass lead to 20–8. At this point, the match heated up and increased in intensity. Northeastern dug deep and mustered a concerted series of offensive moves, all initiated by their talented backline. The result was a try under the post by the NU right wing which was good. NU was back to within a try when a great loose play by the UMass forwards placed the ball within striking distance of a goal.

With a 15 point lead, UMass could not relax as NU came back to score a final try at full–time moving forward a series of tap–penalties to eventually set a back free for the score, however, UMass hung on to pull out the victory.

Women's rugby downs UConn

• The University of Massachusetts women's rugby team won its first game of the season last Saturday as they beat the University of Connecticut 15–7 at Amherst.

The victory was more convincing than the score, as the UMass squad played most of the game in UConn's half and held the Huskies to only one try. The one shot came in a breakaway in the opening minutes of the game.

Massachusetts' tries were scored by senior Kari Olsen, junior Toni Ercoli, and senior Melanie Roy.

The UMass B team also won its game handily in a 15–0 blanking of the Huskies. This was the squad's first win and shutout of the season.

In pre–season action, UMass dropped games to

Turn to UMASS, page 11

The downfall of football; England strikes for home

"Come on, geev a go, If ya theenk ya awd enoof!" — Black Grape, "Shake Well Before Opening."

Jurma Kansanen

Aah... the smell of autumn in the air... the colors slowly changing on the trees, it must be football weather. No, not American football weather, but "real" football weather.

"Excuse me," all of you so–called sports purists inquire, with an emotional air of inane ineptitude. "But what are you babbling about, dude?"

I am talking about the real game of football, the one where a player actually uses their foot to play... ooh, I think we Americans call it something like soccer. Spending last year in England, whether I liked it or not, I received a massive dose of what I now truly consider the true fall game.

No, I was not brainwashed, or tied down to a chair and forced fed endless double overtime 0–0 draws. The sheer fact of the matter is that I have now returned to the States, and the start of the American football season has appealed to me as much as being whipped to whimpering, ideological submission by a leather–clad Elizabeth Dole.

What's the use in watching a game where play stops every half a second? What's the use in watching a game where the "foot" in its namesake is used a micro–fraction of the time? The sport is lying to itself... period.

Actually, it already beats out the hacked American version in sheer length (and don't we all know that really doesn't mean a thing... wink–wink, nudge–nudge, say no more), as it lasts beyond just the fall, but into the winter and spring.

Ooh, the intensity of the stretch playoff run, but excuse me, what teams have been winning the Super Bowl of late? Uh, maybe, it was the San Francisco 49ers and the Dallas Cowboys, eight times in the last fourteen years? The pinnacle of sporting competition, but pardon me while I puke in the Lombardi Trophy's general direction.

One of the most amazing feats in

Turn to ENGLAND, page 11

For Alessio, ring would be worth more than record

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

When he was a young kid, Massachusetts running back Frank Alessio was playing a different game when the lure of the gridiron first hit him.

"Back in fourth grade, after our last soccer practice, my brother Anthony decided to try out for football," Alessio said. "I guess I wanted to follow in his footsteps, so I tried out too."

The rest, as they say, is history.

Senior tailback Frank Alessio enters Saturday's home opener with Northeastern (12 p.m., McGuirk Stadium) as the third–leading rusher in UMass history, with 2,760 career rushing yards. The Sparta, N.J., native is currently sixth in the Yankee Conference in rushing, and his 268 yards this season lead the Minutemen.

While UMass is lucky to have Alessio here in Amherst, he makes it known that he's lucky to have chosen UMass out of high school.

"There was never a doubt that I wanted to come to UMass," Alessio said. "You know when they say that you have a feeling about a place? Well, that's how I felt about UMass."

The history of the program also appealed to Alessio.

"I liked the tradition of the school, all of the Yankee Conference championships," Alessio said.

Until last season, Alessio played second fiddle to UMass legend Rene Ingoglia. Alessio started all 11 games at tailback for the Minutemen in 1994 and 1995, but it was one day last November that he put his own imprint in the UMass record books.

The site was Boston University's Nickerson Field, Nov. 11, 1995. Alessio had always had more success on artificial turf, which was more suited to his slashing running style, but nobody could predict how much success he was about to have.

By the end of the game, Alessio had amassed 337 yards on only 21 carries, including touchdown runs of 84, 76, and 75 yards. He had broken both the UMass and the Yankee Conference single–game rushing records with his effort, and the amazing afternoon would catapult him into a Yankee Conference rushing title, over Ingoglia, the most prolific runner in Minuteman history. But if you listen to Alessio, he couldn't have done it without Rene.

"Just playing with him made me a better player," Alessio said. "And the one thing that I picked up from Rene was his work ethic. On the field and in the weight room, he was always working."

Another strong influence on Frank Alessio has been his parents. They've been to every game, home and away, since Alessio came to Amherst.

"Even when I was redshirted my freshman year, they didn't miss a game," Alessio said. "They've always supported me, and they've always been the biggest part of my life."

It would seem very important for Alessio to defend his Yankee Conference rushing championship. With an increased emphasis on the passing game and an ankle injury that's been bugging him all season, it seems unlikely that Alessio can match last season's totals. But this doesn't concern the UMass star. He has only one thing on his mind.

"I'm not concerned with personal goals. All I want is a Yankee Conference ring," Alessio said.

Getting that Yankee Conference ring seemed like an unrealistic goal only two weeks ago. The Minutemen had just finished getting trounced by Villanova 50–14, and all the pre–season hype had been crushed in one felled swoop.

But the Minutemen have looked better since then. A 28–10 win against Holy Cross got UMass on the board, but the optimism didn't return until last Saturday in Richmond. Down by a touchdown late in the game, UMass tied things up with three seconds left on a pass from Jeff Smith to Erik Henry, then won the game on a Ron Brockington touchdown run in overtime. A Yankee Conference title seems like it might not be so crazy after all.

"We have to play like a family, and stay close like a family," Alessio said. "Knowing you have confidence in your teammates and knowing that your teammates have confidence in you is how you stay together and

Turn to ALESSIO, page 14

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

After last fall's record breaking season, senior running back Frank Alessio looks to lead the Minutemen to a Yan– Con title.

Garden lore going once...

Leigh Torbin

When the pressure of learning to putt got to puckhead turned golfer Happy Gilmore, his coach Chubbs Peterson told him to go to his own "happy place." There he envisioned his girlfriend in lingerie, with two pitchers of beer and his panacea was found. His mind at ease, he out– dueled Shooter McGavin, winning both the Tournament Championship and his grandmother's house back.

The St. Mark's School in Southborough, is proudly one of the top 100 or so prep schools in the nation, and an academic pressure–cooker that after four years left me able to relate to what it feels like to be a bag of microwave popcorn.

Mellow, laid–back and often outwardly apathetic by nature, the hostile academic environment where a 1,330 SAT barely cracked the top 25–percent of my class suffocated me. Through the cold winter months and long calculus classes, when alcohol was as precious a commodity as Levis 501s in the former Soviet Union, I had my own little happy place.

Boston Garden, section 100, row C, seat 11.

The proverbial friend of a friend of my Dad's had Bruins tickets there and 'twas hardly uncommon for me to skip a painful required evening lecture to "have dinner with my dad in Boston" and head down Storrow Drive in my mom's maroon Pontiac station wagon with the oh–so–cheesy fake wood on the side, to the Burger King on Causeway Street.

It didn't matter what was troubling me, and something almost always was when I wound my way up those cavernous ramps that few who attended games there will forget, into the arena. Classes, friends, college, family woes, whatever posed as my problem du jour would all be left behind in a heaping pile of peanut shells.

Turn to GARDEN, page 11

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 18 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Friday, September 27, 1996

Sweet revenge

Goldie Hawn returns to the big screen in the adaptation of Olivia Goldsmith's The First Wives Club. See what the Collegian thought of the movie (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Water polo hosts weekend set

Brian Stahl and the UMass men's water polo team host an EWPA League Tournament at home this weekend (see Sports, page 7).

WORLD

Yeltsin faces surgery; could affect election

MOSCOW (AP) — Despite public assurances he was vigorous and well, Boris Yeltsin went into his re–election campaign knowing he might require open–heart surgery, the Kremlin's chief doctor admitted Thursday.

The revelation laid bare yet another chapter in the Kremlin's effort to hide the truth about the president's health until he secured another term in office.

American heart surgeon Michael DeBakey said Thursday that Yeltsin could "resume a normal life" after the surgery, planned for November or December.

But Yeltsin's own security chief, Alexander Lebed, said that the delayed operation and the months-long recovery period is leaving Russia "rudderless."

Even though foreign news media broke the story weeks ago, Russians only learned last week that Yeltsin suffered an apparent heart attack between the first round of voting and the July 3 run–off.

Dr. Sergei Mironov said doctors told Yeltsin before the campaign that he might need bypass surgery. "Indications (that surgery was needed) emerged even before the campaign, he said in an interview on NTV television.

NATION

Abortion legislation vetoed by Clinton

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate upheld President Clinton's veto of legislation that for the first time in two decades would have made a form of abortion illegal. But supporters of the ban on so–called partial birth abortions vowed Thursday to keep the issue alive during the election campaign.

After a wrenching debate, the Senate voted 57–41 to override the president's veto of the bill banning the late–term abortion procedure, falling nine votes short of the two–thirds majority needed.

"The most anti–choice Congress in history tried to hand a pro–choice president an embarrassing defeat less than six weeks before election day. Their campaign failed," said Kate Michelman of the National Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League.

But abortion opponents said they had struck a political nerve that would continue to be felt. "This will immediately become one of the most powerful issues of the fall election," said Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R–Miss.

The narrow defeat "underscores the importance of turning out in large numbers in November," said Ralph Reed of the Christian Coalition. "It will give huge momentum to pro–family forces in the half–dozen Senate races that will determine who controls the Senate."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 55 LOW: 50	HIGH: 75 LOW: 70	HIGH: 50 LOW: 60

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
≥≥Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 10

SGA election results announced yesterday; turnout disappointing

By Raghuram Vadarevu
Collegian Staff

The Student Government Association (SGA) Undergraduate Senate held elections for the '96–'97 school year yesterday, and has released the official results.

"It didn't go as I had anticipated. I expected a lot of the incumbents to hold onto their seats, but they lost," said Nathan Peyton, associate speaker of the SGA.

Members of the SGA Election Commission met after the elections closed last night at 7 p.m. to count votes from each of the Residential Areas.

According to Peyton, four members of the commission remained at the student government offices until 2 a.m. tabulating the election results.

See election results, p. 2

The elections took place in the dining commons for on– campus students, outside the Hatch in the basement of the Student Union Building for commuters and the Newman Center and Hillel House for the Greek Area.

According to an SGA press release, there is one tie in the Southwest south election between Brian McManus and William Serwetman.

In addition, there is an open seat for Van Meter Residence Hall because none of the residents in Van Meter voted for Mary H. Barrot (including herself), the only candidate.

The Sylvan Residential Area has two vacant seats. There are also nine at–large seats available out of the 25 allotted seats for the Commuter Area.

According to Peyton, the student government will hold an informational meeting for all new senators on Oct. 5.

The "Senate Training Day" will serve to acquaint first time senators with the student government. (Senate Training Day) will basically tell senators what goes on in the Senate and what their responsibilities are," Peyton said.

The following day, an event is being organized called a "Senate Informal" that will bring all incumbent and newly elected senators together.

"We hope that all of the senators will get to know one another and break down the barriers as well as get to know members of the leadership," said Peyton.

Role of left in society discussed

Dr. John Galbraith analyzes problems created by the left

By Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian staff

The role of the left in today's society and economy was the theme of yesterday's lecture by Dr. John Kenneth Galbraith in Memorial Hall.

In the lecture entitled "The Social Left Today: The World View Today," Galbraith criticized conservatives and moderates who attack welfare and other social programs like Medicare and Medicaid.

Although he criticized such programs, he affirmed his belief in the market system telling the audience there are no alternatives.

"Capitalism in its original form was insufferable," said Galbraith. "We saved classical capitalism from itself."

The left is responsible for such programs as social security, welfare, public housing, health care and other New Deal programs from Franklin Roosevelt's administration and Great Society programs from Lyndon Johnson's administration, he explained.

These programs are responsible for dampening the effects of the boom and bust of the business cycle. The business cycle is the greatest problem of capitalism because it is most detrimental to the poorest, said Galbraith.

"The market system distributes income in highly uneven methods," he added. "Nothing limits the freedom of a citizen more than a lack of money."

He also criticized "insane corporate behavior," and the irrational actions of participants in the financial markets. His biggest qualm is big business' preference of unemployment over even slight levels of inflation.

Despite his dislike for this behavior, he defended corporate hierarchy when asked about the viability of employee co– operatives. People intrinsically need a leader, he said.

Another qualm he had was with American society's value system. He pointed to the vast private investment in the "world's most immoral" television broadcasting, while the United States keeps investment in education low.

His criticism was not all one–sided. He pointed his finger at the failures of the left to learn from its own mistakes.

The left's attempt to assist nations with underdeveloped economies failed because they simply attempted to provide investment in capital like factories and roads rather than human capital like education, he said.

Improved international relations are helping rectify this problem, Galbraith said. He implored the United States to become more involved in the United Nation's humanitarian efforts.

"Concern for human well–being doesn't end at the frontier of a country. It should extend to all the world's poor," he said.

In addition to the left's shortcomings, he said, the world the liberals created is responsible for the current conservative backlash.

This world provided opportunities like higher education that would not be possible otherwise, said Galbraith.

Those who oppose the programs of the left, are not against the left, he said. They are simply ignoring history, and are bound to repeat it, he added.

Galbraith lectured to a standing room only crowd where even Dean Seymour Berger of the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences had to stand.

Galbraith was introduced by Professor Sam Bowles, a former student of Galbraith's at Harvard.

"[Galbraith] changed the face of economics," said Bowles.

Galbraith added a more social and political side to economics, said Bowles.

Galbraith has had a long standing relationship with the University of Massachusetts.

He received an honorary degree from the University. He donated proceedings from television appearances to the University's Center for Popular Economics.

Galbraith's long career spans the Great Depression, World War II, and John F. Kennedy's and Lyndon B. Johnson's administrations.

He started in government during World War II. He assisted in establishing a rationing and price control program during the early part of the war.

He held positions at the University of California at Berkeley, Princeton University and Harvard University before retiring from teaching in 1975.

He served as an ambassador to India in the early 1960s during the Kennedy administration. While abroad, he wrote prolifically on varying economic subjects.

Professor delivers lecture on Zapitistas

By Scott Bernard
Collegian Correspondent

NORTHAMPTON — June Nash, distinguished professor of anthropology at the City College of New York, delivered a lecture Tuesday night discussing culture and revolution through the lens of the Zapitista movement in Chiapas, Mexico.

Entitled "Fiesta of the Word: Zapitistas and Radical Democracy in Chiapas, Mexico," the event was held at Smith College.

Nash is quite familiar with the area, having done her Ph.D. dissertation on Chiapas in 1958. She returned to the area last year to experience first hand the aftermath of the armed rebellion.

The lecture focused on the intersection of cultures in the region and how it has shaped the Zapatista resistance movement. It is important to understand, she said, that the original Mayan culture in these highlands was never destroyed in total — only covered over by centuries of foreign conquest.

It is this indigenous culture which has suffered from particular neglect from the more western–minded dominated government, she said. For example, the benefits of the first Mexican Revolution only slowly filtered down to this rural area in the 1930's. During the 1950's and 1960's, migration to the cities exacerbated the differences between the indigenous peoples and the urban classes.

The sense of alienation became even more pronounced when, after the discovery of oil in the region, the Mexican government initiated a military presence in Chiapas, she said.

Thus, as Nash put it, "the point of this revolution was not to take over the government but to initiate a new kind of democracy" free of exploitation from the federal powers in the north.

To this end, the Zapatista rebels began a series of ongoing dialogues with government representatives in the city of San Andreas, a traditional bastion of resistance.

It was at this point that Nash showed slides she had taken during her stay there, from late 1994 to mid–1995. The slides emphasized the military presence in the town, and the flood of varied indigenous peoples into the city during the talks.

Another focus of this talk was the postmodern aspects of the rebellion — highlighting the unique structure of this revolution and the images it has produced.

Nash illustrated this point by telling the story of University of Florida students who witnessed the beginning of the rebellion — the storming of the city hall and military barracks in the Chiapas state capital of San Cristobal on Jan. 1, 1994.

The students thought, Nash said, they were witnessing a pageant, celebrating Mexico's revolutionary past. Some were going so far as to have their pictures taken with some of the rebels and receiving revolutionary literature from them, without suspecting that what they were seeing was an actual uprising.

In response to a question, she also reminded everyone as to how important the media has been in shaping the events. In particular, she emphasizes that the presence of the world in the events in Chiapas has broken down the information barrier that the Mexican government has placed upon their own people.

She concluded her remarks by bringing up the universality of the Zapatista message in their statement of autonomy: "We are human beings, we have a proposal for a new world order of democracy."

She then commented that this message has received a strong response from 500,000 American college students, as well as from many of the major European capitols. She said, "In this world, the Zapatistas want all colors to fit. It may sound like a Benneton commercial, but it rings true."

COURTNEY SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Study break
Stockbridge sophomore Ben Herrick soaks up the rays outside the Campus Center yesterday.

Open house introduces students to Craft Center

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Correspondent

The Student Union Craft Center Staff is hosting an "open house" tonight, intended to introduce students to the activities and services available to them at the center.

From 5–7 p.m., staff members will be demonstrating a variety of crafts offered at the center, including stained glass, silk painting, batik and ceramics.

Earthfoods will be catering this free event, and student worker Liz Giza said, "Everyone should drop by and see what we're all about. There's so many things offered here, you're sure to find something you're interested in."

For the past 25 years, the Student Union Craft Center has provided all University of Massachusetts students, faculty and staff, as well as Five College students, with the tools, space and instruction they need to create their own works of art.

The Craft Center is free of charge to all students, who must pay only for the materials they use. Worker Marah MacRostie pointed to the reasonable pricing of the materials and said, "You can even make a silver ring for under $5."

Since the Craft Center is financed through the Student Activities Fee which appears on each semester bill, all students are eligible to use its resources. All that is required is that each student sign a declaration of agreement with the Craft Center's rules and regulations and get a sticker placed on his or her ID card.

Also offered by the center are numerous workshops conducted by student employees, designed to instruct students on how to get started and improve their artistic technique.

The schedule of workshops changes every week, and new activities are constantly being introduced. Sign–up sheets for the workshops come out at 10 a.m. Tuesdays in the Craft Center.

"They're often full by the end of the day, so stop by early," MacRostie said.

Currently, the Craft Center is planning a special photography workshop in conjunction with the Outing Club. The weekend of Oct. 18–20, students will travel to the White Mountains in New Hampshire to hike and practice their photography techniques. The cost of the trip will be under $50, and interested students should stop by the Craft Center for details.

In addition to sponsoring work–

Turn to CRAFT CENTER page 3

Amherst women discuss safety

By Michelle Hillman
Collegian Staff

The first program in the Amherst Women's Safety Series took place Wednesday, Sept. 25 in the nearly full auditorium of Amherst–Pelham Regional Junior High School.

The program, partly sponsored by the Amherst and University of Massachusetts Police Departments was entitled, "Enjoying the Beauty of Amherst: A Personal Safety Program for Women of All Ages.

Kathleen Alexander, from the Office of Northwestern District Attorney Elizabeth D. Scheibel, expressed her desire through the Safety Series to "outreach to all women in the Amherst community."

Alexander, an obvious lover of the outdoors, stated that it was reasonable to start the series discussing safety outdoors because "fall is the most beautiful time of year."

Alexander understood that "most violence occurs in inter– relationships," but wanted to bring indoor issues outdoors. Alexander said the goal of the program was to "address fears and concerns and talk about safety strategies."

The program opened with several women reading poetry about the outdoors and the beauty of nature, followed by a video presentation of the Robert Frost Trail in Amherst.

Iris Muten, from the Amherst High School Survival Living Program, spoke of her experiences white water canoeing with friends and her love of the outdoors. Muten participated in a summer growth program which facilitated in group theory — working together in the outdoors and group trust levels.

"Giving ourselves the opportunity to be in the outdoors is one of the best things we can do," Muten said.

Poet, writer, mentor, instructor and healer Janet Aalfs from the Valley Women's Martial Arts, began her segment by discussing several origins of the word safety.

"Safe, whole, healthy, unharmed and entire. Every definition has something about wholeness and integrity. Women have been kept from our power, which creates lack of wholeness," Aalfs said.

Aalfs led the audience in self–defense while reciting her own poetry related to the outdoors. One poem entitled "What Burns" was a letter to Claudia Brenner, a lesbian killed while hiking with her partner. "I can't imagine how likely it is for a man to aim a gun at a women's body and shoot the breath out," Aalfs read.

Aalfs demonstrated how to channel fear and turn in into strength. She instructed the audience to turn their fear into desire, happiness, joy and excitement in order to protect themselves.

"One of the important things about self–defense is not being embarrassed," Aalfs said.

The program was closed with a panel discussion led by Patricia Mota Guedes, Coordinator of the Educator Advocate Program at the Everywoman's Center. Prevention measures when venturing into the outdoors include telling someone where you are going, leaving a phone number, address and information regarding anyone who can be contacted in case of emergency.

The following is a list of the winners from the Undergraduate Student Senate elections held on Wed. Sept. 25.

Central Residential Area:

Baker Residence Hall:
Dan Kitteredge

Gorman Residence Hall:
Shawn Robinson

Van Meter Residence Hall:
Vacant Seat

At Large:
Stacey Shackford, Ken Piccotte, Emilie Codega, Justin A. Roth

Northeast Residential Area:

At Large:
Michael Ciulla, Lia Wong, Jennifer Keller, Gregory Thurell, Edwin Seah

Orchard Hill Residential Area:

Dickinson Residence Hall:
Nirav Patel

Field Residence Hall:
Sean Marien

Grayson Residence Hall:
Claudia Danielle Ricker

Webster Residence Hall:
R.J. Lemar

Sylvan Residential Area:

Brown Residence Hall:
Vacant Seat

Cashin Residence Hall:
Bob Sullivan

McNamara Residence Hall:
Philip Milson

At Large:
Jennifer Brown, One Vacant Seat

Southwest Residential Area:

John Adams Residence Hall:
Jennifer Casasanto, Brian McManius is tied with William Serwetman

John Q. Adams Residence Hall:
Sabrina Sherman, Stephen W. Luszcz

Cance Residence Hall:
John Riley

Coolidge Residence Hall:
Jolyon Yates, Tom Singleton

Kennedy Residence Hall:
Jenn Corbett, Paul R. Ferro

Patterson Residence Hall:
Rebecca Shapiro

Washington Residence Hall:
Amy Delaney, Dave Czarnecki

At Large:
Catherine Mahoney, Allison Musphey, Amy Pellegrino, Tom Sladowski, Monique DeLaOz, Lisa Cook, Matt Conforti

Commuter Area:

Allison Murphy, Sky Wilber, Sarah E. Mikulis, Kren Espinola, James Simpson, Neil P. Collins, Colin McHugh, Brian Entler, Fabio Pari-Di-Monriva, Ramy A. Eid, Bill Ramsey, Sophy Pich, James Daniel Ross, Larry Plano, Mike Mccormic, Chris Rohter, Nine Vacant Seats

— Raghuram Vadarevu

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Friday, Sept. 27

Education — The UMass Library Workshops are offering an educational series on ERIC, PsycINFO, Dissertation Abstracts and the World Wide Web. The course, taught by educational librarian Lori Mestre, will be held 11:30 a.m.– 12:30 p.m. For more information, call 545-0150.

Meeting — World AIDS Day Planning meeting for everyone interested in planning for the UMass community's observance of World AIDS Day will be held 2–3 p.m. in the Campus Center. Check the Campus Center message board or call 577–5181 for further details.

Open House — The Student Union Craft Center is sponsoring an open house 5–7 p.m., with demonstrations of pottery, jewelry making, batik dying, button making and other crafts. The Craft Center is located across form the Hatch in the Student Union.

Saturday, Sept. 28

Community — Hillel is sponsoring an open house 1:30–4 p.m. For more information, call 549–1710.

Fundraiser — Bags of 10 top–quality Holland tulip bulbs in UMass colors will be offered to the UMass community and the public for a $10 donation. Proceeds from the sale will be used to fund beautification projects throughout campus. The sale is being held 9 a.m.–1 p.m. at the Campus Center concourse, 8:30–10:30 a.m. at Memorial Hall, and at McGuirk Stadium (Alumni Tent) 11 a.m.–noon.

Music — "The Wild West and Brahms" performed by the University Orchestra, Mark Russell Smith, director. Tickets are $8 and $4; UMass students free with valid ID. Fine Arts Center Concert Hall, 8 p.m.

Powwow — The White Eagle Cultural Center and the Native American Student Association will host their annual Powwow at the campus pond lawn area on tomorrow and Sunday. This year's theme is honoring the extended family tradition through storytelling and speakers. Program highlights include a special exhibit and sale of Leonard Peltier's art work, Native American fine arts/crafts and traditional Taino dancers. Gates will be open to the public 10 a.m.–6 p.m. Admission is $5 for adults, $3 for senior citizens and Five College students with a valid ID. Children under six are admitted free. For additional information, call 545–4932 or 545–1888.

Sunday, Sept. 29

Forum — The public is invited to a forum on the recent church burnings sponsored by the United Christian Foundation and Hillel Foundations at UMass, and by the Amherst Interfaith Service Council members. Speakers include the Rev. Ann Gere of the Greater Springfield Council of Churches and the Rev. John C. Ike, III of Goodwin Memorial African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church. The forum will be held at Wesley United Church, 367 N. Pleasant St. 7–9:30 p.m. and will be followed by a candlelight walk to the town common and a brief vigil and prayers. For more information, contact Rev. Kent Higgins at 549–3501.

Meeting — Are you from the Caribbean or West Indies, or have parents from there? A new RSO is forming for those interested in learning about the culture, food, festivals and people of the Caribbean. Everyone is cordially invited to attend at 7 p.m. in room 804–8 of the Campus Center. For more information, call Nizam at 546–3967.

Notices

Education — The HCAH HEAD START program has immediate openings for its free pre–school Classroom and Home Base option. The two Amherst classrooms are open Mon–Fri 8:30 a.m.–12:30 p.m. Breakfast, lunch, and transportation are provided. To obtain a pre–registration form or for additional information, call the Head Start main office at 582–4206 or the Amherst center at 549–3993.

Auditions — The UMass Theater Guild's auditions for the Fall 1996 musical The Pajama Game will be held on tonight at 7 p.m. and tomorrow at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. Callbacks are Sunday at 10 a.m. For more information, call 545–0415.

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley offers rides to students to attend the 10 a.m. service in Amherst. Drivers arrive at the Knowlton and Prince bus stops at 9:45 a.m. Please call Mark to confirm or for other stops, at 253–0361.

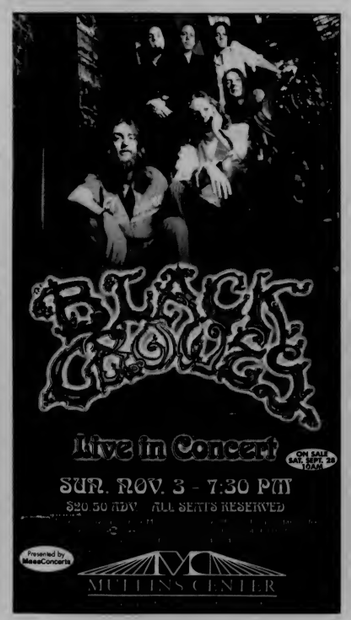
Everywoman's Center — Acculturation Group for Latina Women, facilitated by Mari Vicente, Thurs. 4–6 p.m. Child Sexual Abuse Survivors Support Groups: Group 1 facilitated by Sara Elinoff, Mondays 7–9 p.m. Group 2 facilitator, day, and time TBA. Coming Out Group For Lesbians, facilitated by Lynne Schachne, Mondays 4–5:30 p.m. Lifting Your Spirits, facilitated by Carla Brennan and Diana Dalendina, Weds. 4–5:30 p.m. Eco–Psychology for Women, facilitated by Carla Brennan, Fridays 10–11:30 a.m. Post–Abortion Support Group, facilitated by Peggy Warwick, Wednesdays 5:30–6:30 p.m. Self–Esteem & Assertiveness for Women, facilitated by Carla Brennan, Wednesdays 6:30–8 p.m. Single Mothers Support Group, facilitated by Amy Rosebury, Tuesdays 1–2:30 p.m. Women & Divorce, facilitated by Ali Thompson, Tuedays 6:30–8 p.m. All groups offered by the Everywoman's Center begin in October, and offer a safe and confidential space. For other groups, call 545–0883.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition meets 7 p.m. every Tuesday in room 306 of the Student Union. For more information, call the ARC office at 5–1925.

Dancing — Beginner classes in Cajun dancing and Appalachian clogging are starting on Sunday evenings 6–7 p.m. No experience or partner needed, all ages welcome. Classes are held in Westfield at 132 Elm St. For more information, call Jo Sarnelli at (413) 746–9067.

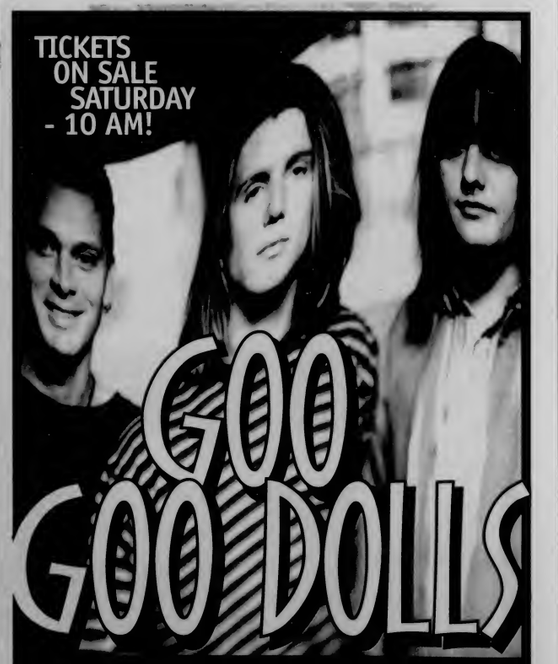
Five College — REFLECT, the Five College Bereavement Support Program is a student organization devoted to helping those coping with grief. REFLECT is offering two free 8 week grief support groups this semester. Groups are forming now. Please call 577–5316 for more information.

Staff Needed — The UMass Index yearbook needs staff in all departments. Editorial positions are available in Photo, Layout, Copy and Marketing departments. An assistant copy editor and assistant sports editor are also needed. Meetings are held on Wednesdays at 7 p.m., 304 Student Union, or call 545–0848 if interested.



Support group — Synthesis Center Associate Rebecca Reid leads an ongoing support group for single people over 30 from 7:15 to 8:45 p.m. in downtown Amherst. Single, divorced, widowed and all sexual orientation are welcome. There is a low fee. For information, call 253–5494.

Religious — The Muslim Student Association at the University of Massachusetts invites all Muslims in the Amherst area to weekly Friday prayer from 1 to 2 p.m. in the Campus Center. The room number will be posted on the Notice Board. For more information, call Utama at 256–8482 or Laili at 253–0874.



Discussion Group — "A Course in Miracles" will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for 10 weeks on Mondays starting in September. For more information, call 253–5795.

PHOTOGRAPHERS NEEDED!
Take pictures f
Mass Daily Collegian
Several paid positions available.
contact Liz Brown
Vo @ the Colleg
545-17

The Collegian is like Brussels Sprouts... You just have to read it.

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY LIMITED TO SEATING
Downtown SPECIAL ENGAGEMENT
MT. FARMS 4 MT. FARMS MALL ROUTE 9, HADLEY 584-9453
Call Theatre For Showtimes
EXTREME MEASURES R
LAST MAN STANDING R
FEELING MINNESOTA R
FLY AWAY HOME PG
HAMPSHIRE 8 HAMPSHIRE MALL ROUTE 9, HADLEY 584-6660
Call Theatre For Showtimes
INDEPENDENCE DAY PG-13
THE SPITFIRE GRILL PG-13
BULLETPROOF R
THE FIRST WIVES CLUB PG
2 DAYS IN THE VALLEY R
MAXIMUM RISK R
THAT THING YOU DO PG-13
A VERY BRADY SEQUEL PG-13
ROCKY HORROR PICTURE SHOW R

OCTOBER 10 7pm doors 8pm showtime
THE CAGE • UMASS, AMHERST
TICKETS AVAILABLE AT: Tix Unlimited, 317 Student Union Ballroom, UMASS, Amherst • (413)545-0412
For the Record, 104 North Pleasant Street, Amherst • (413)256-6134
B-Side Records, 4 Conz Street, Maple Wood Shops, Northampton • (413)586-9556
Presented by the Massachusetts Democratic Coordinated Campaign in association with: DELTA CHI FRATERNITY UPC Massachusetts College Democrats

Heinz to speak at women's conference

Topics include education, empowerment, women's health

On Sept. 28, the Campus Women Advocates for Voter Education will present the Five College Women's Conference in the Merrill Center at Amherst College. The program, sponsored by the President's Interagency Council on Women is entitled, "America's Commitment: The UN Women's Conference One Year Later."

The conference day, planned from 10 a.m.–6 p.m., will include a keynote speech from Teresa Heinz and a panel discussion on organizations within the Five College community.

Participants will join thousands of Americans via satellite that are interested in improving the lives of women and girls. Women will gather to report on the progress made since the Women's Conference to share what has been working at a local level and move toward developing a national agenda.

Dr. Susan Roosevelt Weld, Dr. Daniel S. Cheever Jr., President of Simmons College, Senator Jane Swift and Representative Rachel Kapriellan will celebrate the first anniversary of the United Nations Conference on Women held in Beijing.

Coinciding with the conference is the 1st Massachusetts Conference on Women featuring Assistant Secretary–General of the United Nations Rosario Green as the keynote speaker.

The all–day conference will focus on such topics as women's health, education and empowerment, and will be in conjunction with the National Teleconference on Women in Washington DC, featuring Hillary Clinton as spokesperson and other delegates such as Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala and U.S. Ambassador to the U.N. Madeline Albright.

— Michelle Hillman

Annual powwow to be held this weekend

By Daniel E. Levenson
Collegian staff

Tomorrow and Sunday the White Eagle Cultural Center and the Native American Students Association will host the "Annual UMass Intertribal Powwow '96."

The event will be held on the campus pond lawn from 10 a.m. – 6 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. In the event of rain, activities will be held as scheduled.

Two thousand people are expected to attend each day of the powwow.

There will be story telling, Native American fine arts/crafts for sale and dance exhibitions presented by various groups.

According to a recent press release, the theme for this year's powwow is "honoring the extended family tradition as many native communities struggle to maintain their original languages and traditions."

The cost of general admission is $5 for adults, $3 for senior citizens and Five College students with a valid ID. Children under six will be admitted free of charge.

— Daniel E. Levenson

COURTNEY SMITH/COLLEGIAN

The J.G. Willis Company assembled a tent by the campus pond yesterday in preparation for the upcoming Annual UMASS Intertribal Powwow this weekend.

Campus info provided on Web page

By Joseph Fountain
Collegian Staff

Traveling the World Wide Web and knowing what is going on at the University of Massachusetts has gotten a little easier, thanks to Jose Tolson, Assistant Director for Programming in the Campus Activities Office.

Tolson is working to centralize all student activities calendars on a single web page, making campus events more accessible.

In addition, the site will include a list of all student, faculty and staff web pages throughout the five campus UMass system.

"My hope is to expand this calendar to include links to other major links to other major sites on campus, Fine Arts Center, Athletics, Conference services and others," Tolson said.

"There are many things happening all around campus and through out the campus system. We're trying to bring everyone together so that information is more accessible to the student body," he added.

Many students agree that the new site will be beneficial to the campus.

"This is an excellent opportunity for students to learn what's happening on campus and ways to get involved," Student Government Association (SGA) trustee, Sean Carter, said.

John Burke, sophomore psychology major and the builder of the SGA web page said, "The web is an excellent resource and it should be used by everyone at the university."

A central calendar has already been put on–line for Registered Student Organizations and departments to let students know about up–coming activities.

The address of the Campus Activities site is: HTTP: www–unix.oit.umass.edu/~jtolson/calendar.html. The address for the UMass central page is: HTTP://www–unix.oit.umass.edu/jtolson/umass.html.

To place a listing on the site, information can be sent via e–mail to: Jtolson@umassp.edu. Students who do not have access to e–mail can drop off their web listings at the Campus Activities Office, 416 Student Union Building.

Profs awarded for compositions

Two University of Massachusetts music professors, Robert Stern and Charles Bestor, have recently been honored by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers (ASCAP) with a cash reward.

Each year, a board of society members reviews recorded performances of award applicants and selects the recipients based on how significant their compositional activity has been.

Both Stern and Bestor have been recipients of this award numerous times in the past few years.

Stern is in his 32nd year here at UMass and specializes in theory and composition. He has been the recipient of many awards and was commissioned to compose for the U.S. Library of Congress in 1992.

He has a performance coming out at the end of October, as well as a number of pieces premiering in New York and Boston in the next few months.

Bestor has been a department head of music and dance at UMass since 1976 and specializes in electronic and concert music. He studied at Juliard College in New York and he has received a number of awards, including one recently at the New England Philharmonic International Competition.

Both professors submitted an application, as well as a list of commissioned performances and were notified through an award letter that they had won.

The ASCAP distributes a fair amount of awards of merit to serious composers all over the country each year.

The professors said they appreciate the recognition they received from the society.

— Amy Barberie

■ Craft Center

Continued from page 1

shops and trips, the Craft Center works to bring visiting artists to campus and speak with students, showing them career possibilities.

Student worker Bill Porter, who has coordinated photography for the Craft Center for the past three semesters, said, "I think this program is especially good for non–art majors, because they often can't get into the art classes that they're interested in. The Craft Center gives them the opportunity to do art."

The approximately 3,000 members of the Craft Center work on silver, brass and bronze jewelry, beadwork, leather craft, ceramics, photography, silkscreening, sewing, knitting, batik, fabric painting, button making and more.

"We're always looking to increase our membership, so stop by tonight and check us out," Giza noted.

Interested students can drop by the Craft Center 10 a.m.–5 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m.–7 p.m. Fridays and 1–4 p.m. on weekends. The Craft Center is located in the basement of the Student Union Building.

Collegian Graphics...Because we said so.

CAMPUS GEAR
FOR ALL YOUR COLLEGIATE NEEDS
WELCOME PARENTS!
BUY YOUR UMASS MERCHANDISE AT CAMPUS GEAR
AND
RECEIVE A CARD GOOD FOR 20% OFF YOUR NEXT PURCHASE
ALSO
CHECK OUT OUR GREAT DEALS ON FLEECE & JACKETS
Including Champion U.S.A.
VISIT CAMPUS GEAR TODAY!
255 Triangle Street•Amherst, Ma 01002
(413) 549-0944
Between Dairy Mart & Northhampton Co-operative Bank

Reason # 432 to read
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Because it's already in the bathroom.

Interested in serving your community?
THE JEWISH AFFAIRS EDITOR POSITION AT THE COLLEGIAN IS VACANT. THIS DIVERSITY DESK NEEDS YOUR HELP TO CONTINUE QUALITY COVERAGE OF JEWISH LIFE AT UMASS AND BEYOND.
TO GET INVOLVED, CONTACT CHRIS CONNER, MANAGING EDITOR, AT 545-0719 OR VISIT THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE AT 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT.
THE DEADLINE FOR APPLICATION IS FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, AT 5 P.M.

We Deliver!
Kai Chi
Chinese - American Cuisine
Restaurant & Bar
MT FARMS MALL
ROUTE 9 • HADLEY • 586-2774
Delivery: Sun.-Thurs. Noon-2 a.m. Fri. & Sat. noon-3 a.m.
Enjoy HALF PRICE APPETIZERS
9 PM-Close • 7 Days a Week
31 SELECTIONS!
Ex: Pu Pu (for two) reg. 11.95 Now 5.99
No other promos apply
EAT IN ONLY

Want to write about poetry, film, theater, music, books, travel, food or anything else?
Then write for the Arts & Living Desk.
Come down today!

Beauty Nail
OPEN MON-SAT 9:30
MANICURE & PEDICURE $25
Student Special
Full Set of Acrylics $25 $3 Refill 15
WE GUARANTEE ALL THE WORK
91 CAMPUS PLAZA, HADLEY
(BEHIND PIZZA HUT)
253-4756

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1982

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Morse Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Mark McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor
Michael Elliott News Editor
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Sean Horgan Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Mujerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Apathetic SGA elections

The Student Government Association held their annual election last Wednesday and once again no one came.

Well, that's not completely true. Four hundred and fifty one students came and voted. That's about 2.5 percent of a 17,000 member undergraduate student body. Impressive, huh?

Among those 451 people, not a single person living in Van Meter, and there are over 500 of them.

I filled out a ballot. That includes Mary H. Barrot, the only person running, who would have won had she just voted for herself.

Does anyone else see a problem here?

I'll admit I was one of the people who didn't vote. It's a rather strange feeling. If someone has the right to vote, they should, even if something like the SGA is not quite as important as, say, voting for president.

I thought about voting. I knew when and where I was supposed to, but it just wasn't worth it for me.

Why? Simply because of the 12 people who spent enough energy to have their names put on the ballot, I'd heard of exactly two. And even those, I didn't know well.

I knew Pablo Pari-di-Monriva solely from the fact he was quoted in a Collegian story about a rape that occurred last semester. What he felt on any other issue, though, I didn't (and still don't) have a clue.

I recognized Bill Ramsey's name from last semester, when he was involved in the SGA. Honestly, though, I couldn't remember whether I recognized it because he was involved in real issues (like improving dining services) or the rather silly ones (like trying to get co-ed dorm rooms) — if you care, it was the former.

Besides that, I didn't know a single thing about Pari-di- Monriva or Ramsey, much less about Sky Wilbur, Kreg Espinola or any of the other Off-Campus Commuter Area and Extra Residence On-Campus candidates.

Jacob W. Michaels

The same is true for any of the other fine folks who were running for election last Wednesday and it is why no one ever comes out to vote in the elections. No one knows anything about any of the candidates, so they have no idea who to vote for and don't want to waste their time.

The top vote getter had a measly 49 votes, which was still nearly twice as many as the next highest. That's pretty sad for a campus that doesn't want to be considered apathetic, but the students can't really be blamed.

The SGA needs to find some way to set up forums so the students can learn about the candidates. It isn't hard to take the lounge in each dorm one night and have candidates talk about why they want their peers to vote for them and what they will do if elected.

If that's too much effort, perhaps each candidate could fill out a short questionnaire and have them available for students to look at in the SGA office.

They could even try approaching the student media — the Collegian, WMUA or UVC — to do small pieces on each candidate.

There are a myriad of possibilities to get information out so students would have a reason to vote. As It Is, though, the lack of information makes it pointless.

The one bright point, however, is that it's not too late to become a senator. If you can get 25 people to sign a petition supporting your candidacy and present it to the proper people in the SGA, they'll probably let you join. The best part about it is it won't require anyone, including yourself, to cast a single ballot.

Jacob W. Michaels is a Collegian columnist.

The sorry state of escort

Let me get right to the point: the escort service on this campus is a joke. A sick joke.

How many times have you dialed those magic numbers only to get the same old response, "All our vans are occupied right now. We can send you a walking escort, but it's going to be about half an hour."

If you're standing alone at a help phone at two in the morning, this is the last thing you want to hear.

Is this the "safe" campus that is stressed so much in freshmen orientation? They made it sound like we actually wouldn't have to walk home in the middle of the night because of an apparently ridiculously understaffed "safety" service.

Nicole Cournoyer

It seems as though every time my friends or I call escort, we have a problem. We are pretty stubborn when it comes to ourselves (we think we're invincible and can get home OK alone), but when it comes to sending each other home, we call escort. Tragically, the friend we call for usually ends up walking alone anyway because she gets so frustrated waiting for the escort service to get its act together.

You men out there may not consider this lax service a big problem, but women do. Or if they don't, they should. No, we shouldn't have to live in fear of rape or assault, but the truth is, girls, it ain't a pretty world out there for us. These things exist. They shouldn't, but they do. We are not being paranoid if there is a genuine concern for our safety — and there is. Until we change things so that women are not victimized by men in our culture, we've got to have ways of protecting ourselves against victimization.

A poorly organized escort service (i.e. the one we have) gives women three basic choices:

1) Call escort. You may have to wait an eternity, but if you're in a safe place while you're waiting, it's better than walking across campus alone in the dark. If you don't have a safe place to wait, I don't know what to tell you. I guess you're on your own.

2) Take your chances without an escort. Walk home alone. You'll probably be fine, but there's a chance you may be raped, seriously hurt or even killed.

3) Don't go out at all. Live in fear. Let the terror of male violence against women control your life rather than risk not being able to get someone from a service you've paid for to walk or drive you home safely.

My first experience with the escort service was my freshmen year, when a friend, despite my proud protests, refused to let me walk home alone. She called escort, and a woman shorter than me (and I'm not very tall) came armed with a walkie-talkie to walk me home. I thought to myself, "Are you kidding?" But there's safety in numbers, so it was better than nothing.

Last semester, another friend had a sharp pain in her side for an entire afternoon. Finally, she decided she'd go to Health Services (yes, I know, a bad idea in itself) to get it checked out. The problem was she couldn't walk because she was doubled over in pain. She called escort and they told her she'd have to wait an hour because the vans hadn't started running yet. Frustrated as hell, a bunch of us practically carried her from Northeast to Health Services so she could be diagnosed with appendicitis and sent to Cooley Dickinson to have her appendix removed. What if it had burst on her way up the hill? Couldn't escort have spared someone for an emergency situation?

This semester, we called escort for a friend who had been drinking and was going home alone. She waited quite a while for the van to come, and when she opened the door to get in, the driver refused to drive her home because she had been drinking. My friend argued with the driver for about five minutes before the person reluctantly agreed to let her in. What if my friend hadn't argued? What if she'd gotten fed up with the driver's rudeness and irresponsibility and walked home by herself? What if she'd gotten raped on the way? I would think the person most likely to need the help of the escort service, the person most likely to be a target of violence, would be an intoxicated female walking home alone at night.

Another time, my friend called the escort service at 1:30 a.m. They told her to call back in 20 minutes because they were switching drivers. She wasn't happy about it, but she said OK because she was waiting safely in my room. 20 minutes later, she called again only to get the same answer: call back in 20 minutes. By now she was furious. She waited for about 15 minutes and called the campus police to ask what the policy was for the escort service, to ask if they were supposed to keep a person waiting for 40 minutes while they "changed drivers." What did the police do? They connected her to escort who said a van would come to pick her up... in 20 minutes.

That's a total of one hour, folks, not counting time wasted on the phone arguing with them. Yes, my friend was safe in my room, and the wait was more of an annoyance than any threat to her safety, but the escort service did not know this. What if she were calling from a help phone somewhere? What if she were calling from a room she didn't feel safe in? A lot can happen in an hour.

Most women who deal with escort probably don't bother waiting as long as they are often forced to wait. They get so frustrated, they just walk home alone — they take their chances.

Obviously, the escort service does not have enough workers or vans for the needs of a school as big as ours. If you have a problem with them, I strongly suggest you file a complaint so we can get something changed. Despite what the tour guides say, to look at the quality of our escort service, you couldn't tell this was a "safe" campus.

Nicole Cournoyer is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

A change in perspective

Throngs of people were crammed about the room chattering polite drunken talk to one another. You know the scene — one of many stops on the roues of the backpack- toting masses milling up and down the streets of Amherst looking for fun and free beer on a Saturday night.

Chris Stamm

As I stood with a group of friends off to the side, I noticed a girl on the opposite end of the room as she let out an uneasy chuckle while a handful of young men jockeyed around her for position to make conversation. Clothes, makeup, hair, everything was just right, and it was no wonder so many were attracted to her.

As my friends babbled in the background, I began to pay less attention to their stunning analysis of last weekend's Patriots' game and more attention to the scene across the room.

What were those guys really thinking? Did they care at all about what that girl was saying or were they just "looking to score?" Then something hit me like a stream of conscious ton of bricks. Unknowingly, I had arrived at an epiphany Stephen Dedalus would be proud of.

I could only imagine that somewhere across campus my own sister had found herself in a similar predicament. Surrounded by a group of guys who had been exercising their elbows all night with God only knows what on their minds, what would she do?

You see, I have this little sister who's a freshman and...

Basically, my perspective on social life at UMass has been shot to pieces. Throughout my two years here, I would think nothing of roaming around town as packs of students passed each other exchanging knowing glances, engaged in harmless (or not so harmless) flirting. However, things have changed.

Maybe it wouldn't be so bad if I wasn't a guy, but I am and I know how we think. That's the thing — I've been there. I've heard the locker room talk, snickered and sneered with the best of 'em. But now the shoe is on the other foot.

The other day I was walking across campus with some friends when one of them commented that the admissions staff should be complimented for the fine job they did in recruiting freshman females (needless to say, his description wasn't phrased quite as eloquently.)

"Shut up," I screamed in his face. "That's not some girl, that's someone's little sister! If I ever heard you talk about my sister like that I'd..." With that I pulled his underwear over his head and pushed him into the campus pond.

Call me an over-protective big brother, but I can't help it. For years, as the oldest of three, It has been my sworn duty to protect my younger siblings from the trials and tribulations of life. Actually, it's not so much my sworn duty as it is the fact that any mess-up on their part indirectly becomes a fault of my own. At least according to my parents.

You know the drill, little bro is home alone, has a few friends over, a soccer ball goes through the living room window and you guessed it, the number one son feels the wrath of Mom.

You can imagine the huge boulder that is hovering over my head right now. My Sunday night phone calls have become Sunday night interrogation. "What did your sister do last night? Who did she go out with?"

"Yeah, Mom, I'm doing fine. Our apartment burnt to the ground last night, but the management gave us a really nice tent to sleep in and hey, who needs running water anyway?"

I don't think it's the moments in which I sympathize with Stephen Dedalus that are scary. I don't think it's the fact that the little kid whose goldfish I poisoned with lemonade mix in the first grade is now an independent woman with a mind of her own. The bottom line is, I'm a big brother and it's my job to be over-protective.

Oh yeah, and if any of you guys are curious, I'm 6-foot-9, 225 pounds, and make Mike Tyson look like Betty Crocker.

Chris Stamm is a Collegian columnist.

Notes from the Campus Center basement

Mike Burke

Congratulations Coach Cal, you win the "I Suck" award of the week, if not the whole semester. You may be a great coach but hiding behind that politician-glazed smile of yours, is one greedy bastard. Maybe you should run for public office after your refusal to lose the royalties on a slogan that wasn't even rightfully yours. You suck.

***

I have fallen in love this semester... no, not with a girl but the PVTA. Yeah it may sound silly and desperate, but it's true. Every morning I get a free ride to school and back.

Maybe I'm just trying to relive my childhood when I cried because I lived too close to the school to take the bus. Unfortunately our relationship is far from perfect.

I hate it when I am all ready for a hot date back to Sunderland when several Out of Service buses pass my way — talk about playing with a young man's mind!

***

Yesterday I was nearly plowed down by a shady character in Lederle racing to check his e-mail. I hope he got lots of messages from all his imaginary friends.

***

The Dining Commons have confirmed the rumor. The University drains the Campus Pond solely to supply the DCs with enough food for the upcoming semester. For off- campus folks, slide on down to the mud and pick yourself up a pre-processed chicken puck. Put the muck back into the puck.

***

The W.E.B. DuBois library is still erect.

***

If only I was a frat boy... I could call an attack goat my mascot. How lucky could I be?

***

The hour is drawing near as Martin F. Jones' predicted in his "Seven Revelations." "The bear will strike at those from beneath who defy his lethal claw... but soon one day the bear will be slain." Who needs Pat Robertson or Dionne Warwick anyway? UMass finally has our own psychic connection — only a 546 call away.

***

Big Brother is watching in a bathroom near you. Have you noticed that the stalls in the Campus Center make this buzzing noise every 14.75 seconds?

***

Why can't Earthfoods or People's Market stay open at night or on the weekend? Finding good food in the Campus Coffee Shop is a mighty big challenge.

***

Yesterday I bumped into this freshmen couple making out in the campus center basement kissing louder than a couple of horny hyenas caged in a zoo — maybe I am just jealous.

***

Thank you Bueno Y Sano for expanding your eating area. For the unacquainted, Bueno Y Sano is the ideal place for good, healthy and cheap food. Where else can buy an enormous bean burrito for less than $4?

***

Has anyone else noticed a gentleman dressed from the Neolithic Age walking around campus with underooes on?

***

How many days until Antonio's puts the new Amherst Pizza Hut out of business? Seriously who would ever choose Pizza Hut over Antonio's?

***

Two of my friends are obsessed with Showgirls? Is this healthy?

***

The Collegian is now online so you can punish all your friends by emailing them this column.

Mike Burke is a Collegian columnist.

Have something to say?

Write a letter to the editor. Just make sure it's no longer than 400 words typed and includes names (first and last) and phone numbers for verification purposes. Have a nice day!

Letters to the Editor

Hippie-bashing misdirected

To the editor:

This is in regard to Brier's article "Fair Warning to a Group of Posers." Some words of advice to Brier, if you are going to be a columnist for the Collegian, please write articles that can be rightly justified. You obviously have some deep rooted dislike for these so-called "born again hippies." Your feelings are your own prerogative, but why not take responsibility for your feelings rather than blaming these people for "allowing our campus to unfold and fall apart before our very eyes." How can they possibly be responsible for the deterioration of the library?

What are you doing for this campus and for our generation? You obviously aren't doing very much if you are spending your time stereotyping people, and blaming them for things that aren't their fault. Pointing your finger at someone else is a sign of fear and insecurity. You call them posers and I call you a coward. If you don't like this particular group of people, why not just say so, but next time don't hide behind invalid reasons.

Elizabeth Buzzallino
Amherst

Arts & Living

Don't join First Wives Club

Dark comedy focuses more on female bonding, less on revenge

COURTESY PARAMOUNT PICTURES

Diane Keaton, Goldie Hawn and Bette Midler in The First Wives Club

By Jeremy Brothers
Collegian Staff

THE FIRST WIVES CLUB
Directed by Hugh Wilson
with Bette Midler, Goldie Hawn, Diane Keaton
Playing at Hampshire Six Theaters

The first scenes of The First Wives Club show promising hints of the film that it might have been. Four young women graduate college in 1969 and something is terribly wrong — they have the voices of Diane Keaton, Bette Midler, Goldie Hawn and Stockard Channing. Unintentional comparisons to a badly dubbed samurai flick are entertaining, but short lived. We jump forward to the present where the women are no longer young and sweet and everyone's lips match their whines.

The film starts out with the prospects of being a delightful black comedy after Cynthia (Channing) jumps off the balcony of her penthouse apartment. The wicked mood continues when the three remaining friends assemble at the funeral, barely remembering each other and tossing catty comments back and forth.

The title of the film is in reference to the alliance that the three women make to extract "justice" from their exhusbands. Each of the women has conveniently enough been abandoned for a younger, more shapely model of wife.

Before long, the inevitable female bonding begins and any hope of malicious humor is lost. Apparently these characters don't feel comfortable calling their crusade against their men "revenge" per se — that doesn't seem to befit a lady. What everyone involved with the movie failed to notice is that revenge is funny, female bonding isn't.

The only "first wife" that maintains humor throughout the film is Keaton's Annie, the self-described "wimp." Her goofiness and insecurities are straight out of the Woody Allen territory she's so familiar with — moving beyond the stereotypes that Midler and Hawn's characters are defined by at times. Keaton's idiosyncratic humor, however, never comes close to complying with the dark-humored streaks that come out of Midler and Hawn's characters. It's only because the other characters are stereotypes that they can be monsters at times.

The appearance of an array of minor characters lighten up the film tremendously. Filling out the arms of the husbands are Sarah Jessica Parker, Elizabeth Berkley, Marcia Gay Harden and — for the briefest moment, Heather Locklear. Bronson Pinchot and Maggie Smith lend themselves for entertaining cameos. Of this crew, the one who stands out is Parker's Shelly, a social-climbing little minx who gets so excited by trashing Midler's Brenda, she seems to spit venom.

Special attention should also be paid to Berkley in her first post-Showgirls role. As a struggling young actress who seems to have little talent, Berkley shows astute knowledge of her character. She does have moments — idolizing Elise (Hawn) and wearing what is suspiciously close to one of her pink leotards from the role of Nomi — her struggling young dancer character from Showgirls.

As a comedy, The First Wives Club ends up failing, because the supporting cast is funnier than the lead — diverting attention from the mediocre main characters as they cover girl group ditties. C+

Did you know

That avery division of GE is either #1 or #2 in it's market?

Did you know

That GE is comprised of 12 major businesses?

- GE Capital
- GE Aircraft Engines
- GE Lighting
- GE Motors & Industrial Systems
- GE Power Systems
- GE Electrical Distribution & Control
- GE Corporate R&D
- GE Plastics
- GE Appliances
- GE Medical Systems
- NBC
- GE Transportation Systems
- GE Information Services

Did you know

That GE has ENTRY LEVEL programs for college graduates as well as co-op and intern opportunities for undergraduates?

Did you know

That GE is hosting its 1st annual CAREER DAY at U. Mass?

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 1st, 1996
10AM-3PM
U. MASS
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM

Regardless of your major, if your interest is piqued, we invite you to bring your interest and your questions. Resumes welcome.

GE

An Environment Without Boundaries

An equal opportunity employer

Iron Horse houses an evening of jazz

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

JOHN SINCLAIR W/ ARCHIE SHEPP
Sept. 25
Iron Horse

From John Sinclair's voluminous and preaching voice to Archie Shepp's tonal and atonal saxophone howling, the Iron Horse was a cacophony of jazz-praising poetry and abstract jazz — among other forms of sound on Wednesday night.

Sinclair was a '60s radical, who was sprung from a Michigan state correctional institution after being arrested with possession of two joints in 1969, with help from John Lennon, Yoko Ono and Stevie Wonder. He shouted and bellowed his poetry, which conjured up images of the mentally disturbed pianist Bud Powell, the dancing composer Thelonious Monk (a poem about Monk featured his "Well You Needn't" as the musical accompaniment) and the dangerous bluesman, Bukka White.

Shepp, who introduced Sinclair at the show as "a great cultural figure," played between the two worlds of saxophone: the smooth, gentle singing tones and the chaotic altissimo registers, which squealed and honked out of his horn like there was a devil stuck inside the valves.

Shepp's band consisted of himself as well as a trumpeter who mostly didn't play with the band, or else he would just play along with the band from stageside, only joining the onstage band on rare occasions. Shyness? Too bad — because the phrases the trumpeter did play rang nicely, reminiscent of Clifford Brown.

Shepp's bassist played very well and got consistent solo time, playing many complicated figures with the jovial pianist. The band was without a drummer.

However, that booming voice of Sinclair was percussive enough that no skins player was necessary.

"Monk! What are you doing? Dancing at the piano... like a preacher in some backwoods North Carolina chapel?!" he groaned in one of his many tributes to the late great composer and pianist.

Despite having a friendship with John Lennon in the '60s, until that great composer also was murdered, Sinclair didn't read his "Friday the 13th" poem in tribute to the merry ol' Liverpoolian. He stuck pretty close to jazz tributes and histories through poetry all night. The music was cooking, the lights were low and the words filled the air, making it a good night.

Jazz trio returns to promote new album

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

BOOM! What was that "boom"? Yes. That was Chris Wood's bass playing a funky little passage. And those other sounds filling in the grooves would be John Medeski's Memphis Stax-influenced organ and the hip-hop/funk drumming of Billy Martin.

Yes, tomorrow night at the Northampton Center for the Arts, the Iron Horse will be presenting the eclectic trio Medeski, Martin and Wood — the ensemble who made a big bang in the Valley this past spring with two sold-out shows at the Iron Horse after their Spring Concert gig was cancelled with the rest of that until-now-annual gathering.

"Each song is its own little world," John Medeski said in a press release. The trio is touring to gather an eager awaiting for their forthcoming album, Shack-Man, available Oct. 15. "This album is more tune-oriented... we wanted to give people something they can't get in the live performance."

Medeski, Martin and Wood draw from so many different angles of music, with rock and funk probably being the most prominent over jazz.

By the time Medeski was in high school in his home state of Florida, he had mastered his Wurlitzer organ enough to back up one of the greatest bassists and most critically acclaimed four-string wizard, Jaco Pastorius. In the '80s, he performed with Either/Orchestra and the Mandala Octet. The last five years has seen him playing the New York City downtown jazz scene with veteran bassist Reggie Workman, John Lurie's Lounge Lizards and others, as well as issuing a couple of solo albums, which includes 1994's Lunar Crush.

A native New York City boy, Billy Martin trained under pro drummers like Joe Morello and the Latin percussionist Frank Malabe at a young age. In the mid-'80s he was in Pe De Boi, a Caribbean/Latin band, before joining trumpeter Chuck Mangione's band from '85-'88. In the late '80s until the early '90s he too hit the NYC downtown scene playing various live gigs until his three-year stint between '91 and '94 with Lurie's Lounge Lizards with bandmate Medeski. Aside from the trio, Martin does time with Lurie's new band, the National Orchestra, which can be seen on film performing in the movie, Blue In The Face, now out on video.

The West meets East with bassist Chris Wood. Raised in Colorado, he played as a teenager on the Denver scene until 1989 when he took up training at the New England Conservatory under Dave Holland and Geri Allen. The late '80s saw Wood also performing with Either/Orchestra and George Russell until he was ready to hit the Big Apple, where his wide-ranging abilities landed him in bands with former Tom Waits guitarist Marc Ribot, as well as with the Jazz Passengers. He still plays with Ribot in the band Shrek, aside from his primary love of performing with Medeski and Martin.

The show will no doubt bring in many sharp, dangerous musical edges from these varied backgrounds as well as many booms, but there is no doubt that those booms will make you move. Watch out for them organ bursts — they can be real sly.

Medeski, Martin & Wood perform at the Northampton Center for the Arts tonight at 8 p.m.. This show is all ages. Call the Iron Horse at 584-0610 for more details.

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS $10. always
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256.0722
145 main st northampton 586.0155

NO U TURN

This is no time to turn back. Keep MDA's lifesaving research moving forward.
MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association
1-800-572-1717

EL JACUÑA
TEX-MEX CANTINA
Live Music Nights Are Back
Along with our Full Lunch and Dinner Menu,
1/2 priced apps after 9, Mega Margaritas.
Live music begins again this Sunday
Sunday Sept. 29
The Trio Frio & Dusty Baker Lonesome Blues
$1 Cover
Tuesday Oct. 1
Female acoustic singer Wesla, Followed by returning hit Pele's Desire
No Cover
Wednesday Oct. 2
Phat Jam wthJohn Sheldo, Joe Sallins & Peter Kim
$3 Cover
All shows start at 9 pm
All ages welcome, but servers will check IDs at the table. OCMP accepted
41 Boltwood Walk, Amherst 413-253-4040

Collegian Night Graphics
It's like waiting for Godot...

Madball speaks out on dancing & more

Keeping It Real

by Adam Dyglacz

If you were one of the unfortunate people who did not attend last Friday night's show at Pearl Street,– you missed one of hardcore's best concerts. Madball played a raging set to packed house. Mixing in songs from every release they have, even going back to the Ball Of Destruction 7", the beat never let up. After the show, I got a chance to talk with lead singer Freddy Cricieon and guitarist Matt Henderson, and got the inside scoop on the band.

First of all, Madball is not a tough guy band. Too often people like to label Madball without knowing the true story.

Madball guitarist Matt Henderson said, "They make it out like Madball is just a group of thugs — that's not true. No one from Madball can say we didn't get into a fight or something.

"If you heard the real story behind a lot of these incidents, you'd probably take our side. We're regular people. It's not fair for extra politically–correct people to try and judge us," Henderson said.

If a person were to take the time and read Madball's lyrics it's clear, especially on Demonstrating My Style, that Madball is opting for a more positive method.

"To me it was just reality. When I wrote Set It Off, I just took stories and all the things I write are based on true stories — reality. Things like our environment that affect us — It's like a book," Cricieon said.

" On Demonstrating My Style, I wrote about stories I couldn't finish on Set It Off. On Set It Off, there were a lot more personal tension affecting me. A lot of things happened to me, to us. There was a lot more anger, but if you read the lyrics carefully you can take something positive out of them," Cricieon said.

After all, Madball is there for the little bands. On Friday they had bands like Tyrant Trooper, who are still in the demo stages, opening up for them.

"A band like Madball, who on the surface may seem a little bit successful — we still play shows with bands that are just putting out demos. That's what we stick with and we try to carry those bands along with us. Fury of 5, H2O, 25 Ta' Life, Ensign, bands like that. There's still tightness," Henderson said.

Hardcore has changed a lot since Minor Threat and Agnostic Front to bands like Snapcase and Earth Crisis today. While some people feel that Madball is a band that plays the same style of music over and over again, it's clear that while they're not playing metal influenced hardcore like a lot of bands today, they still encourage change within the scene.

"It's gotta change. Even Agnostic Front from Victim In Pain to One Voice, the sound changed. Or take Killing Time, they changed a little, but it's still hardcore. There are a lot of bands that don't sound like either of those bands that I would consider hardcore. It keeps the scene fresh, it keeps it alive, just don't forget the roots. You need some kind of foundation," Henderson said.

Madball also stresses understanding and tolerance — two things that are at the very foundation of hardcore. Two issues that have been points of controversy within the hardcore scene have been militant SXE kids and dancing at shows.

Henderson remarked, "It's a young SXE generation. It can be a positive thing if you believe in your heart that it's your thing. I'm more convinced by someone who's been through drugs and drinking and becomes SXE then someone who never had a beer.

"No doubt there are a couple of ignorant people that f—k it up, that take advantage of the little guy in the pit, that sucks, that's weak. You want to be tough go up to the biggest tough guy who's dancing the hardest and f—k with him and you'll get knocked out. Then again sometimes people act like one fight is the end of the world, which it isn't," the guitarist commented.

When it comes to what makes a show, the two agree that dancing creates the right kind of atmosphere.

And in Criecion's opinion, the dancing scene is the best in New York.

"I've been around the states and Europe and I gotta give New York the trophy for dancing, they dance the hardest there. To outsiders that don't know they just think New York's a bunch of crazy assholes," Criecion commented.

H.I. Vato ends festival about AIDS awareness

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

When AIDS first emerged on the scene in the early '80s, the disease hit mostly homosexual males. There were those who believed that AIDS was God's punishment for homosexuality and those stricken with the fatal illness were forced to hide the fact that they had been diagnosed as either HIV–positive or of having full–blown AIDS.

Even in the '90s, the degree of openness and acceptance has not extended to homosexuality and AIDS. The stigma still remains. Raising awareness of the disease and its effects on the population is a task taken on by the Latino Theater Project, a project of New WORLD Theater.

According to a New WORLD Theater press release, AIDS became the leading cause of death in 1993 for people between the ages of 25 and 44 in Massachusetts. In 1992, AIDS was the second leading killer of blacks and Hispanics in the state.

The AIDS–awareness program is titled "Positive/Positivo: Gay and Lesbian Latino/a Identities in the Time of AIDS." The project took on the subjects — usually considered taboo — head–on with a series of workshops and performances of Amor Postivo/Positive Love. That performance incorporated aspects of Latino culture, homophobia and AIDS prevention.

The festival, which started last week on Sept. 19 with a performance of the one woman travelogue Milk of Amnesia, ends this Saturday with a performance of H.I. Vato. H.I. Vato will be performed 8 p.m. tonight at Hampden Theater and 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. tomorrow, also at Hampden Theater.

H.I. Vato was written by Beto Araiza and is described as a "Baile con la Muerte" — a dance with death. Araiza performs the play, which is a poetic reflection of a man's everyday struggle with H.I.V. The path Araiza leads the audience along on starts with the initial diagnosis to defiant survivor.

The festival is presented in part with the Everywoman's Center Women of Color Program and the StoneWall Center.

For ticket reservations, call the Fine Arts Center Box Office at 545–2511 or 1–800–999–UMAS. Single tickets for low income patrons are available by calling 545–1972. For more information about the festival, please call Joshua Fontanez at 545–1972.

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

New WORLD Theater closes out its Gay/Latino festival this weekend.

More actors performing risky stunts

By Constance Sommer
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — There's Tom Cruise hurling himself through a plate glass window as a huge aquarium explodes behind him. Then there's Helen Hunt facing down twisters as homes and cows fly by. And, of course, there's Arnold Schwarzenegger doing... everything. It seems all the rage these days — actors doing their own stunts in action blockbusters. And while industry insiders say the big names are doing more stunts, there's still a lot of work out there for the men and women who make a living risking life and limb for that extra heart–pounding shot.

Stunt professionals say some actors do as much as 90 percent of their own stunts. But it's that last 10 percent — the high falls, the eardrum–shattering explosions — that are generally left to the experts.

"A lot of the time, you get a Sylvester Stallone, a Bruce Willis and these are ballsy guys," says longtime stuntman Roy Clark. "Depending on the actor, he wants to let the public (see) him doing everything. There are times you have to tell an actor not to do his own stunt."

One actor who won't allow anyone else to do his stunts is Hong Kong phenomenon Jackie Chan, who prides himself in doing all of his action sequences.

Chan has been doing his own inimitable brand of martial arts mayhem for 15 years but his big breakthrough in the United States came with Rumble in the Bronx, which included in the final credits some of the stunts he botched, including a leap in which he broke his ankle.

The 41–year–old star is a walking miracle of physical endurance. He has broken numerous bones doing stunts, and sports a hole in his head the size of a quarter, suffered when he fell out of a tree during a stunt.

But conditions in Hollywood are a little different in Hong Kong, where any insurance is hard to come by, says Chan's Supercop co–star Michelle Khan.

Can you imagine, she says, sitting down with a local insurance agent and demanding accident coverage for 40–foot falls, ear–splitting explosions and leaps between skyscrapers. And that's just the opening scene? Khan laughs. "Here we're almost not really covered by insurance," she said.

Operating under different handicaps, action filmmakers stateside at least try to make it look like the famous faces are performing every stunt.

"Hopefully, you should never know," Clark said. "That's the mystique of the business. You of the paying public, we don't want you to know."

Still, actors pushing the stunt envelope abound.

Christian Slater apparently did a lot of his own stunts for Broken Arrow, including working out with boxer Carlos Palomino, a former World Boxing Council welterweight champ, to add to the authenticity of the film's opening sequence when he spars with John Travolta's character in a gym.

Sylvester Stallone, no stranger to danger, was deemed "superheroic" for the work he did in his upcoming film Daylight, which includes a scene of him running between the massive revolving blades of a "monster machine."

And Helen Hunt's work in Twister reportedly left her battered from the effort of doing much of the work herself. It was rumored that she got a concussion from filming one scene in which she opened the door of a vehicle that was speeding through a cornfield, according to Entertainment Weekly.

"The thing about me is, I have all the courage of a stunt person, but I don't have all the talent," Hunt told the magazine. "If you're Arnold Schwarzenegger or Mel Gibson, and you've done 9,000 action movies, you're used to everything blowing up. I wasn't. It was new for me."

Loren Janes, a stuntman with 40 years in the business, puts it another way.

"If you were an insurance company insuring a movie, and (the star) was getting $20 million and you were going to have to pay everybody else while he recovers (from an injury), aren't you going to say, 'Hey, you'd better have a double?'"

So if you're worried about your favorite celebrity performing all those death–defying stunts he's bragging about on the late–night talk shows — don't. It's entirely possible that someone else took the fall.

COURTESY AMERICAN RECORDINGS

"Shake Your Moneymaker"
Tickets for the Black Crowes Nov. 3rd show go on sale tomorrow at 10 a.m. at The Mullins Center Box Office and through Ticketmaster. Reserved seats are $20.50.

Blues legend brings his his music to Iron Horse

By Panagiotis Gianopoulos
Collegian Correspondent

Junior Wells is part harmonica virtuoso, part frenetic showman and part mythical figure. He has been called "a spunky little ball of energy who keeps the Chicago blues scene alive," a man who "plays like most of us breathe" and who "breathes fire into his harmonica." Wells' wild stage antics have also earned him the reputation of a man with "a thundercloud stuck up his pants." Clearly, Wells is no simple bluesman but a musical force, and a devilish one at that.

There is something decidedly mischievous about Wells as he blows and chokes the blues harp, making it holler like the greats Little Walter and Sonny Boy did. His method is loud, brazen and furious and it justifies his mythical status. And of course, like all such mythical figures, Wells has a famous corresponding story of how it began.

He began playing the harmonica at the age of 11, with some brief instruction from his neighbor. He worked all week on a soda truck that summer to earn enough money to buy a shiny new harp he'd been eyeing. At the store, Wells placed his $1.50 on the counter and picked up the harp. The owner told him it was $2. Wells looked at the harp, then at the door and sprinted out of the store with the harp.

What grants this everyday tale of childhood thievery a legendary aspect is the ensuing court scene. The judge asked Wells why he had stolen the harp. Wells replied that he "just had to have it." The judge then instructed Wells to play it for the court. After hearing Wells play, the judge paid the remaining 50 cents himself and dismissed the case.

Since that pivotal moment, Wells has been playing harmonica with the fire and mischief of an inspired demon. His first LP, Hoodoo Man Blues, is widely considered one of the best blues albums ever recorded. He has toured extensively with phenomenal blues guitarist Buddy Guy in possibly the most famous modern blues team. Together, they recorded Drinkin 'TNT' and Smokin' Dynamite at the 1974 Montreaux Jazz Festival. It was rated one of the 10 best albums of the year by Billboard's editors' poll, and regarded as one of the best documentations of a live blues performance.

Well's recent eight–piece touring band has everything necessary to thrill audiences, including a horn section and most importantly, the man himself. A consummate showman, Wells sings, struts, wails, shouts and bends the notes almost in two. His searing licks can flay the skin off your back one song, and his mellow blues can heal it right back on again the next. Wells is a walking legend, and every show he grins, sings and plays to prove it.

COURTESY DELMARK RECORDS

Blues legend Junior Wells.

SLOWER TRAFFIC KEEP RIGHT

Your support keeps lifesaving research in the fast lane.

MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association
1–800–572–1717

Affordable
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
Rings Happy B'day Earrings Cards Sweaters Skirts
Posters Sale 20 to 50% off selected Clothing
India Print Bedspreads Candles Incense
The GreatGifts Mercantile
Visa / MC Th.Fri.9PM Sun 12–5 Daily 10–6
Northampton–18 Center St. Amherst–Carriage Shops

"I got mine at Zanna"

John Fluevogs
ZANNA
downtown Amherst

LSAT GMAT GRE MCAT
take Kaplan and get into the right school.
Personalized, computerized study plans, tailored to your individual needs.
Highly trained, expert teachers who know the tests inside and out.
Proven methods, guaranteed to raise your score.
Next LSAT class starts October 1st
Next GRE class starts October 15th
Next MCAT class starts November16th
the leader in test prep and admissions counseling
KAPLAN
1–800–KAP–TEST
www.kaplan.com
*Test names are Trademarks of their owners

Minutemen on the road for XC rumble in Bronx

By Matt Perrault
Collegian Correspondent

The Massachusetts men's cross country team travels south this Saturday to participate in the famous Meet Of Champions. Van Cortlandt Park, which is located the Bronx of New York City, is the site of the event, which will start at 11:30 a.m.

This will be the first time UMass will run the annual meet and the field should be strong. The host school, Iona College, ranked 35th in the nation, will have the advantage of running on familiar ground.

Other top teams such as No. 22 Penn State, No. 26 Villanova, and No. 43 Clemson round out the ranked opposition that UMass will face.

But the real reason UMass coach Ken O'Brien is taking his team to the meet is because two Atlantic 10 opponents consistently run Van Cortlandt Park and the course has been selected to hold the A–10 Championships. (hosted by Fordham) this year.

"St. Joe's and LaSalle have been running the course for years and have experience on it," O'Brien said. "Van Cortlandt is a very difficult course that has a great amount of history and is one of the most well known cross country courses in the world. Most of our kids have never run it or only in high school. We need the experience."

The course itself demands a well–conditioned but fast runner. The first mile is a sprint across flat plains until the runners hit the woods for the second mile. The path in the woods is very narrow and extremely hilly. This is where the pack will break away. After coming back out of the woods, the race will once again focus on speed as the runners will cross back through the plains again.

Van Cordlandt has its version of Heart Break Hill during the fifth and final mile. A very steep slope greets the runners, named "Cemetery Hill." A cemetery rests at the top of the climb and legend has it that all of the runners who don't survive the hill get buried there. The five mile course ends with a sprint to the finish line.

O'Brien hopes this race will bring his team together and help them get for the rest of the season. He is not expecting victory at this meet but is expecting a top ten finish.

"I want my team in the top ten of this meet and if not in, as close to the top five as possible," he said.

Although they are not expected to place, O'Brien is looking for strong showings from veterans like seniors Paul Blodorn, Matt Behl and Mike Maceiko.

He also hopes the younger team members, like freshmen Peter Gleason and Brian Hughes, will benefit from the race experience.

Other teams of note that make up the rest of the field of twenty are Virginia Tech and UNC–Greensboro, both of which have had strong showings in past seasons.

■ field

continued from page 10

On the defensive end of the field, the UMass backs have been solid on the year, not allowing opponents any extra room to move.

Amy Ott was the defensive force against Penn St., suffocating the Lady Lion attack with her countless tackles.

Minutewoman goalie Hilary Rose has stopped 88 shots on the year. She was ranked fifth in the nation in saves and save percentage before last Wednesday's game. Rose has also turned back four penalty strokes on the year.

Temple goalie Deb Brown has seen all but 19 minutes of action in the Owl net this season, stopping 79 shots. She has amassed a 3.72 goals against average and has shut out opponents twice in a pair of 1–0 wins.

The Minutewomen will finally play at Totman Field for the first time (the game against Yale at Totman was rained out), when they return home Oct. 2 to face Northeastern at 3:30 p.m.

UMass polo takes to the water and air

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

In the wake of its first–ever trip to the Final Four, the UMass water polo team is starting to grab some attention, albeit modest, from fans and supporters.

In an effort to grab some more attention and enhance support for one of the most successful sports teams on campus, WMUA 91.1 FM will be airing this weekend's UMass–Brown water polo match live from Amherst College at 9 p.m. Saturday night.

This marks the first time that WMUA has broadcast a water polo match, and co–Sports director Mike Reiss is excited about this opportunity to expand the campus's collective sports horizon.

"WMUA as a station is very diverse; [water polo] is just another type of thing you can find on campus," Reiss said. "The team is one of the best kept secrets on campus and this gives us the opportunity to expose that excellence."

Reiss himself will be handling the play–by–play duties. He will be joined throughout the night by various analysts and other such people in the know.

Between quarters, Reiss plans to run features on coach Russ Yarworth and the program. WMUA also wants to try and involve the women's water polo program in the broadcast.

The stage for the water polo squad's radio debut will be a second meeting in as many weeks with the Bears of Brown. The Minutemen won the first tilt last weekend, 10–6 on the strength of Paul Engin's 12 saves.

Brown will be the third of three teams to contest UMass in the Minutemen's second Eastern Water Polo Association league tournament of the season. UMass (7–2) is undefeated in three EWPA matches already.

UMass and Brown are two of the top water polo teams in the Northeast region and, like their most recent contest, have consistently played tight defense–oriented games in the past.

Overall, the Minutemen, with their win last Saturday, hold a 14–13 win–loss advantage in the all–time series with the Bears dating back to 1987.

The only other team in the Northeast that the Minutemen haven't perpetually dominated is Navy which has beaten Massachusetts eight of the 11 times the two have met (the games UMass has won have all been in the Eastern Championships).

Those facts don't leave much for the Crimson of Harvard and the Engineers of M.I.T. to look forward to. UMass has won 17 of 26 against Harvard since '87, and are 18–2 against the Engineers in that span.

The Schedule for the Minutemen on Saturday: they face Harvard at 10 a.m., M.I.T. at 2:30 p.m. and Brown at 9 p.m.

After this weekend, the Minutemen continue their affair with the Bears as they go down to Providence to participate in the Brown Invitational on Oct. 5–6.

■ women's

continued from page 10

Danielle Dion (0.17 goals against average). St. Joe's freshman keeper Amanda Kuehnle has had to face a daunting 80 shots on net, while making 62 saves (1.93 GAA).

The offense for the Minutewomen has begun to emerge, as the forever consistent senior midfielder Rebecca Myers (6 goals, 1 assist, 13 points) officially stamped her mark on UMass history this week. In the 3–0 win over Rhode Island, Myers took over the top spot in all–time UMass goals (36) and points scored (95). She has not been the sole beneficiary, as freshman forward Emma Kurowski added two assists last Tuesday in Kingston, R.I., and is now second in team scoring (3g, 3a, 9p).

For Rudy, unless teams like SMU, Georgia, and George Washington start to make an impact on the polls, his team's strength of schedule will be further scrutinized come NCAA Tournament time. These are games that team's have to notch in the win column, or the result could be as bad as the daytime robbery of an 1994 NCAA Tournament bid for the UMass field hockey team.

"With St. Joe's, I don't care who they are, or who they've played," Rudy said. "The way that our schedule is shaping up, our strength of schedule index this year is not going to be even as strong as we thought.

"With these three extra A–10 teams we have to play, if we lose to one it could be catastrophic. Now is the time to take care of business, not at the end of the year, when they are starting to make their selections. The time is now."

Minutewoman XC to race at Meet of Champions in N.Y.

By Corey Goodman
Collegian Correspondent

The Massachusetts women's cross couñtry team will take its act to the cross country mecca of Van Cortland Park in the Bronx, N.Y. this weekend, where they'll compete in the Meet of Champions. It's the first big invitational of the year, and UMass appears to be up for the challenge.

The Minutewomen are coming off an impressive victory last week over Connecticut, Boston University, Vermont and Central Connecticut State, which saw their dual meet record climb to 5–1.

In a meet that said a lot about its standing in New England, UMass proved to have the deepest and most talented squad in the field, placing four of the team's runners in the top ten, and six in the top 20.

Junior Rebecca Donaghue, once again, displayed her dominance over the competition, as she took home another first–place finish (17:29), edging out UConn's standout runner Danyelle Wood (17:36).

But the real story of the victory came from the Minutewomen's supporting cast.

"All of the girls are running extremely well," UMass coach Julie LaFreniere said.

Katie Greenia has been one of the clutch runners on the team, finishing fourth last week with a time of 18:19. Christy Martin has been surging ahead, shaving seconds off her time, finishing seventh last week, only 13 seconds off Greenia's pace.

LaFreniere was also pleased with the races of her other runners.

"I thought Sharon Tilloston looked very good last week," LaFreniere added. "Molly Dunlap ran a great race, and we had strong performances from Tracy Meagher and Sally Hirsch."

However, the Minutewomen have a tough task ahead of them this weekend at the Meet of Champions, which hosts a strong field of schools. The No. 7 Villanova Wildcats are the favorite to win the meet, which also sees Purdue, South Carolina, Western Kentucky, Coastal Carolina, Drexel, Iona, Fairfield, Monmouth, Manhattan, and the A–10's own St. Joseph's and Fordham in action.

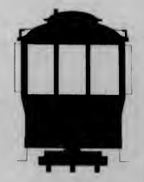
"Villanova is a tough team. They are consistently ranked in the top ten, and their best six runners are all nationally quality runners," LaFreniere said.

"Purdue and South Carolina are both strong teams who are always contenders, and teams like Coastal Carolina and Western Kentucky usually have one or two great runners who will finish atop the pack," LaFreniere said.

Don't count on UMass looking past A–10 rival St. Joseph's either. The Hawks have been a thorn in the side of LaFreniere and the Minutewomen in recent years.

"It's a great opportunity for us," LaFreniere said. "We'll be able to run against teams from all over the country, and see just where we stand against them.

"It's also a big meet for Rebecca (Donaghue), who'll be able to make a name for herself amidst some of the top runners in the country."



Collegian Night Graphics...
New! Improved! Now with literary references!

GAY, LESBIAN, BISEXUAL ISSUES
NEEDS WRITERS!
If you are interested in writing for the Collegian and working on issues that pertain to you or your friends please come to the Collegian at 113 Campus Center
and ask for Jamie Sinsheimer or leave a note in my mailbox. All students are welcome to apply, whether you are a GLB student or just an ally.

What is it?

Is it a Space Ship?

Is it a Trolley?

Is it a Plane?

No! It's the Collegian's newspaper stand located on the Campus Center Concourse. You can pick up your copy of the Collegian or place a classified ad (and save yourself the trip down to the basement).

MasterCard VISA

Classified Sales Hours Mon–Fri 10–2

Classifieds may be placed at the Collegian Office–113 Campus Center–Mon–Fri 8:30–3:30 horn

continued from page 10

called Doc Gooden a crack-smoking waste of oxygen, and eluded to Darryl Strawberry's similar problems, not to mention Tim Raines' sordid history with the reefer.

See a pattern?

And, I called Cecil Fielder fat... yeah, like he's never heard a fat joke.

I suppose I could tell you why Andy Pettitte is going to be the biggest disgrace to win the Cy Young Award since, well since the award started...

First and foremost, his ERA is up around like five million (the highest ERA by a winner since the inception of the award in 1956 was by LaMarr Hoyt of the Chicago White Sox in 1983 when he won 24 games — 3.66).

Sure, Pettite's a 20-game winner, whoopdy-doo. Dave Stewart won 20 games three times, but never won a Cy Young award. Sure, Pettite has the best pick-off move in the league, okay so let's give him the Picker-Offer of the Year award.

Stewart never won the Cy Young for a variety of reasons, one was Roger Clemens, but the others were pitchers on his own team, and that there would be the reason why Pettite shouldn't win the award since there are at least two other hurlers on the Yankee roster that deserve the award more than he does.

John Wetteland, the Yankee closer has seemed dominating, having saved nearly 40 games and exhibiting great control for a power pitcher.

Mariano Rivera is the other Yankee stud. Actually Rivera is the reason why both pitchers are having such successful seasons.

So, if the Baseball Writers need to give a Yankee the Cy Young award, give it to the best pitcher on the Yankees — Rivera.

He has overwhelmed opposing hitters in practically every outing this season. In fact, he's the only reliever in the league that has logged more than 100 innings on the hill. And, without Rivera, Pettite wouldn't have 20 wins nor would Wetteland have even 35 saves.

So, I didn't do a great job at bashing the Yankees, but at least the Red Sox aren't going to be the Indians' whipping posts in the playoffs this October.

• Not yet Sox freaks...now, the Pats.

Ya' know, 2–2 isn't a bad start for this team. They're still young and just learning to play together in basically a new system. The defense, having been switched to the 3–4 alignment under apprentice head coach Bill Belichick, has performed well under the pressure of an identity–less offense.

Drew Bledsoe continues to show flashes of super human ability, but the problem with that is so did Tony Eason and Doug Flutie. It seems like Bledsoe is going to become the next Jeff George — such tremendous potential and such mediocre production, although George has found his niche in the run–and–shoot system in Atlanta.

As far as Curtis Martin goes, it's too early to call him the next John Stephens, but how 'bout Leonard Russell? I hope he wasn't a fluke, but he's only averaging three yards a carry running behind basically the same line as he did in his stellar rookie campaign.

Ben Coates is Ben Coates and oh look, Terry Glenn took his skirt off and is already New England's best wideout.

Hey, Shawn Jefferson: I'm giving lessons on how to hold on to the ball tomorrow, c'mon it's a bye–week you have the time.

• Okay. I promised...

We are well aware of the fact that Red Sox management has an extensive "to–do" list for the off–season, but after experiencing first–hand Wednesday night's 6–2 loss to the Orioles, I can see three key things that Sox fans should lobby to put at the top of the list: 1. Get rid of that God– awful PA announcer. Screw "equal opportunity," she is horrible (I'm sure she'd be just as horrible if she were a man, so no letters please); 2. Along the same lines, they really need to look into getting some better between–inning music. When "Copacabana" and "Iko Iko" started playing, I actually wanted to hear the "Macarena;" 3. Concession stand prices are so high that my dad had to take out a second mortgage to lend me money for a cheeseburger, fries and a coke.

A top lefty starter would be nice too...

• Hardcourt dinosaur, Robert Parrish has signed a two– year pact with the defending NBmA (National Basketball marketing Association) champion Chicago Bulls.

Seeing Parrish wearing Chicago black and red will be like seeing Ulysses S. Grant wearing grey (if you don't get that: pack your bags and withdraw from school — you're hopeless).

• Memo to Bob Dole, noted Brooklyn Dodgers fan: The Dodgers will be playing the Washington Senators tonight at 7 p.m. at Ebb-ets Field. Oh wait, that was 1946!

Fred Hutlbrink, Jr. is a Collegian columnist.

volleyball

continued from page 10

the season. It led to a team meeting which examined what exactly was going wrong.

"Duquesne will give us some problems," Kenny said. "They beat Ohio State (earlier this season), when they were ranked at the time. That won't be an easy match for us."

The Minutewomen hold the edge over the Lady Dukes, 7– 4, dating back to 1986.

Last week, junior outside hitter Lesley Nolan became only the second player in school history to reach the 1,000 dig plateau in UMass' 0–3 loss to Rhode Island. She now has 1,017 career digs. Senior Dionne Nash, incidentally, is the other player with 1,000 digs.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Michelle Paciorek and the UMass volleyball team opens conference play this weekend at Curry Hicks Cage.

Nash was named to the All–Tournament team at the Rhode Island Classic, marking the fourth consecutive weekend that she has earned All–Tournament honors. The outside hitter averaged 4.4 kills and 4.8 digs per game.

Also playing well of late for UMass has been Michelle Paciorek. She earned a match–high 11 kills against No. 7 Long Beach State last weekend, and her 15 kills against Brown was also the most of anyone on the floor. What's more, she leads the team with a .414 hitting percentage.

After this homestand, nine of UMass' next 12 matches will be on the road, including the next five straight.

football

continued from page 10

terback."

On the defensive side of the ball, the Minutemen will be hurting in the secondary, where senior co–captain Kory Blackwell will probably not see action because of a strained right hamstring. This, combined with Brian Mooney's hamstring problems that will keep him out of action, has Hodges concerned.

"Sure I'm concerned," said Hodges. "Northeastern passes the ball a lot, so we have to go to a nickel defense more often. With five or six players in the secondary, our depth could be a problem."

On a more positive note, UMass linebacker Justin Reimer was recognized as the ECAC defensive player of the week for his play against Richmond. The senior registered 18 tackles, (15 solo) and had four tackles for a loss, including one sack. This is nothing new for the Wayne, N.J. product, who leads the Minutemen in tackles with 37, tackles–for–loss (seven) and sacks (two). Last season Reimer garnered first team All–Yankee Conference honors after his 150 tackles led the conference.

Minuteman Notes: In order to accommodate NESN, which is broadcasting the game, Saturday's kickoff has been moved to noon. Sophomore Matt Jordan is expected to play Saturday. Jordan, who has been hampered by hamstring problems, has only one carry so far this season. Last season Jordan ranked third on the team in rushing with 564 yards.

Correction: The Collegian incorrectly reported the score of Sept. 14's Connecticut–Northeastern game yesterday. UConn beat the Huskies 21–19.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Seeking interested people to help plan activities for World AIDS Day at UMass Meeting Fri. 9/27 at 2pm Campus Center 577-5181 for details

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 Chevy Cavalier Wagon AC, AM/FM, new tires, phs, $2500-0 080. Call Bruce 256-1215

1986 Mazda Reliable, 5 speed, AM/FM cassette $900 665-8246

1986 Toyota Low mileage, standard $1000/80; 586-9501 After 5:00 pm

1987 Mazda 626 123k miles but runs great, standard shift, P/W, P/L, sunroof, priced for quick sale $1200 firm 549-0701 days, 323-9233 evenings

1992 Toyota Supra Good condition, AT/PW/PD/PS/AM/FM CAS. Call 546-0057 or (413)624-3982

EMPLOYMENT

Business Opportunity. Need additional income? Want the energy to earn it? Earth-friendly company looking for distributors. Wild Organic Food, Free Tape 1-800-927-7527 ext. 7368

Spring Break!! Earn Cash!!! Highest Commissions! Lowest Prices! Travel free on only 13 sales!! Free info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

Cruise Ships Hiring Earn up to $2,000+/month Worldwide Travel. Seasonal and Full Time positions. No exp. necessary. For info call 1-206-971-3550 ext C50015

National Parks Hiring Positions are now available at National Parks, Forests and Wildlife Preserves. Excellent benefits and bonuses! Call 1-206-971-3620 Ext N50016

Tropical Resorts Hiring. Students needed! Entry level and career positions available worldwide. Call Resort Employment Services 1-206-971-3600 Ext. R50012

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS! Over $ billion in public and private sector Grants and scholarships are now available. All students are eligible. Let us help. For more info call 1-800-263-6495 Ext F50014

International Employment - Earn up to $25-$45/hour teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S. Korea. No teaching background or Asian Languages required. For info call 206-971-3570 Ext. J50015

Now Hiring All Shirts. Closing shifts available with bonus program. Hadley Burger King. Ask for Tim 584-5110

Now Hiring! Great pay doing odd jobs. Flexible hours. Call Andrew 584-8070

Counter Help and Daytime Delivery Persons. Counter help must be able to work 15-20 hr. nights and weekends. Apply at G.P. Dough

Experienced Part Time House Cleaner. References Please. $8 hourly 549-0413

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

All you can carry for $99. Computers, software, hard drive, color monitors. Steve (413) 566-3324

Platform Bed with mirrored headboard, bookcase and mattress $75. Upholstered chair. Red tweed in good shape $10.00 584-3854

Waterbed King, new, waveless mattress/heaters. 4 drawers, bookcase, lamps. Must sell. $300. 549-1813

Four Dave Matthews tickets for Oct. 6 Spectacular seats on the floor. Please help me get rid of these. 546-2310

Basement Sale! Everything must go! 549-1578

INSTRUCTION

Boxing Lessons w/Dyna Bumpus. Call for brochure 737-8817

Jazz Piano Teacher – Beginners to advanced students. Call Steven Page 253-3954

INSTRUCTION

WWW.SUCCESS.ORG Free business education from American Institute Entrepreneurship and Real Estate Investment Courses. Retire rich in ten years.

PC/MAC Tutoring Cheap instruction for computer. Patient, valuable help and advice. Set-ups, software, Internet (413)772-0633

MUSICIANS

Guitar Classes Start 9/10 Rentals and lessons available. 10 wks/$40.00 FTUG Pvd 545-0579

Blues Jam Tues. 8:00pm Emerson 112 Check it out!

PERSONALS

Choices Not Chances Free contraception education. Every Mon & Thurs 3-4:30 and Tues & Wed 7-8:30pm in Rm 302 UHS. Med and Women welcome. For more information call Health Education Office 577-5181

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

Hey Chicken Pot Pie, I know that I do not show my appreciation enough towards you, but I am going to start. I just wanted to tell you how much I love you and need you. Thanks for always being there for me. EDDIE'Y I love you. Love Always, Boob

Varnesh Happy 21st Monkey!! I love you with all my heart!! Thanks for everything!! Love, Tej

ROOM WANTED

Looking for room in an apartment. Anything on bus line. Please call Dan 367-2047

SERVICES

Computer Problems? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Scream Savers 549-0663

LICENSED MANICURIST Basic Manicure $10. French Manicure $12. Call Bridget for an appt. @ 549-6379

Have you been ripped off by a retailer? Contact the Student Legal Services Office regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center 545-1995

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK! Earn cash! Highest commissions/lowest prices! Travel free on only 13 sales!! Free info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

TRANSPORTATION

Ride Share from Lee (or Berkshire area) MTWF @ 9:00 classes. Call Jason 243-0981

WANTED

Wanted 100 People New Metabolism Breakthrough. Lose 5-100 lbs. Guaranteed. Cost $35. (800)776-9903

ONE DAY I WOKE UP AND REALIZED I DIDN'T NEED THAT $150,000 PORSCHE MY DADDY BOUGHT ME, SO I DECIDED TO PLACE AND AD IN THE COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS, AND WHAT DO YOU KNOW...IT WORKED! I SOLD IT THE NEXT DAY. NOW I DRIVE A '76 CHEVY VEGA. LIFE IS GOOD.

Rates

$2.00 minimum /day

Students 20¢ per word /day

All others 40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21–April 20
Abrupt mood swings may mean there's something unexpected bothering you. Trust a close friend to help you sort out a complicated issue. Also, don't neglect health issues. That's another potential source of trouble.

TAURUS
April 21–May 21
Listening to a killjoy at work makes you want to scream, but the patient approach works wonders. Ignore this person as much as possible, and focus on the things you enjoy most to help you get through the week.

GEMINI
May 22–June 21
An insensitive omission may have you feeling depressed. Try to keep your chin up and ask yourself: Are these the sort of people you want to be your friends? Try to develop a thicker skin.

CANCER
June 22–July 22
A charitable contribution may be redirected to a cause you don't approve of. Your values are important, too, so don't allow yourself to be railroaded. A misunderstanding at home may be causing stress.

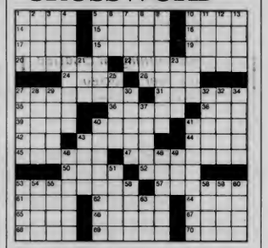
LEO
July 23–August 23
Careful attempts at communication clear up a misunderstanding you thought was terminal. See—It really wasn't your fault. Someone you love very much is planning a surprise.

VIRGO
August 24–September 22
What you thought was a joyful piece of news is a source of consternation for someone close to you. Don't worry—they'll come around. Planning for large social events goes well.

LIBRA
September 23–October 23
A distant friend is thinking of you. Make the effort to get in touch, and you could make them very happy. Indulge this weekend in some relaxation. You're long overdue for some serious snoozing.

SCORPIO
October 24–November 22
A small gesture hits home and really makes your day. Pass the favor along—it's a good way to make a new friend. A carefully worded criticism may still sting, but see if you can pull it together and make a diplomatic reply.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23–December 21
A narrow-minded individual says something you don't agree with. It may be impossible to argue with them directly, but a more subtle approach may work wonders.



CAPRICORN
December 22–January 20
Any conflicts you encounter this week are likely to escalate, so either steer clear, or use your strongest diplomacy. A close friend may need support during a difficult time.

AQUARIUS
January 21–February 18
An enthusiastic companion makes an evening outing extra special. If you go out with a group it could be even more fun, but watch a tendency to overspend. Maybe you should leave the credit cards at home.

PISCES
February 19–March 20
A silly joke may offend you, but if you speak privately to the jokester, you may make a lasting impression. Be careful that it's not a bad one—try not to make a scene.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1. Blot
5. Sing like Bing
10. Towel pronoun
14. First name in gossip
15. Beaver's home
16. Water (Spanish)
17. Spring, in Israel
18. Lagoon surrounder
19. Measure for Dr Frankenstein
20. Turns aside
22. Lets out of jail
24. They disappear on stanzas
26. Cannon of Deathtrap
27. Overshadowed
31. Harsh and metallic
35. Ready
36. Reamer
38. What person?
39. ___ Kong
40. Small, as eyes
41. Toolbox item
42. Resentment
43. River boat
44. Duroc sound
45. Population count
47. Canned fish
50. Negative prefix
52. Carhou and Deighton
53. Wandering off
57. Stocked a trap
61. Geezer
62. Gallows knot
64. Irish newspaper
65. Mitch Miller's instrument
66. He played Gentleman Jim
67. Hog food
68. Saturates
69. Salad days
70. Tryout

DOWN
1. Gilbert of tennis
2. "Once in ___ With Amy"
3. Squadron
4. Coming undone, as cloth
5. Embraces
6. Rubbers
7. Incenses
8. Was a girl-watcher
9. Early woman reporter (2 wds.)
10. Largest city in the West Indies
11. Selves, in psychoanalysis
12. Draw a line
13. Entrance exams: abbr.
21. Strike sharply
23. Bowler Anthony
25. Passover feast
27. System of morals
28. Routine task
29. Alb material
30. Hauls
32. Lover
33. Flee and ___!
34. Meringue maker's discards
37. Model
40. Nursery furnishing
41. Most clamorous
43. Floating marker
46. Lists of candidates
48. Mutiny members
49. Watson's macromolecule: abbr.
51. Silent-night runner
53. River boat
54. Harriet's phrase (2 wds.)
55. "___ for the home team!"
56. Queyle's successor
58. Meh-pingg piece
59. God born of Chaos
60. Kind of store: abbr.
63. John, Jr. to Jackie

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

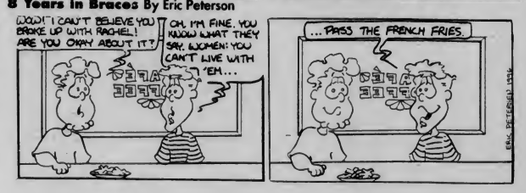
Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

Robotman By Jim Meddik

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Frumpy the Clown Judd Winick



Dilbert By Scott Adams

Always Wanted One of Those By A. Morse & S. Dumas

8 Years in Braces By Eric Peterson

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

I think remembrance is sacred knowledge is sacred babies are sacred
the morning air is sacred the river is sacred the marsh is sacred
the way my girlfriend walks is sacred the way I look at her when she walks is NOT sacred.

University² By Frank Cho

Duh By Maura & Micaela

Hear Say By Emily Yang

Close to Home By John McPherson

To soften their public image, many states have introduced singing troopers.

YOUR COMIC COULD BE HERE
instead of this stupid ad
TO RUN A STRIP IN THE COLLEGIAN CONTACT CHRIS CONNER, MANAGING EDITOR • 545-1672

Quote of the Day

"I was thrown out of college for cheating on the metaphysics exam—I looked into the soul of the boy next to me."

–Woody Allen

Another Quote !

"I believe that our Heavenly Father invented man because He was disappointed in the monkey."

–Mark Twain

Come join us at the Collegian. Staff Librarian position now open.

Today's Staff

Laura Stock
Night Editor

Seema Gangatirkar
Copy Editor

Courtney Smith
Photo Technician

Christopher Brown
Production Supervisor

Dan Bodah
Matt McCarthy
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Tacos	Savory Baked Chicken
Veggie Tacos	Glazed Harvest Ham
Clam Roll	Spaghetti/Tomato Lentil
Reubin Sandwich	Ravioli Alfredo

Hampshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburgers	Savory Baked Chicken
Chicken Pucks	Glazed Harvest Ham
Scrod on a Sesame Roll

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Scrod on a Sesame Roll	Savory Baked Chicken
Fettuccini/Tomato Sauce	Tempeh Stir Fry
Black Eyed Peas	Pastabilites
	Ravioli Alfredo

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Scrod on a Sesame Roll	Savory Baked Chicken
Fettuccini/Tomato Sauce	Pork Ginger Stir Fry
Wheatball Grinder	Tempeh Stir Fry
	Ravioli Alfredo

Sports

UM looks to collar Huskies in home opener

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior Justin Riemer, who was named ECAC Player of the Week, will lead the UMass football team in the team's home opener tomorrow at noon.

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts football team opens up Warren G. McGuirk Alumni Stadium Saturday when the Minutemen host the Northeastern Huskies at 12 p.m.

It's the first home date for the Minutemen in six games, dating back to last season. UMass coach Mike Hodges is happy to be home, especially when his team is 2–1 (1–0 Yankee Conference) and coming off a confidence–boosting 23–17 overtime victory over Richmond.

"It's nice to be home," Hodges said. "It's our house, our locker rooms, our field. Good football teams learn to play on the road, and in three games hopefully we've learned to do that."

This week's opponent, Northeastern, is also 2–1 (1–1 Yankee Conference), including a 36–6 spanking of Lafayette on the road last weekend. The Minutemen lead the all–time series between the two schools, 19–7–1, and have won the last 12 contests

The Huskies have shown considerable improvement from 1995, when they went 4–7, with a weak 2–6 mark in conference play.

One of those losses was a last second nail–biter against the Minutemen, 21–19. UMass had led throughout the contest, but with a 21–13 lead late in the game Minuteman placekicker Eric Oke missed a 31 yard field goal. Northeastern took over with 1:14 left, and moved down to the UMass 19 yard line on a Hail Mary from quarterback Jim Murphy to David Smith.

On the last play of the game, the Huskies recovered their own fumble and ran it in for a touchdown, pulling Northeastern to within two. The Huskies failed on the two–point conversion, however, when UMass safety Jason Tudryn broke up a Murphy pass, sealing the win.

Northeastern's strong point this year has been its passing game. The Huskies, led by junior standout Jim Murphy, lead the Yankee Conference in passing offense with 285 yards a game. Murphy is also first in the conference with 266.3 yards of total offense per game, and has four touchdowns and only two interceptions.

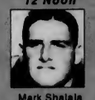
Murphy's favorite targets have been junior wide receiver David Smith, who has grabbed 17 balls for 266 yards, and junior fullback David Edmunson, who has caught 10 passes for 148 yards this season.

The Huskies have run the ball successfully all year as well. Edmunson leads the team with 190 yards rushing, and junior tailback Brian Vaughn has gained 188 yards on 52 carries so far this season. Vaughn's 3.1 yards per carry is a far cry from last season, when he led the Huskies with 742 yards on the ground and made the Yankee Conference honor roll twice.

For the Minutemen, 1996 has been a departure from previous years, as the team has produced a more balanced offensive attack. Last year's national rushing leader, UMass, has diversified, running for an average of 181 yards a game and passing for an average of 180 yards per game.

In the backfield, the Minutemen have been led by the tandem of Frank Alessio and Ron Brockington. Alessio's 89.3 yards–per–game rank the 1995 Yankee Conference rushing leader sixth in the YanCon in rushing, and his 268 yards lead the team.

Brockington, healthy for the first time in two years, has responded with 230 yards and a 5.5 per–carry average.



Despite a rough 4–for–15 outing last week, Hodges has stuck with his quarterback, junior Anthony Catterton, who will start on Saturday. Catterton was pulled late in the game last week in favor of freshman Jeff Smith, who engineered a game–tying drive in the waning moments of the contest.

"Anthony's still our man," Hodges said. "Quarterback's like any position, where if you have to make changes to win you do. We tried it and it worked, but Anthony's our quar-

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 8

Massachusetts Football

Saturday, September 28
Warren P. McGuirk Alumni Stadium
12 Noon

Mark Shalala

UMass vs. Northeastern

—ON THE AIR—

WHMP 1400 AM: Marc Vandermeer, Mike McEvilly
WMUA 91.1 FM: Mike Reiss, Chris Martens, Andrew Mahar
NESN TV

A–10 heating up; UMass faces Hawks

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

Tomorrow afternoon at 1 p.m., the No. 8 Massachusetts women's soccer team (7–0, Atlantic 10 2–0) will continue with its inauspicious A–10 schedule, facing off against the St. Joseph Hawks (2–7, A–10 0–4) at Richard F. Garber Field.

The Minutewomen have had no major problems with their A–10 neighbors so far, as St. Bonaventure and Rhode Island did not make any noise against the UMass defense in their respective 4–0 and 3–0 defeats.

Even though the remainder of the A–10 schedule does not hold a team even close to the Top 20, UMass coach Jim Rudy can not even begin to overlook any opponent in his conference; especially after a certain little 1–0 defeat to an extremely over–achieving Temple squad last season.

"We never lost an A–10 game, and we go down [to Temple] and pound on One door for 90, sorry, 93 minutes and they score one in the 93rd minute," Rudy said. "I realize those things happen in soccer, but the idea with it is that you don't want it to happen very often.

"Hey, we are not taking anyone for granted. We saw what Rhode Island can do, and they held us out for a half there. If we hadn't been shrewd enough to make the proper changes, or if we made the wrong changes, we might be still playing that game down there."

If you desire a prior history in women's soccer between these two sides, you will not find it. St. Joe's is a first year program, and its results under coach Greg Nicholls so far this season have been a testament to the team's inaugural status. W i t h wins over women's soccer power–outage teams like Wheeling Jesuit (2–1) and Lafayette (1–0), the Hawks' offense has not set off on the right foot, or the left. No player has scored over two points to this point in the season.

After a one week on–one week off winning streak to start the season, St. Joe's have dropped five in a row. Four of those losses were against A–10 opponents, as Xavier (4–1), Dayton (3–0), and Virginia Tech (2–0) had their way with the Hawks.

But in this week's 1–0 home loss to Temple, the Hawks kept up with the chief nemesis for last year's UMass squad, keeping pretty even with the Owls in shots (T–12, SJ–9) and corners taken (3–3). It was only the score by Temple midfielder Kim Fitzgerald off of a free kick at the 24:10 mark that signalled the losing margin.

As always, defense will be the key for UMass, with a backline of sophomores Robin Smith and Amanda Thompson, junior defender Erica Iverson and senior Erin Lynch have now allowed only 10 shots in seven games on junior keeper

Turn to WOMEN'S, page 7

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Tina Lighting and the UMass women's soccer team host St. Joseph's tomorrow in Atlantic 10 action.

UMass opens A–10 play; men's soccer at St. Joe's

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

The odds are pretty good that you haven't had an opportunity to see the Massachusetts men's soccer team (3–2–1) in action. Well, it looks like you'll have to wait a little longer, because after a two game homestand at Garber Field, the Minutemen are back on the road.

The Minutemen travel to the City of Brotherly Love where they will face St. Joseph's at 7:30 p.m. tonight.

UMass is looking to avenge a tough 1–0 loss at home last Tuesday suffered at the talons of the Hartford Hawks. Barring a pair of close range headers in the penalty box by Mike Butler and a shot from 10 yards out by Jake Brodsky, UMass was out shot 15–9 in the match.

The first of the two losses came when Massachusetts took to the road and lost 4–1 to South Carolina. While the Minutemen jumped to an early 1–0 lead on a goal by Dave Siljanovski, the Gamecocks rolled to victory.

St. Joe's enters today's match with a record of 1–3–0 and have gotten off to a relatively shaky start. Of the three times the struggling Hawks took it on the chin — two of the losses came in the way of shutouts. They lost to UNC– Wilmington (2–0), Philadelphia Textile (3–0) and Villanova (3–1 overtime). The lone check in the win column came in a 4–2 win over Drexel early in September.

With two goals from seven shots, sophomore midfielder Pat Gallagher leads the St. Joe's offense. The largest offensive threat comes from the foot of midfielder Aleksander Peev who has managed 17 shots. UMass keeper Tim Pearson may not be too concerned as Peev has only found the back of the net once. Behind Peev is Joe Deily and John Gallagher with a goal apiece.

In the net, junior Ryan Krey and Nick DelMonico have combined for 390 minutes in net as each squad has given up five goals each. DelMonico posts a 0–2–0 record with a 2.81 goals against average while Krey holds a 1–1–0 record with a GAA of 1.96.

The Minutemen will continue to look to the scoring tandem of Siljanovski (4g, 8 points) and Butler (2g, 2a, 6p). Other UMass players with goals on the season are Joe Jacobson, Rob Cairo, and Eric Rabinovitz.

Between the posts, Tim Pearson has gone the full 480 minutes with a 3–2–1 record. With 28 saves and a GAA of .94, Pearson has been a crucial part to the UMass defense.

Also on the other side of the ball, defenseman Dan Chagnon will be back on he pitch after drawing a red card in last weeks match against South Carolina and sitting out the game against Hartford.

UMass returns to Garber Field on Oct. 11 when the team will face Dayton at 3:30 p.m.

Field hockey travels to Philly to face Temple

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts field hockey team travels to Philadelphia to face Atlantic 10 foe Temple tomorrow at Geasey Field in the team's seventh consecutive road game.

With a 3–1 victory at Rhode Island Wednesday, the Minutewomen advanced to 6–1, 1–0 in the A–10. The Owls stand at 3–3, 0–1 in conference play.

Massachusetts leads the all–time series between the two schools, which dates back to 1978, 17–5. UMass won last year's tilt 1–0.

For the Minutewomen, freshman Saskia Fuchs has been an offensive sparkplug, scoring four goals on the year. Fuchs, has also helped on six goals, and was tied for 13th in the nation in assists before the URI game.

Sophomore Erica Johnston has come into her own as of late, stepping out from Fuchs' shadow. Johnston has tallied a team–high five goals this season, while assisting on two. Johnston was responsible for UMass' 4–3 overtime win against Penn State last Sunday, as she netted the game– winning goal in overtime.

Senior Kyle Rothenberger and sophomore Kate Putnam are running even in the points list, each with three goals and four assists. Junior Courtney MacLean also has a trio of tallies.

For the Owls, offensive output has come at the hands of Claudia Ovchinnikoff and Cherifa Nouri. Both Ovchinnikoff and Nouri have put in four goals thus far this season, Nouri's tallies coming on 16 shots and Ovchinnikoff's on 12 shots. Ovchinnikoff has also assisted on three goals, and Nouri has helped on one.

Gina DeFazio has netted a pair of scores and assisted on as many. Judy Sichler and Torie Russell have each added a goal to the team total. Katrina Wolfe has helped on a pair of put–ins, while Heather Walker, Renita Bergey and Kelly Smith each have one assist.

Turn to FIELD, page 7

St. Bonaventure, Duquesne visit UM; volleyball opens A–10 conference play

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

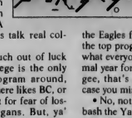
The Massachusetts volleyball team will open its first Atlantic 10 homestand this weekend at Curry Hicks Cage as it hosts St. Bonaventure tonight at 7 p.m. and Duquesne tomorrow night at 7 p.m.

UMass has owned the Bonnies in the past. In the all–time series, which dates back to 1987, the Minutewomen boast a 10–1 record against them. UMass swept the season series last year, and even this season, the trend has continued. At the Penn State Invitational, the two teams encountered each other, and UMass came away victorious, 15–2, 15–6, 15–3.

Taking the Bonnies lightly is exactly what UMass coach Bonnie Kenny won't do, but she is aware of her team's past success against them.

"There's no question that we're bigger and stronger than St. Bonaventure, even though I guess that's not saying much," Kenny said. "But we have to make sure we'll be prepared for them on Friday."

Tomorrow night's opponent may present more of a challenge. Last season, UMass split the season series with Duquesne. However, the loss in five games (in Pittsburgh) was a major low point in the early part of



Turn to VOLLEYBALL, page 8

Yankee bashing bonanza; Parrish turns confederate

Oh boy! It's my turn already.

Where to begin... not the Red Sox, but rest assured that they will make an appearance; not the Celtics because nobody really cares anymore thanks to M.L. (I can't do either of my jobs) Carr; you have to be sick of hearing about John (Armani) Calipari.

Hey, I've got it! Since our marching band is bigger, stronger and has a better completion percentage than our Division I AA football team, let's talk real college football.

We're pretty much out of luck since Boston College is the only decent Div. I program around, and well, nobody here likes BC, or will admit that fact for fear of losing their vital organs. But, ya' gotta admit that the Eagles put up a good fight against Big 10 (plus one) powerhouse Michigan last weekend.

There's no way that Dan Henning's charges should have been in that game, but sure enough, at the half the two combatants had merely traded touchdowns. The second half was pretty much all Michigan as the Wolverines weren't about to let an easy out–of–conference win slip out of their hands.

But, good for the Eagles for playing with one of the top programs in the country in what everyone expects to be a dismal year for BC on the gridiron — gee, that's too bad (sarcasm, in case you missed it).

• No, not yet Sox fans... time to bash the Yankees!

Let's see if I can come up with anything good. Well, I've already

Turn to HORN, page 8

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 19 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Monday, September 30, 1996

Two Days Seems Like Forever

There's a reason why people don't live there. Check out our review of Two Days in the Valley (See Arts & Living, page 8).

Can't touch us

Rebecca Myers scored two goals as the Minutewomen earned their seventh straight shutout Saturday (See Sports Weekend for the story).

WORLD

Thousands gather at vigil for fallen activist

HONG KONG (AP) — Tens of thousands of people chanted and sang patriotic songs yesterday at a candlelight vigil for a political activist who drowned while protesting Japan's claim to a chain of islands in the East China Sea.

David Chan, a 46-year-old public relations consultant in Hong Kong, died Thursday when he and several protesters jumped from a freighter. Japanese patrol boats had blocked the ship's approach to the islets.

China, Taiwan and Japan all claim the uninhabited island chain, called Senkaku in Japanese and Diaoyu in Chinese.

While Hong Kong residents have differing degrees of hostility toward China, which takes over the colony from England next year, both the pro- and anti-China camps were represented at Sunday's rally. Estimates of the crowd's size ranged from 20,000 to 50,000. In Taiwan on Sunday, a politician said Taiwanese and Hong Kong activists will try again next week to defy Japan and sail to the islands.

NATION

Texas auto deaths up after speed limit raise

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Traffic deaths in Texas have increased 17 percent — an average of 40 more per month — since the state began raising highway speed limits last December.

In rural areas, where Interstate traffic is now permitted to go as fast as 70 mph, fatalities increased 28 percent, the Austin American-Statesman reported yesterday.

From Dec. 8 through June 30, accident records indicated 1,936 people died in Texas traffic accidents. That compares with 1,655 traffic deaths in the same period last year.

At the current pace about 3,600 people will die in traffic accidents in Texas this year — the highest toll since 1985, the newspaper said.

The increase was similar to a review of California traffic records earlier this year that found a 17-percent increase in fatal crashes during the first 11 weeks of higher speed limits.

Traffic safety advocates said the findings confirmed fears that Congress' repeal of the federally mandated speed limits of 65 mph on rural interstates and 55 mph on other roads would lead to more deaths.

"It's a nightmare. It's worse than I even thought it would be," said Bob Draper, senior vice president of the National Traffic Safety Institute, which teaches safe-driving courses. "But it's not totally unexpected. "You now have people driving not just 70 but 80, 85, even 90 mph. At those speeds, when an accident happens, people die."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tuesday	Wed.
HIGH: 65 LOW: 40	HIGH: 60 LOW: 40	HIGH: 65 LOW: 45

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 8
Classifieds .....page 12
Comics .....page 13
Crossword .....page 12
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 14

Native American offended by athletic mascots and trademarks

COURTNEY SMITH/ COLLEGIAN

Dr. Cornel Pewewardy performs prior to his lecture on Native American mascots and trademarks last Thursday.

By Lisa Chiu
Collegian Staff

The Washington Redskins, Atlanta Braves, Cleveland Indians, and Kansas City Chiefs — the common denominator between these teams is not only sports, but also the use of Native Americans and Native American culture as mascots or tradenarks.

Dr. Cornel Pewewardy, Professor in the School of Education at the University of Kansas, lectured Thursday night on the use of Native American mascots and trademarks. Prior to his lecture, Pewewardy explained why he is so involved in the elimination of Native American mascots on various sports teams.

Pewewardy showed a poster with four fake sport pennants, depicting made up mascots using different ethnic groups such Blacks and Jews, the last was the actual Cleveland Indians pennant, under which it stated, "Now you know how American Indians feel."

"America has love affair with sports, they want to be entertained and try to get as far away from politics as they can," Pewewardy said.

According to Pewewardy, just as sports is an American icon, so is racism. As a former coach, he said he sees what a big impact a winning team has on a town and city. As a former principal of an elementary school, he sees the importance of educating teachers on issues of cultural sensitivity.

"I just couldn't see preparing teachers for tomorrow without overlooking that it so deep in the American fabric that it is what moves American sports," Pewewardy said. "As teachers, we can do something about this."

The images of Native American mascots in particular affirm stereotypes of Native peoples that young children will see and grow up with, the professor said.

He recounted an experience when he took some of his students to a Redskins game in the Twin cities. Outside the venue, there were people acting out stereotypical racist depictions of Native Americans. When students who pointed out the insult asked them to stop, the individuals began to spit and throw rocks at the children.

"Native people should be represented with respect, not flaunted and

Turn to MASCOTS, page 2

Clinton urges talk

Leaders to discuss restoring peace

By Sonya Ross
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Distressed over a resurgence of old tensions that "spun out of control" in the Middle East, President Clinton said he will convene Israeli and Palestinian leaders this week to discuss restoring peace.

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu of Israel and Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat agreed to meet in Washington this week in an attempt to prevent fighting that has killed dozens of people from destroying the peace process.

"I think they're both concerned about the way events spun out of control, about the loss of life, the injury, the eruption of old tensions and bitterness," Clinton said Sunday. "I believe they want to try to get beyond that. I don't think they would be coming here if they didn't."

King Hussein of Jordan and Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak also were invited to the Washington meeting. Clinton said. Hussein agreed to come, he said, but Mubarak has not said whether he will. Clinton spoke by telephone for about 10 minutes each Sunday afternoon with Arafat, Netanyahu, Mubarak and Hussein. White House spokesman Mike McCurry said Clinton particularly wanted to thank Netanyahu and Arafat for accepting his invitation and to "encourage them to come to Washington in a frame of mind that allows progress to be made."

Palestinians were hoping that Mubarak would attend. "Egypt's role is important, and we don't like to think of being there without President Mubarak," Nabil Shaath, the Palestinian minister of planning, said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Mubarak tentatively sent word of a scheduling conflict. But his foreign minister, Amr Moussa, said on U.S. television that a Mubarak no-show could be blamed on Israeli behavior in recent weeks.

Mubarak is annoyed that the situation in Israel "reached that level of insensitivity to the Arab people and the Arab feelings," Moussa said, also on CBS.

"President Mubarak is definitely upset at the negative developments that have occurred and that the peace process, as it is, is really teetering. It is not in good shape at all," Moussa said.

The Washington meeting, tentatively scheduled for Tuesday, will focus on "relevant issues here to the recent violence," Clinton told reporters in the White House's Rose Garden.

He did not say whether the issues included reopening Sunday of an 500-yard-long archaeological tunnel that runs near religious sites sacred to both Muslims and Jews. Upgrades on the passage were completed last week, and that triggered a Palestinian reaction that led the most violent battles between Israelis and Arabs since the 1967 Middle East war.

Netanyahu, appearing on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley" and "CNN's Late Edition," said he would not close the tunnel, a condition Arafat has said must be met before Palestinians would meet with Israeli leaders. The prime minister demanded an end to violence as a precursor to a meeting.

"I am prepared to negotiate the peace," Netanyahu said on ABC. "I think Chairman Arafat has to be prepared to shoulder his responsibility not to engage in violence and not to allow his armed police to shoot at Israeli soldiers."

MHC reaches out to Azerbaijan

By Scott Jason
Collegian Correspondent

SOUTH HADLEY — Hafiz Pashayev, the Ambassador of the Republic of Azerbaijan to the United States, spoke Thursday night at Mount Holyoke College, describing the culture, politics and natural resource issues surrounding his native land.

He also addressed the audience of approximately 50 people on continuing tensions between his country and neighboring Armenia in a speech entitled, "Azerbaijan: Oil, People and Politics."

Azerbaijan, a small country situated on the Caspian Sea, borders Russia, Armenia, Iran and Georgia holds some of the largest oil reserves in the world.

Pashayev explained that his purpose of speaking in the United States has been to educate Americans about Azerbaijan and its history. Pashayev said he would like to see "a bright future between the United States and Azerbaijan relations.

"I wish all of you will be able to participate in this relationship," he added.

Azerbaijan's boundaries, government and political structure have varied through its many centuries of existence, Pashayev said.

Due to its strategic location (being between Russia and the Middle East), large oil reserves, ethnic diversity and antagonistic neighbors, Azerbaijan has struggled for independence and an identity for centuries, Pashayev said. Under Russian and then

Turn to AZERBAIJAN, page 2

THANG VO/ COLLEGIAN

A dignified woman
A woman participates in a traditional women dance yesterday during the Native American Powwow next to the campus pond.

GLBT community active in October; members prepare for Nat'l Coming Out

By Jamie Sinsheimer
Collegian Staff

In preparation of National Coming Out Day on October 11, the University of Massachusetts Stonewall Center is laying the groundwork of a eventful month for Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual and Transgender (GLBT) members and supporters within the community.

The GLBT Studies Lecture Series continues on Oct. 3 with its first speaker Deborah Elliston, who will be speaking on "Gender and Sexuality in Polynesia."

Elliston is a graduate student and adjunct professor of anthropology at New York University.

Every week, the GLBT Lecture Series offers speakers of all different races and backgrounds on a wide array of issues. The GLBT Studies Lecture series is co–sponsored by GLB Graduate Student Organization, the Women's Studies Department and the Chancellor's Task Force on GLBT Matters.

The following Thursday, Ifti Nasim will be speaking as a part of the GLBT Studies Lecture Series. Nasim, a renowned poet from Pakistan, will read his poetry and discuss his work. His lecture is entitled "On Being Gay and Creative in South Asian Culture." He is the first gay man to publish a book of gay poems in Pakistan.

National Coming Out Day is of special concern for Stonewall Center organizers, as it is considered an important and very personal event for most GLBT people. On this day a GLBT person may come out to someone that they feel close to — be it a parent or a close friend — or anyone that they feel needs to know about their sexual orientation.

The Stonewall Center will be sponsoring a study break on this day and it will include the showing of the movie, "Torch Song Trilogy," as well as food and prizes.

On Thursday, Oct. 17, the GLBT Cafe Series returns with performance artist Don Bacalzo. Bacalzo will be presenting a one person show entitled, "Sorry I Don't Speak the Language." The performance employs dance and dialogue while exploring issues of identity for a Asian–American gay man.

Many other events are still in the planning stages at the Stonewall Center for the month of October.

All of the events are free with the exception of the performance on October 17, which is a requested $3 to $5 donation. For more information about any of the events listed above, call the Stonewall Center at 545–4824 or 54– LAMDA.

Clinton's spending promising for Mass.

By Glen Johnson
Associated Press

BOSTON — President Clinton came to Massachusetts on Saturday to raise money for Democratic candidates, but he also announced a spree of federal spending that should be beneficial to the state's taxpayers.

The president, arriving at Logan International Airport after an open-air speech to up to 20,000 in Fall River, said a budget agreement reached with congressional leaders earlier in the day would provide:

— Up to a $100 million line of credit to refurbish the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy, a prelude to resuming ship construction at the site;

— Some $75 million to continue the cleanup of Boston Harbor, word of which leaked out earlier in the week, and;

— Some $5 million to finally open a Defense Department accountant training center in Southbridge, which Clinton said will begin operations in March.

While the president peppered his speech with thanks for the hard work of Sen. John Kerry, who is in a tough re-election battle with Gov. William F. Weld, he denied that his largesse was simply election-year pork.

"I've been working on these things for far more than one year," he said as Kerry, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, Quincy Mayor James Sheets and Southbridge Town Manager Florence Chandler looked on.

"I think if they didn't have independent merit, it would have been difficult for us to get them in these times, which have been particularly contentious."

Clinton was especially empathetic to ratepayers in the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority area, who have seen their water and sewer rates skyrocket as the harbor cleanup has progressed.

He said "it would have been unconscionable for us to walk away from our continuing commitment to that."

Kerry beamed as the president made his announcements. To date Weld has been able to use his office to benefit his campaign, signing laws that coincide with the Republican's campaign message and announcing state funding in communities where he needs to pick up votes.

Clinton's visit was a chance to show Kerry's clout with his fellow Democrat in the White House.

The president also was the centerpiece for an elaborate fund-raising event at the FleetCenter, which was expected to raise Kerry and the Democratic National Committee hundreds of thousands of dollars. About 13,800 attended the event, where Clinton was flanked by Kerry and Kennedy.

Kerry said he was especially pleased about the Quincy announcement.

The Fore River Shipyard has lain dormant for the past decade. But this past week, Weld announced that Republican leaders in Washington had agreed to include language in an omnibus federal spending bill allowing for a credit line needed to secure loans that will be used to refurbish the yard and build an initial order of six oil tankers.

Kerry one-upped Weld with Clinton's announcement of $50 million to actually guarantee the loans. Minutes later, the senator's staff said another section of the budget agreement would add $50 million more, extending the line of credit up to $100 million for the yard work.

Clinton also said he had directed Transportation Secretary Federico Pena to wrap up the paperwork in the next 30 days. Kerry told the president: "Quincy broke our hearts when it closed a number of years ago as a shipyard, but because of modern technology, and most of all because of your commitment to secure that technology, we are going to build ships again in Massachusetts."

For Your Information

PIPs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Monday, Sept. 30

Music — Special guests, the Marshes, will be performing live on the Neat-O Punk Rock Show from midnight–3 a.m. on WMUA 91.1 FM. The request line and information number is 545–3691.

Religious Services — Chol Hamoed morning service for the intermediate days between Sukkot and Simchat Torah, 7 a.m. at Chabad House in Amherst at 30 N. Hadley Rd. Free and open to the public. Call 549–4094 for more information.

Tuesday, Oct. 1

Discussion — The Wildlife Society presents a talk by Tom Houston on the "Importance of Hunter Education," at Holdsworth Hall, room 203, at 6 p.m. Refreshments will follow.

Meeting — Spectrum, a student–run art and literary magazine, will hold a general meeting for all interested students at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center. Elections will be held for Prose, Business and Publicity Managers. For more information, call 545–2240.

Wednesday, Oct. 2

Fund Raiser — Alpha Phi Omega, a national co–ed service fraternity, is sponsoring the 3rd annual Blue Bowl, a football game between the UMass and Amherst police. The game, held at Amherst Regional High School, will start at 7:30 p.m. Tickets, including a raffle for a stereo, will be available at the game for $5 each. Proceeds go to benefit the North Valley Special Olympics. For more information, call 584–9377.

Poetry — Claudia's Cafe presents an open poetry reading and poetry slam at 8 p.m. The Ozark's Poet Collective will be featured. There is a $2 cover charge at the door, and sign–ups for the slam will begin at 7:30p.m.

Seminar — Michael Menaker, from the department of biology at the University of Virginia, will speak on the "Mammalian Circadian Axiz and its Roots," at 4 p.m. in room 319 of Morrill II. The event is hosted by Eric Bittman and Brad Powers.

Workshop—The Learning Resources Center is sponsoring a note taking workshop from 3:30–5 p.m. on the 10th floor of the W.E.B. DuBois Library. Call 545–5334 to register.

Friday, Oct. 4

Lecture/Discussion — Mt. Holyoke College presents Torie Osborn, activist and author of Coming Home to America : A Roadmap to Gay and Lesbian Empowerment, at 4 p.m. at the Five College Women's Research Center in the Dickinson Living Room at Mt. Holyoke College.

Music — Special Voices will perform harmonic singing at the Montague Bookmill. Come hear their celestial harmonies and unique vocal styles, that draw from roots in Tibetan Buddhist chants. Admission, $7/door. For more information, call Jim at (860) 633–5057.

Notices

Education — The HCAH HEAD START program has immediate openings for its free pre–school Classroom and Home Base option. The two Amherst classrooms are open Mon–Fri from 8:30 a.m.–12:30 p.m. Breakfast, lunch, and transportation are provided. To obtain a pre–registration form or for additional information, call the Head Start main office at 582–4206 or the Amherst center at 549–3993.

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley offers rides to students to attend the 10 a.m. service in Amherst. Drivers arrive at the Knowlton and Prince bus stops at 9:45 a.m. Please call Mark to confirm, or for other stops, at 253–0361.

Community — Acculturation Group for Latina Women, facilitated by Mari Vicente, Thurs. from 4–6 p.m. Child Sexual Abuse Survivors Support Groups: Group 1 facilitated by Sara Elinoff, Mondays from 7–9 p.m. Group 2 facilitator, day, and time TBA. Coming Out Group For Lesbians, facilitated by Lynne Schachne, Mondays 4–5:30 p.m. Lifting Your Spirits, facilitated by Carla Brennan and Diana Dalendina, Weds. 4–5:30 p.m. Eco–Psychology for Women, facilitated by Carla Brennan, Fridays 10–11:30 a.m. Post Abortion Support Group, facilitated by Peggy Warwick, Wednesdays 5:30–6:30 p.m. Self–Esteem & Assertiveness for Women, facilitated by Carla Brennan, Wednesdays 6:30–8 p.m. Single Mothers Support Group, facilitated by Amy Rosebury, Tuesdays 1–2:30 p.m. Women & Divorce, facilitated by Ali Thompson, Tuedays 6:30–8 p.m. All groups offered by the Everywoman's Center begin in October, and offer a safe and confidential space. For other groups, call 545–0883.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition meetings are every Tuesday at 7 p.m. in room 306 of the Student Union. For more information, call the ARC office at 5–1925.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College Bereavement Support Program is a student organization devoted to helping those coping with grief. REFLECT is offering two free eight week grief support groups this semester. Groups are forming now. Please call 577–5316 for more information.

Jobs — The UMass Index yearbook needs staff in all departments. Editorial positions are available in Photo, Layout, Copy, and Marketing departments. An assistant copy editor and assistant sports editor are also needed. Meetings are held on Wednesdays at 7 p.m., 304 Student Union, or call 545–0848 if interested.

Support group — Symbesis Center Associate Rebecca Reid leads an ongoing support group for single people over 30 from 7:15 to 8:45 p.m. in downtown Amherst. Single, divorced, widowed and all sexual orientation are welcome. There is a low fee. For information, call 253–5494.

Religious — The Muslim Student Association at the University of Massachusetts invites all Muslims in the Amherst area to weekly Friday prayer from 1 to 2 p.m. in the Campus Center. The room number will be posted on the Notice Board. For more information, call Utama at 256–8482 or Laili at 253–0874.

Discussion Group — "A Course in Miracles" will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for 10 weeks on Mondays starting in September. For more information, call 253–3795.

Dance — The Northeast American School of Dance Studio in Northampton will hold a dance spree every Friday from 8:30 p.m. to midnight every Friday. People can dance to variety of music in a smoke and alcohol–free environment. All ages welcome. Sliding scale. For more information, call 584–8167.

Singing — The Pioneer Valley Capella has immediate openings for people of all voices interested in a small, focused ensemble singing classical music. Rehearsals are held on Thursday evenings in Northampton. For more information, call Tom at 536–3072 or Karen at 259–1646.

■ mascots

continued from page 1

exploited like some commercial gimmick. I don't want another generation of Native people to inherit this American tradition of racism in American sports culture," Pewewardy said.

He told of another incident when just outside of a stadium at a sporting event, he saw some men "playing Indian" with trinkets, feathers and tomahawks.

"It was just embarrassing, little kids see that and that what they think Native Americans would be like," he said. "As an elementary school teacher, I saw that it hurt the kids.

"They can make fun of everybody, we and be anybody else's mascot, and we're getting chopped again."

The professor also spoke about how the image of the Native American mascot was born out of ignorance and an unwillingness to really understand another culture. Many now believe that if a stereotype is one of a noble Native American, then it is acceptable.

"The Indian image today is not a result of Indians today, it's a result of a Hollywood that portrayed Indians as a frontier myth," he said. "Today, they are seen as the noble savage, so now we are no longer sub–human, we're super– human."

Again Pewewardy stressed the effect such stereotypes had on young children.

"It deals with self–esteem, if you don't have it, you're not going to do well or go to college or a university," Pewewardy said. "We have so many Indian children who are riddled with alcoholism or have Fetal Alcohol Syndrome. Indian adolescents have the highest suicide rate of any other group in America."

Pewewardy said that the way to change these images is to lobby to eliminate the stereotypical depiction of Native American mascots.

"So what we can do is teach about it, this is what's happening to Native American children, what impact does this have on children," he said. "The bottom line is dignity and respect for human beings, and what cities can do is pass resolutions through their park and recreation board."

He cited several examples where lobbying to get rid of these racist symbols has proven effective.

The Minneapolis Star Tribune has a new policy on the use of Indian nicknames in reporting, particularly on sporting events. It now bans the use of particular racist names such as the Redskins, and continues the use of tribal names.

The University of Wisconsin bans any racist logos and paraphernalia from their athletic schools. They also refuse to play against any team which has a Native American mascot.

The National Indian Educators Association has also passed a resolution banning the use of racist mascots in athletics.

The professor is also involved in issues of Native and social justice and sovereignty — Native Americans hold dual citizenship to both their tribe and to the United States, environmental issues, sacred sites, nuclear waste and multiculturalism.

"If things are to be truly multicultural, it has to be across the board, it has to get beyond what I call 'ethnic cheerleading'," Pewewardy said.

■ Azerbaijan

continued from page 1

Soviet rule for nearly 200 years, Azerbaijan gained its long awaited independence in 1991 and began to make the difficult change from authoritarian Communism to a free market system and democracy, Pashayev said.

"All the government benefits were lost in 1991, the people felt a great sense of insecurity." he said. The people slowly undertook the sometimes painful adjustment to a non– Soviet system.

Privatization, according to Pashayev, is an issue of great importance, as society readjusts to a private–sector driven economy.

"We must change the minds of the people at the middle government level," he said.

The on–going war with Armenia continues to slow what Pashayev said is Azerbaijans progress towards development. "In 1993 Armenia began offensives, hundreds of villages and towns were forced into homelessness," he said. "The attacks have been condemned by the United Nations, the United States, and most of Western Europe. Currently in their third year of a cease fire, negotiations are slow."

The war with Armenia has slowed the economy, created refugees, and resulted in a series of coup attempts.

But despite the many obstacles Azerbaijan continues to face, it has made progress in establishing a constitutional Republic, Pashayev said.

In addition, Pashayev noted that Azerbaijan remains the only ex–Soviet land, excluding the Baltic states, with no foreign troops on its soil.

The economy has improved with several new petroleum deals that open relations with the United States and much of the West. Last year, the economy got a lift from a $7.5 billion contract with Western oil companies like Amoco and Pennzoil.

Also, the Azerbaijan Parliament instituted a new monetary system, developing into Azerbaijan's own currency, the Manat.

Pashayev stressed the importance for Western countries such as the United States to recognize his country. Struggling with a new form of government, balancing relations with neighbors and striving for an independent identity are struggles that he advocates for more countries to acknowledge.

Pashayev's speech ended with a brief slide show, featuring pictures of the landscape, attractions in the city of Baku and refugees from the war with Armenia.

Pashayev urged students to visit his homeland and learn more about Azerbaijan.

"In America there is a lack of information on my country," he said.

The Collegian news desk is always looking for new writers interested in covering issues ranging from campus politics to world affairs. Contact Michael Elliott at 545–1762 or stop by the office, 113 Campus Center, in the basement, for more information.

DO NOT ENTER

Great pioneers don't hesitate. MDA research pursues every possible avenue.

MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association 1-800-572-1717

COME TELL US WHAT YOU THINK!

About What? Your experiences and views about student-related services, such as registration and financial interactions. We will be asking you about your experiences with administrative offices and processes, what is now working well and what is not, and what you think would work better.

Who? If you are a student here, we want to hear from you!

When and where? The focus group will be held in rooms 112 and 114 Dickinson from 3 to 4:30 on Wednesday, October 2. (Dickinson is the brick building between Goodell and the Mullins Center.)

Why? This is one of the early steps in a major project to replace our existing computer system that supports Bursar, Admissions, Financial Aid, Housing, and Registrar with new state-of-the-art software. The ultimate goal of this project is to provide improved and streamlined administrative services to students, parents, faculty and departments.

What else? All information will be held in absolute confidence, and no names of respondents will be retained. Your contribution is of great value to this project. If you have questions, call Heidi or Bo at 5-6133. Refreshments will be served!

PLEASE COME!

TOC Bar & Grill
11TH FLOOR • UNION IN CAMPUS CENTER

Munchie Specials Mon-Fri

On The Big Screen!

Dallas vs. Eagles

Catch All Your Sports At The Top!

FREE Popcorn

Mon-Fri: 4pm - 12:30am
Sat: 3pm-12:30am
11th Floor Campus Center

COMPLIMENTARY PASSES
EXCLUSIVELY FOR AMERICAN EXPRESS® CARDMEMBERS.

WHEN & WHERE.
October 2, 7:30pm
AMC Hampshire 6 Theatre

WHAT.
Cardmembers get two complimentary passes to a pre-release screening of 20th Century Fox's blockbuster that thing you do.

HOW.
Just bring the American Express® Card or Optima® Card and your student ID to the location listed below to pick up your passes.

NOW.
If you're not yet a Cardmember and would like to take part in our exclusive previews, it's easy to apply for the Card. Just call 1-800-942-AMEX, ext. 4114.

MORE TO COME.
that thing you do is one in a series of five major motion pictures to be previewed on your campus this year, compliments of American Express.

AFI PREVIEW NIGHT

PICK UP YOUR TICKETS HERE.
UNIVERSITY STORE
October 1-2

presented in association with AFI American Film Institute Entertainment

Cards

©1996 American Express Travel Related Services Company, Inc

THANC VO/ COLLEGIAN

Everybody ready to party?
The Student Union Ballroom was the site of the first "Soul TV" dance party last Friday night.

UMass Collective to unite artists

By Kristin Bolow
Collegian Correspondent

Students artists interested in collaborating with artists of varied disciplines are encouraged to take a look at the University of Massachusetts Arts Collective (UMAC), a new Registered Student Organization.

A general interest meeting will be held Tuesday in the Student Union Art Gallery from 5:30–6:30 p.m.

The gallery is located on the ground floor of the Student Union Building, next to People's Market.

Katherine Hooper, Ambere Rogers and Charlie Hodge, all senior dance majors, founded this organization. The purpose was to combine students from an array of artistic backgrounds into one organization.

UMAC founders said they hope to give the artists insight as to how different forms of art can enhance their expressive capabilities. For example, it is beneficial for a theater major to have access to those who compose music and create set art.

An ambiguous task, as recognized by UMAC officials, it required the support of a number of student artists on campus before lifting itself off the ground. Tim Fisk, a junior and arts administration major, has been enlisted as Production Manager, drawing on his experiences from working with the Student Union Art Gallery.

In the long run, UMAC organizers said they intend to hold the first of what may become a annual festival, featuring the results of cooperative work they hope is fostered through the group.

The festival is scheduled for Feb. 20–25.

Viewers will be able to enjoy the works in a "relaxed state, able to interact with the visuals rather than just sitting in rigid chairs, unable to actually feel the work," Rogers said.

The festival in February will mainly be organized by students who join UMAC in the coming weeks, according to Hooper. Those students will not only have a chance to share their art with the group, but to also be the deciding factor on the structure of the festival. Students can also benefit from being a part of the UMAC in several other ways. Hooper said that an obvious advantage is the chance to meet other artists, but added, "students can put all the techniques they've learned from the University to use on their own, instead of just taking the information learned and not really applying it."

Hodge agreed, and also said that UMAC can prepare artists for life after graduation.

"UMAC allows the students to go to their fullest potential without being sheltered under the wing of the faculty all the time. This is more like the real world," he said. "It looks good on a resume."

Students who are unable to attend the meeting may contact Charlie Hodge of UMAC at 253–7138.

Mission Improvable set for new season

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Correspondent

An amusing source of comedic talent, "Mission Improvable," a improvisation troupe at the University of Massachusetts, is gearing up for another year of quips, wise cracks, stunts and follies — doing whatever it takes to squeeze a laugh out of their audience.

Conceived in 1990 within the department of theater 100– level class, this group of 12 performs throughout the year in residence halls, as well as the Hampden Theater and the Southwest Residential Area Southside Room.

Walker Korby, a junior, has directed Mission Improvable since 1995. He explained that when new members audition, he looks for such talents as the "ability to work with others, giving and taking with scene work, and characterization."

Being able to act as numerous characters, sometimes within the same skit, is essential, he added.

Members meet on Sunday nights and their rehearsals consist of many practice exercises since improv demands quick thinking and perfect timing, according to Korby.

Korby said that, by and large, the group improvises within the framework of already established games and skits, often relying on audience participation.

The game, "lines from a hat," uses random pieces of dialogue written on small pieces of paper by spectators. At various points in the skit, the actors pull these lines from the hat and are forced to incorporate them into the scene already in progress. According to junior Ryan Kiessling, these kinds of activities help the actors "learn to think as a group."

Having performed in over 35 shows, Kiessling became interested in improvisation from his many auditions for dramatic roles, and is currently in his fourth semester with Mission Improvable.

Senior Dana Rossi has been with the group since 1992, and has seen the group go through many changes in the past four years. Because of a large turnover in membership from last year, new members have less improvisational experience, but Rossi stated that from rehearsals, the group as a whole looks very promising.

"We try to start each show with a catchy introduction and a little audience participation," Rossi said.

Rossi said many Residential Assistants request the group for performances and are hoping to book a room in the Campus Center for a show in the near future.

Mission Improvable's first show of the year will be for the department of theater 100 class during October.

SLOWER TRAFFIC KEEP RIGHT

Your support keeps lifesaving research in the fast lane

MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association 1-800-572-1717

Did you know

That every division of GE is either #1 or #2 in it's market?

Did you know

That GE is comprised of 12 major businesses?

- GE Capital
- GE Aircraft Engines
- GE Lighting
- GE Motors & Industrial Systems
- GE Power Systems
- GE Electrical Distribution & Control
- GE Corporate R&D
- GE Plastics
- GE Appliances
- GE Medical Systems
- NBC
- GE Transportation Systems
- GE Information Services

Did you know

That GE has ENTRY LEVEL programs for college graduates as well as co-op and intern opportunities for undergraduates?

Did you know

That GE is hosting its 1st annual CAREER DAY at U. Mass?

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 1st, 1996
10AM-3PM
U. MASS
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM

Regardless of your major, if your interest is piqued, we invite you to bring your interest and your questions. Resumes welcome.

GE

An Environment Without Boundaries

An equal opportunity employer

DISTINGUISHED TEACHING AWARD NOMINATIONS

DEADLINE: MONDAY, NOVEMBER 4,

If you know

A FACULTY MEMBER OR TEACHING ASSISTANT/ASSOCIATE WHO IS TRULY OUTSTANDING AND DESERVES RECOGNITION, SUBMIT A SIGNED NOMINATION IN WRITING WITH A BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF WHY YOUR NOMINEE DESERVES THE AWARD.

ALUMNI AND CURRENT UNDERGRADUATE/GRADUATE STUDENTS MAY NOMINATE.

For More Information Contact:
Lori Baronas at 545-5278 or
E-Mail Address: l.baronas@dpc.umassp.edu

TO: Distinguished Teaching Award Committee
Office of the Graduate Dean
Room 514 Goodell
Fax 413-545-3754

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1992

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Morse Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunaeda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Mark McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sitzheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Lina Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor
Michael Ellicott News Editor
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Sean Horgan Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

The rest of the story

"All political ideas cannot and should not be channeled into the programs of our two major parties. History has amply proved the virtue of political activities by minority, dissident groups which innumerable times, have been the vanguard of democratic thought and whose programs were ultimately accepted. The absence of such voice would be a symptom of grave illness in our society."

— Chief Justice Earl Warren, Sweezy v. New Hampshire, 1957.

Nearly thirty years later, the political system is once again at a crossroads. Following Ross Perot's surprisingly successful run for the Presidency in 1992, the popularity of the two main parties, the Republicans and the Democrats, has fallen to historical levels. To counter this "attack" from outside parties, the Democrats and Republicans are going to lengthy means to silence the third parties through often undemocratic means. Last week, the Commission on Presidential Debates ruled that only the two big political parties may participate in the upcoming presidential debates — silencing the third parties who need to be heard.

Tomorrow morning at 10 a.m. in the U.S. District Court for District of Columbia, Judge Thomas F. Hogan will preside over the controversial and eye-opening case that may well determine the outcome of the 1996 presidential election.

Mike Burke

Two lesser known political parties, Ross Perot's Reform Party and the Natural Law Party (NLP) have filed lawsuits against the Commission on Presidential Debates (CPD) following the CPD's ruling that only the Democrats and Republicans may participate in the nationally televised debates scheduled begin on October 6.

Both parties are suing the CPD because the federal organization is using subjective criteria (endorsements from elected officials) to determine the participants in the debates instead of a more objective criterion, such as potential numbers of electoral votes.

Both parties have a valid point. How can we expect new up-and-coming political organizations to gain support from elected officials who already pledge allegiance to one of the two main parties?

Looking back on U.S. history, there is a mass of evidence in favor of third parties. Once, radical ideas, such as the abolishment of slavery and universal civil suffrage, were originally platforms to third parties. In order for the citizens of this "democratic" country to cast a responsible vote on November 6, they must be well-informed of the candidates.

Sure we all know about Bill Clinton and Bob Dole. Pathetically mainstream America knows more about Clinton's extramarital affairs than they do about the nation's fastest growing third party, the Natural Law Party — whose platform, though at times a bit wacky, is stronger than either of the major parties. Although John Hagelin, the NLP's presidential candidate, will be on the ballot in 48 states, he has received little more than a blurb in the New York Times.

Hagelin sees these new rules as un-American and undemocratic especially at a time when the United Nations is condemning Bosnia for excluding certain parties from the political process.

"We pride ourselves as being the true watchdog of democratic ideal in the world, yet we have the lowest voter turn-out of any democracy and our ballot access laws are in clear violation of the Helsinki Accords," Hagelin said in a recent press release.

The Helsinki Accords called for governments to, "ensure... parties to freely present their views and not prevent voters from learning about them."

While still fighting for a place on the presidential podium, Hagelin, a Harvard trained nuclear physicist, is hardly the NLP's sole voice. The four-year-old party has placed over 1,000 candidates on Congressional ballots across the country. Even in Massachusetts, little known senatorial candidate Robert Stowe received a respectable four percent in a recent poll. While Stowe has no chance against big shots Weld and Kerry, four percent is an impressive figure for a candidate whose party is still in diapers.

The party's platform calls for the government to "prove solutions in accord with natural law, preventive government and conflict-free politics." Unlike "Mickey Mouse" candidates such as Caroline Killeen, (a.k.a. the Hemp Lady), the Natural Law has a serious plan for the future of America — and it may work.

Based in Fairfield, IA, home of the Maharishi International University — founded by followers of the Beatles' guru Maharishi Mahesh Yogi — the NLP sees meditation as a pillar of a new America.

The U.S. penal system and the inner cities can be revamped with courses in meditation — a method proven time and time again to prevent future crime and drug use — but has been ignored by politicians who foot the bill.

But there is much more to the NLP than a group of politicians turned gurus chanting "Om" in a big circle. By enforcing preventive care in both the military and medical worlds, the NLP expects to decrease the nation's deficit. Through stressing creativity in education, the NLP sees a more talented workforce emerging in the U.S.

It has been 200 years since George Washington and Thomas Jefferson vocalized the potential dangers of the third party system. They were afraid of political outfits becoming servers of special interest while being unresponsive to the true needs of the voters.

While there is little chance in the near future of the desolation of political parties, we have the chance to open up the political ball game to more than two teams. Over sixty percent of Americans favor the emergence of a third party, but the big guys say no. Do we have to suffer an election where are only viable choices are Clinton's glazed politics and Dole's aged rhetoric? Let's hope Nolge Hogan gives us the chance to hear the other side of the story.

Mike Burke is a Collegian Columnist.

GSS Condemns IPO Leadership

Last week the Graduate Student Senate (GSS) became the first campus governance body to respond to the scandalous memorandum emanating from Burn Hall and probably International Programs Office (IPO) bunker.

The resolution, which passed by an overwhelming majority, states that "It is the opinion of the GSS that the recommendations of the Task Force on International Students' Needs and Concerns should be implemented by the University administration as an initial step in improving services provided to international students. However, given the history of complaints by international students regarding the IPO, and inappropriate character of the IPO submissions to the Task Force report (Task Force Report Appendix C), the GSS has no confidence that the IPO is capable of implementing these recommendations under its current leadership. Therefore, the GSS call for the immediate appointment of a new leadership team to head the IPO and supervise the implementation of the Task Force recommendations."

Shyamala Ivatury and Hussein Ibish

But the IPO bunker and its maximum leader, Burn, remain hunkered down in a vicious siege mentality. As yet, there has been no retreat from the scandalous claims made by Burn in her notorious memo. These claims include that international students do not have "overwhelming problems:" that there is no "great demand" for the IPO to include professional staff of color; that the hiring of a person of color "could be controversial;" and that "it is almost impossible to satisfy or even determine the needs of those of color."

While some may wish to dismiss the contents of the memo as an aberration or as irrelevant, it could hardly be more serious. Not only is this document the official report by Burn and the IPO to the Task Force, it serves as an uncannily accurate barometer of the attitudes and practices of the IPO under the leadership of Barbara Burn.

These chauvinistic attitudes are summed up in that part of the memo where Burn insists on referring to international students as "foreign students." She objects to the use of the less pejorative term "international," preferring to stigmatize many members of the campus community as "foreign."

The rationale offered by Burn and the IPO is that "When the term 'international' is used, this refers to matters both external and internal. When the term 'foreign' is used, this refers to matters external." This suggests that people from other nations are not fully contributing members of the University community and that they, being "matters external," need to be kept at arms length.

By emphasizing an internal/external dichotomy that hardly applies to most aspects of University life, Burn attempts to categorize people according to their visa status.

Barbara, don't you realize that people from all over the world are involved with the University at every level, as professors, TAs, researchers, students, staff and administrators? What possible motivation can there be in emphasizing people's "externality?" Is this how she regards our "foreign" Chancellor?

Although the rest of the Task Force recommends the use of the term "international," a recalcitrant Burn declares that "Foreign student is, in our view, the more appropriate term and the one we will continue to use and, as this report is not considered to have political implications but to be an objective exercise, we urge consistency of terminology."

Of course, Burn's memo is anything but an "objective exercise," and is rife with political justifications for prejudice, not hiring people of color, using pejorative language, and bizarre generalizations about Chinese people.

At times, IPO staffers have gone beyond simple pejoratives like "foreign." One international student from a nation whose government was not on good terms with the Clinton regime was described as an "enemy" by an IPO staffer. Furthermore, at a meeting involving Burn, GSS officers and senior administrators, an IPO staffer complained about the prevalence of "Chinese and Indian labs" on campus, where Americans were alleged to have felt uncomfortable. She called it "reverse discrimination."

After 30 years of entrenchment and the creation of an unreformable bunker mentality, it is quite clear that the IPO is out of control. After all, what kind of an organization can produce documents such as these? And what kind of University would tolerate it? The only hope for the IPO bunker to come to terms with the outside world is a new leadership team. Again, send in the decontamination squad.

Shyamala Ivatury and Hussein Ibish are Collegian columnists.

Voice your opinion...write for Ed/Op

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Application of Pride

Andrew Trodden

Much has been said in the past about the number of minorities here at UMass. How there aren't enough here, that there should be more minorities enrolled at UMass. Maybe that's true but maybe it's not — either way I say we're going about it all wrong.

There should be no such thing as quotas to be filled. People should be admitted solely on the basis of their academic achievement, SAT scores, class rank, etc. No one should be admitted to UMass "because" of their skin color or nationality. In fact, there shouldn't even be a section on the application for this category.

When your application is being reviewed by admissions they should know you only by your name and numbers. After all, if you get in here that's all you are to them anyway.

In fact, I don't think I'd want to be here if I was accepted on the basis of my skin color or nationality. I would feel as though UMass brought me here just to provide them with the service of filling their quota. I would want it to be my numbers and ability that got me in.

Now of course UMass speaks of its rising requirements for admission. I wonder if that means that now you have to be a minority times two, like have a different skin color "and" be a foreigner.

Seriously though, it is true that many minorities receive poor education at the high school level, as do many non- minorities, so it only seems rational that it will be that much harder to find minorities who have the required scores to get in. When the admissions committee needs to fill their quota and some of those minorities don't have the scores they need, what else can they do but admit them?

That is a form of racism and prejudice because when you begin to favor someone on the basis of their skin color or nationality, you can begin to call yourself prejudiced.

Because I know that if it comes down to me and a minority, and my scores are better but they got accepted, I would be pissed off, and rightfully so. Put the shoe on the other foot. What if it was my scores that were lower yet I was the one accepted? Yeshiree Bob — you better believe Al Sharpton and the like would be gathering outside Whitmore hootin' and hollerin' about how this school is racist against minorities.

Look at it this way. If there was no part of the application that indicated race or nationality, the more qualified person would be accepted and incidents like Al Sharpton's hootin' and hollerin' could be totally avoided. Because hey, if we didn't know what color or nationality someone was how the hell can we be prejudiced against them?

Plain and simple mistakes will be made and some people will lose out. That sucks, it really does, but it happens — and that's life, so learn to live with it.

So to all the minorities out there — stop and examine yourselves and decide whether it was your numbers that got you in here or something else. Because if it wasn't the numbers than we all know what it was.

I'm sure you're all proud of your heritage, but I would think that using it as a "crutch" to get you things would not be acting in a very proud manner. Wouldn't you be quite a bit more proud of yourself and your heritage in general to show that you can rise above and get in on your qualifications alone?

So there should be no need to put your race or nationality on any application anywhere because if you are truly proud, then you will let yourself be judged on who you are, not what you are. But if you feel that it is necessary to put your heritage on an application, then you have no true pride — only self pity.

Andrew Trodden is a Collegian columnist.

Putting the A in T.A.

Ann Rubinstein

I hate big lecture classes. I find them to be an atmosphere not conducive to learning, and, in fact, more apt for sleeping. The professor drones on in a monotonously soothing way. There are tons of people giving off tired and bored vibes. All that body heat makes you feel so comfy, your seat even comes with a place to lay your head.

Small classes are much more my style. Twenty students and a teacher is a nice way to learn. Information is not just thrown out, and the students get to do more than just write it down — everything gets discussed. The teacher makes a statement and the whole class talks about it, agreeing or disagreeing. It makes class interesting and harder to fall asleep in, and makes information easier to remember.

When something is written on an overhead projector and you write it down and then move on to the next bunch of facts to write down, it is pretty easy to forget. If a point is discussed in depth for five minutes, it is hard to forget.

In my own experience, I have found the teachers of my lectures to be removed from the class. There's always the same spiel on the first day of class, "I welcome questions, please don't be reluctant to ask about anything you're having trouble with." Then, when that first question rolls along, many teachers are harsh to the student: "That's what we are going to learn next. We have to do this first, and then we will get to that material," or "You don't understand what happened to the x, we learned that on the first day," or "That was just explained, but if you don't understand it I'll go over it again." Then it is explained in the exact way that led to the confusion in the first place. The worst is when raised hands are just ignored.

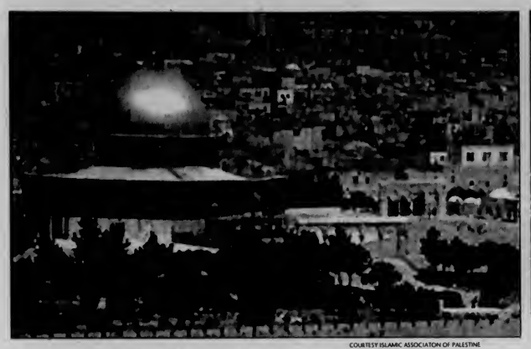
To me, the professor represents someone who is very smart and knows a lot about a subject about which I know nothing. The professor's job is to teach me the subject. Instead of simply imparting this knowledge, they do it in terms of the subject you're trying to learn. For example, I am taking calculus this semester. Instead of telling us what a limit is, the teacher says that he is going to explain limits using derivatives. Excuse me, what's a derivative?

Thankfully, I am only in one big lecture class this semester, but I am still lost. I am pretty surprised by this. My best grades in high school were in math, so I decided that if I waited a few more weeks, the material would start to be easier for me to understand. I was surprised two weeks later when I still had no idea what was happening. What to do? I felt as though I needed more help than the class was giving me. Extra help was, in fact, what I was looking for. Wait ... extra help. I can't get that — it's for really stupid people. Besides, I don't have a specific question, I just need help in calculus as a whole. I can't go into professor's office and ask him for help with the entire subject. He'll explain it exactly as he does in class, and I still won't understand.

I found a way to get help. In math, they have all of those teaching assistants who are there to help. They aren't the professor, which means they will explain it in a different way. They don't make you feel stupid either. Actually, I feel pretty smart for seeking help when I really needed it. Hopefully, It will help me get a better grade, and it definitely makes me feel less lost in class.

So now my stigma about extra help is gone. I think that if I were in a class without TAs and only the professor was there to help me, I could even work my way up to asking him for help. The professor may be hard to understand in class and rather terse with questions, but maybe in the office discussing the ideas would be better. Teachers are people too, and they have office hours for a reason. I wish I had discovered this last year, when the majority of my classes were lectures, and I sure could have used help in astronomy and biology. It's good that I know that now, and I feel like I have to impart the message to anyone else who is reluctant to get help.

Try extra help — it's part of a complete breakfast and you don't have to be an imbecile to get it.



Ann Rubinstein is a UMass student.

Listen up columnists.

Tonight, tonight won't be just any night... because we'll be taking mug shots for your Ed/op columns. If you want your readers to be able to put a face with your name, then come on down to the Campus Center basement and wear your Monday best. Time: 7:00. Place: Collegian Offices: Be there or be a name without a face.

Multicultural Affairs

80 Palestinians die in defense of Al-Aqsa mosque

COURTESY ISLAMIC ASSOCIATION OF PALESTINE

The Dome of the Rock, rising majestically above the Jerusalem skyline.

COURTESY ISLAMIC ASSOCIATION OF PALESTINE

The controversial Israeli excavation exposing the foundations of the Al-Aqsa mosque.

Three Day Summary of recent events in Palestine
Reprinted courtesy of Al-Akhbar News Service

Day One
Wed. Sep 25, 1996, 11:45 a.m.

RAMALLAH — At least seven Palestinians were killed Wednesday, when Zionist soldiers fired live ammunition to break up protests against excavations near Jerusalem's Al-Aqsa mosque, Islam's third holiest site, hospital officials said.

Some 200 Zionist troops fired on a crowd of more than 1,000 protesters at a Zionist army checkpoint just outside Ramallah, witnesses said. Ramallah hospital officials said they had treated more than 350 people for injuries caused by live ammunition, rubber bullets, tear gas and beatings, and that more casualties were coming in.

Some of those hurt were in serious condition and local hospitals appealed to the public for blood donations. After Zionist soldiers fired live ammunition at the demonstrators and moved into "Area A" zone of Ramallah, where the Palestinian Authority (PA) is supposed to have sovereignty, one Palestinian policeman grabbed a rifle and started shooting back at the Zionists, according to witnesses at the scene. Others from his guard joined in.

"When we saw there was a massacre and the Israeli soldiers were entering our area, we had to respond," one policeman said.

Palestinian witnesses said commanding PA officers tried to stop junior policemen from shooting at the Zionist soldiers, but the policemen defied their orders.

JERUSALEM — Zionist Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said Tuesday he was proud to have opened a tunnel along the western wall of the Al-Aqsa mosque compound in east Jerusalem, turning a deaf ear to Palestinian protests.

Netanyahu told Israeli television: "I am proud to carry out the previous Labor government's decision to open the tunnel... I am very moved, this tunnel touches the rock of our existence."

The Islamic Higher Committee said Tuesday the tunnel "threatens the security of Al-Aqsa mosque and its foundations and has caused cracks in the walls of a neighboring building."

The committee called the opening "a severe aggression against our people's rights in Jerusalem." The move was also denounced by the Waqf (Islamic Charitable Trust) responsible for the mosque compound.

"This is an attempt to deny the Muslim character of the site," said a Waqf statement.

HEBRON — The Zionists' army on Tuesday brutally dispersed a demonstration by some 400 Palestinians demanding the reopening of a vegetable market in Hebron closed by Zionists two and a half years ago.

"It is impossible to live here in Hebron. We're on the edge of the explosion of a new Intifada," said one protestor, Mahmud Jabrin, referring to the 1987-1993 Palestinian uprising.

"Police and settlers are working hand in hand. Ever since police closed the shops they have allowed settlers to go inside and use them," said Jabrin, a member of the Human Rights Research Foundation in Hebron.

JERUSALEM — Zionist settlers evicted a Palestinian family from their East Jerusalem home Tuesday after claiming to have bought the building as part of a campaign to boost the Zionist presence in the city, residents said. A group of about 20 security guards and representatives from a Zionist development company, Elad, entered the house in East Jerusalem's Silwan neighborhood early Tuesday and ordered the Joudha family to evacuate the premises. Ayman Khalil Joudha said he had rented the home since 1967 and lived there with his wife, parents and two daughters.

Ateret Cohanim and other Zionist groups aiming to "Judaize" East Jerusalem claim to have bought nearly 50 Palestinian buildings in the sector.

"The real estate season in East Jerusalem has begun," Zionist police chief Arye Amit said. "There are many other buildings that have been purchased or are in the process of being purchased."

Wed. Sept. 26, 1996 2:34 p.m.

The death toll of Palestinians shot dead by Zionist troops rose to four. More than 315 Palestinians were also seriously wounded. Among the four dead are a policeman and a 14-year-old boy. The clash came amid renewed demonstrations over the opening of a tunnel in Jerusalem near one of Islam's holiest sites, Al-Aqsa mosque.

The clash occurred after a large group of students marched along a highway toward an Israeli checkpoint to protest the completion Tuesday of an archaeological tunnel along Jerusalem's Al Aqsa Mosque compound.

Israeli Prime Minister Netanyahu gave the orders to Zionist workmen to break through the last section of the tunnel and urged the Palestinian Authority to show restraint. Most Palestinians in the West Bank had been denied access to pray in Al-Aqsa mosque. Gazans are forbidden to enter Jerusalem.

On Sunday, Arafat telephoned Netanyahu to wish him a prosperous new year ahead of the Yom Kippur. The prime minister's office said Arafat wished Netanyahu a "happy New Year."

Day Two
Thurs. Sept. 26, 1996, 2:16 p.m.

The situation has exploded in Occupied Palestine. At least 57 are dead today, including 11 Israelis. Latest word is that Zionist government is moving tanks into Palestinian controlled areas. ABC News showed last night Palestinian civilians being shot dead by Zionist troops. Troops aimed and shot dead an unarmed student. The on-going fire exchange between Palestinian police and Zionist troops is being described as war.

Thurs. Sep 26, 1996 5:19 p.m.

RAMALLAH — In the bloodiest clashes since the 1993 Zionist-PLO accords, Zionist soldiers battled Palestinian civilians and policemen in the Occupied Palestine Thursday, leaving at least 60 Palestinians dead and more than 500 wounded. Zionist troops, helicopters and tanks fired live ammunition into the crowds of demonstrators.

Fourteen journalists were among the wounded on the frontlines of clashes. Palestinian police opened fire on the Zionists in rage after watching the soldiers repeatedly shoot into crowds of unarmed demonstrators.

In Nablus some of the bloodiest confrontations of the day took place around the traditional tomb of the Joseph. A senior Palestinian security source said six Zionist soldiers were killed and 12 wounded when Palestinian demonstrators overran the site and replaced the Zionist flag with the Palestinian one.

Palestinian policemen kept dozens of angry demonstrators away from the shrine and protected 42 Zionist soldiers as negotiators tried to secure their freedom, witnesses said.

Palestinian Nora Abu-Sa'ed, 12, was one of the first to die in the bloody battles on Thursday. As enraged Palestinians at the Gaza hospital looked down on the body of the girl, still dressed in her blue school uniform and dry blood covering her face, a woman screamed out "Allahu Akbar."

BEIRUT — The Islamic resistance movement, Hamas, called Wednesday for a new Palestinian uprising to defend the dignity of the Palestinian people after Zionists opened a tunnel near the Al-Aqsa mosque in Jerusalem.

In a statement released in Beirut and signed by Hamas spokesman Ibrahim Ghoshe in Amman, Hamas urged the Palestinian authorities "to put an end to negotiations with the Jewish state, declare dead the Oslo accords, and call for an uprising because it is the only possible way to defend the rights of the Palestinians."

Hamas said the opening of the tunnel in the Old City was an "attempt to impose Zionist hegemony over Jerusalem."

JERUSALEM — Eight Palestinian groups issued a joint statement Wednesday calling for a day of mourning and two-hour strikes across the West Bank and Gaza.

"[We call on] the Palestinian masses to go out and march in the city centers in all regions. The central march will take place in Ramallah at Manara Square at 10:30 to take part in the funerals of the confronting martyrs who defend Arab Jerusalem," the leaflet said.

Groups listed on the joint statement were the Islamic resistance movement, Hamas; the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine; the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine and Fatah.

JERUSALEM — The Israeli minister Ariel Sharon announced Wednesday he had approved building of 600 new homes on the occupied Golan Heights.

"The Golan Heights will contain 25,000 people within a few years. Settlements in Judea and Samaria (the West Bank) will be widened and expanded, including in the northern Gaza Strip," Sharon told the Yedioth Ahronoth daily newspaper.

Day Three
Fri. Sept. 27, 1996

JERUSALEM — Zionist forces shot dead at least 10 Palestinian protesters at Jerusalem's Al-Aqsa mosque Friday in a third day of bloodshed to suppress the Palestinian uprising.

Thousands of Zionist troops had been deployed to East Jerusalem, where they set up roadblocks and prevented Palestinians from entering the mosque for Friday prayer.

They fired live ammunition and tear gas at demonstrators and worshipers, wounding at least 50 Palestinians. Gun battles and stone-throwing erupted throughout the West Bank and the Gaza Strip despite the efforts of PA police to restrain demonstrators, and the presence of Zionists' tanks and extra troops, leaving five more Palestinians dead and more than 80 injured.

Security sources in Cairo said an Egyptian police lieutenant patrolling the North Sinai area on the Egyptian side of the Rafah border was killed when he was hit by fire from the Zionists' helicopter sent to massacre the Palestinians in the area.

"Damn you Netanyahu, what kind of peace is this?" shouted a 30-year-old Palestinian, his shirt stained with the blood of casualties he was helping to evacuate from Islam's third holiest site.

Women screamed in horror as hundreds of Zionist paramilitary border police, wearing bullet-proof vests and helmets, stormed the holy mosque and attacked demonstrators. Bullets flew in all directions as demonstrators fled for cover.

"God take revenge on you, you beasts," an elderly woman shouted as Zionist police used batons on a group of Muslim women sheltering below an arched gate of the Dome of the Rock.

One woman fell to the ground while the others rushed inside the building.

ISTANBUL — At Friday prayers throughout the world Muslims expressed their rage at the massacre of dozens of Palestinians by the Zionist occupiers this week. Turkish police detained six Muslims on Friday after more than 1,000 people protested in Istanbul against the killing of Palestinians, witnesses said.

Protesters burnt a Zionists' flag and chanted anti-Zionist and anti-American slogans after pouring out of a historical mosque into a central Istanbul square following Friday prayer.

"The hands of the Jews who touched the holy place will be broken," one of the protesters shouted.

Egypt's Muslim Brotherhood said in a statement "Only jihad can uproot the soldiers of the Zionist enemy and retrieve all Arab rights and make us live in peace and dignity."

"What is happening on occupied Palestinian land is not a surprise... because the Zionist enemy has long been plotting a tight grip on Palestine and the Al-Aqsa mosque," the group said.

In Tehran, Iranian President Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani at Friday prayer blamed the Zionists for provoking violent clashes with Palestinians by opening the tunnel near the Al-Aqsa mosque in Jerusalem.

"It is clear that when you dig a tunnel under a Jerusalem holy site... you are provoking the Muslims. This is the best proof that you lie when you say you seek peace," Rafsanjani said.

JERUSALEM — An envoy of Zionist Prime Minister Netanyahu met Arafat in an attempt to calm the atmosphere in the Occupied Palestine, a spokesman for Netanyahu said on Thursday.

Spokesman Shai Bazak said Netanyahu's representative Yitzhak Molho met Arafat in the Gaza Strip on Wednesday night.

Moshe Katzav, another Netanyahu adviser, said: "In the last two hours, the army chief, the Shin Bet chief, the adviser to the prime minister Yitzhak Molho, the defense minister, the prime minister — all of them spoke with Yasser Arafat and he promised them all he would act. If he cannot, then he cannot be a leader."

Statement by Palestinian Human Rights Group, Al-Haq:

Al-Haq expresses its deep concern at the recent initiative by the Israeli authorities in the Old City of Jerusalem to open up an entrance on the Via Dolorosa to the Western Wall Tunnel. Al-Haq regards this latest development as an illegal and a grave incitement to the residents of the Occupied Palestinian Territories.

On the night of Monday, September 23, Israeli military forces opened up an entrance to the Western Wall Tunnel beneath the steps of the Al-Umariyya School, which is located on the Via Dolorosa, one of the main streets of the Old City of Jerusalem. The Israeli Ministry of Religion has been working on excavating this tunnel, which runs from the Wailing Wall north, along the side of the western wall of the Haram Al-Sharif, since 1968. Much of the work of excavation has taken place in secret.

The tunnel, 480 meters in length, consists of a long passageway leading into an ancient underground canal which, in turn, leads into a double cistern known as the Struthion Pool, located beneath an Islamic Waqf property, the Via Dolorosa, and the Convent of the Sisters of Zion.

This is not the first attempt to open up an entrance to the tunnel in the area of the Via Dolorosa. Since the 1980s, the Israeli authorities have made various proposals to make the Western Wall Tunnel into a one-way tour circuit starting from the Wailing Wall and ending with an exit near the Via Dolorosa to attract tourists and religious worshippers.

In the 1980's, the Israeli Ministry of Religion initiated excavations for this purpose in a nearby street which leads to Bab Al-Ghawanima, one of the northern points of entry to the Haram Al-Sharif. In spring of 1988, there were serious clashes between Palestinians and the Israeli authorities as a result of these excavations, which were regarded by many Palestinians as an encroachment on the Haram Al-Sharif, the third holiest site in Islam and a powerful national symbol for all Palestinians. The excavations were eventually closed up.

Most of the buildings lying above the Western Wall Tunnel belong to the Islamic Waqf. These properties include a number of Mamluk buildings of great historical, architectural and religious importance, including the Madrasa Al-Manjakiyya, the Madrasa Al-Uthmaniyya, the Ribat Kurd and the Madrasa Al-Jawhariyya.

The Israeli authorities' construction of an entrance to the tunnel underneath the Umariyya school is unlawful, since they did not obtain the consent of the Islamic Waqf to this alteration, even though the Waqf is the owner of this property. Furthermore, the Israeli authorities' actions in a very sensitive area close to the Haram Al-Sharif are extremely provocative to Palestinians.

This move comes at a time of increased tension in East Jerusalem caused by house demolitions, attempts by settlers to move into houses in Palestinian neighborhoods, and Israeli attacks on Palestinian institutions. Israeli soldiers clashed with Palestinians in Jerusalem yesterday. Today, there were similar confrontations in Jerusalem and Ramallah. In the latter case, the Israeli authorities opened fire on demonstrators and injured at least 250 people.

Al-Haq is concerned that additional violence may occur in the coming days. Al-Haq regards this action as yet another in a long succession of attempts by the Israeli authorities to change the historical and cultural character of Jerusalem unilaterally. The opening of a tunnel which links the Western Wall to the heart of the Muslim Quarter is radical change in the geography of the Old City of Jerusalem.

Such actions are in breach of the international law of belligerent occupation, which requires an occupying power to refrain from making fundamental changes in occupied territory. Similar actions by the Israeli authorities in East Jerusalem have regularly attracted condemnation from the General Conference of UNESCO and the General Assembly of the United Nations. Al-Haq regards this serious alteration in the character of the Old City of Jerusalem as illegal and highly provocative.

This is the latest manifestation of Israel's policy to alter the status quo in Jerusalem before the final status negotiations have even started.

Al-Haq demands that the Israeli authorities close up this entrance immediately and refrain in the future from altering the character of the Old City and other areas of occupied East Jerusalem until the final status of Jerusalem is resolved. It calls on the international community to take action to pressure Israel to put a stop to its illegal action in Jerusalem and to protect the national rights of the Palestinian people in Jerusalem, if a just and lasting peace in the region is to be secured.

Palestinian National Authority
Ministry of Health
26 September 1996
A CALL AND APPEAL FROM THE PALESTINIAN MINISTRY OF HEALTH

It is much to our regret, sadness, and disappointment to have to appeal once again to the International Community, to Human Rights Activists, to all human health aid institutions all over the world, to direct their prompt attention to this area of the world in response to the late massacre and bloodshed incidents caused by the Israeli armed assault on civilians peacefully demonstrating over Al Aqsa issue, that have been going on since yesterday in Rammallah and expanding to other cities of West Bank and Gaza resulting in a continuous increasing, rapidly growing number of hundreds of casualties and serious emergencies.

The Palestinian Ministry of Health, stunned at the number of casualties and the heavy size of pressure on its health units, hospitals and health staff, while the closure and collective punishment are still imposed, would ask all those concerned to rise to the occasion, to wash this stigma from the face of humanity, and carry out their share of humanitarian commitment and honorable role in rescuing the lives of hundreds of emergencies and casualties moaning and suffering under our shortages of drugs, blood and medical equipment, added to the impediments and obstacles of the closure and collective punishment that are still imposed and rendering our health staff and doctors unable to reach out to their work locations for rescue.

Today, as we are standing almost helpless in coping with this disastrous large number of deaths and casualities, we invite every human soul and every human conscience for a five minutes of soul search and conscience confrontation in pursuit of truth and reality, the reality of bitter suffering, the reality of human degradation, the reality of denying a big number of casualities and emergencies their legal right in freedom of expression, and their legal entitlement to proper, adequate, and instant rescue and health care.

Welcome to the very first issue of the Multicultural Affairs Page. This issue is dedicated to the horrifying events which have occurred over the past few days in Palestine.

One of the faults of American society is the failure to deal with issues and events which occur outside of the United States. Struggles for justice in the Third World are intimately connected to the struggles of people of color in the United States. We must never forget that.

Our great leaders such as Malcolm X, Martin Luther King, and W.E.B. Du Bois all stated the importance of having an international perspective when working towards social change.

Dr. King linked the opposition to United States colonial oppression in Vietnam with the struggle for civil rights in this country, declaring that injustice anywhere is injustice for all. How many times did Malcolm X stress the importance of the struggles for decolonization on the continent of Africa, and in the rest of the Third World, for people of African descent in America? Didn't W.E.B. Du Bois always emphasize the organic and indisputable link between struggles for liberation in colonized and developing nations with the fight for social justice in the western nations, especially the United States?

The volatile atmosphere of the Middle East is in large part due to Western colonialism, whether by Israel in Palestine or through imperial assaults such as the Gulf War. Many of our misconceptions about the Middle East come out of the lack of adequate, non-Eurocentric reporting, which is rarely permitted in our media. A special thanks goes to the Al- Akhbar wire news service for their tireless efforts in putting out high quality, accurate journalism. Thanks also to the Islamic Association for Palestine for the invaluable images and information they have made available.

The Multicultural Affairs desk urges anyone interested in writing and working to further social justice here at UMass and around the world to come to the Collegian and write for the Diversity Desks. The three Diversity pages, Multicultural Affairs, Developing Nations and Black Affairs are looking for writers. We need more fighters willing to work and strive for the equality that all of us, as human beings deserve.

— Lisa Chiu

RSO

There's One Right For You!

DAILY COLLEGIAN

The Collegian has opportunities open in the following departments:

Advertising Reps.	Delivery	G.L.B. Issues	Photo
Arts & Living	Developing	Jewish Affairs	Production
Black Affairs	Nations	Multicultural Affairs	Sports
Business	Editorial/Opinion	News	Women's Issues

KOREAN STUDENT ASSOCIATION

For further info contact Paragon at 665-0380

Golden Key
National Honor Society

General Membership Meeting
Monday, September 30
7:00pm
Herter Rm. 117

ASIAN AMERICAN STUDENTS ASSOCIATION

UPCOMING EVENTS:
Oct. 10: 2nd General Meeting Thu. 7:30pm
Campus Center 917
Oct. 19: Casino Night Sat. 6pm-1am
Cash Prizes - Campus Center Aud.
Nov. 23: Dance Party @ the Bluewall
Asian Night Coming up Next Spring

For More Info:
ASA 411 Student Union, Box 28
UMASS Amherst (413) 545-0189
e-mail us at:
aasa@oit.umass.edu

INTERESTED IN VOLUNTEERING AT A SOUP KITCHEN, SHELTER, BEING A BIG BROTHER AND MANY OTHER THINGS?? JOIN OUR SERVICE ORGANIZATION!!

INTERNATIONAL

MEETING TIME: 7:00, TUESDAY
WHERE: 409 STUDENT UNION
CONTACT NUMBER: 546-5573

ST AREA GOVE
presents:

At the Fine Arts Center
8pm on Wednesday
October 2nd
The Doo Wop Shop
Opening for the AMAZING

$ 5 tickets on sale NOW at FAC box Office

THAT BAND
yep!
WILL PLAY AT THE Student Union Ballroom
WITH SPECIAL GUESTS:
Col. Mustard Trio & JIGGLE THE HANDLE
UMASS
FRIDAY OCTOBER 11TH
8 PM
ALL AGES!

Don't miss the Annual yep! HALLOWEEN Bash at the Iron Horse in Northampton on Wednesday, October 30th!!!
~ Call 1-800-THE-TICK ~

$5 at TIX Unlimited

Pages

Campus Activities, University of Massachusetts, 416 Student Union, Box 37310, Amherst, MA 01007-7310, (413) 545-3600

Registered Student Organizations & Agencies

ACADEMIC Accounting Association
Alive With Dance
American Institute of Industrial Engineers
Anthropology Undergraduate Caucus
APICS*
Arnold Air Society (ROTC)
Biological Sciences Student Association
Business Club
Chamber Choir
Club Communications
Club Managers Student Chapter
Communication Disorders
Debate Union
Design Student Club
Independent Restauranteurs*
Marching Band*
Marketing Club*
National Society for Black Engineers
Poetry Society*
Pre-Medica
Pre-Vet & Animal Science Club
Russian Club*
Society of Hispanic Professional Engineers
Society of Landscape Architects
Society of Women Engineers
Student Hospitality Marketing Association International* Student Nurses Association
Travel & Tourism*
Wildlife Society
Women in Sports Management*

SERVICE
Alpha Phi Omega
Boltwood Project
Circle K Club
Collegiate 4-H*
Fire and First Aid
Hands
Kappa Kappa Psi/Tau Beta Sigma
LBG Counselling Collective*
Nia Student Organization
Peer Mentor Network
Share STARS
VIVA

STUDENT BUSINESSES
Bicycle Co-op
Campus Design & Copy
Earthfoods
Federal Credit Union
Greenough Snack Bar
People's Market
SOM Food Services
Sweets And More
Sylvan Snack Bar
Tickets Unlimited
Valley Women's Voice

HONOR SOCIETIES
ALANA Honor Society
Alpha Lambda Delta
Alpha Zeta
Beta Alpha Psi
Eta Sigma Delta*
Golden Key Honor Society
Mortar Board
Phi Alpha Theta
Pi Sigma Alpha*

PERFORMING ARTS
Dance Team
Juggling Club
New World Theater
Student Valley Productions
UMass Theatre Guild

SPORTS
Bicycle Racing Club
Cheerleaders*
Club Volleyball
Crew Club
Croquet Club
Equestrian Team
Fencing Club
Golf Club
Rugby Club
Tennis Team*
Women's Ice Hockey
Wrestling Club*
Zoo Disc Frisbee Team

ETHNIC/CULTURAL African Student Association
AFRIK-AM
AHORA
Armenian Student Club
Asian American Student Association
Black Student Union
Boricuas Unidos
Cambodian Student Association
Cape Verdean Student Alliance
Casa Dominicana
Chinese Student Club
Haitian American Students Association
Hellenic Association*
Hillel
Hui Hawaii Ohana*
Irish American Student Assoc.*
Italian American Students Union*
Japan America Club
Korean Student Association
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Alliance
Native American Student Association
SETA
Shades
South Asian Club
Vietnamese Student Association

RECREATION
Ballroom Dance Club
Chess Club
College Bowl Team
Grenadier Society
Hang Gliding Club
Japanese Animation & Manga Society
Kodokan Martial Arts
NE Collegiate Karate Club
Outing Club
Pioneer Valley Combat Club
Racquetball Club
Shotokan Club
Ski Club
Snowboarding Club*
Sport Parachute Club
Tae Kwon Do
WTF Tae Kwon Do

GREEKS
Alpha Chi Rho
Alpha Delta Phi
Alpha Epsilon Pi
Alpha Epsilon Phi
Alpha Kappa Alpha Chi Omega
Delta Chi
Delta Sigma Theta
Delta Upsilon
Delta Zeta
Iota Gamma Upsilon
Iota Phi Theta
Kappa Alpha Psi*
Kappa Kappa Gamma
Lambda Chi Alpha
Omega Psi Phi*
Order of Omega*
Phi Beta Sigma
Phi Kappa Sigma
Pi Kappa Alpha
Sigma Alpha Mu*
Sigma Delta Tau
Sigma Kappa
Sigma Phi Epsilon
Sigma Sigma Sigma
Zeta Psi*
Zeta Psi Theta

RELIGIOUS
ALANA Christian Alliance
Alliance Christian Fellowship
Ananda Marga
The Ark*
Baha'i Club
Campus Crusade for Christ
Chabad Students
Chi Alpha Christian Fellowship
Hillel
Hindu Students Organization
Intervarsity Christian Fellowship
Meditation League
Muslim Students Association
Newman Club
Pagan Students Organization
Upside Down

POLITICAL
Allied Students Against Prejudice*
Amnesty International*
Animal Rights Coalition
Cannabis Reform Coalition
Clean Rivers Coalition*
European Club
Friends of Bosnia
MASSPIRG
Out of State Student Association*
Progressive Organization for Women's Rights
Radical Student Union
Rainforest Action Group
Republican Club
Soviet Community Empowerment Program*
Students Advocating Financial Assistance
Students Against Driving Drunk
Students for Life
Truth Task Force*
Twenty/Twenty Vision*
University Democrats*
Young Americans For Freedom

SOCIAL
Bridge Club*
Honors Students Association*
International Student Assoc.
National Exchange Club
PHNORD*
Science Fiction Club
SCUM
Single Parents Association

CAMPUS WIDE PROGRAMS
Distinguished Visitors Program
University Productions & Concerts

GOVERNMENTAL
Campus Center/Student Union Commission
Central Area Government
Commuter Area Government
Interfraternity Council
National Pan-Hellenic Council
Northeast Area Government
Orchard Hill Area Government
Panhellenic Council*
Southwest Area Government
Stockbridge Senate
Student Government Association
Sylvan Area Government

MEDIA
Black Mass Communication Project
Collegian
Concepto Latino
In Focus
Index (Yearbook)
Noratoo News
Silent Majority
Spectrum
Union Video Center
WMUA Radio Station

AGENCIES
Center for Student Businesses
Commuter Services & Housing Resource Center
Office of Third World Affairs
Student Legal Services Office
Student Center for Education, Research & Advocacy
Student Union Art Gallery
Student Union Craft Center

"I need a good cup of coffee!"
Peoples' Market
"I 'm dying for a bagel!"

Peoples' Market

"Where can I get some cheap, healthy food around here?"

People's Market

A Student-run Food Store.
We do our best.
Located in the Umass Student Union, Amherst, MA
Our Hours: M & F - 8:45 am - 4 pm T,W, Th - 8:45 am - 5 pm

CAMPUS ACTIVITIES AT THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PRESENTS
THE RETURN OF
A WEEKLY PROGRAM SERIES: SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY
featuring
Stand-up Comedian
TERRY SMITH

CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM
October 4, 1996
8:00 pm Free
"DRAGONHEART"
Immediately Following

This series is made possible by a grant from Auxiliary Services and the Vice Cancellor for Student Affairs.
For more information, check our website:
http://www-unix.oit.umass.edu/~jtolson/calendar.html

STUDENT UNION ART GALLERY
visual and performing arts space

☞Current exhibit- "My life, My soul, My sorrow"- current works by Yeon choi. Sept.12-Oct.4

☞Oct.10-Nov.1- Benigna Chilla- current works. Opening reception Thurs. Oct.10, 5-7pm at the gallery.

☞Video Series every Wednesday beginning at 12.30pm (Call gallery for details)

☞Now accepting proposals for thematic exhibitions to be held during the 1997-98 academic year.

The Student Union Art Gallery is located in the Student Union Building on the UMass Campus. Gallery hours are Mon-Thurs 11am-1pm, and Fridays 11am-4pm. For more information, please call us at 413-545-0792.

THE EPISCOPLE CHUCH AT THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS
758 N. PLEASANT ST. AMHERST
MASSACHUSETTS, O1002

THE EPISCOPAL CHAPLAINCY AT UMASS IS AN ENCUMENICAL CHRISTIAN COMMUNITY, AND "HOME AWAY FROM HOME" TO GRADUATE AND UNDER GRADUATE STUDENTS.

JOIN US SUNDAY NIGHTS AT 6:00 PM FOR DINNER, CONVERSATION, GOSPEL MUSIC, AND INFORMAL WORSHIP.

ALSO: semesterly trips to New York City, spring break trips to Europe, and outreach opportunities with the homeless and disabled friends.

The Chaplaincy is located at the edge of campus, 758 North Pleasant Street, 2 doors north of Lederle on the same side of the street.

Come this Sunday night at 6, following our New York City trip, or call Chris Carlisle at 549-2929.

Arts & Living

Sporny & Shank show their stuff

By Scott Bernard
Collegian Correspondent

DAVID SPORNY & NADINE SHANK
Bezanson Recital Hall
Sept. 26

Faculty member David Sporny gave a delightful display of trombone virtuosity at the Fine Arts Center on Thursday evening, accompanied first by pianist Nadine Shank, then by a jazz combo. Displaying the versatility of the instrument, he played a wide variety of classical and jazz pieces in the hour-long show.

The formal, classical first half of the program was begun with a light, airy baroque-inspired piece by Jean-Michel de Faye entitled, "A la maniere de Bach." Then Sporny played the majestic, soaring and grave "Cavatine Op. 144" by Camille Saint-Saens. This was only the beginning, as Malcom Arnold's difficult, "Fantasy, Op. 101" was played by Sporny without accompaniment. The trombonist did have some trouble at the beginning with the rapidly shifting tempos and tones, but by the finale, a stentorian staccato of notes, Sporny had re-mastered his instrument. He gave a deep bow of appreciation at the audience's patience.

But these three short pieces were by way of introduction for the main piece of the first half of the concert, Alexander Arutiunian's "Concerto for Trombone and Piano." The first movement began quite dramatically, as the trombone soared above the agitated piano before becoming darker. Soon the piano started a more sorrowful, plaintive theme which the trombone followed with an even more grave accompaniment.

The second movement, an allegretto, was lighter and more playful, a relief from the gravity of the first movement.

The third movement began with the piano playing a crescendo when the trombone interceded. There was then a more exotic, almost tango-like section followed by a jazzy interlude. The trombone then played on alone, first staccato then march-like until the piano began a low pounding which builds steadily until the trombone began a drunken, lurching accompaniment. The movement ended with the two instruments playing in unison then ending on the same note. Well, they didn't exactly end in unison, although this was clearly the plan, but it didn't really matter the piece was excellent nonetheless.

The second half of the program was made up of significantly lighter pieces. The first, "Wotda," by Dan Aldag, was an exceedingly clever piece for trombone and clappers. As the general clapping of the audience dissolved into silence, a section of seven clappers in the front row kept up a percussion accompaniment to the soloist until the end, when this percussion once again became applause, and the audience joined in.

A jazz combo made up of Steven Page on piano, Josh Tyler on bass and Andy Smith on drums joined Professor Sporny to finish out the evening with Duke Ellington's and Juan Tizol's "Perdido" and Kenny Dorham's "Blue Bossa." Although Sporny's jazz playing was a bit innocuous, the addition of these two pieces ended the evening with a bang of improvisational energy.

Overall this evening with Sporny displayed his wide variety of musical interests, as well as his ability to play many different styles of music. It also showed that this instrument, which in the past has been relegated to the back sections of orchestras and jazz combos, has the potential to be a truly virtuous instrument.

Another hip, boring film

Two Days in the Valley* fails to amuse or thrill despite cast

By Jeremy Brothers
Collegian Staff

TWO DAYS IN THE VALLEY
Written and Directed by John Herzfield with James Spader, Danny Aiello, Marsha Mason
Playing at Hampshire Six Theaters

The trend of hip, young, unknown writer/directors making miserable films has now come to a head with Two Days in the Valley. What astounds me about this film is not how it manages to grab onto everything positive about the so-called "Tarantino School" of film making and make it into a goulash of cliches, but how it managed to be made in the first place.

Not to be misunderstood, everything about Tarantino, with the exception of Destiny Turns on the Radio, can be appreciated in varying degrees. It's only when we are bombarded with all-star extravaganzas like Two Days in the Valley that suck, can we truly come to resent Quentin.

James Spader plays a hit man with the quirky habit of letting his victims have one minute before he kills them. He later takes a few moments aside to discourse on the importance of 60 seconds, presumably because he knows his monologue will end up adding something quirky to the soundtrack.

Danny Aiello plays another hit man with an entirely different kind of idiosyncrasy. Can we see a pattern developing here? Aiello's Dozmo is not only terrified of dogs, but he's a really good cook. It's this kind of moronic characterization that makes every character too goofy to be even remotely interesting.

If this film has a redeeming feature, it lies in Charlize Theron as James Spader's equally villainous Norwegian girlfriend. She adds a sense of near-camp comedy prancing around in her crotch-hugging bodysuits, somewhere between a reject Bond girl and a Russ Meyer babe from Faster Pussycat, Kill! Kill!

COURTESY EPIC PRODUCTIONS
James Spader plays yet another idiosyncratic creep.

Herzfeld's film consists of several very "L.A." story lines, suicidal TV movie directors, art dealers with kidney stones, vice squad cops with hearts of gold but brains of oatmeal — you get the picture. Playing these misbegotten souls is an immense cast of talented people: Greg Cuttwell, Eric Stoltz, Teri Hatcher, Peter Horton and Paul Mazursky, all of whom come together in a confrontational stand off shoot out. How surprising. D-

Campailla)

THE CLIENT
John Grisham's story of a young boy who solely knows where the dead body of a U.S. senator lies. He gets the help of Susan Sarandon as he tries to avoid the mob and Tommy Lee Jones. Sarandon's courageous character is able to handle the tough kid, and knows how to deal with the very good and persistent Jones. There is little courtroom drama, but plenty of suspense. It will keep you watching from beginning to end. B+ (F.C.)

BRAVEHEART
Mel Gibson made modern audiences respect the word "epic" again with this tale of Scottish revolution leader William Wallace. The film was warmly received at last years Academy Awards ceremony, and not without warrant. A cast of thousands (literally) makes the film in the mesmerizing battle scenes in Gibson's sophomore directorial effort. A (J.B.)

GET SHORTY
John Travolta is mobsier Chili Palmer, who goes to Hollywood to get into the movie business with the help of Gene Hackman, Danny DeVito and Rene Russo. This Elmore Leonard story makes for an average film with a silly ending. But plenty of laughs and Travolta's wonderful and entertaining performance make it worth watching. He's better than the rest of the movie. B- (F.C.)

DEAD MAN WALKING
This highly acclaimed film stars Sean Penn as a man on death row waiting to die. Susan Sarandon is his chosen spiritual advisor for the last few days of his life. The movie explores capital punishment from many different angles. The acting and directing is of the highest quality. It is a powerful and emotional film that makes you think. A must see. A (F.C.)

Dead Man Walking and Brain Candy hit HSCN

COURTESY GEORGE KRATCHYK
Scott Thompson plays Clemptor, German Supermodel

Housing Service Cable Network regularly shows full length videos. The following is a quick guide to what movies to see and avoid this week.

BRAIN CANDY
The Kids in the Hall make their big screen debut in this deft satire of society's insane desire for happiness, no matter what the cost. Besides the pharmaceutical industry, the Canadian comedy troupe pokes fun at homosexuality, cancer and the elderly. Not a film for everyone, but one of the funniest comedies released in recent memory. A- (Jeremy Brothers)

BROKEN ARROW
What do you call a nuclear weapon that is missing? You got it — a broken arrow. John Travolta is an air force pilot who threatens the U.S. government to give him big bucks, or he'll launch the weapons. Travolta's crazy character brings many laughs and an ending that proves his lunacy. It's an okay action/adventure, but can be a bit ridiculous. Christian Slater also stars. C+ (Frank take your career to the Edge.

At Data General, the edge isn't a final destination; it's a place to start. Data General has become a leader in the computing industry by creating highly advanced, open, UNIX-based systems using the finest commodity technologies available. For talented, motivated graduates, we offer Software and Hardware Engineering Opportunities designed to bring out your individual strengths. Along with unlimited challenges, we also offer exceptional rewards, including a comprehensive benefits package that rivals the best in the industry.

EXTREME OPPORTUNITY

To sign up for an on-campus interview please submit your resume to the Career Services Office by October 2, 1996.

Visit our World Wide Web site at: http://www.dg.com

Data General

This is no time to turn back. MDA is closing in on treatments and cures for neuromuscular diseases. Keep MDA's lifesaving research moving forward.

MDA
Muscular Dystrophy Association
1-800-572-1717
People help MDA... because MDA helps people.

Yearwood connects, shows growing maturity

COURTESY RUSS HARRINGTON
Trisha Yearwood

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

TRISHA YEARWOOD
Everybody Knows
MCA Nashville

Georgia native Trisha Yearwood once again proves she is a force to be reckoned with. On Everybody Knows, her sixth album, Yearwood demonstrates her ability to belt out a song with grace and master ability.

Her first single, "Believe Me Baby (I Lied)" is classic Yearwood, and demonstrates her fun side, much like her first hit, "She's in Love With the Boy." She has such spirit on this tune, it's easy to envision her smiling. She brings a sense of warmth to all of her songs.

Much of this CD doesn't sound like traditional country — you won't find any songs about cowboys or trucks. Yearwood is able to transcend these binding stereotypes and venture into other forums. "Little Hercules" is decidedly folk, with a strong acoustic section and melodic piano accompaniment. "A Lover is Forever" is a great bluesy tune that will fit smoothly into juke boxes everywhere.

Yearwood's voice invokes a sense of comfort in her listeners, from that lonely truck driver on a long haul to students driving cross country — it's fitting that Yearwood's voice be on the radio. "Under the Rainbow," the most powerful song on Everybody Knows, has a mellow sadness to it, but at the same time, it is inspirational. Lyrics like, "Evening, porch swing/ We love to watch it rain/ To some folks it ain't much/ But we think we got it made" demonstrate Yearwood's love of home.

However, Everybody Knows, isn't Hearts in Armor, which was by far her best. While she received critical acclaim for that album, she didn't receive the airplay, due to the fact that it wasn't classic country. And while this album naturally is more mature than her earlier stuff, at times it lacks the charisma of her previous albums.

Everybody Knows is, however, more of a collection of ballads than most Yearwood fans are used to. But it's still up to her usual standards. No Yearwood fans will be disappointed with this CD — in fact, it's a great addition to any music library. Yearwood once again proves she is one of country's great female stars. B+

Rosie fulfills her wildest dream– & meets Tom Cruise

Secrecy was the word of the week these past few days. Especially when it involved marriages. Yes, it really is true, John F. Kennedy, Jr. finally tied the knot to his longtime girlfriend, Carolyn Bessette.

And the same goes for The Cable Guy's Jim Carrey. He said his vows with "Picket Fences" actress Lauren Holly. The couple has been together ever since they met on the set of the movie Dumb and Dumber.

COURTESY AP
Rosie O'Donnell

The producers of the show "Ellen" are discussing whether or not Ellen DeGeneres' character should come out as a lesbian this season. Wait, no — that story line is just not believable. Ellen a lesbian?

The Titanic is still making waves. The cast and crew of the upcoming movie, which includes Kate Winslet, got a surprise in their lobster chowder. It was reported that someone, still unknown, spiked it with the horse tranquilizer, PCP.

Now what is with those darned German magazines? Months ago they called Tom Cruise impotent. Now, the Stuttgart-based Sport-Auto magazine and the Gemballa North American car company of Malibu, California are being sued by Arnold Schwarzenegger. He claims that his picture on the cover is a fraud.

Spanish hunk Antonio Banderas and Hollywood Bimbo Melanie Griffith recently welcomed a little one to their happy home. Stella del Carmen Banderas Griffith was born on Sept. 24 in Marbella, Spain.

For all those Tori Spelling fans out there, don't forget to watch Mother, May I Sleep With Danger, which airs tonight on NBC. Didn't I just see her in a really bad made-for- television movie last week? Oh, right, it was "Beverly Hills, 90210."

Rumor has it that Vince Neil will rejoin his estranged group Motley Crüe for a reunion tour. Since no one else has told them, I guess that leaves me to break the news to the '80s metal group — it's over, go away, go home.

Since the current trend is to make every popular book into a movie, it's no surprise that Primary Colors will soon slide onto the silver screen. John Travolta has signed on to play the part of politician Jack Stanton. He will reportedly receive over $20 million for this role, making him one of the highest paid actors in Hollywood. Also in the $20 Million Dollar Club — Carrey, Schwarzenegger and Cruise.

Lisa M. Oliveri

Guess who won the lottery? Dan and Roseanne Connor. So if they are no longer going to be poor white trash, what's the theme of the show?

The top-grossing film of the week was The First Wives Club which is, by the way, the first role since Showgirls for Elizabeth Berkley. And critics are saying that she does a good job. Give Berkley some credit, I liked Showgirls. I own Showgirls. I mean, it wasn't that bad. Nomi Malone was at least a more interesting character than Jessie Spano.

Rosie O'Donnell presented an award to her idol Tom Cruise at the American Cinematheque Awards. Not only did she finally get to meet him, but she also got a kiss from Cruise. Fans of O'Donnell's daytime talk show will remember and miss the excitement that built up to this meeting.

Lisa M. Oliveri is a Collegian columnist.

COURTESY MURRAY CLOSS
Tom Cruise

NYC jazz trio impresses in sold-out Noho show

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

MEDESKI, MARTIN & WOOD
Northampton Center For The Arts
Sept. 27

With whirring clavinet bursts, deep, soulful bass and all sorts of varied percussion sounds, the New York City-based trio of keyboardist John Medeski, drummer Billy Martin, and bassist Chris Wood brought forth many climactic moments in their sold out show at the Northampton Center For The Arts, presented by the Iron Horse, on Friday night.

The Center, which has a large area for the concert, was chosen by the Iron Horse because of the large dimensions of the room with enough space for a dance floor, something the smaller Iron Horse lacks.

With the dance floor full and flowing with a mostly college-age crowd, Medeski, Martin & Wood completely commanded the audience's attention with their hybrid mix of many different sounds. They drew from rock, funk, R&B from the Stax/Volt catalog (Booker T. & The MG's), organ- based jazz (Lou Donaldson), and utter tones of chaos, space and exotic grooves characteristic of the early-'70s Miles Davis electric groups.

The audience continued to dance, so Medeski, Martin & Wood kept rolling forward –for well over three hours. The trio obviously wanted the crowd's energy all to themselves — not to any post-show parties, and so they took it. In return, they gave sonic energy emanating from Medeski's many keyboards, Wood's deep groove-oriented bass-playing and Martin's superfluous beats.

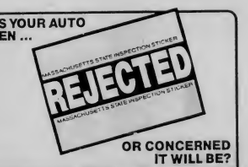
Medeski's Wurlitzer organ sounds came from the deep swamps of the South, specifically Memphis and New Orleans. He played a clavinet on a wah-wah effect as though it was a couple of bongo drums, his hands flailing on the keys, producing scathing sharp sounds. He also had an electric-piano keyboard with a scathing sound of its own, like the Fender Rhodes, characteristic of those early-'70s Miles groups.

Wood switched between electric and an acoustic stand-up bass all through the night, giving equal time to both. Drummer Billy Martin played his regular trap set, as well as wondrous, weird percussion instruments, even scraping a metal canister during one of the group's rather "spacey" moments.

Overall, the show, which featured a couple of songs from their forthcoming album, Shack-Man (due Oct. 15), was basically flawless, except maybe for its excessive length. However, the majority of the audience stayed with the trio all night, because that was where the energy was.

COURTESY MICHEAL MACIOCI
Medeski, Martin and Wood

GAY, LESBIAN, BISEXUAL ISSUES



NEEDS WRITERS!

If you are interested in writing for the Collegian and working on issues that pertain to you or your friends please come to the

Collegian at 113 Campus Center

and ask for Jamie Sinsheimer or leave a note in my mailbox. All students are welcome to apply, whether you are a GLB student or just an ally.

HAS YOUR AUTO BEEN ...

OR CONCERNED IT WILL BE?

WE CAN HELP!!

Let the Experts at MIDAS Repair Your Cars'
EXHAUST · SUSPENSION · BRAKES
-STOP BY OR CALL TODAY-

HADLEY
397 Russell St. (Rte. 9)
586-9991

MIDAS

NORTHAMPTON
143 King St. (Rte 5)
586-4840

90 days same as cash

Want to write about poetry, film, theater, music, books, travel, food or anything else?

Then write for the Arts & Living Desk.

Come down today!

FMDP
Career Opportunities in Finance

Challenge yourself...
...to reach your potential.

As part of Travelers Insurance's
Financial Management Development Program (FMDP)
you'll work on challenging special projects for senior management, receive state of the art training & development, and gain valuable practical business experience through rotational assignments. The goal is to help you become a future leader in insurance, and financial services.

To be considered, submit your resume to the SOM Placement Office by October 7, 1996.

To discuss Full-Time or Summer Internship Oportunities within the FMDP, please stop by our booth at the 1996 Career Fair on Thursday, October 31st in the Campus Center Auditorium.

INTERVIEWS will be conducted Friday, November 15th.

The Travelers Indemnity Company
The Aetna Casualty and Surety Company
Members of TravelersGroup

http://www.travelers.doc
Travelers, Hartford, CT 06183 We Are An Equal Opportunity Employer, Committed to Work Force Diversity Travelers actively promotes a drug-free workplace.

THANG VO \ COLLEGIAN

Lightning Strikes

Senior Tina Lightning and the women's soccer team remained undefeated, as they blanked St. Joe's 4–0.

■ defense

continued from page 14

while forcing Dion and Napoli to make a total of 10 saves in eight matches.

In its last four outings, UMass has outshot its opponents a startling 107–8, winning all four by a 14–0 aggregate.

The offensive output could potentially be the most notable side effect of the defensive dominance.

With the ball seldom leaving the UMass side of the field as the Minutewoman defenders effectively contain the play within the midfield stripe, a plethora of offensive opportunities are generated. Not having to constantly run to the other end of the field and regroup, UMass' offensive chances this season have far outnumbered the average number generated per match the past two seasons.

UMass hasn't posted 14 goals in four straight wins since early in the 1994 season, and recently broke an 18-year-old school record for shots in a game against a Division I opponent, teeing up 46 shots against St. Bonaventure.

"It's the whole team playing offense," midfielder Rebecca Myers said.

Erica Iverson, Lynch, Robin Smith and Amanda Thompson have been a fearsome foursome playing in the back for UMass. Not only is the unit strong, but it is deep, with Liz Rutherford replacing an injured Smith yesterday without missing a beat.

Each of the four defenders knows their role well and executes precisely in fending off their foes. Iverson defends the right flank, and although not the swiftest player on the team, she has a powerful shot and makes her presence felt when the opportunity for a tackle arises.

Lynch, a two–time All–American, patrols the center of the field, serves free kicks, and never misses a ball or misconnects on a pass. Smith works as a bookend to Iverson, with slightly more speed, often running the flank for long shots at goal while tackling hard.

The lost figure in the foursome is sweeper Amanda Thompson. The overlooked sophomore does nothing flashy, but is instrumental to the fact that UMass' team GAA is falling faster than Saturday Night Live's ratings.

Often winding up as the last line of defense on a counter– attack after a fearsome foursome playing in the back rush by a UMass defender, Thompson has proven deadly one–on–one, almost always clearing both the ball and the chance of a shot on Dion.

After a defensive rush, Thompson anchors the three back defensive line in its zone play, and is quick to steal the ball and clear it out to the side for the next rush, an often overlooked, but essential role in starting the UMass offense.

"My hat's off to Amanda Thompson," Rudy said. "She did such a good job of holding it all together and allowing us to attack at will down the flanks. It allows Erin to get forward and [Thompson] does that very graciously and willingly. She's a key player."

Each defender has their role; they and the team collectively excel. Behind an almost impenetrable wall, Dion and Napoli might as well sneak a La–Z–Boy onto the bus for their next match, Friday at La Salle.

Red Sox finish with too little too late

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

BOSTON — The Boston Red Sox effectively erased their chances of repeating as AL East champions in the season's first week. It just took them until the last week to admit it.

After losses in the first five games spurred them to a franchise-worst 2-12 start, the Red Sox managed to claw their way back into the race with a 22-9 record in August. They were three games out after Aug. 26, and despite playing five games above .500 from there, they couldn't close the gap.

"If we could have put together a halfway decent start, we'd still be playing," general manager Dan Duquette said Sunday after Boston beat the Yankees 6-5 in the season finale. "It was a good way to end up. That should bode well for next year."

The Red Sox will have a whole list of new problems in the next year, with Roger Clemens and Mike Greenwell becoming free agents and an unsettled infield situation involving Nomar Garciaparra, John Valentin and Tim Naehring.

But for Sunday, there was only one question circling around the team: Was the past season a failure, because it ended so early; or a success, because they rallied from their awful start to get into the race.

"Where we started out and where we've come, we can walk out of this clubhouse holding our heads high," Valentin said.

Manager Kevin Kennedy reached even farther.

"When you come back and do what we've done as a ballclub and as an organization, it's phenomenal," he said. "I hope it gives people hope in their own lives when they're down and out." The Red Sox set a club record with 53 players used last season. But they proved that more is not always better this year, upping the mark to 55.

"If we were an established team and everybody's doing their jobs," Duquette said, "then there's no need to look for solutions."

But, early on, it was clear help was needed. And, ironically, it was only after the Red Sox started jettisoning their high-priced talent that they started to come back.

■ men's soccer

continued from page 14

By the time regular season was underway, coach Sam Koch was confident in the one–two punch of Pearson and Jablonski, feeling as though either of the pair was capable of starting.

Though UMass snapped its slump with a shutout, it once again kept its shots on the opponent's net at a minimum, as they were outshot 10–8 by the Hawks.

The Minutemen return to action on Sunday, Sept. 29 when they return to Philadelphia where they face the Temple Owls at Temple Stadium at 3:30 p.m. Koch and company do not return to the confines of friendly Richard F. Garber field until Oct. 11, when they will face the Flyers of the University of Dayton.

Minuteman Notes —

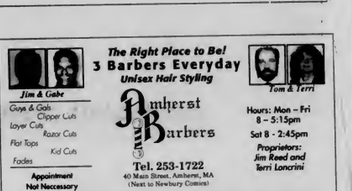
Dave Siljanovski leads UMass in points (8) with four goals... Mike Butler is second on the points list with two goals and two assists for six points... Pearson boasts a goals against average of 0.94 with 28 saves with five games and five starts... The Minutemen, playing in their first season with a national ranking, have dropped to No. 25 in the nation.

■ women's soccer

continued from page 14

only one shot on the day.

"We are so deep that any of the people on our bench could be starting for us," the senior Myers said. "That's what's so great about this team."



Rudy was pleased with the full team effort as well.

"These kids train like everyone else," he said. "They show up for things, they're on time. They deserve the opportunity and any time that we can make that happen is good."

While it's obvious how potent the UMass attack is, much of the team's success comes from a strong defense. This was one aspect of the Massachusetts game the Hawks couldn't break. As the UMass defensive core of Erin Lynch, Amanda Thompson, and Erica Iverson controlled the ball at the midfield, they could send balls to breaking strikers like Myers nearly anywhere in the front third of the field.

"Despite the field, which is getting bumpier and harder to beat as we go, they did a nice job handling the ball, particularly Thompson," Rudy said.

The Minutewomen play again on Friday when they travel to LaSalle for a 4:30 p.m. match against the Explorers.

The Right Place to Be!
3 Barbers Everyday
Unisex Hair Styling
Jim & Gabe
Tom & Terri
Gaya & Gabi Clipper Cuts
Layer Cuts Razor Cuts
Flat Tops Kid Cuts
Fades
Appointment Not Necessary
Amherst Barbers
Tel. 253-1722
40 Main Street, Amherst, MA
(Next to Newbury Comics)
Hours: Mon – Fri 8 – 5:15pm
Sat 8 - 2:45pm
Proprietors: Jim Reed and Terri Loncrini

We want you to write for us!
Call the Collegian at 545-3500

COME SEE WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT...
SHAB
Gain Experience in Administrative Aspects of Health Care
Sponsor Health Promotion Events
Come join the Student Health Advisory Board
Next Meeting:
Wed. October 2, 5:30 -6:30pm
University Health Services Rm. 304
For more info call Tamara at the Health Education Office 577-5181

LSAT GMAT GRE MCAT
take Kaplan and get into the right school.
Personalized, computerized study plans, tailored to your individual needs.
Highly trained, expert teachers who know the tests inside and out.
Proven methods, guaranteed to raise your score.
Next LSAT class starts October 1st
Next GRE class starts October 15th
Next MCAT class starts November16th
the leader in test prep and admissions counseling
KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
www.kaplan.com

EXPERT AUTO BODY REPAIRS, AUTO PAINTING and GLASS REPLACEMENT
MARSHALL STEINBECK
PROFESSIONAL COLLISION WORK
• OVEN BAKED URETHANE FINISHES
• FREE ESTIMATES & CLAIMS ASSISTANCE
• INSURANCE APPROVED GLASS REPLACEMENT
• PROFESSIONAL UNIBODY REPAIR AND FRAME STRAIGHTENING
256-8157 256-1385
53 South Prospect Street, Amherst, Massachusetts

TOP 10 Reasons to use UHS Eye Care Services
1 We have a comprehensive contact lens program.
2 Emergency eye care delivered at UHS, is a covered benefit if you are a student plan member.
3 Savings on eyeglasses from participating opticians are available if you are a student and have a complete optometry examination at UHS.
4 A great place to get contact lenses.
5 On-site contact lens specialist.
6 Free sample start-up contact lens solutions.
7 Contact lenses can be mailed directly to you; free postage for normal delivery.
8 Same day replacement of contact lenses, in many cases, due to our large in-house inventory.
9 We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.
10 Convenient hours and location.
For appointments or questions, Call 577-5244 uhs
Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Care Program over twenty years has been consistently excellent.
"I invite you to use the Eye Services at UHS."
Frederick H. Bloom, O.D. Director, Eye Care Program

■ team

continued from page 14

of the best feelings I've had in a long time."

Jordan averaged 6.6 yards every time he touched the ball on Saturday, and led the UMass running attack that amassed 201 yards on the day to Northeastern's 108.

"I'm awful glad that Matt Jordan's hamstring is better, I'll tell you that," coach Mike Hodges said. "Because when Frank went out, it was time for him to do it, and he went in and played great. He's obviously a very talented back."

Jordan would run for one more TD on the afternoon, a one–yard run at the end of the first half that gave the Minutemen the lead 14–7 going into the locker rooms.

"I think mentally for myself it was very important, that when Frank went out, to come in and have a solid good game and contribute to the team's success," Jordan said. "It's been a long time, and I was just glad to get in there, and the line took a lot of pressure off me."

Jamie Holston, who backed up Jordan, had a powering 40– yard TD run up the left side of the field, set up by a key downfield block by freshman wideout Ralphael Quinn for the go ahead TD midway through the fourth quarter that gave UMass the victory.

"It felt pretty good, I haven't felt like that in a while," Holston said. "Running behind that line was real good. They did a great job blocking all day, and I just hit the hole as fast as I could. It was great."

As good as Jordan and Holston's performances were, the defense played strong once again, and the special teams for UMass came up big. Northeastern would fumble three punt returns on the day in which UMass would recover.

Freshman Ben Scott for UMass would be the hero the first two times, recovering the mishaps and getting the Minutemen the possession of the ball. Freshman Matt Dawson recovered the third one.

Saying that Northeastern gave the game to UMass isn't exactly fair, although the fumbles contributed greatly. However, it's one thing to get the ball back, and another to capitalize on it. The Minutemen would only make good on the possession after the second fumbled punt return, when Holston ran in the go ahead TD with 8:58 remaining in the game.

Once again, this game saw the likes of many different Minutemen contribute to the cause and put forth the effort that makes a championship team.

"This is a team game, it isn't two guys, or five guys, or 11 guys, or 22 guys, it's all of us," Hodges said.

"You step up and do the job when you get the opportunity. Jamie's been waiting, he gets his chance, he goes in and makes a big play. Frank gets hurt, Matt goes in and makes the big plays for us. Same thing that happens at wide out or tight end, anywhere along the line, it's all of us together."

Defensively, senior linebacker Justin Riemer showed why he is an All America Candidate, as he made 16 tackles on the afternoon, seven of them solo, and three of them for losses totaling 10 yards, including one sack.

Junior linebacker Mike Dawson contributed nicely as well with eight stops himself, and a punishing sack on Northeastern quarterback Jim Murphy as well. And speaking of punishing hits, sophomore linebacker Khari Samuel had his share of opportunities to give welcome greetings to the Huskies, as he picked up a sack and seven tackles.

Other statistics that have to be pleasing to the Minutemen are their decreased number of turnovers and penalties. In the first two games the Minutemen averaged 107 yards of penalties. Last week they had 64 yards, and this past game only 50 yards in penalties on four mishaps. UMass did not fumble the football once, but did throw two interceptions.

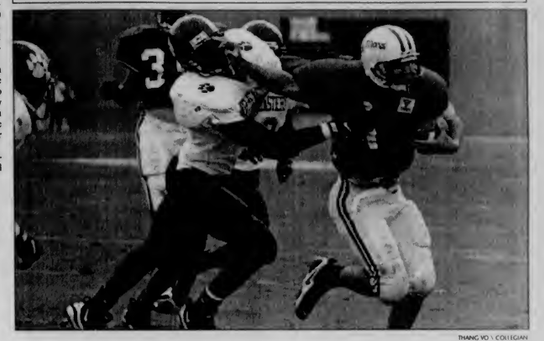
With the chemistry of this team beginning to come together and the ability of players to step up and do their jobs the Minutemen can only hope that this trend continues. With three wins in a row, their confidence is high and the ball is bouncing their way.

UMass is back in action next weekend when they travel to Rhode Island to face the Rams at 1 p.m.

■ football

continued from page 14

with 1:10 to go, when a series of quick passes had taken Northeastern into Minuteman territory. The Huskies went for it on fourth and two, but Murphy's sideline pass fell harmlessly to the turf, preserving the win for UMass.



After the game, Hodges had nothing but good things to say about his defense.

"When they got the ball back with a minute to go, I told [UMass assistant coach] Ted Roof, this is right where it belongs, in the hands of the defense." Hodges said. "I'm very proud of the way we played defensively. That [Northeastern] is a very, very good football team, very good offensively, but our kids stayed with it all day long."

Offensively, the emergence of underclassmen Jordan and Holston was key for the Minutemen, given the status of senior running backs Frank Alessio and Ron Brockington. Alessio bruised his left shoulder in the first quarter and would not return, and Brockington was limited by a bruised shoulder, which had been bothering him all week in practice.

"I'm awful glad Matt Jordan's hamstring is better," Hodges said. "When Frank went out, it was time to do it, and he went in and played great. He's obviously a very talented back."

The Minutemen look to make it four in a row next Saturday when they travel to Kingston, Rhode Island to take on the University of Rhode Island. Game time is scheduled for 1:00.

THANG VO \ COLLEGIAN

The UMass football team dropped the Huskies of Northeastern 21–14 at home.

Red Sox beat Yankees in final game

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

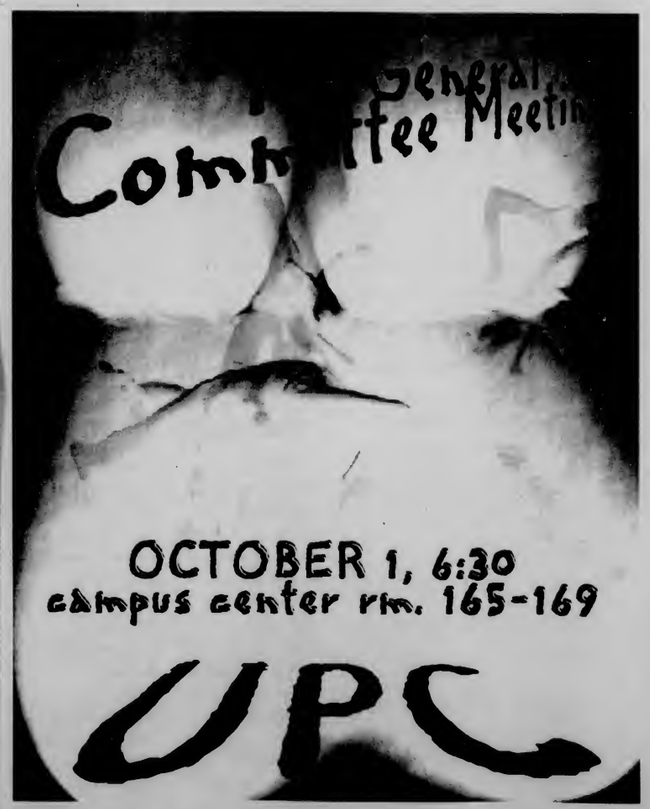
BOSTON — The playoff-bound New York Yankees ended the regular season by losing three of their last four games as Reggie Jefferson's RBI-single in the ninth inning gave the Boston Red Sox a 6-5 victory Sunday.

New York had rallied from a 4-1 deficit to take a 5-4 lead with two runs in the sixth before Boston tied the game in the bottom half of the inning.

The Yankees, who won the AL East title for the first time since 1981, open the playoffs at home Tuesday night against Texas. Boston, last year's division champion, was eliminated from the wild-card race Thursday.

Darren Bragg began the winning rally with a single off Dale Polley (1-3). Dave Pavlas replaced Polley and gave up a sacrifice bunt to Jeff Frye. Wil Gordero then hit a sharp grounder to Derek Jeter in the hole between shortstop and third. Jeter tried to get Bragg at third, but his throw to Andy Fox was late.

Jefferson then ripped a 3-2 pitch to right field for the winning run. He ended the season with a .347 batting average and 74 RBIs in 386 at bats.



Pat Mahomes (3-4) pitched two hitless innings for the win. The Yankees took a 1-0 lead in the first when Tim Raines doubled, took third on Wade Boggs' single and scored when Paul O'Neill grounded into a double play.

Boston went ahead 2-1 in the bottom of the inning on Collegian Night Graphics...

Newl Improved! Now with literary refences!

SOME THINGS ARE MEANT TO BE CLOSED
YOUR MIND ISN'T ONE OF THEM

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Nachos $5.75 $2.88
Lite-Weigh Skins $8.99 $3.50
Shrimp Cocktail $5.75 $2.88
New Dinner Menu.. Come See
Watch the World Go By From Our Greenhouse!
Judies
DOWNTOWN AMHERST
51 N. Pleasant Street
1/2 Price Munchie Menu
https://virtual-valley.com/judies

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS
Don't Miss The Action
For entry forms and info
545-2693
545-0022
GET THOSE FORMS IN BY
Volleyball (M/W/C).....10/3
STILL TIME TO ENTER
Field Hockey (W).....A.S.A.P
Tennis Singles.....A.S.A.P.
Cross Country.....A.S.A.P.
PAID OFFICIALS NEEDED FOR VOLLEYBALL, CALL FOR CLINIC DATES.

$99
FLEX
FITNESS CENTER
AMHERST, MA
FOR SEMESTER!!

Volleyball drops Bonnies, Dukes

By Jeremy Adams
Collegian Correspondent

The Massachusetts women's volleyball team maintained a perfect record at home, at 10–0 on the season, dispensing Atlantic 10 opponents St. Bonaventure and Duquesne this weekend. The two wins improved the Minutewomen's record to 13–3 overall, and 2–1 in the A–10.

MASSACHUSETTS 3
ST. BONAVENTURE 0

Friday against St. Bonaventure, UMass won in three straight games, 15–13, 15–3, and 15–10, dropping the Bonnies to 2–11 and 0–3 in conference play.

Junior Michelle Paciorek served for five straight points to start the match, and Massachusetts jumped out to a quick 9– 2 lead in the first game. The Bonnies battled back to tie the game forcing a Minutewomen time out. When play resumed Massachusetts only needed two possessions to close out the game.

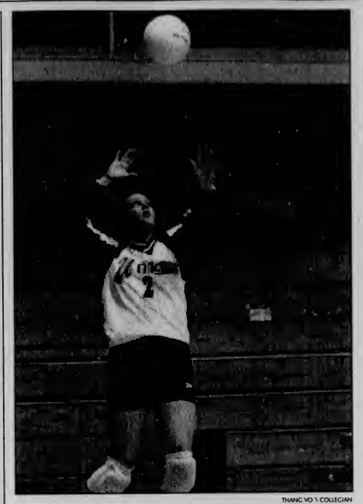
The second game was a relative breeze for Massachusetts, as they continued to pressure St. Bonavenure. The Minutewomen started the second game with a 6–0 run and coasted to a 15–3 conclusion. The third game was a completely different story. St. Bonaventure captured the lead with short offensive runs at 4–3 and 6–5. At 9–10, Massachusetts took over to score the next six points for the match, led by juniors Lesley Nolan and Paciorek.

Nolan provided important kills down the stretch, tying the game at 10, and earning a key sideout at 11–10. Paciorek followed with a service ace, and served for the final three points, all of which were Nolan kills.

"Honestly I thought we played pretty well," St. Bonaventure coach John Wasielewski said. "This is the best we've played in this gym since I've coached here. We've just got to play a little better to beat a team like UMass."

Duquesne was more of a match for Massachusetts, taking the contest to four games. Duquesne won the first game 15– 12, making it the first time in 13 wins that Massachusetts prevailed after losing the first game. The game was dominated by the Lady Dukes' big hitters Sheila Lopez and Katie Michalski. Lopez served for four straight points to take the lead for the Lady Dukes at 9–7. She finished the day with a match high 25 kills and eight digs. Michalski added 19 kills and six digs.

The Minutewomen turned it around right away with a 7–0 advantage to start the second game. Kills by Lopez and Jenna Birkel sparked a slow Duquesne comeback that eventually tied the game at 15–15. Massachusetts was led out of the confrontation by its veteran outside hitters Nolan and Dionne Nash, as well as freshman phenom Jill Meyers. The trio combined for the final five sideouts and two points in the dogfight that was game two.



Meyers came up big for Massachusetts, setting her career best at 21 kills with only four errors. The freshman from Huntington Beach, Calif. also set a career high in block assists with seven against St. Bonaventure.

The A–10 powers went at it just as hard in the third game. They fought back and forth, and the Dukes picked up a 12–6 lead. Kills by Nash, Meyers and Paciorek closed the gap at 12–13. After a quick sideout, sophomore setter Katie Pearce served to 14–14. Paciorek stepped it up to provide a key sideout, and followed with a soft dink that sailed over two blockers and landed in front of the Dukes defense for game point.

With the lead in hand at two games to one, Massachusetts confidently finished off Duquesne 15–5 in game four.

Key performances were turned in by Pearce, Nolan and Nash, as well as freshman Kari Hogancamp. Pearce's 72 setting assists fell short of her own school record 78. Nolan provided 22 kills and 10 digs to complement Nash's 21 kills and Hogancamp's team high 13 digs.

"I thought we progressed a little bit this weekend. We can get better every time we play, that's what we need to do," Massachusetts coach Bonnie Kenney said.

THANG VO \ COLLEGIAN

Sophomore setter Katie Pearce and the Minutewomen went 2–0 with wins over Duquesne and St. Bonaventure over the weekend.

Jim didn't know how fast fire could be

It cost him his life

Because he didn't realize what fire was really like, Jim died when his house caught on fire. For a fast, safe, and effective—and most important, don't know just how fast it is.

IT ONLY TAKES 30 SECOND TO START. Dropping a match in a trash can could be the beginning of a major fire. In 30 seconds a small flame can become an uncontrollable fire.

IN THREE MINUTES A ROOM CAN FLASHOVER. Flashover occurs when a room gets so hot that everything in it suddenly ignites. This can happen in three minutes. This is the only time you have to escape.

IN FIVE MINUTES A HOUSE CAN BE ENGULFED IN FLAMES. You have no time to hunt for valuables, make phone calls or do anything but get your family out of the house as fast as you can.

This ad Free is brought to you by the United States Fire Administration

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

FIGURE SKATING CLUB Meets Mullins Rink. Exhibitions, etc. Mon 5/30 7:30pm

CHINESE FOOD Kei Chi delivering Sunday-Thursday to 2am, Friday and Saturday to 3am

Sigma Tau Gamma is looking for new members. STG is a newer fraternity with a different style. Call Will for information, 6-4455.

AUTO FOR SALE

1986 Oldsmobile Delta 88 $1,000. Runs Great. 323-1174

1988 Toyota Low mileage, standard $1000/BO 586-9501 After 5:00 pm

1987 Mazda 626 129k miles but runs great, standard shift, P/W, P/L, sunroof, priced for quick sale - $1200 firm 549-0701 days, 323-9233 evenings

1982 Toyota Supra Good condition, AT/PW/PD/PS/AM/FM CAS. Call 546-0057 or (413)624-3982

EMPLOYMENT

FUNDRAISER - Motivated groups needed to earn $500+ promoting AT&T, Discover, gas and retail cards. Since 1989, we've helped thousands of groups raise the money they need. Call Gina at (800) 592-2121 ext. 110. Free CD to qualified callers.

Business Opportunity. Need additional income? Want the energy to earn it? Earth-Friendly company looking for distributors. Wild Organic Food, free tape 1-800-927-2527 ext. 7368

Spring Break!! Earn Cash!! Highest Commissions! Lowest Prices! Travel free on only 13 sales!! Free Info! Sunsplash 1-800 426-7710

Cruise Ships Hiring - Earn up to $2,000+/month. World Travel. Seasonal and Full Time positions. No exp necessary. For info call 1-206-971-3550 ext. C50015

National Parks Hiring. Positions are now available at National Parks, Forests and Wildlife Preserves. Excellent benefits and bonuses! Call 1-206-971-3620 Ext. N50016

Tropical Resorts Hiring. Students needed! Entry level and career positions available worldwide. Call Resort Employment Services 1-206-971-3600 Ext R50012

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS! Over $ billion in public and private sector Grants and scholarships are now available. All students are eligible. Let us help. For more info call 1-800-263-6495 Ext. F50014

International Employment - Earn up to $25-$45/hour teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For info call 206-971-3570 Ext. J50015

Now Hiring All Shifts. Closing shifts available with bonus program. Hadley Burger King. Ask for Teri 584-5110

Counter Help and Daytime Delivery Persons. Counter help must be able to work 15-20 hr. nights and weekends. Apply at D.P. Dough.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

486SX Compact Laptop, 4 meg RAM, 120MD, MS Office 8.0, electronic pen, external CD ROM via PCMCIA, Canon Bubble Jet Printer, $950 or best offer 549-4850 Jason

INSTRUCTION

Bartend with University Bartending 50% student discount, Amherst classes starting soon! Call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX for info

Boxing Lessons w/Dyta Bumpus. Call for brochure 732-8817

WWW.SUCCESS.ORG Free business education from American Institute Entrepreneurship and Real Estate Investment Courses. Retire rich in ten years.

INSTRUCTION

PC/MAC Tutoring Cheap instruction for computer. Patient, valuable help and advice. Set-ups, software, Internet (413)772-0633

MOTORCYCLES

1980 CB 650 $500 or BO. 9650 miles runs well - must sell. Call 549-6646

MUSICIANS

Guitar Classes Start 9/10 Rentals and lessons available. 10 wks/$40.00 FTUG Pat 545-0579

Blues Jam Tues. 8:00pm Emerson 112 Check it out!

PERSONALS

Choices Not Chances Free contraception education. Every Mon & Thurs 3-4:30 and Tues. & Wed. 7-8:30pm in Rm 302 UHS. Men and Women welcome. For more information call Health Education Office 577-5181

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

SERVICES

Computer Problems? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Scream Savers 549-0083

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH Find out how hundreds of student representatives are already earning free trips and lots of cash with America's #1 Spring Break Company! Sell only 15 trips and travel free! Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica, or Florida! Campus Manager positions also available! Call now! Take a break! Student Travel (800)95-Break

SPRING BREAK! Earn cash! Highest commissions/lowest prices! Travel free on only 13 sales!! Free info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

WANTED

Wanted 100 People New Metabolism Breakthrough. Lose 5-100 lbs Guaranteed. Cost $35. (800)776-9503

I WAS SHOPPING IN NEIMAN MARCUS THE OTHER DAY AND BOUGHT A REALLY NIFTY CARDIGAN. UNFORTUNATELY I LATER REALIZED THAT IT DIDNT MATCH THE COLOR OF MY YACHT, SO I PLACED AN AD IN THE COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS. THE YACHT SOLD THREE DAYS LATER.

NAVY BLUE IS DEFINATELY YOUR COLOR

Rates

$2.00 minimum /day

Students 20¢ per word /day

All others 40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
If you head out on an adventure this week, make sure you take along a companion—preferably one with the ability to think on their feet. They may be able to get you out of a scrape or two.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
A cluttered existence may be slowly driving you nuts. If it's your stuff, then organize it, by all means, but if it's another person's, consider an indirect approach to change their behavior. Whatever you do, don't just yell.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
You can learn a great deal from a studious person. Some of their strengths would be valuable assets for your own future. It's also a good time for big decisions, so go for it.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
If you've been feeling guilty lately, dig a little deeper for the reasons why, and then take action! You don't have to be miserable. Plan ahead, so that you're working for the results you want.

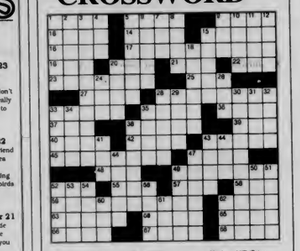
LEO
July 23-August 23
An impulsive start to a fun activity could make you forget to check your wallet. Squanderring resources this week could be disastrous. You don't want to go into debt just to impress someone.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
An outdoor activity is a great way to meet someone wonderful today. Plus, you'll get some invigorating exercise. Beat the heat by talking to a friend in a cool place, especially if you haven't heard from them in a while.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
It is important to make good on your promises this week. Take stock of what you've said and don't miss deadlines, or you could really disappoint someone important to you.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
Spending quality time with a friend or roommate may be a good idea this week. You may be feeling lonesome and they may be feeling neglected, so you can kill two birds with one stone.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
An impulse to spoil your sweetie may misfire if you overestimate your resources. Don't worry—you are beloved just as you are. Besides, you may be able to increase your income soon.



CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
Postponing chores is not a good way to create quality time for something else. You'll just be robbing Peter to pay Paul. Reassessing your priorities may be the way to go this week.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
A conflict you're experiencing may be a sign that lines of communications are frayed between you and someone dear. Make an extra effort to really listen to them before you get too angry.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
An old dream may suddenly seem possible once again. Try to evaluate your risks carefully, but once the decision is made, don't hesitate. You may have waited too long already.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1. "___ Loma Slump"
6. Insect bite symptom
9. ___ Lata
13. Lines of seats
14. Pastor's favorite drink
16. 1992 Sarajevo action
18. Zone
17. Novel set in Gopher Prairie
19. Train depot (abbr.)
20. This Gun ___ Hire
21. Mariner
22. WWII convoy ships (abbr.)
23. Like Kennedy at his inauguration
25. Brit's mother, affectionately
27. Ilk
28. Rapturous
33. ___ Frome
35. Circle of light
36. Long narrative
37. Garland
38. Actress Leslie
39. Raft of nitrull
40. Composer of "Roberta"
42. "Should ___ acquaintance be ..."
43. Liabilities
45. Totally
47. Type of tie
48. "___ Riley's Back in Town"
49. Enamte
52. Clean an egcy
56. Ewe said it!
57. Source of furniture wood
58. Skate
60. Times past
62. Use Bartlett's
63. Par-hour laws
64. Blind as
66. ___ abcs (approximately)
68. Iroquoian
67. Harris and Allen
68. Hogan and Kingsley

DOWN
1. Shelter
2. Blood carrier
3. Top that's fuzzy inside
4. Al Jolson's first name at birth
5. ___ cases
6. Weeper's output
7. Windy City, informally
8. Suggest
9. Falstaff's title
10. Quick grass, e g
11. A Death in the Family author
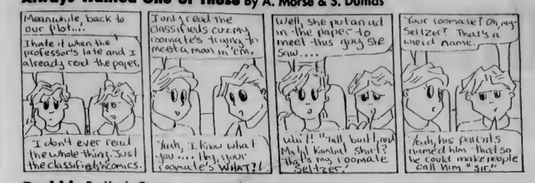
12. Clears, as profit
15. Show-off's stride
16. Judge undone by a haircut
20. "___ Hill" (Dylan Thomas)
24. Long, in Hawaii
26. Banker and Kettle
28. Before rear or bird
29. Boor
30. "Mr. ___ Man" (Dylan song)
31. "___ Plenty of Nuttin'"
32. Motorist vehicles
33. Actress Sommer
34. Youthful suffix
36. Transport
38. Member of the First Triumvirate
41. Writer's point
43. Stewardess's workplace
44. Pipe joint
46. Country bumpkins
47. Cadiz
48. Part of RCMP
50. Squelched
51. Observant ones
52. Bromlit's governess
53. Bergamot or sachet
54. Sparkling Italian town
56. Paradise dweller
60. Golfing start
61. Son of Abner and Daisy Mae
62. Picnic throwaway



Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

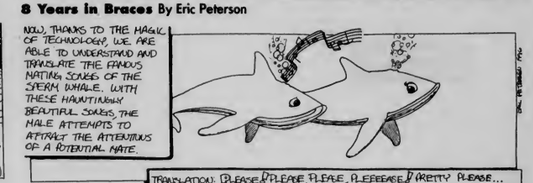
Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

Always Wanted One of Those By A. Morse & S. Dumas

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan



Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown Judd Winick

8 Years in Braces By Eric Peterson

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Sex is a big thing for most people. When they get it right... for most people it's a blast.

What about creatures who don't really have it.... ? Like bees.

But they can fly. All summer they cruise in and out of the gardens at 100 miles an hour.

Imagine yourself standing at the top of the roof to your house. You look at the building next to you, simply raise your arms and fly over to it. Then you decide to fly over the trees nearby. When was the last time you looked down at the top of a tree? Absolutey lovely!

Wouldn't it be great to fly all over whenever you wanted... up into the trees, over homes... just jump up into the air and soar through the blue skies...free from the shackles of an earth bound, plodding, foot-existance.

Gee, what would be better than flying... ?

SEX.

University² By Frank Cho

Close to Home By John McPherson

Social Norm By Mr. K-

Hear Say By Emilie Yang

Loodoo By Mike Rybicki

Today's Staff

Chris Conner
Night Editor

Suzanne Barber
Copy Editor

Thang Vo
Photo Technician

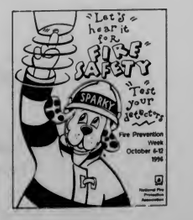
Lorraine Urbanski
Production Supervisor

Sandra Krauss
Chris Lavin
Production

Dining Commons Menu

Menu unavailable. Please refer to this guide to help you decide where to eat.

1. First, go get some dice (6 sided, preferably).
2. Find one you like, and roll it.



If you roll:

- Go to Franklin D.C. for dinner.
- Go to Berkshire D.C. for dinner.
- Go to Hampshire D.C. for dinner.
- Go to Worcester D.C. for dinner.
- Get Pizza for dinner!
- Roll again.

Quote of the Day

"We are not ready for any unforseen event that may or may not occur."

–Dan Quayle

YOUR COMIC COULD BE HERE instead of this stupid ad TO RUN A STRIP IN THE COLLEGIAN CONTACT CHRIS CONNER, MANAGING EDITOR • 545-1672

SportsWeekend

Inside this issue:

Inside this issue:

- The football team dropped Northeastern 21–14 (See Sports Weekend for the story).
- The women's soccer team extended its shutout streak to seven, beating St. Joe's 4–0 (See Sports Weekend for the wrap up).
- The men's soccer team kicked its three game winless streak blanking St. Joe's 1–0 (See Sports Weekend for the scoop).
- The field hockey team beat Temple 3–1 (See Sports Weekend for the recap).
- The volleyball team went 2–0 over the weekend (See Sports Weekend for the story).

UMass wins third straight, tops Northeastern

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts football team, propelled by the return of sophomore sensation Matt Jordan and his 112 yards rushing, squeezed out a 21–14 win over the Northeastern Huskies at Warren G. McGuirk Alumni Stadium on Saturday. The Minutemen have now won three in a row, and remain undefeated in the Yankee Conference at 2–0.

MASSACHUSETTS	21
NORTHEASTERN	14

After an uneventful first quarter, Northeastern (2–2, 1–2 Yankee Conference) got on the board first early in the second quarter.

On a third down and five from the Minutemen 25, Northeastern cornerback Jamison Starling anticipated UMass quarterback Anthony Catterton's pass and picked it off, running the errant throw 31 yards for the touchdown.

The Northeastern lead would not last long. On only his third run from scrimmage this season, Jordan blew through a huge gap in the Husky defensive line and exploded for a 70– yard touchdown scamper, tying the score 7–7.

Jordan, who has been hampered by a hamstring problem all season, was understandably excited about his TD run.

"It felt like a long time [since I had been on a football field], Jordan said. "This is one of the best feelings I've had in a long time."

Northeastern would pin the Minutemen on their own 12 yard line after a stalled drive, but UMass would make the best of the situation.

The Minutemen marched 88 yards on 16 plays, eating up 7:25 off the clock before Jordan's second touchdown of the day, a one yard plunge, gave the Minutemen a 14–7 lead going into halftime.

The second half was a different story for the Minutemen. The offense sputtered early and often, giving the Huskies ample opportunity to get back in the game. Northeastern couldn't capitalize in the third quarter, which included an interception by Husky quarterback Jim Murphy on a poorly underthrown ball, and a missed field goal from 41 yards that was short and wide right.

Northeastern finally got some points on the board 2:06 into the fourth quarter. The Huskies capped off an eight play, 63–yard drive with a 10 yard touchdown run by tailback David Edmunson, tying the score at 14.

Coach Mike Hodges, trying to give the Minuteman offense a spark, pulled Catterton midway through the third quarter in favor of freshman Jeff Smith. Catterton completed only 3 of 13 passes for 55 yards and two interceptions on the afternoon.

Hodges had done the same thing last week in Richmond, and Smith responded by leading the Minutemen to an overtime victory over the Spiders.

Smith was not as effective Saturday, going only 1–5 for 11 yards. He would be pressured by Northeastern's blitzing scheme for the rest of the afternoon, suffering two sacks.

The Minutemen would regain momentum early in the fourth quarter, with a little help from Northeastern.

After another failed possession, Minuteman Andy Maclay's punt was fumbled by Husky David Sofran, and UMass recovered on their own 42. They couldn't convert, however, and Maclay had to punt again. This punt would only be 19 yards, but the Minutemen would catch a break when the ball inadvertently grazed a Northeastern helmet, and UMass defensive back Ben Scott picked up the loose ball.

The Minuteman offense would come together for one more play, one which would win them the game. Freshman Jamie Holston, in for the injured Ron Brockington, burst through an enormous hole and raced to a 40–yard touchdown, putting UMass up 21–14 with 9:07 to go.

That was all the Minutemen needed. The defense, which had been solid all day, shut down the Huskies the rest of the way. Northeastern drove with some success, but never got inside the UMass 30 yard line again. Their most serious threat came

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 11

THANG VO \ COLLEGIAN

With 112 yards rushing and two touchdowns, sophomore Matt Jordan led UMass to victory over Northeastern.

Team effort leads UMass, Jordan back to business

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

Teamwork: (tem'wurk') n. Cooperative effort by members of a group or team to achieve a common goal.

Once again, the University of Massachusetts football team deserves to have its name follow this definition. In a game like last week's against Richmond, the Minutemen did not quit, as they had numerous players step up and show that it takes a full team to come out on top.

And come out on top they did, as they defeated the Northeastern Huskies 21–14 behind superior running by sophomore Matt Jordan, redshirt freshman fullback Jamie Holston, and another solid performance again by the defense and special teams.

Senior tailback Frank Alessio hurt his shoulder early on, and would be forced to sit out the rest of the contest after picking up 14 yards on three carries. It would then be time for Matt Jordan to handle the load of the UMass running duties for the rest of the game. This sophomore from Derry, New Hampshire rose to the challenge, rushing for 127 yards on 17 carries and two touchdowns.

Jordan began to establish himself as a strong back last year, emerging from the shadows of Rene Ingoglia and Alessio to show that he could be the running back of the future in UMass football. In a game last year against Lehigh, Jordan rushed for 174 yards on just six carries and one TD. After missing the first two games of the season with a hamstring injury and rushing only a handful of plays last week, Jordan looked for the kind of performance like his record-setting one a year ago.

"It's felt like a long time since I've been out there," Jordan said. "But getting in there, the offensive line was just dominant on that drive, they opened the holes, the hole was there, I cut it back and when I broke into the open it was a good feeling. It was one

Turn to TEAM, page 11

UMass earns seventh straight shutout

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

What can you say about a team that in eight games, has notched seven straight shutouts while outshooting opponents 107–8 in its last four games?

Soccer fans got a chance to see why the Massachusetts women's soccer team is ranked No. 8 in the nation when they blanked St. Joseph's (2–8) 4–0 on Saturday at Richard F. Garber Field.

MASSACHUSETTS	4
ST. JOSEPH'S	0

From start to finish, the Minutewomen controlled the play of the game, keeping the ball in the Hawks' end of the pitch for what seemed to be the duration of the match. In fact, it took St. Joe's five minutes to clear the ball past midfield, and another 10 before the ball even entered the UMass 18 yard box.

Massachusetts' first tally came 10:54 into the match when senior Sandy Shimogaki crossed a ball in front of the Hawk goal, which was deflected off a St. Joe's defender and found the back of the net, going into the book as an own goal.

The Minutewomen struck again in less than 10 minutes, when 17:44 into the match, freshman Emma Kurowski headed home a cross from eight yards out sent in by Tina Lightning.

It was more of the same throughout the first frame as the Hawks, out–classed by the Minutewomen in their first year of existence, struggled to gain possession.

UMass offensive pressure earned five first half corner kicks that saw an interesting strategic twist as Minutewomen keeper Danielle Dion made the trip to the other end of the field to help out on offense.

"It's a tactic that we'll use at occasions," UMass coach Jim Rudy said. "I used it for pure focus, to get her into the game and we used it because it's something that we may have to use when the chips are down and we don't want to be cold with it or self–conscious about it."

While Dion didn't have the opportunity to find the back of the net, senior Rebecca Myers had two chances, propelling the Minutewomen onto victory with goals three and four.

The first Myers tally came when she beat the St. Joe's keeper with a left–footed shot on a cross from Erica Iverson with 10:09 to go in the half. Myers went on to score the final goal of the game with under five minutes to play when she made good on a Tarah Tokarchik cross, earning her 101st career point. With 38 goals and 25 assists, she currently ranks No. 1 in career points for UMass.

In the second half, Rudy seized the opportunity to exercise the bench, substituting freshman keeper Angie Napoli for Dion, while Cindy Garceau, Kate Webb, Karin Johnson and Sara Hill got some PT. While the Minutewomen didn't score in the second half, they still dominated St. Joe's end of the field. Though the Hawks made a few runs, the UMass defense squashed any chances for a St. Joe's goal, as the opponents were held to

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER, page 10

Tshering goal leads UM to A–10 win

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

The wave that is the Massachusetts men's soccer team has crested once again, just in time for conference play.

MASSACHUSETTS	1
ST. JOSEPH'S	0

After kicking off the regular season with some big games (a Sept. 7 shut out over Boston University), and some not– so–big games (last Tuesday's 1–0 loss to Hartford), the Minutemen were back on track as they kicked off Atlantic 10 conference a win.

On Friday, UMass (4–2–1, 1–0 in A–10) travelled to Philadelphia where they blanked St. Joseph's 1–0. The victory over the Hawks pulled Massachusetts out of a three– game slump where they suffered losses to Hartford and Carolina, in addition to a tie with New Hampshire.

The lone Minuteman goal came 31:32 into the match when senior midfielder Tashi Tshering settled a feed from sophomore Rob Cairo, and smoked the St. Joe's keeper Nick DelMonaco from 15 yards out.

On the other side of the ball, sophomore keeper Jeff Jablonski notched his first collegiate start by stopping four shots and sealing the win for No. 25 UMass. The win marked the Ludlow native's first complete–game shutout in only his fourth career game.

Jablonski has played back up for sophomore Tim Pearson since the start of the season in a position that had coaches guessing. With the graduation of keeper Eric Gruber (who is currently an assistant goal keeper coach for the Minutemen), there seemed to be a big vacancy between the posts.

Turn to MEN'S SOCCER, page 10

UMass' Dion lonely in goal

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

Massachusetts women's soccer goalkeeper Danielle Dion spent almost the entire first half of Saturday's slaughter of St. Joseph's the same way she has spent most of the season.

She was standing at the top of the penalty area with her arms folded across her chest, generally being more neglected than little orphan Annie. Dion wears the number one on her back, and Saturday afternoon she proved that it is indeed the loneliest number that you'll ever know.

Both Dion and Angie Napoli, who relieved her for the second half, could have brought a chair and textbook onto the field and truly been student–athletes.

Dion never actually touched the ball until the 44th of her 45 minutes of action, with her team comfortably up 4–0, when she passed the ball back–and–forth between her defenders in a time–killing tactic.

To alleviate keeper boredom, coach Jim Rudy even pulled Dion and Napoli up to attack on some of UMass' corner kicks, a tactic he has not used since trailing late in a 1992 NCAA quarterfinal against Connecticut.

"I'd like to feel like a part of the team," Dion kidded. "I'd like to be doing something, but the time will come."

While life in goal might be uneventful for Dion and Napoli, Erin Lynch wouldn't have it any other way.

"Our goal is to not let up anything — no goals and just as few shots as possible," central defender Lynch said. "The less work the keeper has to do, the better it is for us. That's what we take pride in doing."

After posting seven consecutive shutouts, in which opponents launched a total of 29 shots at goal, it's safe to say that the UMass defense has been accomplishing its goal.

The team's goals against average stands at a microscopic 0.13, having allowed just one own goal.

Turn to DEFENSE, page 10

Field hockey travels to Philly to face Temple

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts field hockey team travels to Philadelphia to face Atlantic 10 foe Temple tomorrow at Geasey Field in the team's seventh consecutive road game.

MASSACHUSETTS	3
TEMPLE	1

With a 3–1 victory at Rhode Island Wednesday, the Minutewomen advanced to 6–1, 1–0 in the A–10. The Owls stand at 3–3, 0–1 in conference play.

Massachusetts leads the all–time series between the two schools, which dates back to 1978, 17–5. UMass won last year's tilt 1–0.

For the Minutewomen, freshman Saskia Fuchs has been an offensive sparkplug, scoring four goals on the year. Fuchs, has also helped on six goals, and was tied for 13th in the nation in assists before the URI game.

Sophomore Erica Johnston has come into her own as of late, stepping out from Fuchs' shadow. Johnston has tallied a team–high five goals this season, while assisting on two. Johnston was responsible for UMass' 4–3 overtime win against Penn State last Sunday, as she netted the game– winning goal in overtime.

Senior Kyle Rothenberger and sophomore Kate Putnam are running even in the points list, each with three goals and four assists. Junior Courtney MacLean also has a trio of tallies.

For the Owls, offensive output has come at the hands of Claudia Ovchinnikoff and Cherifa Nouri. Both Ovchinnikoff and Nouri have put in four goals thus far this season, Nouri's tallies coming on 16 shots and Ovchinnikoff's on 12 shots. Ovchinnikoff has also assisted on three goals, and Nouri has helped on one.

Gina DeFazio has netted a pair of scores and assisted on as many. Judy Sichler and Torie Russell have each added a goal to the team total. Katrina Wolfe has helped on a pair of put–ins, while Heather Walker, Renita Bergey and Kelly Smith each have one assist.

On the defensive end of the field, the UMass backs have been solid on the year, not allowing opponents any extra room to move.

Amy Ott was the defensive force against Penn St., suffocating the Lady Lion attack with her countless tackles. Melanie Gore, Laura Phelan and Jen Gutzman join Ott in the backfield.

Minutewoman goalie Hilary Rose has stopped 88 shots on the year. She was ranked fifth in the nation in saves and save percentage before last Wednesday's game. Rose has also turned back four penalty strokes on the year.

Temple goalie Deb Brown has seen all but 19 minutes of action in the Owl net this season, stopping 79 shots. She has amassed a 3.72 goals against average and has shut out opponents twice in a pair of 1–0 wins. Backup goalie Jenni Kelley has played in one game, stopping one shot.

The Minutewomen will finally play at Totman Field for the first time (the game against Yale at Totman was rained out), when they return home Oct. 2 to face Northeastern at 3:30 p.m.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 20 | New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 | Tuesday, October 1, 1996

Dynamic duo doubles pleasure

UMass' Alex Aller is half of the doubles tandem that put the Minutemen over the top at the Army Invitational (See Sports, page 10).

Smells like Nirvana again

Nirvana rockson. Check out our review of From the Muddy Banks of the Wishkah (See Arts &Living, page 6).

WORLD

Leads throughout to UPDATE continued negotiations

By George John
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — In a motel overlooking the city they fought over, Bosnia's Muslim, Serb and Croat leaders pledged Monday to try to work together for the Bosnia they nearly destroyed.

It was the first meeting of what promises to be a fractious joint presidency. But international mediators said the fact that it took place was significant in itself, and they sounded optimistic about the meeting's results.

The newly elected co-presidents have huge differences to resolve. It was unclear how much they could agree on — or how they would build the loose national government that is supposed to rule this bitterly divided country.

Muslim leader Alija Izetbegovic, Serb Momcilo Krajisnik and Croat Kresimir Zubak talked for four hours into the evening. Those inside the closed meeting said they dined together, each ordering the "Bosnia Plate" — a medley of cold cuts and cheese.

NATION

Perot camp continuing complaints to court for upcoming debates

By Katie Fairbank
Associated Press

DALLAS — Ross Perot will get his hour of network TV on Tuesday, but it's not the weekly prime time he wanted. So he's forging ahead with his complaints to the Federal Communications Commission.

He'll also get a federal court hearing Tuesday on the lawsuit he's filed in an attempt to be included in the presidential debates that start Sunday night.

The Presidential Commission on Debates excluded Perot, saying he has no real chance of winning the presidency.

But Perot argues that he meets the bipartisan commission's objective standards to be in the debates — such as access to federal campaign funds and a spot on all 50 state ballots.

In advance of Tuesday's hearing before U.S. District Judge Thomas Hogan, Perot's staffers aired theories that he has been excluded because some commission sponsors support the North American Free Trade Agreement, a pet target of the Texas billionaire.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wed.	Thurs.
HIGH: 70 LOW: 50	HIGH: 70 LOW: 50	HIGH: 60 LOW: 50

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News.....page 3
Sports .....page 10

Intertribal Powwow presents essence of Native American life

THANG VO \COLLEGIAN

The voices of the Native American drumming and singing groups rang out, inspiring the dancers during Sunday's Powwow.

By Lia Wong
Collegian Correspondent

Under a large white tent, the beating of drums and the voicing of chants resonated across the Campus Pond.

The annual Intertribal Powwow, sponsored by the Dr. Josephine White Eagle Cultural Center, the Native American Students Association, and the Office of ALANA (Asian, Latin, African, Native American Affairs), was held this past Saturday and Sunday. The tent, set up for the occasion was donated by the Mashantucket Pequot Nation.

"Powwows are an authentic social gathering of the various Nations present; celebrating togetherness and friendship and are opened to the public, not just a totem representation of Native American Culture," said Sara Little Crow, of White Earth, Minn.

Little Crow, an undergraduate student at Hampshire College, sells Native American leather goods with her husband, Badger of Turtle Mountain, ND. The couple travels from Powwow to Powwow, like many of the vendors present.

The powwow held at the University of Massachusetts is one of many which occur from April to late October throughout the United States. Events at this powwow include, storytelling, traditional dancing, fancy dancing, art exhibits and the grand entry ceremony.

A drum, jewelry, art work and T-shirts, were donated by various vendors to be raffled off.

Many of the participants were clothed in various regalia representing the traditional outfits worn by each tribe.

According to Aquila Ayana-McCants, Associate Director of Undergraduate Admission, there were a total of approximately 100 Nations present at the powwow. They ranged from the New England region, with tribes such as the Mashantucket, Wampanoag, Shinnecock, Pequot, Muscogee Creek-Eastern Band and Nipmuc to the Abenaki of Alabama or Georgia. Nations of the West were also present such as the Cherokee, Narragansett, LumBee, Mapuche and others.

According to Ken "Rainbow Cougar" Edwards, member of the Colville Confederated Tribes of Washington state there are over 400 Nations who speak over 250 different dialects in America. Edwards is an artist, storyteller and oral historian, he attends powwows and holds exhibitions of his work across the country.

"The ideas and themes for my work come from the many stories I tell," said Edwards.

According to Chuck and Kim Lewis, two non-Native American vendors who sell authentic Native American

Turn to POW WOW, page 3

Hampshire students meet with president; discusses recent staff

By Raghuram Vadarevu & Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

AMHERST — A group of students from Hampshire College held a meeting with the college's president, Gregory S. Prince Jr., yesterday to discuss recent dismissals of staff members from support services for students of color, abused or assaulted students and gay and lesbian affairs.

"He [Prince] has made the central decision of firing people from key student services without our input," said Themis Stone, a fourth-year social science major at Hampshire. "He says [now] that we can be a part of the process, but essentially the decision has already been made."

Approximately 75 students from SOURCE (Students of Underrepresented Cultures and Ethnicities) attended the protest; 50 attending the meeting with Prince and 25 outside watching closed-circuit television of the meeting.

"The firings that the Administration termed as layoffs were both unjust and unfair," said University of Massachusetts senior anthropology major and member of the Student Labor Action Coalition, Sarah Mikulis. "The Student Affairs positions eliminated were vital for student life."

The students called the meeting because of their increasing concern that Hampshire's president and top administrators have consistently violated documents which the college has signed pledging their support to students of color, such as the 1988 Dakin/SOURCE Agreements and the 1992 Cole Agreements.

As a result of the restructuring by Prince, $500,000 was cut from the Hampshire budget.

About $100,000 in cuts came from Student Affairs, while the other $400,000 were derived from other parts of the college. Within Student Affairs, 16 full-time equivalent positions existed; three of these positions were cut.

The student's demands included.

- That the positions of SOURCE coordinator, Director/Supervisor of Counselor Advocates, Coordinator of Student Activities and Affirmative Action Officer be immediately reinstated.
- That the individuals who previously held these positions: Theresa "Kuji" Gordon, Bernice Gero, Gina Longo and Barbara Orr-Wise are rehired to these positions with their original job descriptions.
- That a public apology be made to the individuals whose positions were cut and to the Hampshire College community which was excluded form the decisions on reconstructing to date.
- That a committee be formed consisting of an equal number of students, staff, faculty and administration to restructure the administrative process at Hampshire College.
- That the student voices be bolstered through support to student groups, specifically, the reallotment of work study hours, rehiring of in touch coordinators, and non-token advisors.
- That the 1992 Cole Agreement and the 1988 Dakin/SOURCE agreement be signed in a legally binding fashion.
- That Hampshire College make a strong commitment to Affirmative Action in its actions and its rhetoric.
- That Presidents Prince recognize that he has abused his power as president by making these changes without consulting students, faculty or staff.

Two in Twenty's showcase lays out plans for the fall

By Jamie Sinsheimer
Collegian Staff

Last night in the Mary Lyon dorm in the Northeast residential living area on the University of Massachusetts campus, the Two in Twenty floor held its annual showcase.

The showcase is a chance for students and faculty to come from various outlets around campus and share their knowledge about Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual and Transgender (GLBT) issues. Donnie Roberts, the resident assistant on the floor, and Julie Robbins, the resident director for the Mary Lyon/Crabtree cluster, were the two main speakers at the event.

To start off the evening, all of the attendees introduced themselves to the rest of the crowd and stated who they were and why they were at the showcase. Among some of the groups represented were members of the Chancellor's Task Force, Health Services, Residential Assistants and all of the residents from the floor.

Also present at the showcase were Housing Directors and Assistants from all over campus including staff from Kennedy and Coolidge Residence Halls in the Southwest living area.

After the introductions were made, guests were invited to speak about their different resources and how they could help to support the GLBT community. One of the speakers who came forward was Asha Van Doyon, the political chairperson of the LGBA (Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual Alliance) who spoke of his office and how it helps GLBT students.

The meeting was then turned back over to Roberts who spoke of the programming on the floor for the semester, explaining the events for the semester month by month.

In September, the floor was focused on building communications between residents because most of the floor is made up of first-year students. This month, the Two In Twenty floor will be dedicated to working on events for National Coming Out Day in October which will be committed to giving back the support that they have been receiving to other communities.

November will also be a month of coming out but with a different approach as it will deal with going home for the Thanksgiving break. Most queer students find it hard to go home when they have been surrounded by the comfort of a community like the Two in Twenty floor.

The end of the semester will focus on school issues such as finals and studying. December, is a rough month for all students, and the comfort of study groups and support during this time is a necessary and important Issue.

The workshops offered throughout the semester are open to everyone on campus and are still in the planning stages. The focus of these workshops is to bring support groups and students closer together.

The evening then geared towards a more serious topic. Felice Yeskel, the director of The Stonewall Center spoke of funding problems that are facing the center. The money that has been used to fund Stonewall's projects over the last eleven years is "soft" money funded by the Chancellor's office. This funding is slowly being cut off and Yeskel urged all the guests to write letters to various members of the administration to get permanent funding for Stonewall's events.

Lt. David Grader of the UMass Police Department and also a member of the Chancellor's Task Force and Parents and Friends of Lesbians and Gays (P-FLAG), urged support of GLBT people and felt that public safety is an important issue.

"I am here to show my support to this portion of our community [UMass] through the department of public safety," Grader said. He also stressed the fact that the UMass Police Department was concerned about maintaining the funding of The Stonewall Center.

"Tonight got students involved with staff and faculty who can support them throughout the year and I believe it went really well," Roberts stated. The Two in Twenty floor showcase was a good way to bring members of the community closer together.

Campus Safety Summit planned

Cross section of campus students to work toward creating a safer campus; Luippold calls for more effective partnership

By Michelle Hillman
Collegian Staff

This semester, the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs, Student Government Association and the University of Massachusetts Public Safety Department are involved in an effort to improve campus safety.

A Safety Summit has been unofficially planned to discuss "various issues such as the shooting in the Malcolm X Center," that occurred last semester said Maurice Caston, president of Student Government Association.

Caston said that currently SGA and the Attorney General of SGA, David Heyes, are working with the Dean of Students to "get things started."

The Safety Summit is group of ten different individuals that represent a cross section of the campus including staff, security members and public safety officials.

"Since the summer, the group has been working on a more extensive newsletter about safety on campus, which should be printed and distributed at the end of September or October," said Tom Robinson, the vice chancellor of public safety.

Chief of Public Safety John Luippold stated that it is the mission of the public safety department "to try to keep the campus safe, but we can't do it alone," and would like to engage in "a more effective partnership."

Luippold would like to see the Summit "start building networks and develop stronger relationships among all parts of campus."

Robinson also cited that "we want to have the safest campus we can possibly have," and would like to "enter

Turn to SAFETY, page 2

JAMES STANLEY \COLLEGIAN

Donnie Roberts an R.A. on the 2 in 20 floor and Julie Robbins the R.D. of the Mary Lyons dormitory, celebrated the programs continued success with residents and friends yesterday.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Tuesday, Oct. 1

Discussion— The Wildlife Society presents a talk by Tom Houston on the "Importance of Hunter Education," at Holdsworth Hall, room 203, at 6 p.m. Refreshments will follow.

Info–Social— The LBGA will hold it's weekly info–social from 7–9 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803. There will be refreshments and announcements concerning events for October. For more information, call the LBGA office at 545–0154.

Meeting— Spectrum, a student run art and literary magazine, will hold a general meeting for all interested students at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center. Elections will be held for Prose, Business, and Publicity Managers. For more information, call 545–2240.

Wednesday, Oct. 2

Fund Raiser— Alpha Phi Omega, a national co–ed service fraternity, is sponsoring the 3rd annual Blue Bowl, a football game between the UMass and Amherst police. The game, held at Amherst Regional High School, will start at 7:30 p.m. Tickets, including a raffle for a stereo, will be available at the game for $5 each. Proceeds go to benefit the North Valley Special Olympics. For more information, call 584– 9377.

Meeting— The Distinguished Visitor's Program (DVP) will be having an informational meeting at 7 p.m. in Campus Center room 811. Anyone interested in bringing a speaker to campus is invited to attend. Help us prepare for our upcoming speaker, Nadine Strossen. For more information, call 545–0046.

Meeting— The Student Health Advisory Board (SHAB) will meet at University Health Services (UHS) in room 304 from 5:30–6:30 p.m. All are welcome to attend. For more information, contact the Health Education office at UHS at 577–5181.

Poetry— Claudia's Cafe presents an open poetry reading and poetry slam at 8 p.m. The Ozark's Poet Collective will be featured. There is a $2 cover charge at the door, and sign–ups for the slam will begin at 7:30.

Seminar— Michael Menaker, from the department of biology at the University of Virginia, will speak on the "Mammalian Circadian Axiz and its Roots," at 4 p.m. in room 319 of Morrill II. The event is hosted by Eric Bittman and Brad Powers.

Workshop— The Learning Resources Center is sponsoring a note taking workshop from 3:30–5 p.m. on the 10th floor of the W.E.B. DuBois Library. Call 545–5334 to register.

Friday, Oct. 4

Lecture/Discussion—Mt. Holyoke College presents Torie Osborn, activist and author of Coming Home to America : A Roadmap to Gay and Lesbian Empowerment, at 4 p.m. at the Five College Women's Research Center in the Dickinson Living Room at Mt. Holyoke College.

Music— Spectral Voices will perform harmonic singing at the Montague Bookmill. Come hear their celestial harmonies and unique vocal styles, that draw from roots in Tibetan Buddhist chants. Admission, $7/door. For more information, call Jim at (860) 633–5057.

Religious —There will be a NFTY–Style creative service with guitar at 6 p.m. in the rec room of Hillel. Dinner will be served at 7 p.m. For more information, call 549–1710.

Notices

Education— The HCAH HEAD START program has immediate openings for its free pre–school Classroom and Home Base option. The two Amherst classrooms are open Mon.–Fri. from 8:30 a.m.–12:30 p.m. Breakfast, lunch and transportation are provided. To obtain a pre–registration form or for additional information, call the Head Start main office at 582–4206 or the Amherst center at 549–3993.

Religious— The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley offers rides to students to attend the 10 a.m. service in Amherst. Drivers arrive at the Knowlton and Prince bus stops at 9:45. Please call Mark to confirm, or for other stops, at 253–0361.

Everywoman's Center —Acculturation Group for Latina Women, facilitated by Mari Vicente, Thurs. from 4–6 p.m. Child Sexual Abuse Survivors Support Groups: Group 1 facilitated by Sara Elinoff, Mondays from 7–9 p.m. Group 2 facilitator, day and time TBA. Coming Out Group For Lesbians, facilitated by Lynne Schachne, Mondays 4–5:30 p.m. Lifting Your Spirits, facilitated by Carla Brennan and Diana Dalendina, Weds. 4–5:30 p.m. Eco–Psychology for Women, facilitated by Carla Brennan, Fridays 10–11:30 a.m. Post Abortion Support Group, facilitated by Peggy Warwick, Wednesdays 5:30–6: 30 p.m. Self–Esteem & Assertiveness for Women, facilitated by Carla Brennan, Wednesdays 6:30–8 p.m. Single Mothers Support Group, facilitated by Amy Rosebury, Tuesdays 1–2:30 p.m. Women & Divorce, facilitated by Ali Thompson, Tuesdays 6:30–8 p.m. All groups offered by the Everywoman's Center begin in October, and offer a safe and confidential space. For other groups, call 545–0883.

Meeting— The Animal Rights Coalition meetings are every Tuesday at 7 p.m. in room 306 of the Student Union. For more information, call the ARC office at 5–1925.

Five College–REFLECT, the Five College Bereavement Support Program is a student organization devoted to helping those coping with grief. REFLECT is offering two free 8 week grief support groups this semester. Groups are forming now. Please call 577–5316 for more information.

Staff Needed— The UMass Index yearbook needs staff in all departments. Editorial positions are available in Photo, Layout, Copy, and Marketing departments. An assistant copy editor and assistant sports editor are also needed. Meetings are held on Wednesdays at 7 p.m., 304 Student Union, or call 545–0848 if interested.

Support group — Synthesis Center Associate Rebecca Reid leads an ongoing support group for single people over 30 from 7:15–8:45 p.m. in downtown Amherst. Single, divorced, widowed and all sexual orientation are welcome. There is a low fee. For information, call 253–5494.

Religious— The Muslim Student Association at the University of Massachusetts invites all Muslims in the Amherst area to weekly Friday prayer from 1 to 2 p.m. in the Campus Center. The room number will be posted on the Notice Board. For more information, call Utama at 256–8482 or Laili at 253–0874.

Discussion Group— "A Course in Miracles" will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for 10 weeks on Mondays starting in September. For more information, call 253–3795.

Dance— The Northeast American School of Dance Studio in Northampton will hold a dance spree every Friday from 8:30 p.m. to midnight every Friday. People can dance to variety of music in a smoke and alcohol–free environment. All ages welcome. Sliding scale. For more information, call 584–8167.

Singing— The Pioneer Valley Capella has immediate openings for people of all voices interested in a small, focused ensemble singing classical music. Rehearsals are held on Thursday evenings in Northampton. For more information, call Tom at 536–3072 or Karen at 259–1646.

Olver, Swift point fingers in debate

By Jeff Donn
Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD — Just when you maybe thought you had them pinned down, the candidates for the 1st Congressional District sang another round of "Don't Fence Me In." So, in their fiercest debate Sunday night, it was by turns Rep. John Olver(D–Mass.), the advocate for education, the environment and health spending — and then Olver, the budget cutter.

First, it was State Sen. Jane Swift, the Independent. Then, it was Swift, the Republican savior of this state's economy. The candidates changed hats repeatedly as accusations flew back and forth in the hour–long debate sponsored by WGBY public television and the Springfield newspapers in the race for Olver's congressional seat.

However, Olver and Swift did part paths on defense, with Swift pressing for a strong military and Olver urging an end to a Cold War spending level. He also consistently emphasized strong support for education, environmental protection, broader health insurance coverage and generous Social Security. Swift touted her efforts to help small businesses and farmers, while proposing unspecified cuts in bureaucracy to reduce the cost of government.

Olver said that Swift would instead end up backing House Speaker Newt Gingrich and proposals that hurt education, the environment and health care.

"If Jane goes to Congress and we're electing Gingrich again, his agenda becomes the agenda of the day and the thing that we would be fighting about," Olver said.

"I think you can separate the two," shot back Swift, "I'm a little strong–headed, as you've probably been able to figure out," she added later, with a chuckle.

But she ignored Olver's challenge to repudiate Gingrich as Republican House leader. She also claimed some credit for the economic comeback of Massachusetts under Gov. William F. Weld, a Republican. "We're the party that saved this state from fiscal bankruptcy," she said. She attacked Olver for repeated votes over the years to raise taxes and for trying to block some measures to tighten welfare rules.

When Olver claimed credit for helping gain federal money for government support to small businesses, Swift fired back, "Many times, allowing them to thrive in our market place is a better solution."

She said Olver had supported a deeply flawed welfare system "that did not reward work."

In his defense, he said somebody "had to have the guts" to help balance the federal budget with some tax increases.

He said some changes in welfare risk sinking millions more children and families deeper into poverty and aggravating future crime. The debate repeatedly returned to an accusatory tone. At one point, Swift even suggested Olver was sexist for questioning her independence from the Republican line.

"Is there a reason why you think a young woman can't be independent while you can?" she asked.

"It clearly isn't a gender issue," he quickly agreed.

Both candidates took pro–choice stands. But they bickered over who should get credit for helping to keep Amtrak trains running in western Massachusetts for another six months. Swift was first elected to the state Senate in 1990 at age 25.

Olver, a former state senator and college chemistry professor, went to Congress in 1991 to replace the late Rep. Silvio Conte.

■ safety

continued from page 1

into a partnership and look out for each other."

"The biggest problem is resources," said Caston. "I feel the administration should do a better job of advertising resources," and "unless we address the big void we're going to see students fall through the cracks."

The goals of the Safety Summit and the and Department of Public Safety according to Luippold are to "raise the level of awareness around safety, on campus specifically." There are, "far more acts of random violence than we've ever had. That concerns us. We want to take pro–active steps," said Robinson.

Living in a small town people assume they are automatically safer than an urban area. We have to be concerned and thoughtful. Walk in pairs or get an escort van," said Robinson.

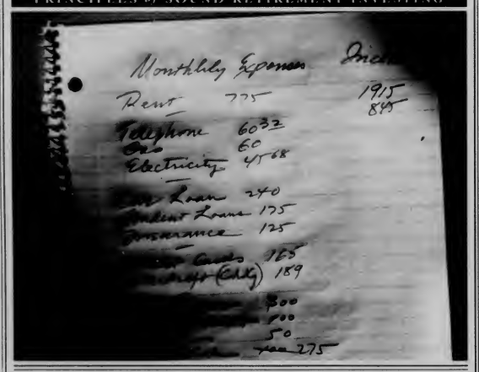
Luippold also said that he was concerned with the "level of violence that occurs on this campus," and the severity involving "dating relationships, alcohol and drug abuse."

Luippold said the repercussions of this abuse also takes the forms of vandalism and assault.

The chief envisions safety as an "ongoing" process and "wouldn't want a conversation," but several to result from the Safety Summit. Luippold would also like to involve other individuals in these conversations, not just students, because "rape and assault is everybody's business."

SOME THINGS ARE MEANT TO BE CLOSED

YOUR MIND ISN'T ONE OF THEM.



For decades, MDA has shown how valuable people with disabilities are to society. We believe talent, ability and desire are more important than strength in a person's muscles. The one barrier these people can't overcome is a closed mind. Keep yours open.

1-800-872-1717

MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY ASSOCIATION

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

IRONICALLY, THE TIME TO START SAVING FOR RETIREMENT IS WHEN IT LOOKS LIKE YOU CAN LEAST AFFORD IT.

Can't afford to save for retirement? The truth is, you can't afford not to. Not when you realize that your retirement can last 20 to 30 years or more. You'll want to live at least as comfortably then as you do now. And that takes planning.

By starting to save now, you can take advantage of tax deferral and give your money time to compound and grow. Consider this: Set aside just $100 each month beginning at age 30 and you can accumulate over $172,109* by the time you reach age 65. But wait ten years and you'll have to budget $219 each month to reach the same goal.

Even if you're not counting the years to retirement, you can count on TIAA-CREF to help you build the future you deserve – with flexible retirement and tax-deferred annuity plans, a diverse portfolio of investment choices, and a record of personal service that spans 75 years.

Over 1.8 million people in education and research put TIAA-CREF at the top of their list for retirement planning. Why not join them?

Call today and learn how simple it is to build a secure tomorrow when you have time and TIAA-CREF working on your side.

Start planning your future. Call our Enrollment Hotline at 1 800 842-2888.

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.℠

*Assuming an interest rate of 7% credited to TIAA Retirement Annuities. This rate is used solely to show the power and effect of compounding. Lower or higher rates would produce very different results. CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services.

© 1996 Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association-College Retirement Equities Fund, 730 Third Avenue, New York, NY

University of Massachusetts at Amherst P&G

Procter & Gamble
Career Information Session

Procter & Gamble is the global leader in the consumer products industry.

We offer starting Full-Time and Summer Co-op positions in Sales Management in major marketing areas throughout the United States.

We are looking for talented students from ALL MAJORS who are eager for a challenging career and want to learn and excel among proven winners.

You should come check out our information session if you have:

- A Strong MOTIVATION to achieve...unusual drive and commitment to make an impact and succeed in a demanding environment.
- An outstanding record of LEADERSHIP...the ability to excite interest and action in others.
- Strong oral and written COMMUNICATION skills...the ability to express ideas clearly, concisely and persuasively.
- A high level of INTELLIGENCE...the ability to analyze facts quickly and draw well-reasoned conclusions; the ability to innovate, to come up with new ideas and better ways of doing things.
- Effectiveness in TEAM SITUATIONS...the ability to work with others and focus a group on key business goals.

TWO LOCATIONS, TWO TIMES - REFRESHMENTS WILL BE SERVED!!

When : Wednesday, October 2nd
Time : 4-6 pm
Where: School of Management Rm. 312 (Faculty Lounge)

When : Wednesday, October 2nd
Time : 7-9 pm
Where: Campus Center Rm. 101

Special Thanks To The:
Mather Career Center. SOM Placement Office. Undergraduate Business Club, BMCP

Quest toward bicycle safety goes on

By Laura Stack
Collegian Staff

Statistics show that student concern for bicycle safety has risen this semester, however officers from the University of Massachusetts Department of Public Safety continue to stress the importance of bicycle registration and provide information on securing personal property.

"We want to work with students cooperatively so they don't get their property stolen," said Lawrence Holmes, deputy chief of security.

Two University public safety officers, Neil Lunney and Richard Coach, have invested both on and off–duty time in researching the problem of bicycle theft on campus.

According to the officers' observations, more students are becoming active in securing their bicycles properly — an effort that pleases Lunney and Coach.

"One thing we encourage is that students upgrade the quality of lock on their bikes," Coach said. "Chain or cable locks can be easily defeated.

"We recommend the Kryptonite U–Bolt type of lock, or the Bike Club — that's what I use on my bike when I'm on patrol," Coach said. "Both models are available in the University Store."

In addition to informing students about superior locking devices, Public Safety, along with Alphi Phi Omega service fraternity members, has been conducting free campus bicycle registration. Students who register have their bicycle's serial number entered into the police department's computer, receive a decal and can have their bicycles engraved for identification purposes.

Public Safety also offers a national registration program, which costs $5.

According to Lunney, over 200 students have registered their bicycles so far this semester — topping the department's record of 150 for last semester. A majority of those students took advantage of the registration week held outside of the Student Union Building Sept. 9–13.

To maintain this rate in bicycle registration, Lunney said they are planning to hold registration hours on Tuesdays outside of Dickinson Hall throughout October, and perhaps longer depending on student interest.

The officers will also bring the registration program to North Village Apartments on Oct. 5, and Lincoln Apartments on Oct. 19.

Out of the 13 bicycles stolen so far this semester, four of them were stolen from North Village Apartments. Only 3 of the total stolen had the Kryptonite locks.

By registering a bicycle with the police department, the chance for recovery is significantly increased. Lunney himself has recognized and recovered stolen bicycles on campus.

"During the summer, I was at the information desk [in Dickinson] and a student walked in and said his bike was stolen from Tobin Hall," Lunney said. "I asked him for a description, and told him I would keep an eye out for it.

"That night I went to the Campus Center loading dock, and discovered the bike, not locked up. I turned it over, it fit the description, and we found the person who took the bike," Lunney said.

Lunney also posts flyers in areas where he knows a bike has been stolen. For example, on Sunday night a Cannondale bicycle was stolen, except for its front wheel, and identified as being carried into Coolidge Residence Hall. Lunney cites this as perfect example of alert students interacting with police, with the common goal of retrieving the stolen property.

■ powwow

continued from page 1

Artwork, "themes depend on tribe and personal experiences of the artist. The artists tells stories through [their] art work."

The Lewis' collection comes from both known and unknown artists who live on reservations in Oklahoma such as Jeanne Walker Rorex (Cherokee), Jane Maudin (Choctaw descent), and Duane Dishta (Zuni). According to Lewis, the Trail of Tears is also a popular theme.

This year's powwow was the largest one ever held at UMass. A powwow held in Connecticut last weekend had 32 Drums and 3000 dancers, the UMass powwow had only 3 drums.

"This is basically how it's been the last couple of years, " said Mikki Aganstata (Eastern Cherokee), co–owner of Native American Cuisine, a food vendor at the powwow.

According to Ayana–McCants, a drum is a group of chanters or singers which provides the instrumental and vocal ingredients for each dance.

"Each drum must know at least 100 different songs," said Ayana–McCants.

There were non–registered dancers and approximately 85 registered dancers performing at this year's powwow.

According to Nathan Peyton, acting co–coordinator of the Native American Students Association, "It took tremendous dedication and commitment, the powwow was a great success. It took the combined efforts of Native American students, allies and staff a year to make this event happen."

Joyce White Deer Vincent, director of the Josephine White Eagle Cultural Center, said the coordinators have been planning this powwow since the end of last year's powwow.

There was an honorary dance held for Vincient as well as one held in honor of all those who contributed to making this year's powwow possible.

Several vendors were at the powwow selling authentic Native American merchandise. Items included jewelry made on reservations, neck pouches made from brain–tanned leather, chokers, recording of Native American chants and songs, paintings and paintings by Native American artists.

Also present were food vendors selling Native American food, such as Mohawk style corn soup, Tacos with buffalo meat and Barbecola burgers.

"Most of these, such as the tacos, are not traditional food but have evolved among the Native Americans through the years after they were moved onto reservations," said Aganstata.

According to Aganstata, traditional Native Americans did not use or have salt or wheat flour, instead they used another type of flour and pepper. The word BBQ came for a Tahiana word Barbecola and was later adapted by the Spaniards.

Chancellor Scott said in reference to the powwow, "It is an event that recruits Native Americans to come and it gives them the opportunity to meet people."

The University is striving to increase the numbers of Native American students enrolled.

"Because of the loss of Native American staff in the Admissions office this year, we are deeply concerned about the future of Native Americans at this University," expressed Carrie Vanderhoop, a junior comparative literature major.

According to Peyton, "It is our hope to form a strong and active power base for the political and social interest of all Native students on this campus, as well as to provide an outlet and forum for students to express themselves both to each other and the campus at large."

Police ready for flag football game

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

This time, police officers will have it out for each other and on Wednesday, Oct. 2, spectators at the second annual Blue Bowl will get a chance to witness just that while benefiting the Special Olympics.

The Amherst police, will defend their title against the University of Massachusetts police, who were defeated 22–7 last year in a game of flag football.

Kick–off is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. at the Amherst Regional High School. Along with the police, Alpha Phi Omega, a national co–ed service fraternity with a chapter at UMass, will sponsor the event.

"The game is being taken very seriously," said Area Director of North Valley, Gary Dean. "There is going to be a PA system, the score board will be in use and there will be official referees."

UMass police officer Tom O'Donnell said he and his teammates hope to have fun and raise as much money as possible for the Special Olympics.

"I can't guarantee a win this year, but we've got a good team," O'Donnell said. "Last year [Amherst] racked up a quick 14 points against us, but we only ended up losing by eight points," O'Donnell said.

"Hopefully we'll give them a good game. If not, we're there for Special Olympics," he added.

"The UMass officers have been practicing for about three months. Everyone, including the volunteers are very enthusiastic," said Vice President Nat Mitkowski, an officer of Alpha Phi Omega.

Alpha Phi Omega is responsible for coordinating the game. "We are a service fraternity, we are not involved in Greek life," said President Michele Laramie.

Tickets are on sale for $5 each at 409 Student Union Building. They will also be available for purchase at the gates. All proceeds will benefit the North Valley Special Olympics to help buy sports equipment.

The North Valley Special Olympics covers Franklin and Hampshire counties.

Special Olympics focuses on athletes who have mental disabilities and other related developmental problems. Training and competition programs are year round.

A growing aspect of the Special Olympics is the Unified Sports Program. This program combines athletes with and without disabilities on one team and compete against other unified teams.

Athletes can choose from a wide variety of sports, soccer, Alpine and cross country skiing, floor hockey, bowling, basketball, track and volleyball are just a few.

Many UMass students volunteer their time to coach teams at the North Valley Special Olympics. However this is the first time a group has shared their services together.

Dean said, "We have some great volunteers from UMass. it's a real big help to have a group of students volunteering together. There is much more change that can occur and as a group they are so much more successful."

Many of the Alpha Phi Omega volunteers are already immersed in a number of service projects.

The group has been involved in the Bike Registration Program, visiting the Amherst Nursing Home and a Boy Scout Troop in Northampton.

"We are open to everyone, however there is a pledging period," said Laramie.

"Interested individuals must perform a certain number of service hours before they can become part of the fraternity," said Laramie.

JAMES STANLEY \COLLEGIAN

Horseshoe Hoops!
Tim Gates of Amherst dunks while warming up for a game yesterday in Southwest.

COME TELL US WHAT YOU THINK!

About What? Your experiences and views about student-related services, such as registration and financial interactions. We will be asking you about your experiences with administrative offices and processes, what is now working well and what is not, and what you think would work better.

Who? If you are a student here, we want to hear from you!

When and where? The focus group will be held in rooms 112 and 114 Dickinson from 3 to 4:30 on Wednesday, October 2. (Dickinson is the brick building between Goodell and the Mullins Center.)

Why? This is one of the early steps in a major project to replace our existing computer system that supports Bursar, Admissions, Financial Aid, Housing, and Registrar with new state-of-the-art software. The ultimate goal of this project is to provide improved and streamlined administrative services to students, porents, faculty and departments.

What else? All information will be held in absolute confidence, and no names of respondents will be retained. Your contribution is of great value to this project. If you have questions, call Heidi or Bo at 5-6133. Refreshments will be served!

PLEASE COME!

Golden Key
National Honor Society

Campus Awareness Days
October 2, 3, 4 1996
9:30 - 3:00pm
Campus Center

BILINGUAL SENIOR CUSTOMER SERVICE REPRESENTATIVE

Florence Savings Bank is currently seeking a qualified candidate for the position of Bilingual Senior Customer Service Representative. The successful candidate will be responsible for opening and maintaining various types of accounts, cross-selling bank products and services, outreach efforts within Hampshire County, counseling customers on loan products and assisting them through the application process, and providing interpreting services to Spanish speaking customers.

The position requires bilingual (English and Spanish) skill, prior customer service experience in a bank environment, knowledge of bank loan products and experience with loan application process, and demonstrated presentation and facilitation skills.

A competitive salary and outstanding benefits package is offered. If you are interested in these opportunities, please forward your resume in confidence to: Vice President Human Resources Director, Florence Savings Bank, 85 Main Street, Florence, MA 01060. Florence Savings Bank is an Equal Opportunity Employer and encourages diverse candidates to apply for this position. No phone calls please.

Florence Savings Bank

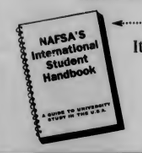
Did you know

That GE is hosting its 1st annual Career Day at U. Mass?

TODAY!!!
10 AM - 3 PM
U.MASS
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM

Regardless of your major, if your interested is piqued, we invite you to bring your interest and your questions. Resumes welcome.

An Environment Without Boundaries



An equal opportunity employee.

© 1996 AT&T

Bringing your family over

Sure, it's a challenge. That's why every International Student needs this.

It's free when you sign with AT&T. Call 1 800 533-6198.

NAFSA AT&T

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1992

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Morse Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor
Ui-mphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Mark McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor
Michael Elliott News Editor
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor

Michelle Tillman Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Sean Horgan Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

A closer look at the PC world

Is it just me, or is our society obsessed with the concept of political correctness? If I've learned anything at this University, it's that we have to be very careful about the way in which we say things in order to avoid angering those who may take offense to it.

Away from the little world we like to call UMass, I'm often put in positions in which I have to defend the concept of PC as something that helps society. Doing so is an immediate reaction which seems like a necessity because it is, in a word, politically correct. Society has worked to convince me that what is PC is good, although I've never stopped to think about what makes something PC... until now.

Mark McGrath

PC is an institution which works to free people of labels which have been slapped on them by others over the course of time. The people who are referred to by these labels most often take offense to the "traditional" terms used to describe them. Instead of being called Indians (which was altogether inaccurate to start off with), PC dictates that we refer to the indigenous people of North America as Native Americans.

In doing so, we are not necessarily changing the ideas or stereotypes of these people, but we are forcing ourselves to acknowledge that there is more than one way to look at them and to show them a little of the respect they deserve in the process.

Therefore, in my eyes, political correctness is something, which when used correctly can have a positive impact on society. Unfortunately, the concept has been taken to extremes over the past few years, and because it has been stretched to accommodate every little aspect of today's world, it has lost a lot of the legitimacy it once had.

When researching political correctness on the Internet, I found hundreds of pages which made fun of the concept but none that stepped back and took a serious look at the matter. In fact, people have become so desensitized to the term that whenever they hear it, they immediately turn themselves off to it. The enemies of PC have taken over the term and changed it into a form that lacks any of the positive meanings that it once possessed.

Who, you ask, are the enemies of PC? They happen to be all over the place, sometimes unaware that they are doing any damage. Anyone who uses a euphemism in relation to a group of people is an enemy to PC. A euphemism is a word or phrase designed to avoid language which is too harsh or blunt. Critics of PC often become confused when euphemisms are used. "To pass away" is a euphemism for to die, but to say the word "die" is not politically incorrect.

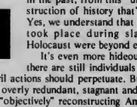
People tend to use politically correct terms as euphemisms, when in fact euphemisms have nothing to do with political correctness, which serves to show respect to others not to cover up what is unpleasant about the "traditional" terms. The difference between the two is very subtle, but very important.

Also, anyone who uses the concept of political correctness to make a joke (i.e. Politically Correct Bedtime Stories) is an enemy to political correctness, for they have worked to trivialize an idea which once carried with it a certain amount of validity and integrity.

Most often, those who are exceedingly critical of political correctness are those who have given and used labels for any amount of time, members of the white male aristocracy who feel that by showing any amount of respect for others they are losing some of their power. By mocking the concept of a PC society, they have effectively alienated those who are in favor of a progressive society.

With such adversity, how can we reach the lofty goals that political correctness seeks to achieve? Well, we already have a good start. A large percentage of the members of our society are becoming aware of the implications of the language they use. That is not the problem.

What we have to do is to de-program the attitudes toward political correctness which we have picked up over time. Doing so may enable us to see exactly why political correctness is needed and used in today's society.



Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

A partial history

"We can never hope to understand the nature of ... international and interracial conflict in general, if we fail to work constantly at correcting and re-creating the historical memory..." — from War Without Mercy by John Dower

I took the Asian–American Experience Independent Curriculum here last semester. The course might as well have been an underground course, because, for some reason, this course can't be added into the curriculum, unlike more important courses like European History 140. (I hope you catch the sarcasm.)

A bunch of "hopefuls" including myself attended this course once a week. We met in the basement of Furcolo, that building out in the boondocks, on Thursday evenings. The University didn't provide financial help to run the course. The TA had to spend her own money to make copies of the readings. Isn't this pathetic? We call UMass a place for higher learning?

C.F. Gorospe

However, I'm not here to write about how this underground course evolved because the Asian–American Studies Coalition on campus can do that. I'm here to point out the unfairness that's taking place on this campus as we go to classes, smoke our joints and drink our booze. Maybe we should sober up and listen.

The underground course primarily attempted to educate students about Asian–American experiences and their history. Just for clarification, UMass offers courses on Asian history, which is very different from Asian–American history. Furthermore, the courses that are being offered here focus mainly on the more developed Asian countries such as Japan. The underground course served a different purpose, it informed Asian–Americans of current issues concerning them that would otherwise be difficult to find in the press.

If the above quote consists of some truth, then how does never encountering a curriculum like this affect students' psyches, self–images, views of the world and views of others when they graduate from a post–secondary school?

How much of a hope do these students have "to understand the nature of interracial conflict" when there's no way on this campus that they can "correct and re–create" their very own "historical memory?" The slimness of their chances of understanding "interracial conflict" is apparent.

Some of us haven't even reached the first step acquiring the fundamentals of our history. We haven't been introduced to how Asian–Americans played a role in American history. How can we then "correct and re–create the historical memory" when we have nothing to start from? How were the other people of color treated during the segregation and the Civil Rights Movement? Are these not important questions? There are people who desperately need to know, but the answers and resources aren't readily available.

Are UMass and other universities suppressing pertinent information from the public and therefore distorting facts? Why isn't the President of this university doing anything about it? It seems that all he cares about is his personal status and his salary. Maybe he's just completely oblivious or apathetic to this topic.

Some students are sympathetic and eager to learn a different form of history for the sake of such a simple and significant thing — to further understand one's self — but they yearn for something they lack the implements to define. How are these individuals expected to deal with the overwhelmingly critical message that history is important to know to prevent it from repeating itself, when Asian– American history is indeed blatantly excluded from the standard curriculum in most universities in the nation? It's absurd as we enter the 21st century that courses and readings which truly pertain to a specific group are still excluded.

If we are indeed reconstructing American history, then to include Asian American history will enhance American history. Are we not repeating history by excluding those who have made great contributions in the past, from this "universal" reconstruction of history that's taking place? Yes, we understand that the actions that took place during slavery and the Holocaust were beyond evil.

It's even more hideous to know that there are still individuals who think that these evil actions should perpetuate. But, have we not become overly redundant, stagnant and almost ineffective by "objectively" reconstructing American history? Are we not almost moving backwards?

In retrospect, it's been unfortunate that I've encountered various readings on Asian–Americans that were completely dull and unreliable. I've always been enormously interested in the topic, but was usually unable to find pertinent readings. Also, there weren't any "adults" who were experienced in the field. Therefore, reading and learning about it became a daunting task. Fortunately, the underground course vividly proved that there were "non– twisted" and more significant readings.

It's merely a matter of knowing the correct way of finding it. The course helped direct us toward this route. My primary concerns are, if the information is out there: how accessible are they?

How obvious are they to the public, or to the average person concerning the topic? How much, if so, do institutions advocate this topic? What are they doing to make the topic more appealing to students? Furthermore, how willing and open–mindedly are the majority to comprehend the topic when their minds are being perpetually colonized?

It's apparent that for one to become better acquainted with history and to further understand today's issues, a complete awareness of one's history is essential. Also, one feels more connected and can better identify with one's society if one acquires the knowledge of his/her own history. History shapes an individual's political, mental processes, cultural expressions, as well as the economic landscape of communities, such as that of the Asian–Americans. These are considerable topics that contribute to further understand one's identity, one's self and others. It is this crucial.

Overall, the underground course enhanced my view of the Asian American community. It's fortunate to exhibit that there's activism taking place in the older generation; so there are precedents for the younger generations. It was upliftingg to hear from lecturers who talked about topics that I could relate to. Why can't the University add this class to the standard curriculum if it had a positive impact on students? Why must the class remain underground?

C.F. Gorospe is a UMass student.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Prison mania

Sam McAfee

This election year most politicians are talking about being tough on crime. Polls have indicated that Americans are concerned about it, and many candidates have responded with proposals for hiring more police officers and building more prisons. Rather than a solution to urban blight, this is simply a thinly veiled racist attack on already disadvantaged members of the population.

The poor and people of color are disproportionately represented in correctional facilities, partly reflecting the level of opportunities available to them. For instance, a child from my neighborhood in Roxbury does not have the same chance at success as a child in Newton, due mostly to the fact that funding for public schools is allocated from property taxes. This means fewer resources, crowded classrooms and overworked faculty.

It also means fewer students with the ability to excel on standardized tests necessary for getting into college. (It might also be argued that banks systematically avoid offering loans for investment in poor neighborhoods, thus keeping property values low.)

There are few employment opportunities due to scant investment, and in addition many employers in other neighborhoods will not hire someone from Roxbury. As a result, some people get involved in illegitimate businesses, like drug dealing or car theft. The U.S. Department of Justice statistics reveal that eight of the top ten offenses for which people are convicted are drug or property related crimes, illustrating some of the coping methods by which people in poor neighborhoods struggle to survive.

Most of the solutions that have been proposed represent not a concern with the plight of the poor or people of color, but rather a lucrative industry in the security and construction businesses. Politicians allocate funds to build prisons and thereby provide profitable contracts to firms in these and many other industries.

The state of California now spends more money on prisons than on public education. What is more, many states, following California's lead, have initiated programs that lease prison labor out to private corporations. Prisoners are paid far below minimum wage, allowing the company to save money on labor costs. Even though many Americans believe that prisoners should be forced to work, taking jobs from other workers at a time of rampant lay–offs is probably not what they had in mind.

California is not the only state that is in this business. Talking with representatives from the Service Employees International Union, local 285 in Boston, I learned that the State of Massachusetts had laid off hundreds of public sector workers in favor of using prisoners for construction, painting and highway cleanup. It would be interesting to see how many corporations with which UMass does business have used prison labor in favor of ordinary workers to save on labor and benefit costs.

So what we have is a system that systematically deprives certain communities of opportunity and then scapegoats them for our problems. At the same time, privileged sectors benefit heavily from our obsession with imprisoning people. This is all encouraged by the mainstream media which paints horrifying pictures of urban chaos, fanning the flames of racism. The police state is right around the corner for some of us, but if you live in the ghetto it is already here.

Sam McAfee is a Collegian columnist.

In need of common sense

Lorraine Urbanski

I'm sick of common sense taking a back seat to the 1990's virus, otherwise known as "political correctness."

Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. once said that people should be judged as individuals and "not by the color of their skin but the content of their character."

Affirmative Action was created in the radical 1960s to benefit blacks, including women in some cases, in hopes of providing equal job opportunities for them. In the 1970s, it grew to encompass other minority groups. What was first thought to be a solid social program to promote integration and civil rights turned into one which further redefined and reinforced our race/prejudice problem in the United States.

According to Terry Eastland, author of Ending Affirmative Action: A Case for Colorblind Justice, Affirmative Action makes a "virtue of race, ethnicity and sex in order to determine who gets an opportunity and who does not." In other words, we're talking big–time discrimination here. The whole theory behind Affirmative Action is ridiculous. It defeats the purpose of battling racism and discrimination. It just continues it.

Civil Rights is an important issue. The movement of the 1960s was for a good reason, I agree. The Civil Rights Act of 1964, which President Lyndon Baines Johnson signed into federal law, called for an outright ban on any form of discrimination.

Stemming from the Civil Rights Act were the terms "colorblind law" and "colorblind principle." The law denied the government of the ability to discriminate upon an individual because of his/her race. The principle, which stated that persons should be treated as individuals — to ignore their race — led to the signing of the Act.

Colorblindness is a good idea, but the architects of affirmative action loosened the binds of the principle in order to give, back then, blacks more opportunities. They claimed that colorblindness wouldn't necessarily make it any easier for blacks. The change in the principle further gave way to discrimination against whites.

The founders of the social program discovered that the colorblind principle was quite inconvenient for blacks to gain more acceptance in society. Inconvenience? Since when is society and government convenient for anyone in this country? People of all cultures work their behinds off just to make it to Friday, never mind having to deal with racial inequalities and injustice.

"[Affirmative action is] making it harder to overcome the very tendency the Civil Rights movement once condemned: that of regarding and judging people in terms of their racial and ethnic groups," Eastland continues. "Affirmative Action makes race and ethnicity salient by naming the minority groups it ostensibly benefits."

Why must applications for college admissions and employment ask us what our racial and/or ethnic background is? Why should that be critical in granting us acceptance? Why should we promote competition between the races and fill quotas in the workplace and college that serve no purpose whatsoever? It's beyond me.

Why should we overlook one qualified candidate, who just happens to be white, for employment or college just because officials have to take in less–qualified individuals who just happen to be a minority or yes, even female?

We not only have discrimination against minority groups, but as well, a variety of nationalities like Polish, Irish, French... the list goes on and on. Why are these groups different from others?

By continuing to implement the concept of affirmative action in our government, we are also promoting further discrimination. We contradict the whole belief behind the Civil Rights Movement of the 1960s and the philosophy of Martin Luther King, Jr.

We are also darkening the lines of separation between races of people in this nation. Instead of a joining of peoples and an embracing of diversity, we re–emphasize our differences.

Lorraine Urbanski is a Collegian staff member.

Editorial Policy

The Editorial/Opinion page welcomes columns, letters and cartoons from UMass and the rest of the Five–College Area.

Letters and columns must be typed and double spaced, with the writer's name, local address and phone number attached. This information is subject to verification prior to publication.

Anonymous submissions will not be printed.

The editorial staff reserves the right to edit letters and columns for grammar, clarity and length.

Any submission that is requested to be left unedited will not be considered for publication.

Submissions become the property of the Collegian and will not be returned.

The Editorial staff is not required to print all submitted material.

Letters should be no longer than 450 words and columns should be about 70 typed lines.

Submissions should be sent to the Editorial Desk, c/o Mark McGrath, 113 Campus Center, UMass Amherst 01003.

Developing Nations

Days of Sorrow, Tears, and Death in Palestine

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mourners carry the body of Palestinian Mansour Shawamra, 23, on the way to the burial site in Ramallah Sunday, Sept. 26.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Relatives of Palestinian Mansour Shawamra, comfort each other as they follow the funeral procession in Ramallah Sunday, Sept. 29. Shawamra was killed by Israeli troops on Thursday.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israeli tanks in position in Balata near Nablus, Sunday, Sept. 29. Israel reopened a tunnel near Muslim holy shrines on Sunday.

America has no business interfering with Iraq

Iraq's Ambassador to India Mohammed F. H. Al–Haboubi speaks to Sunil Narula of Outlook Magazine.
Courtesy of Outlook Magazine

Narula: What provoked the American attack on Iraq?

Al–Haboubi: The latest American aggression is part of a chain of attacks since 1990. The Clinton administration, and before that the Bush administration, have imposed continuous sanctions against Iraq. Besides, this particular incident coincides with the U.S. election campaign — one of the reasons for the attack. In late August, there were many scandals involving President Bill Clinton. Bob Dole called him a weak president; I think Clinton is trying to show that this is not the case at all.

Narula: What kind of power does the UN Resolution 688 give to the international community and how has it been violated?

Al–Haboubi: Resolution 688 was passed in 1991. It asked the UN member–states to extend help to the Kurds and to the Iraqi people. It also criticized the Iraqi stand and said the Iraqi government had violated human rights. But one paragraph of this resolution clearly says that the Security Council (SC) calls on all member–states to respect Iraqi sovereignty, territorial integrity and national unity. Second, the US action is against the resolution itself because it hasn't been adopted under Chapter VII of the UN charter — the only chapter which allows the use of force to enforce SC resolutions. So it is just an American lie to refer to this particular resolution.

Narula: When the Iraqi forces went into Irbil, did you expect the Americans to come down so heavily on you?

Al–Haboubi: Well, it is our sovereign right to move our forces in our territory. And this step was taken when the major party in Kurdistan, the Kurdistan Democratic Party, sought President Saddam Hussein's help to counter the Iranian aggression which began on August 17 with the help of Jalal Talbani's Patriotic Union of Kurdistan. It's our duty not to allow any outside interference in our affairs.

Narula: But did you expect such a reaction from the U.S.?

Al–Haboubi: We asked them — and still ask them — and we urged the international community to put pressure on the U.S. and the UK to stop interfering in our internal affairs and to abide by the relevant Security Council resolutions.

Narula: At a time when the 'oil for food and medicines' deal is being worked out in the UN, was it a tactical error on Iraq's part to go to Irbil?

Al–Haboubi: We agreed to start negotiations with the UN on oil for food and medicines early this year. Five rounds of talks had been held from February to May when a memorandum of understanding was signed between the two sides. Even then, the Americans spared not effort to disrupt it — although after we signed the agreement and it was approved by the Security Council they claimed they were the sponsors of this MOU. We have done everything to expedite the implementations of this agreement. But the Americans have always tried to put hurdles. As for our action jeopardizing the deal, I must make it clear that if it is a question of our integrity and sovereignty, we will stand against external aggression.

Narula: The Americans have been trying to get Saddam Hussein out of power.

Al–Haboubi: They have been trying to accomplish this task but they have failed. The Iraqi people completely support the Iraqi leadership and President Hussein in particular. The referendum in October last year clearly showed the support for the President.

Narula: What explains Hussein's popularity.

Al–Haboubi: Saddam Hussein is working only for the benefit of the Iraqi people and the Arab nations and his party policy rejects any imposition of any policy or dictates from outside. Of course, the Americans want domination over the oil reserves. Two–thirds of the global oil reserves of the world lie in our area and Iraq has the second largest oil reserves in the world after Saudi Arabia. They want to have complete control of the oil so they can control the whole world.

Narula: What do you think about the Indian reaction?

Al–Haboubi: You have read the statement of the Ministry of External Affairs. We hope that after the second and third attack we will hear from the Indian Government — something disapproving of or condemning this aggression against Iraq.

Narula: Are you disappointed?

Al–Haboubi: You can't expect an envoy to express his opinion on these matters. I should hope now that the Indian Government — as a peace–loving nation and important member of the Non–Aligned Movement — will take a stand they find proper.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

A Palestinian woman and a child pass a line of Israeli border police near the disputed tunnel in Jerusalem's old town Sunday, Sept. 29, that runs under the Al Aqsa Mosque compound.

Rebels Control Gv't In Afghanistan

Ibrahim Ali

Last week saw the hopeful end of a destructive civil war, as the capital of Afghanistan, Kabul, and its government were overtaken by rebel Taliban troops. Afghanistan's citizens can only pray that this will actually end the instability in the region since the Soviet invasion in the late 1970's. The Taliban, a student movement that emphasizes the accordance of Islamic law, started with Afghan refugees from the religious schools in Pakistan. This undoubtedly will be an important strategic and economic area of the world, as it boasts large amounts of natural resources barely between Iran, Pakistan, and Southern Russia.

Since the take–over of the capital, some important figures in the brutal Soviet backed government were captured and executed. Among these were the former President, commonly known as Najibullah, who was shot and hung for his running of the oppressive, violent regime.

The question that remains to be answered is whether the new regime will be one that is receptive to American interests. While one may reflect on the military aid given to the Mujahidin in their fight against the brutal Soviet invasion, recent so–called 'fundamentalists' — Islamic governments have been far from the United States most favored nations. While this government will undoubtedly continue its narrow–minded view of current Islamic Governments, one can only hope that Taliban led government will issue in a new era of understanding.

Ibrahim Ali is a Collegian staff member.

With this first Developing Nations Page of the semester begins our mission to demand changes in American attitudes towards the developing world. It is not just our duty to read and watch, but to take action to change the nature of the relationship between the North and South.

The U.S. media has been justly criticized for distorting issues concerning the Third World, and therefore it is the goal of this page to cover areas that have been historically misrepresented in the media. People of color and their nations have always either been ignored or demonized by the Western media. We are here to provide an alternative.

As Editor of this page, I would like to welcome you .... to our outlet.

Sunanda Ghosh

Sunanda Ghosh

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Police guard the entrance of the disputed tunnel which runs directly under the Al Aqsa Mosque.

Israel kills "Oslo Peace Accord"

Shyamala Ivatury

A historic handshake, an agreement, sundry peace prizes — shining new clothes for Emperor Israel — the Oslo Peace Accord. Colonialism, new, and improved, 90's style.

For the past two years Israel, the United States, Yasser Arafat and the Palestine National Authority (PNA) have been attempting to convince the world that the Palestinians are on the road to independence, that Israeli colonialism will end and that Palestinians will no longer live as non–citizens in their own land. Although horrific colonial realities can sometimes be glossed over by the western media, it is impossible to disguise the truth from the disenfranchised.

Unable to contain their resentment and frustration with the charade of "peace," Palestinians in cities all across the West Bank rose up in protest of increasing Israeli abuses. Israel retaliated by shooting over 80 Palestinian civilians in three days, and wounding hundreds more. The protests were triggered by opening of the "Western Wall Tunnel," which runs below Islam's third holiest shrine, the Al–Aqsa mosque.

The opening of the tunnel, and the archeological digs under the mosque, are widely regarded as deliberate affronts to Islam and the Palestinian people on the part of Israel. They are part of a decades old pattern by Israel of damaging, destroying, and usurping the religious, national and cultural heritage of the Palestinian people, as part and parcel of the project to wipe them off the face of history.

Such provocative old–style colonial tactics are the hallmark of the new Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu. His government seems determined to expose fraudulent nature of the Oslo accords by undermining the U.S. sponsored agreements at every level. Their ultimate goal remains the great Zionist dream, Palestine without any Palestinians.

As for United States, American interests demand a stable Middle East under U.S. hegemony. Netanyahu is cynically taking advantage of the current election season, as the power of the Israel lobby makes it difficult for Clinton or Dole to oppose his actions no matter how much they damage American interests. The Oslo accords were supposed to ensure such stability with regard to Palestine and the Arab–Israeli conflict. But, because it failed to provide any basic human rights for Palestinians, it could never succeed.

Under the Oslo accords, despite the creation of a few small "automous zones," there is no real Israeli withdrawal from these areas and no genuine authority for Arafat and the PNA. As a result, Palestinians continue to live under conditions of de facto occupation and apartheid. Though they live side by side with the European colonizers, they are subjected to different and extremely racist laws.

By colonizing Palestine with millions of Europeans and expelling most of the native Arab population, Zionists changed the demographics of most of Palestine and created a "Jewish State." Now the same is being attempted in the Occupied Territories. Israeli colonial settlements continue to increase in the West Bank, thereby continuing the policy of changing demographics at the point of a gun. On the outskirts of most Palestinian cities and villages, Israeli tanks are on constant patrol, allowing for immediate closure of the West Bank. And, as seen in recent days, Israeli troops are free to march right back into the heart of "autonomous" Palestinian cities and open fire on unarmed civilians.

Furthermore, the West Bank is literally criss–crossed with "Jewish–only" highways, on which Palestinians are not allowed. These roads are also designed to split up the West Bank into tiny cantons and enclaves, making the creation of even a small Palestinian state all the more difficult. But, as the recent protests show, ordinary Palestinians by the thousands are willing to fight for their human and national rights, and will never submit to colonial occupation.

The latest Israeli killings have been so horrific that the normally timid and pro–Israel United Nations Security Council passed a resolution 14–0 condemning Israel and demanding closure of the tunnel. Even the United States, Israel's protector and provider, was too embarrassed to use its veto to block the resolution. Furthermore, American Jewish leaders noted for their defense of any and all Israeli government actions have been deafeningly silent.

The party's over, and the charade is exposed. The Oslo accords are dead, and no amount of summit meetings, false premisses, and mirages of aid and investment can save it.

The United States, by obsessively pampering Israel for decades, has created a parasite that thinks nothing of biting the hand that feeds it. At this stage it ought to be obvious to Americans that even for them, let alone the Palestinians, Israel is a monster out of control.

Shyamala Ivatury is a Collegian columnist.

Arts & Living

Nirvana lives on with new live CD release

COURTESY CHARLES PETERSON

Nirvana, with the help of live recordings, releases From the Muddy Banks of the Wishkah.

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

NIRVANA
From the Muddy Banks of the Wishkah
DGC

Today marks the final chapter in the fabled story of Nirvana, as DGC releases the 15 track live album, From the Muddy Banks of the Wishkah. Over the five–plus years since the release of Nevermind, Nirvana has emerged as alternative rock's favorite son, maybe even alternative rock's only worthwhile son. The band dissolved due to the tragic suicide of Kurt Cobain in 1994.

This new album adds little to the Nirvana legacy, but what could we expect? Their career has been so well documented and recorded, few stones have been left unturned. Although the band recorded only three studio albums in their brief existence, hundreds of bootlegs exist featuring both live and unreleased studio recordings.

Originally, From the Banks was to be released along with the acoustic album MTV Unplugged in New York— but at the last moment the release was postponed by request of surviving members Krist Novoselic and Dave Grohl. While the later album captured Nirvana's once ignored soft side, From the Muddy Banks finds the band at their prime — playing assaulting full–tilt punk rock numbers.

After a brief introduction flooded with Kurt Cobain's trademark scream, the band explodes into "School," a hit track off their debut album, Bleach. As with most of Nirvana's best work, the band ferociously tears through the song, nearing the breaking point, but never falling apart.

Overall the track selection offers a decent mix between hit singles ("Smells Like Teen Spirit" and "Heart Shaped Box"), stellar album cuts ("Negative Creeps" and "Breed") and more obscure releases ("Sliver" and "Aneurysm"). Unfortunately these tracks, though often excellent on their own, sound jumbled and confused since they were recorded over a five year period.

From the Muddy Banks proves Nirvana to be an excellent band, but their musicianship and energy is never fully captured.

The two oldest tracks, "Polly" and "Breed," are taken from a 1989 show in London when Chad Channing still played drums. Unfortunately, the sound quality is not up to par, but the tunes still contain the raw edge that the band thrived on.

A majority of the live songs are culled from the band's fall 1991 tour of the States — a tour that began when Nirvana was a little known grunge act and culminated with two legendary shows in San Francisco with Pearl Jam and the Red Hot Chili Peppers.

Not surprisingly "Smells Like A Teen Spirit," recorded in late 1991, stills sounds as fresh and riveting as ever. Few songs in recent memory have captured a feeling with as much emotion and intensity.

Local fans may cherish the included version of "Sliver," which was recorded at the Springfield Civic Center on Nov. 10, 1993. Once again the recording is rough and Cobain's voice echoes throughout the song.

Little problems like this plague much of From the Muddy Banks, but in many ways this is expected of Nirvana. They were never a polished act — never tried to be. In many ways they were the prototype punk band. While today's punks may run around with mohawks and chains, none of them can match Nirvana's sense of rebellion or angst.

Nirvana served as a wake–up call to much of the musical world. Single–handedly they revitalized an underground rock community that is still flourishing in their wake. The mainstream community benefited too, for a while, until the scene became flooded with Nirvana wanna–be's.

Nirvana's legacy would have lived on with or without From the Muddy Banks, but no Nirvana enthusiast should pass up this historic recording. A–

UMass Orchestra opens up its season

By Michael Charles Medeiros
Collegian Correspondent

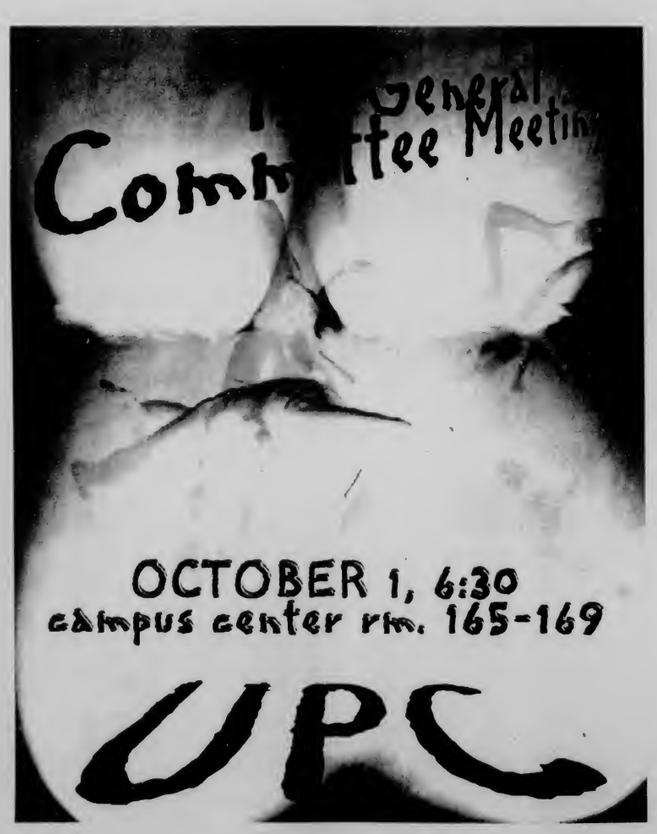
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS ORCHESTRA
Fine Arts Center
Sept. 28

The prairie written by Aaron Copeland and captured by the University of Massachusetts Orchestra, was proud, harsh and beautiful in ways that turned your flesh hard.

The sheer intensity of the prairie captured within the strains of the music forced you into living as powerfully as you possibly could, because if you didn't, you would be caught up in the soil and buried before you'd even bent down to lay in the grave. Copeland's music managed to grab all of these emotions and the orchestra's interpretation of the music conveyed the deep feelings evoked from the prairie lifestyle.

"Billy the Kid" is a bunch of firecracker sounds — explosions with the lit–wick hissing and the morbid silences that follow the explosion — the kind where you count your fingers to see if any were taken off with the blast. "Billy the Kid" is a really fun ride, with the same potential a good Ramones song and a Pippi Longstocking book have for waking a person up out of a boring, dejected day.

Johannes Brahms' "Symphony No. 2 in D major, Op. 73" was the second composition performed. For some parts, it was slow and steady, calm and unobtrusive. The music was the sort you would expect accompanying the rants of some fat professor complaining wittily about his tiny salary, which was barely enough to cover his Volvo and summer home of the Cape.



Other parts of the piece though, were storm tossed — quick and tremulous while others were just as lively and bright as the Beach Boys (in particular the Allegro con Spirito).

The orchestra played both of these pieces with an intensity and passion that, combined with just a month of practice, was completely overwhelming. They performed as a unified whole and the only problem to affect the entire production was when a door creaked open in the final drum boom of the Gun Battle in "Billy the Kid."

Mention ought to be made of the conductor, Mark Russell Smith. Smith was frenetic and if a conductor can spur an orchestra on with sheer exuberance and sweat, he did.

Collegian Graphics

COME SEE WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT...

SHAB

Gain Experience in Administrative Aspects of Health Care

Sponsor Health Promotion Events

Come join the Student Health Advisory Board

Next Meeting:
Wed. October 2, 5:30 -6:30pm
University Health Services Rm. 304

For more info call Tamara at the Health Education Office 577-5181

NETS versus Bullets at

MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst

The Return of Coach Cal!
SUNDAY, OCT. 13
7PM
$23 and $15

Tickets available through:
Mullins Center Box Office or 413-545-0505

TICKETMASTER

Sponsored by:

NEWS 40 | DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE | TODAY'S 99

New Mystery is a must; book touches all genres

By Michael Charles Medeiros
Collegian Correspondent

JEROME CHARYN ET. AL.
The New Mystery
Dutton Books

The New Mystery, a compilation of short stories assembled by the International Association of Crime Writers and edited by Jerome Charyn. There are stories inside that are wonderful and should never be forgotten. There are others that are stupid and badly written. The bad stories, though, don't matter much and the good ones will keep you awake at night.

Among those included in this anthology are Jorge Luis Borges, P.D. James, Grahm Greene, Harlan Ellison and Walter Mosely. If you've never heard of these people, buy the book — it's a terrific introduction to some great mystery writers.

Flip open the pages of the book and you'll find a ghost ship and a place littered with dead people and filled with the smells of eucalyptus. Men are haunted down for obscure reasons and a murderer of booksellers meets his fate at the hands of another murderer of booksellers.

The stories are so varied in quality, plotline and character, that it's almost like feeling the weather change between the final line of one and the bold print title of the next; when the cold virulence of "Fathers and Daughters" has turned your hands brittle and your ears tulip red, along comes "Manufacture of a Legend" to char you with lush Mexican heat.

Whether it is through the dim, sweaty realism of Mosely or the convoluted mystical grace of Borges, The New Mystery leaves a reader ruddier cheeked and faster breathing than before they'd found the book.

And more importantly, as all good books do, it makes the day outside the pages sharper, fuller and brighter and the nights more cavernous and starlit. It envelops a person in sensation and in doing so, reveals just a little more of this little world with the trillion shadowed corners.

Parker brings funk back; thrills crowd with moves

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

MACEO PARKER
Pearl St.
Sept. 29

NORTHAMPTON — In a manner reminiscent of his days with James Brown, Maceo Parker brought the super heavy funk to Pearl Street.

Parker's band, comprised of a drummer, two guitar players, an organ player, a trumpet player, a tamborine player and a bass player, beckoned him to the stage with a five minute introduction.

Parker then stepped onto the stage as the crowd chanted, "Maceo," performing James Brown style dance moves.

As the introduction finished, Parker and the trumpet player broke into a 20 minute version of "Pass the Peas." Although the horn parts of the song were the same, it greatly differed from the original version performed by the JB's. By the end of the song, "Pass the Peas" was a faint remembrance.

The same scenario occured with the song "Gimme Some More," which was a funk staple for Fred Wesley and the JB's.

Although these high–energy funk songs pleased most of the crowd, anyone who was longing to rediscover the sounds of the James Brown family which included acts like Maceo and the Macks, Lyn Collins, or Fred Wesly and the JB's, were very disappointed.

Parker played a song which faintly sounded like "Party" by his former group Maceo and the Macks. Yet instead of the slowed down heavy funk of days past, the song was even too fast for the dancers to keep up with.

Along with problems of authenticity, the crowd served as another difficulty. Many seemingly drunk male viewers crowded the stage, rudely yelling token phrases of "brotherly" love, like, "You da man," and "Blow dat horn." The music would have sounded better without the drunken jeers.

Each artist in the band had a chance to shine in the spotlight. The solo performers took advantage and showcased their talents very well. Most notably the tamborine player had a sensual, soulful voice that brought the crowd to its knees while one of the guitar players, Kelly Parker, played a 15 minute solo that even the Scissor Girls could have enjoyed. Parker's son, Kareem, also performed. Although his rap style pleased the crowd, don't be expecting any RZA mixes or Wu–Tang features.

COURTESY BEURN LORCH–MILLER

"No Parking On The Dance Floor"
From Olympia, Wash., Dub Narcotic Sound System headlines a show with Satisfact and Wandering Lucy tonight at 9 p.m. at the March Hall at Amherst College. Tickets are just $1 for non–Amherst students.

UMass Educational TV branches forth

By Jeremy Brothers
Collegian Staff

Starting tomorrow, Continental Cablevision of Western Massachusetts will begin airing the new jewel in it's crown — University of Massachusetts Educational Television, more commonly known around campus as UMET.

A project of the School of Education, UMET was designed to create innovative, original, educational programming using available assets from the University. The second benefit the station has provided is a learning laboratory for students to get hands–on experience creating educational television.

"We are very excited by this extraordinary opportunity to share the resources of the University with the public," said Professor Liane Brandon, UMET's co–director.

Brandon, an award–winning filmmaker in her own right, has been teaching television and filmmaking at UMass since 1973.

The reach of UMET will stretch far beyond the Pioneer Valley with the new agreement with Continental. Viewers will now number over 150,000 in 32 towns throughout Western Massachusetts and Northern Connecticut.

The University's influence is directly seen with Scott Perry, UMET's coordinator, and Kerri Bishop, UMET graduate co–producer. Perry, a former graduate student in the School of Ed., and Bishop, a current education graduate student, look over daily operations with the production along with undergraduate and graduate students who intern through the semester.

"It's exciting to think that our programs will be reaching a wider audience than ever. I'm particularly happy that our grad students and interns are getting this opportunity to see the results of all their hard work and dedication," says Perry.

"Who Knows?" and "Fine Print" are two of the shows viewers can expect to see. "Who Knows?" features campus experts answering students questions such as "Why is there salt in the ocean?" or "Why do we sleep?". Featuring some of the University's most acclaimed authors, including Martin Espada and Julius Lester, "Fine Print" showcases informal discussions taped locally at Wooton's Bookstore in Amherst.

"I think it's one of the most unique experiences; being able to see faculty, grad students and undergraduates coming together to work on a project like this. The fact that more people are going to be able to benefit from this is even more rewarding," says Bishop.

COURTESY COURTNEY SMITH

Harry LaCoste, a junior communications major, Kerri Bishop and Terrell Hill, UMET's Graduate Producers and Scott Perry, UMET's coordinator, work on a new production.

Blues legend Junior Wells shakes the Iron Horse

By Panagiotis Gianopoulos
Collegian Correspondent

JUNIOR WELLS
Iron Horse
Sept. 28

NORTHAMPTON — When legendary bluesman Junior Wells took the stage Saturday night at the Iron Horse, the eager audience was more than ready for him. The Hornets, a local six man band, had already roused the audience with their infectious jazzy blues. Blasts of trumpet, harmonica and saxophone punctuated Wally Gray's enthusiastic singing of songs such as "Start It Up" and "She's Dynamite." As the Hornets left the stage to allow Junior Wells' band to take over, the eager audience had begun shouting for Junior.

Junior's band, comprised of members ranging from Philadelphia, Memphis, Atlanta and Chicago, immediately broke into charged instrumental blues. Trading solos, the horn section, keyboardist and guitarist riled the audience some more, until the sweeping hush began that meant Junior had arrived.

He appeared by the staircase, with only a wireless microphone, a harmonica and his unarguable charisma. He walked through the crowd slowly, taking his time, playing a few licks. When he made it to the stage, he strutted to the front and grinned. Whispering some lyrics, shouting some others and making his harmonica jump, Junior led the song to its cymbal–crashing finale and began a night of fantastic blues.

He appeared as bold as ever in his bright orange suit, purple suspenders and ubiquitous hat. Garishly dressed and occasionally unintelligible, Junior still had members of the audience howling along with him. Never tyrannical with the band, Junior gave the skilled players plenty of room for solos, even prodding the keyboardist and guitarist to play some more.

The songs, plenty of blues staples like "Good Morning Little Schoolgirl," "Little Red Rooster" and "Got My Mojo Workin'" were given a funky feel by the horn section and Junior's deep, rowdy vocals. His harmonica playing was as piercing and distinctive as ever, with both lightning riffs and plaintive melodies. Junior also amazed by creating noises with his mouth that most synthesizers can't produce. He popped as loud as a backfiring truck and whistled like a rainy, windy night.

While the short set seemed to eventually take its toll on the aging Wells, it didn't keep him from living up to his reputation as a manic stage presence. Junior growled and yelped, stomped and shook, hollering to please the packed appreciative house.

Junior Wells

COURTESY RAY FLERAGE

"I got mine at Zanna"

Dr. Martens

ZANNA
downtown Amherst

UMass Student Legal Services Office

FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!

545-1995
CALL TODAY!

922 CAMPUS CENTER

COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS.....

Someone has to take the BOOT !!

Amber Waves

FAR EAST
Asian noodle soups, salads & stir-fries
63 Main St.
253-9200

MID EAST
Arabian delights salads & sandwiches
31 Boltwood Walk
253-9299

OCMP Delivery Express

$99
FLEX
FITNESS CENTER
AMHERST, MA
FOR SEMESTER!!

water polo

continued from page 10

win it with offense," Yarworth said. "You win all games with defense."

Scott Stevens (who started for Staudenbauer) keyed the UMass defensive effort, completely blanketing the two–meter men of Brown.

The Minutemen's rejuvinated tenacity payed dividends after Yarworth's strategic timeout as a Stevens steal led to a Gabriel Marrero goal.

Marrero's goal shifted momentum and the in the blink of an eye the Minutemen were within one, at 6–5, and the Bears had to call a timeout.

The timeout seemed to take some of the wind from the UMass sails, but the Minutemen drew a gust of wind from the raucous crowd and ended the third period tied at eight.

Immediately after a Brown timeout early in the fourth, Limardo drove up the middle of the pool and unleashed a blast that rocked the back of the Brown net and gave UMass a 10–8 lead.

The two northeastern powers went back and forth from there, but a Brian Stahl two–point tally, and assist to Ron Gonen essentially sealed the deal.

Earlier in the day, the Minutemen defeated M.I.T. 21–2 on the strength of Corey Koenneman's five–goal effort. Geoff Gear had three goals and four assists as Yarworth's bench lobbied for more playing time.

tennis

continued from page 10

co–captain Caroline Steele came back in their No. 2 and No. 3 singles matches. With them posting 6–1, 7–6 (7–3) and 6–4, 7–5 wins respectively, UMass went on to take two out of the next three matches, grabbing four out of the six total singles points.

Steele and junior Marie Christine Caron were two out of the three Minutewomen's double winners over the weekend. They continued their successful ways in No. 1 doubles, beating the duo of Bonnie Colville and Katie Umkeubo, 8–6. The team of Braunstein and junior Lana Gorodetskaya may have a figure skating name, but they don't play that, as they captured the other win in doubles by beating Laura Colarusso and Maya Ridberg, 8–5.

Gorodetskaya was the other double winner for UMass, as she easily defeated Phyllis Wan 6–2, 6–1 in her No. 6 singles match.

baseball

continued from page 10

the Braves are far superior in every category.

The Padres, who took the NL West on the final day of the season will contest the St. Louis Cardinals, a team that is reeling after the loss of center fielder Ray Lankford.

You have to like the Padres in this series. Led by MVP– candidate Ken Caminiti, the Pads should triumph in what may come down to a battle between the two most under– rated pitching staffs in baseball.

A Padres/Braves match–up would make for a great series, and it is a possibility that San Diego could upset the world champs. This series will go down to the wire with the Braves reverting to their heart–attack style of winning games to pull them back to the Series.

In the junior circuit, the Rangers go up against the Spankees in a well–matched series of good–hitting, good– defense against good–pitching, good–defense. Who wins? The Rangers because it would be sacrilege to pick the Spanks.

The defending pennant–winning Indians go up against the high–powered Orioles who held off a barrage on the wild card to secure their berth in the playoffs.

This will be a series dominated by long fly balls and frequent trips to the mound. Hopefully there won't be any spitting incidents. There won't be in the second round as the good Alor.ar's team will prevail with relative ease.

The Indians are going to kill New York. The Spanks seemed to have Cleveland's number during the regular season, but this isn't the regular season.

This scenario brings about a re–match of last October's anti–climactic World Series between the Indians and Braves.

In the battle of politically incorrect mascots, the Braves have a better pitching staff, but the Indians have better offense. Each team has a speedy lead–off hitting center fielder. Both clubs have solid defenses that rarely get tested due to their dominance. The winner is...

Fred Hurlbrink, Jr. is a Collegian columnist.

Red Sox give Kennedy the boot

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

BOSTON — There was a 6-19 start to the season and constant gripes from the players at the end. At some point in between, Boston general manager Dan Duquette decided Kevin Kennedy had to go.

The Red Sox manager was fired Monday despite a 171-135 record over two seasons that included last year's AL East division title and a third-place finish this season after a franchise-worst 2-12 start. But he did it in a player-friendly style that angered management.

Duquette said Kennedy failed in three ways: he didn't have the players prepared for opening day, he didn't work well with prospects and pitchers and he couldn't or wouldn't stifle clubhouse criticism of the front office.

"The manager for the Red Sox is the front line of the management team, and a key part of his job is to focus a cohesiveness," said Duquette, who met with Kennedy for an hour Monday afternoon. "The season ended much the way it started, with not a lot of support for the team perspective on the front line."

Owner John Harrington was believed to be especially miffed at Kennedy regarding the parting shots of longtime Red Sox Mike Greenwell and Roger Clemens, who criticized management's hard-line tactics last week while the Red Sox were technically, but not realistically, alive in the wild-card race.

"It was abominable to me to see players cleaning out their lockers before the most important game of the season," Duquette said of Thursday's game against the New York Yankees, which turned out to be meaningless when Baltimore clinched the wild-card berth earlier in the day.

Duquette refused to accept part of the blame for the dissension, which largely focused on his hard-line negotiating tactics and his rotisserie approach to filling out a roster. Instead, he blamed Kennedy for failing to win the players over to management's point of view.

Duquette also blamed Kennedy for the team's unprecedented poor start, saying the fielding failures that characterized the first part of the Red Sox season should have been ironed out in spring training.

"Coming out of spring training our team just was not prepared to play," Duquette said. "I thought in particular the team had a hangover from '95 going into the '96 season."

Kennedy, 42, could not be reached for comment. But his supporters would argue that Duquette filled the team with designated hitters and fielders playing out of position, then acted surprised when they led the league in errors through the early part of the season.

The least controversial of Duquette's assertions is that Kennedy didn't work well with young players and the pitching staff, a complaint that dogged Kennedy in Texas, too. The Rangers fired him in 1994 after he led Texas to a strike-shortened AL West title with a 52-62 record.

"The development program is only beginning once the player hits the major leagues," Duquette said. "Our manager must be able to manage the entire roster, not only the veterans on the ballclub but the young players."

Duquette said he considered letting Kennedy go after the team started 6-19, but kept him "out of respect for the job Kevin did last year." The Red Sox had the best record in baseball, 49-28, after the All-Star break.

"If this team had played at the very least 10-15 to start the year, we'd still be playing, we'd be preparing for the playoffs right now," Duquette said.

Kennedy, who has one year remaining on his contract, is owed $500,000 for the year remaining on his contract, plus a $200,000 buyout for the 1998 season.

Jim Fregosi was fired Monday by the Philadelphia Phillies and Duquette said he, as well as ex-Pirates manager Jim Leyland would be considered to replace Kennedy.

The managers of Boston's Triple-A and Double-A affiliates, Buddy Bailey and Ken Macha, and bench coach Tim Johnson will also be considered.

CONSTRUCTION AHEAD
With your help, MDA is building a tomorrow without neuromuscular diseases.
MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association
1-800-572-1717

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Sigma Tau Gamma is looking for new members. STG is a newer fraternity with a different style. Call Will for information 6-4455

AUTO FOR SALE

1986 Oldsmobile Delta 88 $1,000 Runs Great. 323-1174

1986 Toyota Low mileage, standard $1000/BO 586-9501 After 5:00 pm

1987 Mazda 626 129k miles but runs great, standard shift, P/W, P/L, sunroof, priced for quick sale $1200 firm 549-0701 days, 323-9233 evenings

1982 Toyota Supra Good condition, AT/PW/PD/PS/AM/FM CAS Call 546-0657 or (413)624-3982

EMPLOYMENT

Spring Break!! Earn Cash!! Highest Commissions! Lowest Prices! Travel free on only 13 sales!! Free Info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

Cruise Ships Hiring Earn up to $2,000+/month. World Travel. Seasonal and Full-Time positions. No exp. necessary. For info: call 1-206-971-3550 ext. C50015

National Parks Hiring Positions are now available at National Parks, Forests and Wildlife Preserves. Excellent benefits and bonuses! Call 1-206-971-3620 Ext. N50016

Tropical Resorts Hiring Students needed! Entry level and career positions available worldwide. Call Resort Employment Services 1-206-971-3600 Ext. R50012

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS! Over 6 billion in public and private sector Grants and scholarships are now available. All students are eligible. Let us help. For more info: call 1-800-263-6495 Ext. F50014

International Employment - Earn up to $25-$45/hour teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S. Korea. No teaching background or Asian Languages required. For info: call 206-971-3570 Ext. J50015

Now Hiring All Shirts. Closing shifts available with bonus program. Hadley Burger King. Ask for Tim 584-5110

Counter Help and Daytime Delivery Persons. Counter help must be able to work 15-20 hr. nights and weekends. Apply at D.P. Dough

Fridge Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-9742

FOR RENT

486SX Compact Laptop, 4 meg. RAM, 120HD, MS Office 5.0, electronic pen, external CD ROM via PCMCIA, Canon Bubble Jet Printer, $350 or best offer 549-4850 Jason

FOR SALE

Dorm Fridges 18"x18" Cheap and delivered!! Name Your Price! Call 585-1154.

Macintosh Performa 5215CD, 75MHz CPU, 8MB RAM, 1GB HD, 15" monitor, 14.4 Fax/Modem, 16 Bit Sound. Asking $1500 OBO. Call 584-8402

INSTRUCTION

Bartend with University Bartending 50% student discount. Amherst classes starting soon! Call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX for info

Boxing Lessons w/Ojeta Bumpus. Call for brochure 722-8817

WWW.SUCCESS.ORG Free business education from American Institute Entrepreneurship and Real Estate Investment Courses. Retire rich in ten years

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

To my sweet and loving granddaughter Happy Birthday. your grandmama

INSTRUCTION

PC/MAC Tutoring Cheap instruction for computer. Patient, valuable help and advice. Set-ups, software, Internet (413)072-0633

MOTORCYCLES

1980 CB 650 $500 or BO. 1950 miles- runs well - must sell. Call 549-6646

MUSICIANS

Guitar Classes Start 9/10 Rentals and lessons available. 10 wks/$40.00 FTUG Pat 545-0579

Blues Jam Tues. 8:00pm Emerson 112 Check it out!

PERSONALS

Choices Not Chances Free contraception education. Every Mon & Thurs 3-4:30 and Tues & Wed 7-8:30pm in Rm 302 UHS. Men and Women welcome. For more information call Health Education Office 577-5181

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SERVICES

Computer Problems? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Scream Savers 549-0083

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK! Earn cash! Highest commissions/lowest prices! Travel free on only 13 sales!! Free info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

WANTED

Wanted 100 People New Metabolism Breakthrough. Lose 5-100 lbs. Guaranteed. Cost $25. (800)776-9503

Rates

$2.00 minimum /day

Students 20¢ per word /day

All others 40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
If the pace seems hectic, take heart—it should slow down in the near future. Creative thinking will also help ease the stress. You may be able to find a shorter path from point to point.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
Gossiping this week has an unintended effect, so it may be wiser to refrain. A poor opinion someone has already formed about you will become set in stone this week if you're not careful.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
It's a good time to take matters into your own hands and get things settled—you'll be more satisfied when the decision is made, whatever it is. Manage money carefully, because a big purchase could be in the offing.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
Although taking a vacation this week would be wonderful, it may not be the responsible thing to do. Refresh yourself with a few small indulgences, like a hot bath, and then plan a real trip for a more convenient time.

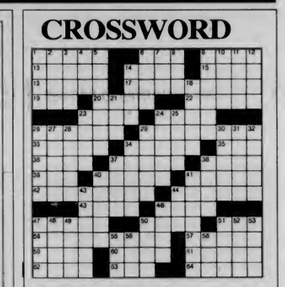
LEO
July 23-August 23
A provocative encounter keeps you guessing as the week progresses. Subtle hints could further your cause—just be sure that outsiders aren't watching, or you may attract more than your share of attention.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
A powerful person's act of compassion is food for thought, both for you and a close friend. Take it to heart, because you may have an opportunity to make someone else's life easier in the near future.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
Maintaining a good frame of mind may take up much of your energy. It may be wiser to let tempers flare and die of their own accord, rather than trying to keep the seas calm by force.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
Someone close to you may have an attitude problem. If so, try to stay out of their way. It's not in your best interest to try to improve their mood, since they may take it out on you in a very unpleasant way.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
The energetic approach yields great results this week and keeps you feeling great. A peaceful weekend with a dear companion is advisable as a way to maintain your good mood and productivity.



CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
Maintaining your self-respect this week may be difficult, with pressure coming from a dozen different directions. Try to keep your equanimity intact, and don't sell yourself short—you can do it.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
A creative solution to an old problem earns you respect at work. Be careful that you only take the credit which is due you, however. Take the opportunity to toot another's horn if you can—it will reflect well on you.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
Another person's mistakes may appear to be your fault. Don't worry, because the truth will come out eventually. Meanwhile, take the fallout with as much grace as you can muster and try to avoid pointing fingers.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1. Writher
6. ___ Jobe (Updike)
9. Gibe
13. Helper
14. It may be sold while
18. Bowery bum
19. "Four ___ and seven years ago..."
17. Team stats
19. Possessive word
20. Road guides
22. Cougars
23. Haunches
24. Portion
26. Plucked
29. Resolute
33. "One Day at ___" (2 words)
34. Become aware of
35. Between Sun. and Tues.
36. Ceremony
37. In the future
38. Electrical unit
39. Hydrocarbon suffix
40. Anime
41. Dhole's prey
42. Answers
44. Teary
46. Lyric poems
48. Tracy nee Trueheart
47. Teen talk
50. Breather
51. Guacamole, for example
54. "I'm in Love with a ___ Guy"
57. Mrs. Peron
58. English composer Thomas
60. Liver spread
61. Tone asunder
62. "___ and shed a tear ___"
63. "Me and ___ Jones"
64. Shell games

DOWN
1. Flaw
2. Chinese staple
3. The kitchen sink
4. "___ the land of the free..."
5. Assumption
6. Inning's an
7. Watson and Crick's shtick
8. Newsman Rather
9. Distorts
10. Takes the laurels
11. Bus Stop playwright
12. Hot-in-the-ring action
14. Recipe amts.
18. "Beyond the Sea" singer Bobby
21. Very likely
23. Rope fiber
24. Yogurt flavor
25. Israeli city
26. One with a dropped jaw
27. Seek penance
28. Gestures silently
29. Fender marks
30. Mirror reflection
31. Elector
32. Ledger unit
34. Guides
37. Sharpen a razor
38. Comics
40. Hunting cabin
41. Cenotaphs, often
43. Think over
44. Director Craven
46. Prefix for scope or vision
47. Kill a fly
48. Folk stories
49. Black Beauty author Sewell
50. Grooves
51. Sutherland or Sills
52. Let until
53. Lily and rose
55. Disc speed (abbr.)
56. "The ___ Side"
58. Area (abbr.)

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

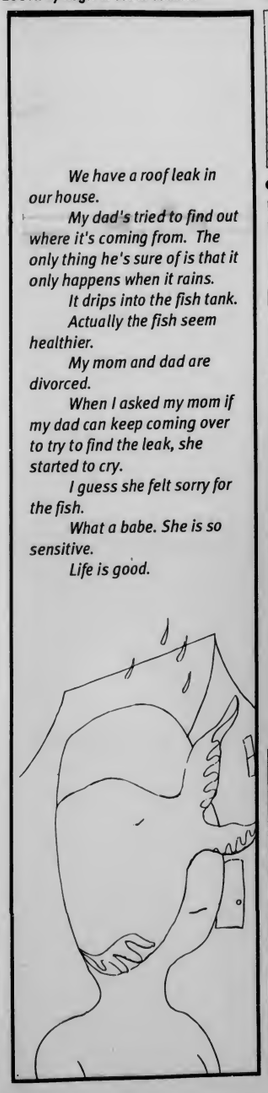
Show them you really mean it.
Collegian Classifieds

Always Wanted One of Those By A. Morse & S. Dumas

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams



Frumpy the Clown Judd Winick

8 Years in Braces By Eric Peterson

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

University² By Frank Cho

Generation X By Chris Lehman

Close to Home By John McPherson

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Morris, but to prevent office visits from dragging on, the HMO requires that I answer only 'yes' or 'no' questions."

VIVA LA REVOLUCION!

WRITE FOR BLACK AFFAIRS, DEVELOPING NATIONS OR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS!
COME DOWN TO THE COLLEGIAN
OR
CALL US AT 545-1851

Quote of the Day

"Don't treat me like a goddess, I'm only a queen."

–Overheard in bed

Sparky® and Sparky the Firedog® are trademarks of the NFPA

Today's Staff

Tara MK Connelly
Night Editor

Mark McGrath
Copy Editor

James Stanley
Photo Technician

Brian Inocencio
Production Supervisor

"Happy Birthday Sarah"-Bobby Thang "Tyla" Vo
Production

Dining Commons Menu

Menu unavailable. Please refer to this guide to help you decide where to eat.

1 First, go get some dice (6 sided, preferably).

2 Find one you like, and roll it.

If you roll:

- Go to Franklin D.C. for dinner.
- Go to Berkshire D.C. for dinner.
- Go to Hampshire D.C. for dinner.
- Go to Worcester D.C. for dinner.
- Get Pizza for dinner!
- Roll again.

Sports Notice:

There will be a MANDATORY meeting for all Collegian sports staff on Thursday night at 7 p.m. in the Collegian office. If you can't attend, you must call Casey or Chris at 545-1762.

Sports

UM polo tames Bears in come-from-behind win

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

After dealing the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Engineers a crushing 21–2 defeat and sustaining the loss of Marc Staudenbauer, a leader in and out of the pool, to a season-ending thumb fracture, the University of Massachusetts water polo team was faced with the unenviable task of swimming off against the Bears of Brown University.

In front of a boisterous and partisan, crowd, the Minutemen pulled out an edge-of-your-seat, nail-biting, 15- 14 victory on a night that marked the first ever live radio broadcast of a collegiate water polo match.

Massachusetts	15
Brown	14

UMass (10–2, 6–0 Eastern Water Polo Association) came out sluggishly, apparently feeling the affects of the loss of Staudenbauer and fell behind the Bears early playing lazy defense while Brown came out aggressively and played tough on both ends of the pool.

"This team continues to mystify me at times when they come out and aren't ready to play," coach Russ Yarworth said. "They were admittedly distracted by Marc being hurt, but they found a way to pull it together — which was nice."

The Minutemen actually took the first lead of the game on a sensational goal by J.C. Limardo.

Brown quickly struck back with two scores — one counting for two points — and led 3–1 early in the first period.

The Bears were tenacious on defense throughout, which often got them in foul trouble. The Minutemen had a chance to capitalize on an early man-up situation, but the Brown defense came up with a pair of blocked shots to squelch the UMass rally.

Massachusetts continued to play lethargic defense. The Bears took advantage of the lack of Minuteman inspiration to the tune of a 6–2 second period lead.

After a Brown scoring drive on which the Bears two–meter men abused "Tiny Tim" Troupis (145 lbs.), Yarworth called a time out that served as a wake–up call for the sluggish UMass squad.

"I told [the team] that it is a long game, it's time to settle down and try to win it with defense; they were trying to

Turn to WATER POLO, page 8

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Freshman Ryan Gray contributed three goals along with strong defense to the Minutemen's 21-2 dismissal of M.I.T.

UMass men's soccer shoots Owls out of sky

Back–up goal keeper Jeff Jablonski records shutout in second straight start

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

Maybe the Massachusetts men's soccer team likes to play on the road.

After two uneventful games at home including a 1–1 overtime tie with New Hampshire and a 1–0 loss to Hartford, the Minutemen travelled to Philadelphia for a pair of games, kicking off Atlantic 10 conference play.

When the dust settled, UMass improved its record to 5–2–1 overall, 2–0–0 in the A–10.

After shutting out St. Joe's 1–0 last Friday on a Tashi Tshering goal late in the first half, the Minutemen earned their second straight shutout with a 3–0 whitewashing of Temple.

The first goal in UMass' drubbing of the Owls (2–6–0, 0– 2–0 in the A–10) came 56 minutes into the match when junior forward Mike Butler scored from seven yards out, collecting a cross from sophomore midfielder Scott Regina giving the Minutemen an early 1–0 advantage.

In the second half, it was the Joenal Castma show as the junior forward scored the first two goals of his college career just minutes apart. The Uniondale, N.Y. native has not seen much time on the pitch since he suffered an ankle injury in a pre–season scrimmage against Brown. Castma notched goals two and three for UMass in the second frame of the match cinching the win for his club.

The first shot found the back of the net 78 minutes into the game when Castma collected a short pass from Butler from 11 yards out sending it past Temple keeper Tim Keddie.

Castma's second goal of the day came less than four minutes after his first, when he fired a shot from 14 yards out for an unassisted tally.

Massachusetts	3
Temple	0

"[Castma] has had an ankle injury for most of the season and he's just coming back," UMass assistant coach Mike Gibbons said. "It's apparent that he is starting to come back out of his shell and played well for us."

Butler led the way for UMass in the shutout with one goal and an assist on the day. On the other side of the ball, sophomore net-minder Jeff Jablonski notched his second consecutive start, not to mention his second consecutive shutout. With three saves against Temple, Jablonski's record improved to 2–0–0 while the Owl's Keddie stopped seven shots in the

"He did a great job for us out there and I know coach [Sam] Koch was very happy with his performance."
– Mike Gibbons on Jeff Jablonski

Jablonski got the nod just minutes before Friday's match against St. Joe's. Starting keeper Tim Pearson suffered a shoulder injury in the pregame warm up and was unable to suit up for the game.

"Tim hurt his shoulder in the warm up at St. Joes, and Jeff had no idea he was starting until 15 minutes before the game," Gibbons said. "He did a great job for us out there and I know coach [Sam] Koch was very happy with his performance."

The Minutemen did something they have not done as of late: out–shoot an opponent. In the weekend's rout over Temple, UMass outshot the Owls 11–7. Thus far in the season, the Minutemen have not inundated opposing goals with shots. However, with solid play in the midfield, coach Koch and his club have showed that it is not necessarily quantity, but quality that wins games.

Massachusetts is back on the road next weekend when it travels to Blacksburg, Va. on Friday where they will face Virginia Tech at 4 p.m. as A-10 competition rolls on.

UM Field hockey defeats Temple

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

The underclassman tandem of Erica Johnston and Saskia Fuchs continued to produce offensive sparks for the Massachusetts field hockey team as the

Massachusetts	3
Temple	1

Minutewomen beat Temple 3–1 in conference action Saturday in Philadelphia.

The No. 5 Minutewomen overpowered Temple to improve their record to 7–1, 2–0 in the Atlantic 10. Temple drops to 3–4, 0–2 in the A–10.

When the game was over, the No. 15 Owls could literally count their shots on one hand, as the Minutewomen held a decisive edge in that category, 22–5.

Johnston, a sophomore forward, put Massachusetts on the board in first half when she netted an unassisted goal just under 19 minutes into the game. The tally, Johnston's sixth on the year, gives her the team lead in goals scored.

Junior Sharon Hughes, who notched her first goal of the season against Boston College two weeks ago, scored her second goal of the campaign just before intermission. Freshman Christine Millbauer assisted on the eventual game winner for the Minutewomen.

Freshman Saskia Fuchs tallied her fifth goal of the season, an unassisted goal, only two minutes into the second period. Fuchs has been a force for the UMass offensive unit this season, having paid immediate dividends since she assumed her spot on the Minutewoman front line.

Temple was able to muster an attack, scoring off a penalty corner with 21:47 remaining in regulation to break up UMass' shutout bid. Cherifa Nouri notched her fifth goal of the season with the score. Katrina Wolfe and Claudia Ovchinnikoff were credited with the assists.

The goal marked the first time that UMass has allowed a goal off a penalty corner all year. Senior goalie Hilary Rose had yet to allow a goal off of a penalty stroke this season. Temple connected on one of two corners Saturday, while UMass couldn't convert any of its 12 penalty corner opportunities.

Rose only had to stop four shots before collecting the win. Temple goalie Deb Brown made 19 saves.

The UMass defensive corps of Laura Phelan, Melanie Gore, Amy Ott and Jen Gutzman have been responsible for knotting up opponents' scoring drives all season.

The Minutewomen will next play on Wednesday when Northeastern visits Totman Field. The game will be the first on-campus game for UMass this season, after a rainout forced the postponement of the Sept. 18 scheduled contest with Yale.

After the mid-week game on campus, the Minutewomen return to the site of their season-opening win to take on No. 2 North Carolina and new Atlantic 10 opponent West Chester. West Chester enters the conference as a field hockey only participant.

Both games, which will be played on Saturday and Sunday respectively, will be held at Westfield State College where an artificial turf field is available.

End of an era looms as Rocket Man may leave

Boston: We have a problem.

If Red Sox management continues its stubborn brand of business, the Fenway faithful may just have seen the last of Roger Clemens.

Clemens, the man who struck out 20 batters in one game — twice! The man who has won three American League Cy Young awards, and an MVP trophy.

The Rocket Man.

The pitcher who should have, could have, was this close to winning the sixth game of the '86 World Series. Clemens, the man who is tied with Cy Young on the all–time Red Sox list in wins (192) and shutouts (38). Clemens, the fireballer who has struck out more than 2500 opposing batters in his 13 years in a Red Sox uniform.

Clemens, the Rocket. Rocket Roger could have rambled around the Fenway mound for the last time.

It doesn't seem plausible to be even thinking of the Rocket launching from any pad but the one on which Young and Babe Ruth and Smoky Joe Wood toiled during their illustrious careers in the Hub.

It just doesn't sit right in the stomach to think that Roger might actually pitch against the Red Sox.

Clemens has been a hero, an idol, an icon to many of us for over a decade, and no matter what happens, his legacy will reach far beyond the confines of next season.

If, indeed we have seen the last of #21 on the back of a Red Sox pitcher (and rest assured, if Clemens ain't wearing it nobody is), then he has left us with so many memories and anecdotes.

So many reasons for us not to hate him for leaving.

What more can I say about the man I grew up wanting to be like; the man whose high leg kick and intense mound mannerisms I duplicated for hours upon hours in my back yard until it was too dark for my little brother to catch my blazing 50 mph fastball.

He is officially a Boston sports legend, one of the greatest pitchers in the history of the Red Sox and one of the more dominating in major league history. The Rocket is a Hall of Fame calibre pitcher whose plaque in Cooperstown should show him donning a blue cap with a red–scripted "B" on the front.

I can't imagine seeing the Red Sox standing on the first base line on an early April morning at Fenway Park, facing the American flag and center field and not seeing a crimson 21 on a gleaming white jersey.

I just can't imagine it. It's just not right.

• Shifting gears, the playoff match–ups are set and look to provide a lot of excitement to the general baseball populous, even if the Sox are playing golf.

In the National League, the Atlanta Braves cruised into the post–season as they look to defend their world series title. The Bravos will face a Los Angeles team that takes punch after punch and keeps coming back.

First, they lost Brett Butler, then they lost Tommy Lasorda, then they lost Butler again, and most recently they stumbled into the playoffs as the wild card team after relinquishing their title to the surging San Diego Padres.

The Dodgers will put up some fight like all proud teams do, but

Turn to BASEBALL page 8

UM's Aller–Huckins win Army title in Jersey

A moving experience; team goes south for West Point win

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

This weekend on the campus of Rutgers University in Piscataway, N.J., the Massachusetts men's tennis doubles team of junior Alex Aller and sophomore Mark Huckins captured the B Flight doubles title at the West Point Invitational. The Minuteman tandem defeated the team from Cornell University of Steve Kay and Pete Coleman by a score of 8–6 in the championship match Sunday afternoon.

Just in case you might be wondering, the Army engineers did not move the venerable institution to beautiful northern New Jersey in just a weekend. Due to technical difficulties (i.e. court resurfacing), the tournament had to be moved to Piscataway from its original site of West Point, N.Y.

Even though the duo of Aller and Huckins would have probably enjoyed bringing the title back for the UMass men's tennis team (4–0 overall), the Invitational is run as a series of individual, and not team, tournaments.

Additional awards also went to Aller, as he defeated Tom Shahine of Boston University in the B Flight Consolation singles title final, 6–3, 6–1. Freshman Rob Manchester lost a tough match in the C Flight singles title final, as he was unable to capitalize on a good weekend's work with a 6–4, 6–3 defeat to the hands of Bloomsburg's Paul Hunsburger. Aller in all, the men's team had a productive weekend, as they had already won five singles and two doubles matches on the first day of competition on Friday.

***

The Massachusetts women's tennis team (3–0) continued their good start to the season, defeating Columbia University by a 5–2 margin this past Saturday afternoon in New York, N.Y.

The Minutewomen overcame two, tough early singles matches to roll to the victory. After sophomore Jackie Braunstein's 6–1, 6–2 defeat in the No. 1 singles, junior Noelle Orsini and junior

Turn to TENNIS, page 8

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Junior Caroline Steele and head tennis coach Judy Dixon confer between matches. The Minutewomen beat Columbia this weekend to improve to 3–0.

Donaghue, women's XC takes third; men finish 11th

Corey P. Goodman
Collegian Correspondent

The Massachusetts women's cross country team returns to Amherst this week weary after a hard fought third–place finish at the Meet of Champions in the Bronx, N.Y. Saturday.

Rebecca Donaghue was UMass' top finisher, crossing the line in eighth place with a time of 18:36.

Following Donaghue was an impressive performance from Katie Greenia. The senior from Morrisville, Vt. ran a strong race finishing ninth, only 22 seconds off Donaghue's pace at 18:58.

Junior Christy Martin, from Leicester, turned in another excellent showing finishing 13th, clocking in at 19:07.

Coming in fourth for the Minutewomen, and 23rd overall, was veteran runner Molly Dunlap of Hingham, who finished with a time of 19:35.

Rounding out UMass' top five finishers, was freshman Sharon Tillotson, who crossed the line 33rd, at 19:53.

Despite a gutsy effort by coach Julie LaFreniere's Minutewomen, No. 7 Villanova stole the show in the Bronx. The deep, fleet–footed Wildcat squad crushed the rest of the 19–team field, finishing with an insurmountable 23 point total.

Coastal Carolina was clearly the surprise of the meet, finishing ahead of UMass in second place with 55 points.

Rounding out the top five teams were UMass (third with 86 points), Army (fourth with 119 points), and Princeton (fifth with 121 points).

LaFreniere's Minutewomen will be resting their legs the next few days while they enjoy a much deserved week off. UMass will return to action on Saturday, October 12th, when they travel to Bethlehem, PA to compete in the Paul Short Invitational.

The Massachusetts men's cross country team returns to campus this week after placing 11th at the Meet of Champions Saturday, alongside the Minutewomen.

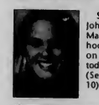
UMass was led by Senior runner Mathew Behl. The Minuteman standout, from Granville, crossed the line 41st overall, with a time of 26:54.

Senior Mike Macieko, out of Deer Park, N.Y., finished second for UMass, 59th overall, with a time of 27:13.

Two seconds behind Macieko's pace was Junior Ryan Carrera, from Holliston, who finished 61st.

Rounding out UMass' top five runners were sophomores Brian Hughes and Daniel Leboeuf, who finished 77th and 128th respectively.

As for the rest of the pack, Army cruised to victory with a 56 point total. Not too far behind were the Nittany Lions from Penn State, who closed out the day in second place with 78 points.



The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 21 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Wednesday, October 2, 1996

Do you hear what I hear?

Collegian staff rate the new albums. Check out what we thought of Rusted Root, Noa and more (See Arts & Living, page 6).

Minutewomen look to handle Huskies

Sophomore Erica Johnston and the Massachusetts field hockey team take on Northeastern today at 3:30 p.m. (See Sports, page 10).

WORLD

UK lady delivers three after conceiving eight

LONDON (AP) — Her doctors say she needs a miracle.

Mandy Allwood, the 32-year-old Briton who conceived eight babies with the help of fertility drugs then peddled her story to a newspaper, was hospitalized in stable condition yesterday after losing three of the fetuses.

She now runs a serious risk of losing more.

Miss Allwood is receiving powerful drugs to stop her womb from contracting and delivering the remaining five fetuses prematurely. Now in their twentieth week, the fetuses need five more weeks in the womb to have a chance of surviving, doctors say.

"I think that is unlikely, but we do not give up hope," said Donald Gibb, a consulting obstetrician at King's College Hospital in London. He said the drugs are effective for days, at most. "I don't normally use the word miracle, but it was something I nearly said to Ms. Allwood" when she gave birth to three boys on Monday, Gibb said. Each weighed less than seven ounces "and would fit in the palm of my hand," he said.

NATION

Federal officials set to vacuum ocean floor

SMITHTOWN, N.Y. (A.P.) — Frustrated by the lack of tell-tale clues to the explosion of TWA Flight 800, the federal government is considering vacuuming the ocean floor to recover tiny pieces of wreckage.

James Kallstrom, an FBI assistant director, said yesterday that the vacuuming would capture pieces so small they could fit in the palm of a hand.

Even tiny pieces could help show whether the Boeing 747 was destroyed by a missile, a bomb or a mechanical malfunction. An ambitious salvage expedition has brought up more than 85 percent of the plane without providing an answer to what happened on July 17. Kallstrom said no decision whether to vacuum will be made until investigators "satisfy ourselves that we have all the pieces that the divers can bring up."

"We may do some sort of work down in the muck. We don't know for certain. It may not be dredging or raking. We may decide to vacuum," he said. "Treasure hunters vacuum up silt, filter it out, and find little pieces of gems left. That's what we're thinking of doing."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 75 LOW: 50	HIGH: 55 LOW: 40	HIGH: 50 LOW: 35

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 10

Escort service changes policy; safety of students questioned

ELIZABETH BROWN \ COLLEGIAN

Recent changes in the van escort service pick–up and drop– off locations has some students concerned about safety.

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

In an attempt to minimize the wait for a campus night escort van, the University of Massachusetts Department of Public Safety has altered their pick–up and drop–off procedures. This change, however, has sparked student concern about the effectiveness of the escort service.

The driving escorts, which formerly dropped students off at individual residence halls, is now only letting students off in centralized locations in the residential areas.

"We're attempting to try new things, without being locked into any one thing, in order to minimize the waiting period for vans," said John Luippold, chief of UMass police. "That includes looking at new pick–up and drop–off points and utilizing walking escorts as a primary response, with vans to cover more isolated areas — for example, parking lots."

"We changed the procedure to cut down on waiting time and to increase safety for the driver and students," said Lawrence Holmes, deputy chief of security.

The change in Southwest Residential Area has aroused student concern because the pick–up and drop–off site is now the area known as the "Horseshoe" parking lot, located behind the Hampden Munchie Store.

Jenn Corbett, a junior Student Government Association (SGA) senator from Kennedy Residence Hall, does not feel that the new drop–off location is safe.

"I called to complain about how escort was dropping off at the Horseshoe, and they transferred me to a chief, who told me he would hold a staff meeting that Tuesday and call me back — he never called me back," Corbett said.

"One time I asked to get an escort, and talked to a student supervisor, who asked me to walk to the Hampden Munchie Store," Corbett said. "When I complained, they told me the drivers don't feel safe because objects have been thrown at the vans from dorm windows."

"I had a real concern driving vans on the mall by Washington tower," Holmes said. "It's really not for vehicles, it's a pedestrian area.

"We've had things thrown at the vans — a lightbulb was recently thrown at a cruiser," Holmes said.

Police have also reported a cinder block being thrown out of a tower window this semester.

"Imagine if a vehicle was hit by a cinder block. It would go through the roof," Holmes said. "I don't think we should continue to drive in pedestrian areas.

"The Hampden area is pretty active, and well lit," Holmes said.

Holmes explained that the department owns two vans, and also uses a car, to try to meet the demands of students who want rides.

"Most schools don't even run security past 3 a.m.," Holmes said. "Our van escort runs from 5 p.m. – 3 a.m., but if someone calls later than that, we'll help them."

Holmes' main concern is the time factor. He feels that students calling from remote parking lots should not have to wait long by themselves.

"People have gotten used to door to door service," Holmes said. "When you give people convenience, it's difficult to take it back."

"I don't understand how they can expect students to walk in an area they don't feel safe to drive in," Corbett said.

Turn to ESCORT, page 2

Obscene caller bothers students

University of Massachusetts police reported yesterday that several obscene phone calls were made to students on campus from an off–campus location.

"We've been receiving an increase in reports of annoying phone calls where the male calling will say he won a large sum of cash and then move the conversation to one about sex," said John Luippold, chief of the University Police Department.

According to Luippold, the caller will initially say he won the lottery and is conducting a survey as to how a student would spend the money. He will then turn the conversation into one about sexual activity.

"This is an early indication of what I've seen in the past," Luippold said. "A caller will ask legitimate types of questions, then move into sexual overtones. The 'lottery' is a new take."

Some similar obscene calls students have received in the past involved a man calling, stating he was a doctor and conducting a medical survey, and also a caller stating he was dying and only had a few weeks to live.

Luippold said because the calls are being made from an off–campus location they are difficult to trace. If a caller targets a specific number and calls more than once, the police can then trace the phone call.

Luippold said students should be aware of some of the signs of these obscene phone calls — in this instance, the lottery ploy.

Any student who receives an obscene phone call should report it to the police department immediately.

— Laura Stock

UM to host "Science Days"

By Daniel E. Levenson
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts at Amherst will host "Science Days," on Oct. 3, 15 and 16. This program is designed to introduce high school students to what goes on at the University.

Diana Blazis, Associate Dean of the College of Natural Sciences and Mathematics, said that "Science Days" presents students with a variety of ways to learn about scientific research conducted here.

"The main goal is to demonstrate to teachers and students the kind of opportunities and research that exists at UMass," Blazis said.

She explained that, as a University engaged in research in different areas, undergraduate students can, and do, play an integral role in these scientific endeavors.

"Undergraduates really can do work here that gets published," Blazis said.

The College of Food and Natural Resources is also involved with the program this year. Martha Kegelis, director of student recruitment for the college, will be working in conjunction with Blazis.

Entrance into the program is in such high demand that basically the same format will be offered on each of the three days. This will allow a larger number of students and schools to participate in the three, separate one–day programs and receive similar instruction.

"We try to offer the same range of activities on each of the three days," Blazis said.

Throughout the course of the program, laboratories and classrooms will be opened up so the participants can see what facilities undergraduates and researchers use to conduct research.

Students will also be hearing lectures by professors in various fields which will be geared towards high school students.

A lecture given by Steve Goodwin from the microbiology department, entitled "The Biology of Trash," will educate students about biological solutions to solid and hazardous waste, as well as what goes on in landfills, biologically.

John Newsted from the environmental sciences program will be speaking on the "Impact of Contaminants on Wildlife," which examines on the effects of organic and inorganic chemicals on wildlife.

Joe Kunkel from the biology department will be presenting a lecture entitled, "What's Up With Eggs and Wings." He will be talking about using new techniques to solve problems in human fertility and other related research.

The program, which began in 1991 is expected to draw approximately 750 students from more than 25 schools.

ELIZABETH BROWN \ COLLEGIAN

"Fire Tuesday"

A portion of the drum section of the UMass marching band, from left to right, John Voegtlin, Damon Grant, Chris Berchin and Kevin Smith, performed "Fire Tuesday" outside of the Old Chapel yesterday afternoon.

Wideman reads from new book

The Cattle Killing explores theme of 18th century love story

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

The first of four Distinguished Faculty Lectures of the year took place yesterday at Memorial Hall featuring a reading by Master of Fine Arts English professor/author John Edgar Wideman.

"The Distinguished Faculty Lectures greatly contribute to the intellectual life of the University," said Chancellor David K. Scott as he introduced Wideman.

"Wideman has an understanding of African American culture which transcends either one race or one time period," said Scott.

Before he began the reading, Wideman said that he does not write because he has answers, but instead, because he has questions.

"Wideman reveals as much about his deepest self as any artist," said Scott.

"Writing is a way of being in the world," said Wideman, "Writing provides a compass which allows me to live my life."

Wideman stressed that it was especially important for students to find something which made them feel good in a world so full of price tags and money.

Wideman read from his most recent book, The Cattle Killing, for approximately 30 minutes to an audience of over 125 persons.

The author explained that The Cattle Killing was a love story. The book involves a young man living in the 18th century who is telling a story to a woman who is partly a spirit. She seems to be leaving the earth. The stories which the man tells the woman keep her alive, which Wideman believes is definitive of love.

"People enact in a non–physical and physical world," said Wideman, "I wanted this book to relay that to people."

After he finished reading, Wideman said that writing and music were very similar.

"Spontaneity and improvisation are very important to writing," said Wideman, "That is a star that I am shooting at."

Wideman said that The Cattle Killing was a book that questioned the whole relationship of all Americans to other Americans, specifically black to white.

"To this day the coming together of people in America is incomplete," said Wideman, "There is a historical failure of people in this country to come together."

In his next book Wideman plans to write about a black woman who has suffered the loss of her children to the circumstances of current urban society.

Turn to WILDEMAN, page 3

ELIZABETH BROWN \ COLLEGIAN

Professor John Edgar Wideman read from his new novel yesterday afternoon at Memorial Hall.

For Your Information

PIPs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Wednesday, Oct. 2

Folk Dancing — All are welcome at Hillel House, 388 N. Pleasant St., to have fun and learn. Teaching sessions will be held from 7:30–8:30 p.m. and a review and request session will follow from 8:30–9:15 p.m. No experience is necessary.

Fund Raiser — Alpha Phi Omega, a national co-ed service fraternity, is sponsoring the third annual Blue Bowl, a football game between the UMass and Amherst police. The game, held at Amherst Regional High School, will start at 7:30 p.m. Tickets, including a raffle for a stereo, will be available at the game for $5 each. Proceeds go to benefit the North Valley Special Olympics. For more information, call 584-9377.

Meeting — The Distinguished Visitor's Program (DVP) will be having an informational meeting at 7 p.m. in Campus Center room 811. Anyone interested in bringing a speaker to campus is invited to attend. Help us prepare for our upcoming speaker, Nadine Strossen. For more information, call 545-0046.

Meeting — The Student Health Advisory Board (SHAB) will meet at University Health Services (UHS) in room 304 from 5:30–6:30 p.m. All are welcome to attend. For more information, contact the Health Education office at UHS at 577–5181.

Poetry — Claudia's Cafe presents an open poetry reading and poetry slam at 8 p.m. The Ozark's Poet Collective will be featured. There is a $2 cover charge at the door, and sign-ups for the slam will begin at 7:30.

Poetry — The UMass Poetry Society will be holding its weekly meeting in the Campus Center, room 905, at 7:30 p.m. Come to read, or just to listen and enjoy. For more information, call Tim at 546-0562.

RSO Education — National Student Voter Education Day from noon–9 p.m. in the Campus Center auditorium. Voter registration and many RSO's with information on different student issues will be available. Open mike and roundtable discussion; potential political speaker. For more information, contact Leigh at 545-0199.

Seminar — Michael Menaker, from the department of biology at the University of Virginia, will speak on the "Mammalian Circadian Axiz and its Roots," at 4 p.m. in room 319 of Morrill II. The event is hosted by Eric Bittman and Brad Powers.

Thursday, Oct. 3

GLBT — Deborah Elliston, graduate student and adjunct professor of Anthropology at NYU, will speak on "Representing Lesbianism: Gender and Sexuality in Polynesia," at 12:30 p.m. in Campus Center room 803. The event is free and wheelchair accessible. For more information, call The UMass Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

Meeting — There will be an informational meeting for those interested in studying abroad in Spain or Latin America in the third floor lounge of Herfer Hall at 4 p.m. A short film will be shown, followed by a discussion with former participants in the program. If you cannot attend, please stop by the International Programs Office, forth Floor, Hills South, or call Brad for more information at 545–2710.

Workshop — The Learning Resources Center is sponsoring a note taking workshop from 3:30–5 p.m. on the 10th floor of the W.E.B. DuBois Library. Call 545–5334 to register.

Friday, Oct. 4

Lecture/Discussion — Mt. Holyoke College presents Torie Osborn, activist and author of Coming Home to America : A Roadmap to Gay and Lesbian Empowerment, at 4 p.m. at the Five College Women's Research Center in the Dickinson Living Room at Mt. Holyoke College.

Music — Spectral Voices will perform harmonic singing at the Montague Bookmill. Come hear their celestial harmonies and unique vocal styles, that draw from roots in Tibetan Buddhist chants. Admission, $7/door. For more information, call Jim at (860) 633–5057.

Religious — There will be a NFTY–Style creative service with guitar at 6 p.m. in the rec room of Hillel. Dinner will be served at 7 p.m. For more information, call 549–1710.

Notices

Education — The HCAH HEAD START program has immediate openings for its free pre–school Classroom and Home Base option. The two Amherst classrooms are open Mon–Fri from 8:30 a.m.–12:30 p.m. Breakfast, lunch, and transportation are provided. To obtain a pre–registration form or for additional information, call the Head Start main office at 582–4206 or the Amherst center at 549–3993.

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley offers rides to students to attend the 10 a.m. service in Amherst. Drivers arrive at the Knowlton and Prince bus stops at 9:45. Please call Mark to confirm, or for other stops, at 253–0361.

Everywoman's Center — Acculturation Group for Latina Women, facilitated by Mari Vicente, Thurs. from 4–6 p.m. Child Sexual Abuse Survivors Support Groups: Group 1 facilitated by Sara Elinoff, Mondays from 7–9 p.m. Group 2 facilitator, day, and time TBA. Coming Out Group For Lesbians, facilitated by Lynne Schachne, Mondays 4–5:30 p.m. Lifting Your Spirits, facilitated by Carla Brennan and Diana Dalendina, Weds. 4–5:30 p.m. Eco–Psychology for Women, facilitated by Carla Brennan, Fridays 10–11:30 a.m. Post Abortion Support Group, facilitated by Peggy Warwick, Wednesdays 5:30–6:30 p.m. Self–Esteem & Assertiveness for Women, facilitatede by Carla Brennan, Wednesdays 6:30–8 p.m. Single Mothers Support Group, facilitated by Amy Rosebury, Tuesdays 1–2:30 p.m. Women & Divorce, facilitated by Ali Thompson, Tuesdays 6:30–8 p.m. All groups offered by the Everywoman's Center begin in October, and offer a safe and confidential space. For other groups, call 545–0883.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition meetings are every Tuesday at 7 p.m. in room 306 of the Student Union. For more information, call the ARC office at 5–1925.

Five College — REFLECT, the Five College Bereavement Support Program is a student organization devoted to helping those coping with grief. REFLECT is offering two free 8 week grief support groups this semester. Groups are forming now. Please call 577–5316 for more information.

Staff Needed — The UMass Index yearbook needs staff in all departments. Editorial positions are available in Photo, Layout, Copy, and Marketing departments. An assistant copy editor and assistant sports editor are also needed. Meetings are held on Wednesdays at 7 p.m., 304 Student Union, or call 545–0848 if interested.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage

Sept. 27

There was a two vehicle accident on Massachusetts Avenue.

Alarm — Fire Trouble

Sept. 28

Hot coal in a trash can ignited in parking lot 11.

Animal Complaint

Sept. 29

A dog with no tags was taken to the pound.

A pole light reportedly had squirrels trapped inside.

Annoying Behavior

Sept. 28

Skateboarders were dispersed from the Fine Arts Center.

Skateboarders were dispersed from Lederle Graduate Building.

Assault & Battery

Sept. 28

Patricia Brach, 20, of 28 South Looks St., Southwick, was arrested for assault and battery with a dangerous weapon in Kennedy Residence Hall.

Drug Law Offenses

Sept. 28

An individual reported a fight between 10 people in Kennedy Residence Hall.

Intoxicated Person

Sept. 29

An intoxicated, 21–year–old person from Gorman Residence Hall was taken into protective custody.

Larceny

Sept. 27

A bicycle was stolen from Mackimmie Residence Hall.

A bicycle tire was reported stolen from Brooks Residence Hall.

A wallet was stolen from Worcester Dining Hall.

A license plate was reported stolen from parking lot 49.

A phone was reported stolen from Pierpont Residence Hall.

Liquor Law Violations

Sept. 28

Alcohol was dumped by underage individuals on Massachusetts Avenue.

Lost/Found Property

Sept. 27

A bicycle found in the woods on North Pleasant Street was returned to the owner.

Sept. 28

Keys found in Whitmore Administration Building were turned in to police.

Open Window/ Door

Sept. 28

Broken windows at the Hampshire Dining Hall were to be boarded.

Suspicious Person/Activity

Sept. 27

A loud noise was reported in Crabtree Residence Hall.

Sept. 28

Loud individuals were reported on the Academic Mall.

A Resident Assistant in Grayson Residence Hall reported difficulty clearing a large group from a balcony.

A group was found rattling a bike rack in parking lot 32.

Rollerbladers and skateboarders were cleared from the area around Franklin Dining Hall.

Sept. 29

An infoxicated Individual was reported in Mackimmie Residence Hall.

Traffic Stop

Sept. 27

Richard Vega, 23, of Colrain, was stopped on Amity Street and arrested for operating under the influence of liquor, second offense, and speeding.

Ryan A. Applebee, 23, of 75 Carroll St., Springfield, was stopped on University Drive and arrested on a warrant.

Vandalism

Sept. 27

Graffiti was found in McNamara Residence Hall.

Graffiti was found in a bathroom in Machmer Hall.

A vehicle was vandalized in parking lot 11.

Sept. 28

Graffiti was found in Emerson Residence Hall.

Sept. 29

Racial graffiti was found in a stairwell in Van Meter Residence Hall.

A parking meter was vandalized in parking lot M2.

■ escort

continued from page 1

At the dispatcher's suggestion, Corbett was willing to utilize a walking escort, but was frustrated that their services end at midnight.

"If they're going to do it this way, they should have a walking escort at the Horseshoe," Corbett said.

Students in Central Residential Area have also been experiencing problems with the escort service.

Kelly Carr, a senior Resident Assistant (RA) from Gorman Residence Hall, has been compiling complaints from students about the escort service.

Carr is also a coordinator of Women Against Violence Educate (WAVE), a program which is currently undergoing a process to become a Registered Student Organization. Campus safety, and the escort service, is one area that WAVE will focus on.

"The problem we've been having in Gorman is students will call and won't be able to get a van escort, so I will call as their RA to get one for them," Carr said. "Some of the people who answer the phones have been flat out rude to me."

Carr said walking escorts were often suggested to her.

"If we can't trust people when we're walking by ourselves on campus, how should we trust a strange person who's an escort?" Carr asked.

"Even the library shuttle doesn't drop off at the dorm, they just use the bus stop on Stockbridge Road for Gorman Residence Hall," Carr said.

Corbett intends to address the van escort issue when SGA's session begins Oct. 9.

"I'd like to be working with Student Government in trying to meet the needs of the students," Luippold said. "SGA input does not go unnoticed."

On Friday, October 4th at 9:00pm...

Celebrtate the end of the week at the TOC with Karaoke

11TH FLOOR • LINCOLN CAMPUS CENTER
(413) 545-3217

Monday - Friday
4:00 pm - 12:30 am
Saturday
3:00 pm - 12:30 am

The Women of Color Program of the Everywoman's Center presents...

The Fourth Annual Women of Color Reception

featuring New York City comedienne,

EMMY GAY

When? Thursday, October3, 1996 .

Where? VIP Room, Mullins Center

Time? 6:00 pm

Cost? Absolutely FREE!!

REFRESHMENTS WILL BE SERVED!
VENDORS AND INFORMATION TABLES AVAILABLE!

Join us at this event for an evening of excitement and fun!!

TAP programs help in college transition

By Joe Spackman
Collegian correspondent

Many first year students are taking advantage of a program offered by the Residential Academics Programs (RAP) office to make the transition to college life easier.

According to RAP, more than 10 percent of freshmen this fall are participating in one of the 12 Talent Advancement Programs (TAP) available.

The program, one of the few in the country, allows students with a common major to live and work together in the same residence hall. TAP covers subjects ranging from engineering to nursing to English.

"The aim of the program," said Joe Battista, director of RAP at the University of Massachusetts, "is to give first year students a small and rich academic experience."

Students take at least two of their five courses each semester in their residence hall with the other students from that program. Living and working together is intended to build a greater sense of community.

"Students' social and academic lives blend rather than being at odds," said Therese Pasquale, associate director for RAP.

The more comfortable and relaxed environment that students in TAP experience helps many of them adapt to UMass more easily. Battista said that when students arrive, they know they are enrolled in the program and are guaranteed to be on a certain set of courses. Also, they already know some of their fellow students in the program as they have received names and addresses of others in their program from RAP during the summer.

Every program has a mentor to help answer any questions and help solve problems.

"Students on the program live in the same building and often the same floor," said Ryan Scott, a student who has participated in one of the programs. "Being closer to your classmates provides many opportunities to make friends, to have open discussions and to get help if necessary."

"Students feel like there's more of a feeling of belonging for them," said Battista. "The program lessens the stress, the tensions, the adjustments."

Another major benefit is that students get introduced to their major and faculty in the first week of their first semester. An extra one–credit seminar focused on the student's major is provided alongside the relevant general education courses. Ties are established between the students and their faculty straight away.

"That's very unusual," said Battista. "There are many students who don't get into their major until their junior year, or don't know their faculty very well."

According to Battista, the weekly seminar, taught by a faculty member, aims to give students an initial overview of their major. It tries to encourage those involved in the program to see their studies with a new wider perspective. Students have even changed their major after finding a new interest during the seminars.

Battista uses this to counter some of the criticisms of TAP. He doesn't see a problem with students focusing on their major so early on, especially if the option to change is left open.

Battista also disagrees that TAP students will segregate themselves from other students. He points out that the campus is large and it is inevitable that students will meet others. The program also does not restrict any outside interests.

"I don't think of it as a confining experience," Battista said. "I think it's a more comforting experience."

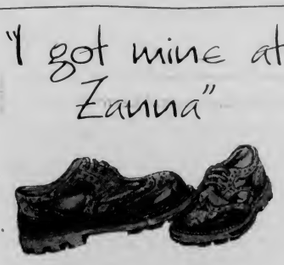
Sanctions against Yugoslavia end; Milosevic supports Balkan peace

By Robert Reid
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS —The U.N. Security Council voted unanimously yesterday to lift sanctions imposed against Yugoslavia in 1992, a sign of international recognition of Serbia's role in helping to bring peace to the Balkans.

The council suspended the sanctions in November after Serbia, which forms the bulk of what remains of Yugoslavia, signed the peace accord last year that ended three–and–a–half years of fighting in Bosnia. Yesterday's action formally removes the sanctions.

The measures were imposed because of Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic's role in fomenting Serb separatist movements in neighboring Croatia and Bosnia as part of his dream of a "Greater Serbia."



But last year Milosevic played a crucial role in moves toward a Balkan peace, signing the Dayton accord on behalf of Bosnian Serbs — a treaty they had opposed. He also chose not to respond when Croatia's army retook most rebel Serb-held territory in Croatia last year.

The results of the embargo, combined with the costs of economic mismanagement and war, devastated Serbia and Montenegro.

Per capita income is now $1,000, half of what it was in 1987. Foreign debt stands at about $8 billion. Inflation runs about 100 percent a year. Officially, nearly half the 745,000 people in the work force are unemployed.

In suspending the sanctions last year, the council said the measures would be formally lifted 10 days after free and fair elections in Bosnia-Herzegovina, which took place Sept. 14. But the United States insisted that the council wait until international monitors from the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe certified the elections as free and fair.

"I got mine at Zanna"

John Fluevog wing tips

ZANNA
downtown Amherst

LONDON $190

PARIS	$215
AMSTERDAM	$275
ZURICH	$275
BARCELONA	$299
CANCUN	$183
ATHENS	$349
COSTA RICA	$225
CHICAGO	$100

CALL FOR A FREE STUDENT TRAVELS MAGAZINE!
Council Travel
44 MAIN STREET
AMHERST, MA 01002
(413) 256-1261
http://www.ciee.org/travel.htm
EURAILPASSES ISSUED ON-THE-SPOT!

The Facts about Young Women and Breast Health:

Visit our table in the Campus Center this Month between 10am - 3pm on Mondays and Wednesdays for more information, or call us at 577-5181, Health Education Division, University Health Services.

White House holds Mideast summit

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — After tensions and suspicion inflamed by Mideast violence, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat shook hands at a White House summit Tuesday and held lengthy face-to-face talks.

"We've come a long way in the last three years," President Clinton said as he sought to build on a 1993 peace accord between the two sides. "No one wants to turn back."

Netanyahu said they had come together "to try to put the peace process back on track" after last week's violence that left 76 people dead. He said he was absolutely committed to the 1993 agreements, which include the promised redeployment away from Arabs in the West Bank town of Hebron.

The White House said the crisis-shrouded talks between Netanyahu and Arafat went "a long way towards re-establishing that notion of trust that must exist between the parties."

Still, presidential spokesman Mike McCurry said, "We are at a very, very difficult moment. We are still at that moment." It was only the second meeting between Netanyahu and Arafat. They talked for three hours in the presidential library under a portrait of George Washington.

Despite the upbeat assessment about re-establishing trust, there was no indication of a breakthrough on divisive issues, such as a promised but delayed Israeli troop redeployment in Hebron or how to treat holy sites in Jerusalem. "They have a number of very deep differences," McCurry said.

The talks are to wind up today. Clinton said the meetings show "a common commitment to end the violence and to get the peace process back on track. We are committed to that."

Hasan Abed Rahman, head of the PLO office in Washington and one of Arafat's closest advisors, said he was hopeful about the summit's outcome. "The general elvironment is not cold," he said. Assembling at the outset in the Roosevelt Room, Netanyahu and Arafat — along with Jordan's King Hussein — greeted each other with handshakes and spoke amiably, McCurry said.

The atmosphere was described as very relaxed — despite the bitterness growing out of bloody battles between Israeli troops and Palestinian police.

The leaders met individually with Clinton in the Oval Office and then all together for 45 minutes. Then Clinton invited them to lunch in the White House library where they dined on pan-roasted chicken with vegetables and couscous.

By prearrangement, Clinton and Hussein withdrew after about 20 minutes, leaving Netanyahu and Arafat behind. The only other person present was an Arabic-speaking State Department interpreter, Gamal Helal.

While they dined, Secretary of State Warren Christopher had his own lunch across the street at Blair House with Jordanian, Israeli and Palestinian senior officials. Chief U.S. mediator Dennis Ross planned to talk with experts from all three delegations late into the night.

"One of the things we hope to see accomplished is an agreement they will continue to work together after Washington," State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns said. "That has to happen." This echoed a proposal by Netanyahu for opened-ended negotiations after the White House summit.

Netanyahu and Clinton conferred privately for 40 minutes; the president and Arafat talked one-on-one for 20 minutes.

Sources close to the Israeli delegation said discussions involved measures to end all violence and to speed up the peace process, as well as the Hebron troop issue and a date for redeployment.

Israeli sources said Netanyahu was concerned about Palestinian police having armed exchanges with Israeli troops. American officials, meanwhile, said Netanyahu's offer for open-ended negotiations was on the table.

Another explosive issue was Netanyahu's opening last week of a second entrance to a tunnel that winds around the Temple Mount in Jerusalem, which has shrines sacred to Muslims and Jews.

Israeli sources said they did not expect Netanyahu to close it but to give something in return, such the release of women prisoners and a pledge to withdraw from Hebron's Arab neighborhoods.

Sensitive to election-year concerns, Clinton said he was not trying to apply pressure on any of the parties. Instead, he said he was trying to get the parties together to explore alternatives and to "find common interests and shared values."

■ Wildeman

continued from page 1

"Why are we allowing our children to be killed in such large and unbelievable numbers," said Wideman. "That is what I will be addressing in my book."

Chancellor Scott bestowed the Chancellor's Medal for Distinguished Service at the University of Massachusetts to Wideman. The award is the greatest honor which the Chancellor can give to a faculty member.

Wideman has received the Genious Grant from the MacArthur Foundation as well as being a Ben Franklin Scholar at the University of Pennsylvania and a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford University.

Wideman was a professor at the University of Pennsylvania and also temporarily coached basketball. For two years he served as the Director of African American studies, also at UPenn.

Four more Distinguished Faculty Lectures will take place throughout the year. During the spring semester, dozens of nominations are given to a committee which narrows the number to four.

Wideman thanked the people responsible for putting the lecture together.

"The care of the people who organize this lecture was very supportive," said Wideman.

Wideman will soon begin a new publication tour for The Cattle Killing.

GAY, LESBIAN,
BISEXUAL ISSUES

NEEDS WRITERS!

If you are interested in writing for the Collegian and working on issues that pertain to you or your friends please come to the

Collegian at 113 Campus Center

and ask for Jamie Sinsheimer or leave a note in my mailbox. All students are welcome to apply, whether you are a GLB student or just an ally.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Morse Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David Vokkin Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor Joshua Sylvester Editorial Production Manager
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor Sean Horgan Systems Manager
Mark McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Michael Elliott News Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor David Quist Webmaster

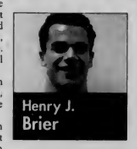
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.



Mister October

All rise, and offer a warm, hearty welcome, for his majesty, October has arrived.

Lest we neglect to remember that we are a day late, we presently find ourselves on the second of the sublime month.

Now is the time, particularly in New England, when the season's most obvious changes are evident. Look around. During no other period of the year are the differences as apparent.

One needs to be prepared for the morning stroll to or upon campus, when the conditions are comfortable yet chilly. Time to bring out the woolen sweaters which can be shed later on in the day, beyond mid-morning, when a t-shirt or polo shirt will suffice. Short sleeve shirts make gentle fall breezes all the more enjoyable.

Henry J. Brier

Leaves upon the trees also go through an obvious change as foliage hallmarks, distinguishes and attracts tourists to the Northeast to view the glorious colors.

One of this season's sweetest sights, in this writer's opinion, is a tree with bright yellow leaves that glows even more when subject to the radiant sun.

Days become comfortably warm with an every-so-often brisk wind which serves as a subtle reminder of what lies ahead. Such rare breezes also inform one to make the most of this incredible month.

Gone are the days of September, filed to the archives, with its consistently warm days and steadily calm nights. Last month has always been far more predictable, as compared to October.

Evenings and nights will be nippy, the perfect setting for those who enjoy taking deep breaths to enrich the lungs with crisp oxygen. The first frost of the year usually designs windows during this esteemed month, as the nights ultimately become cold, yet unbeknownst to many as we sleep away the hours in dreamland.

Speaking of parts faraway, this writer's tableau during this month last year was the Middle East: A thrillingly dynamic region of the world that draws much attention.

Also, the region's activity, especially of late, evokes commentary from outsiders who have nothing– personal at stake in regard to the political issues that consistently arise.

Early in October 1995, the weather in Athens and some of the islands in the Aegean Sea was strictly warm with a Mediterranean breeze, and no trees were viewed changing colors.

After more than a week's stay within Greece the scene changed to Turkey, where frigidly-cold mornings were experienced throughout the country's western and central regions. These mornings were significantly colder than any New England October, yet the days became remarkably warmer and ultimately hot.

What was most reminiscent in Turkey of New England was Istanbul, a city where one can sense tradition and history simply by walking around and observing the different cultural buildings dating from the middle of this millennium.

Tradition and history also becomes evident in the United States during October, as the culmination of America's pastime occurs and is widely publicized. The World Series grips the attention-span of some, while many prefer otherwise.

An election year is beginning to come full circle, and as October proceeds, expect the political scene to become even more charged and intense on many different fronts.

Officially sanctioned holidays that are celebrated during this month include Columbus Day, despite the dire opposition against any observance whatsoever, emanating from a couple of different revolutionary organizations present on our campus.

And then comes Halloween, which is fun while it lasts but terribly unfortunate when it ends because that signifies the tragic end of this amazing month.

It is at that point only when those of you who rose as instructed earlier can be seated.

Henry J. Brier is a Collegian columnist.

You try it

It's freezing outside. My nose feels as if it's about to drop off and my ears are burning. I can barely feel the key in my hand as I aim it blindly in the direction of its designated hole. The last time I checked my Indiglo Timex, the hands read 5 a.m.

My brain tries to lurch from first to second gear as I mentally tally up the hours since I had last seen daylight or breathed a breath of fresh air. I get 14 hours if I am adding correctly. I stumble into my dark room where my boyfriend sleeps the sleep of a normal person. All the caffeine I consumed to stay awake has finally decided to work. It isn't for another hour of tossing and turning until I finally feel Calgon take me away...

BEEP! BEEP! BEEP! It's 6:30 a.m. and the piercing sound of his alarm clock makes my adrenaline once again skyrocket. BEEP! BEEP! BEEP! He finally moves and reaches over only to hit the snooze button. After three attempts and yes, three piercing sets of shrill noise from his alarm, he finally decides to get up. Sighing, I try falling back asleep only to listen to him rattle around the kitchen, sing off-key and come in and out of the room looking for God knows what. And all I want to do is sleep.

Finally, he leaves after trying to kiss me good-bye. Somehow he can't understand why I am not panting with desire when he kisses my neck. Somehow I can't understand how he could possibly think I would want to do anything other than sleep after just getting home an hour ago. Blissful quiet ensues when — BEEP! BEEP! BEEP! No, it's not my alarm, it's my housemate's alarm. The most useless alarm on the face of the Earth because he never seems to be able to wake up to it.

I crawl out of bed and bang on his door. Bang, bang, bang. "Yes?" I hear from the depths of his room. "Yes!?" What the hell do you mean, yes? Yes, this is your wake up call. Yes, this is your Mom. Time to get up! Do you want pancakes for breakfast? Yes, shut your stupid alarm off so I can sleep!!!!

And I might manage to after he gets up, rattles around the kitchen, sings off-key (a household trait) and leaves. But by then it's too late. It's 9:30 a.m. and I have class at 11:15 a.m. I have to shower, I have to eat and I have to go back underground.

Why? Why do I do it? It's simple... so I can put out a paper that no one appreciates. So I can listen to people say how much it sucks when I sit behind them in class. So I can listen to people whine and moan and basically bitch about something I spent most of my night trying to get right.

"So, why do we do it? Why do we come back day after day giving it all just so some smart-ass person can complain that Dilbert isn't in...? Because — like the Apple Jacks commercial — we just do. We do it because we want to be journalists, we consider ourselves journalists."

Tara MK Connelly

Yeah, I write for the Collegian and it truly is a thankless job. For all you people who think that the Collegian is an easy thing to slap together, try following around an editor for a day. Just one day. Try maintaining 18 credits, working more than 10 hours a day, doing homework and getting a decent night's sleep. Try putting up with writers who say they would like to make a difference, but never show up, or writers who try to make a difference, but just can't write. Think about trying to get an interview with five different sources, spending three hours waiting by the phone only to have them all call back after deadline. And how about just trying to write a 100 line story on deadline?

The Collegian is a daily newspaper and its staff is made up of real students who get paid nothing (with the exception of the editors and associates — they get (gasp) $25 a week!). We spend well over 40 hours in a basement with no windows, no confirmable source of fresh air and the constant hum of some invisible fan.

So, why do we do it? Why do we come back day after day giving it all just so some smart-ass person can complain that Dilbert isn't in...? Because — like the Apple Jacks commercial — we just do. We do it because we want to be journalists, we consider ourselves journalists. We've sat in classes, we've read past papers, we might have even said, "I can do that." But unlike all the losers that shoot off their mouths, we actually came down and took the challenge.

Like a normal newspaper we have deadlines, we have a code of ethics and we have a certain style and standards. However, students do not seem to understand our efforts or what we struggle to do and because of this they tend to get — oh let's say a little pissy when things don't go exactly the way they want them to. Like when they come down after seeing an ad asking for new writers and can't understand why we don't treat them like royalty. Well, we're busy — try walking into the Globe and asking, no wait, demanding that you be allowed to cover Dave Matthews. At the Globe you'd be laughed out of the newsroom, but here we try the more nurturing approach, "I'm sorry, but we have a system here and we are happy that you want to write, but certain writers get seniority on certain stories because of their experience and dedication. However, if you are still interested there are many other stories you can cover."

But much like spoiled children they pout and sigh and generally believe that they feel as if they are doing us this tremendous favor by gracing us with their presence. Sure, we need stuff, but not just any stuff and certainly not the sucky attitude that goes with it. First impressions are everything and that goes both ways. If we seem a little close-knit at first, understand that if you spent over 40 hours in a small office with the same people six days a week, you'd get pretty close too, unless you're a recluse.

This isn't a poor us, we did choose to do this, but cut us some slack, lend a hand, read the disclaimers, understand the difference between news and opinion and remember that behind every great paper is a supportive community. So if you think we suck, take a close look at our cheering section and smack the guy that's refusing to clap.

Tara MK Connelly is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

That special type of town

Having lived in Amherst for the past four years, I have come to realize that our little town possesses a rare and distinct culture. This summer I left the Amherst region to work at a summer camp in New Hampshire. The weather was great, the people were fun, but the culture was much different.

All summer I tried to figure out what was so different. I never really understood until I came back to school in September. Having been here for a month already, I can easily pick out the differences. Being that I probably have too much time on my hands, I have generated the "reasons that you can tell you're back in Amherst" list. Here are my top five.

Bar Resumes: Doesn't it seem that everyone is always telling you how much they've had to drink. Does this conversation ring a bell. "Hey, what did you do last night?" "Dude, I got wrecked. I started off drinking a six pack with my roommates, then we went to a party and I had four Jello shots, and then we went up town and pounded like three pitchers..."

Brad Davidson

Coined Phrases: A sure sign that you're back in the Valley is when you hear the annoying coined phrases over and over. How many times have you heard, "it's all good," in the span of an hour. The other day I was in Antonio's and in the time it took me to eat my one little slice of spicy chicken pizza, I heard that horrible phrase 14 times. "Hey, are you gonna get two slices?" "It's all good." "Do you want to go back to that party?" "It's all good." "Man, I have no money." "It's all good." What the hell is so good? Would somebody please tell me!

Communication: It seems that people in school always get to know each other really fast. It's probably because we are all generally the same age, but for some reason people seem to open up to each other a lot quicker in Amherst. Some people will tell you anything right away.

The other day I went to a sandwich shop in town where I met this nice girl who was on exchange from California. We started off just chatting about how school was different here then out west, when suddenly she broke into some story about how she used to wear Wonder Woman underoos. She told me that once she was hiding in the closet in her Wonder Woman underoos when all of a sudden a shelf fell on her head and her dad had to rescue her. I guess her "Lasso of Truth" wasn't of much help.

Super Procrastination: In all aspects of life or wherever you go, there is always an element of procrastination. For me however, it is never more apparent or powerful then when I'm in Amherst. Every day, I demonstrate procrastination in one form or another.

All last week I slacked off. But it was OK, because I had all weekend to catch up. So I put everything off until Friday. When Friday came, I decided to go out because I knew I still had all day Saturday and Sunday to get stuff done. I woke up at about 1 p.m. Saturday afternoon. By the time I showered, ate and generally lounged, the day was nearly over. I chalked it up as a loss and decided to go out Saturday night, but only for a little while because I had work to do on Sunday (is this starting to sound very familiar to a lot of you?).

As you might have figured, I stayed out Saturday night well into the early hours and went to bed around 4:30 a.m. Sunday morning. To make a long story short, it is now Wednesday and I still haven't caught up. But don't worry because I have all weekend to get it done.

Money: I worked all summer and actually saved a decent amount of dough. I was psyched to come back to school because I knew I would be all set for the fall semester. As we all know, nothing leaves quicker then money.

As much as I try to think back and add up the receipts from this past month, I still don't understand where all the bread went. It is impossible. I had a few slices of pizza, a couple nights out and paid a few bills. There is no way that I spent almost all my money. Unfortunately I did, and now I am back where I started. Back in Amherst, procrastinating, boozing and poor. Hey, who cares, it's all good!

Brad Davidson is a Collegian columnist.

High on life

I guess it was overdue; the coverage in the Collegian hadn't severely offended me in quite some time. However, that streak came to an end last week when several pages were dedicated to the legalization of marijuana. This issue literally makes me sick to my stomach.

Erik Molitor

Wake up, kiddies! Legalization will never happen, thank the Good Lord. It is a pipe dream (or in my opinion a nightmare). You have got to understand and realize what you are doing to your own future when you blindly follow idiotic organizations like the Cannabis Reform Coalition or throw away your precious right to vote on a senile old "Hemp Lady."

Every time UMass sends a group of students to hemp rallies or protests against the drug war or advocates drug legalization, it is noticed by the public, the same people who you will be on your knees begging for a job in a few short years. The value of a UMass degree is only worth the type of students that back it up. I don't want to be equated with a stoner when I go out into the real world just because I went to UMass.

If you don't think that public perception of UMass is like that, think about this: one of the largest clubs on campus is the CRC. That sends a strong message. At huge hemp rallies like the one recently held in a visible area of Boston, UMass sent hundreds of students to represent their school in the cause. Also, remember this: publications like the Boston Globe are always looking for a reason to slam UMass. What a perfect photo-op: a rally supporter tied up while wearing the maroon and white!

I've got some opinions for you. From what I have personally seen, nine out of 10 pot smokers fulfill the stereotype of lazy, apathetic, and moronic. Marijuana does cause significant damage to the parts of the brain that govern reasoning, memory, and learning. Studies in the American Journal of Medicine proved this, among both chronic and occasional users of college age just like you!

I have seen with my own eyes the stoners who walk around in a daze, worried less about learning something at their classes, less about living life to its real potential, and more about scoring their next dime bag and escaping the realities and problems of life without actually dealing with them.

Here's another thought for you burnouts: I am willing to bet that I am having more fun than you here at college because I don't smoke pot. I will remember all the things I have done and accomplished, all the cool people I have met, and all the enjoyable experiences I have had. I have done everything to the fullest, never satisfied just to let the current sweep me along.

What do I recommend? Besides quitting pot, which I know most of you will never do, I suggest you keep your burning to your own miserable self. Don't join the CRC, don't advocate legalization, and keep your damn mouth shut. Don't drag me and the school's reputation down with your idiocy.

So, for all you pot smoking, bong toting, lazy, moronic, dependent stoners — If I sound condescending, it's probably because I am better than you.

Erik Molitor is a UMass student.

Editorial Policy

The Editorial/Opinion page welcomes columns, letters and cartoons from UMass and the rest of the Five-College Area.

Letters and columns must be typed and double spaced, with the writer's name, local address and phone number attached. This information is subject to verification prior to publication.

Anonymous submissions will not be printed.

The editorial staff reserves the right to edit letters and columns for grammar, clarity and length.

Any submission that is requested to be left unedited will not be considered for publication.

Submissions become the property of the Collegian and will not be returned.

The Editorial staff is not required to print all submitted material.

Letters should be no longer than 450 words and columns should be about 70 typed lines.

Submissions should be sent to the Editorial Desk, c/o Mark McGrath, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst MA, 01003.

An alternative experience

Everyone in life has a smartest friend, a handsomest friend, a most famous friend and a best friend. Mine are Jeff, Jim, Chad and Jay. Some of us also have a sweetest friend and mine is Zephyr Rosenlaird.

Zephyr's ex–boyfriend, the above–mentioned Jeff, lives on the 2–in–20 floor on the fourth floor of Mary Lyon. The floor was holding some sort of event Monday night and Zephyr and Jeff felt compelled to drag me there. I thought it would be a great way to look sensitive and pick up chicks.

Christopher Hassett

Before entering the basement of Mary Lyon, I had the same preconceptions that most men, even self–proclaimed forward thinking ones like myself, might have. Firstly, I thought I would be the only straight in the room. I thought that people would think I was gay because I was there. I felt the need to watch some football afterwards, but that's a different story.

Actually, there were quite a few "allies" there, some RAs from different buildings, some people with gay siblings and some simply looking to meet some gay people. Zephyr kept sighing over some light skinned, blond RA he had a crush on two years ago. "Don't the highlights in his hair show up nicely in this light?"

After the event, which consisted mostly of introductions, an explanation of the floor and some reports of resources and up–coming events, was completed, everyone had the chance to talk. One thing which surprised me was how incredibly gorgeous some of the lesbian women present were. In the news and the few people Zephyr has introduced me to, I have seen the stereotype of unfeminine, androgenous looking lesbians, and God bless them if that's the look they go for. However, several of the "lipstick lesbians" present at the meeting nearly brought me to tears with the thought that I had absolutely, positively no chance at all with these beauties.

Speaking of stereotypes, I was surprised at the breadth of people who live on the floor. Supposedly, these are the gayest of the gays who live on our fair campus. And yet there wasn't a theater major in sight. And while there were some present that did fit certain stereotypes, such as the leather–boy majoring in computer science and the too–good– looking–to–be–straight above mentioned blonde (whose hair did have nice highlights), there were also those that I could talk to for hours and never once get the clue they were gay. The sports loving Don whose major I have forgotten or the English exchange student in need of a haircut were two good examples. One such freshman was even (gasp!) majoring in journalism!

Even the relationships surprised me. I shouldn't have been surprised; I mean having problems with your partner is pretty universal, no matter what your respective genders are. But seeing such dynamics in Jeff's and Zephyr's short–lived relationship, Jeff being the Tigger to Zephyr's Pooh, gave me a sigh of relief when I compared some of my relationships to theirs. When it comes to love, gays are just as nuts as the rest of us.

My editor is now running around the newsroom like a worrisome piglet of the hundred–acre wood telling us to make our editorials "serious" and "timely". Thankfully, the night's conversation lent itself to such timeliness.

We were discussing the Defense Of Marriage Act currently worming its way through our nation's government. This bill was inspired by the prospect of gay marriage becoming legal in Hawaii. According to the Constitution, states have to obey each others' laws. Well, gays making pilgrimages to Hawaii to get married and then returning to Colorado or Mississippi sent shivers down our government's collective back. DOMA was born.

This is what I said. The idea of marriage is a cultural and universal institution, which has been around as long as human culture. It serves as the basic unit of society, and do we really need to re–define something as basic as this. Sure, married couples get benefits such as being considered a family member to spouses who are intensive care patients, they automatically get the inheritance in case their spouse dies and they get a tax break as a married couple. Why can't we allow gay couples to have the same legal rights as common marriages instead of re–writing a multi–millennia old tradition? (I can hear Phil Milson booing me with one lip and cheering me on with the other.)

Jeff was shocked silent a good two minutes (an ideal condition for him) then began a tirade condemning me for my conservative views, my taste in women and for living. The cooler head prevailed when Zephyr calmly asked me, "So you think that gays should have equal rights under the law but have a separate classification?". This was what I had said, so I agreed. "According to the Supreme Court, separate but equal is discriminatory and unconstitutional," he said. Ack! He had me. I hadn't thought of it in those terms. (Sorry Phil, he had better rationale.) And thus with two sentences my stand on DOMA was changed forever, or at least until I read the next Minuteman.

My only complaint is that no one hit on me. What, am I ugly or something? Wonderful, I do something to make my friends happy and show some support to a stigmatized community and I end up lusting after lesbians and self– conscious about my looks. Somebody turn on the ball–game and pass me the chips and beer.

Christopher Hassett is a Collegian columnist.

A kiss is just a kiss

Does anyone, besides myself think that it is a bit curious to say the least, that a six–year–old boy was suspended from elementary school in Lexington, N.C.?

Suspended, at six? What could a six–year–old do to get himself suspended?

Maybe something like putting an M80 in the boy's bathroom toilet, (I forgot — that happened in Cance), or swearing in class, but even that would only result in a detention and erasing the boards after school.

He could have mooned the school principal, incited a riot on the playground, shot spit balls at the kid who was always picking his nose in the back of the class, or caused a food fight in the cafeteria with cream–style corn and instant mashed potatoes. OK, maybe not.

Michelle Hillman

This cute, little mooshy–wooshy boy did none of those things. What he did do was kiss a girl... Ohh, how sweet.

Think back to the days of elementary school when life was carefree and the only thing you could be concerned with was whether your mom remembered to pack fruit roll–ups for lunch. There was nothing better than recess (well except lunch, but we covered that).

Recess was the time to talk to all your friends, play jump rope, climb on the jungle gym, swing on the swings, or play freeze tag. It was the perfect time to get what's his face to give you his Twinkies for your Ring Dings. Those were the days.

If you liked a boy all you simply had to do was chase him around and giggle (Actually I know a few people who still do that). Now everything is so formal and ridiculous.

The days of innocence are over, folks. At least in North Carolina. This poor, sweet blonde kid was suspended from school for five days in what amounted to some sort of sexual harassment charge. That means no kissing girls again. That's right... the precedent has been set. If Billy Joe wants to kiss Bobby Sue he's in for a real surprise.

What comes next? No more exchanging Scooby–Doo and Mickey Mouse valentines that say "I think you're great." What fun is that? Pretty soon even the little conversation hearts are going to be taboo.

When you're that young, holding hands and silly stuff are just that... silly. Kids don't know the difference between a friendly kiss and what sexual harassment is. Besides this girl supposedly asked him to kiss her. A woman who knows what she wants!

If I could go back to the day when this kid, who we'll refer to as Steven, would try to get me to slow dance with him while we were in line I'd be in heaven. During parent conferences he thanked my mother for bringing me into the world. Those might not have been his exact words but that's the way I prefer to remember it.

Guys don't do crazy things like that anymore because they're too afraid of what all their friends will think, but when you're six it didn't matter because half your friends spent most of their time riding on their big wheels.

The fact that this kid got suspended for just being curious and harmless spells something out for kids of the future. Not only are these kids growing up with the frightening effects of PC's over their heads, but before they know it they will be sprayed down and quarantined.

Kids grow up with enough problems in the world and they have plenty of time to confront them, so for now why can't we just leave them alone instead of subjecting them to the labelling and categorizing that they'll have their whole life to endure?

Michelle Hillman is a Collegian staff member.

Parent's Day a must at UMass

Parent's Day, though often viewed as a "freshman thing," has always been one of my favorite UMass events. It conjures up fond memories of open houses growing up. I used to love open house in elementary school. The class would spend the whole day cleaning our desks, creating impressive bulletin boards, and collecting all of our best work in a specially–designed open house folder.

Amy Lounsbury

I will never forget the excitement of it all — getting dressed up for a night out with Mom and Dad, introducing them to my teacher, and looking forward to the ice cream sundae that was to follow.

I was always proud to show my parents what I had been learning at school; to have them meet my classmates and their parents, and especially to have them meet the teacher I thought was "so cool." School is such a large part of a child's life and I always treasured sharing it with my parents. It was like letting them in on a little secret.

Middle school and high school open houses were a let– down because only parents were allowed to attend. I was always curious about those open houses.

The parents were each handed a copy of their son's/daughter's schedule and were sent on a journey through an abbreviated "day in the life of your child."

I almost felt guilty that my parents had to fend for themselves on these occasions. Lord knows I had enough problems finding my way around those buildings. How would they be able to manage? I would have loved to have been a fly on the wall for those open houses. The hallways must have been filled with hundreds of overgrown freshmen. "Excuse me... where's B–16? I can't figure this place out!" someone's dad would exclaim with an exasperated look on his face.

Parent's Day at UMass has always elicited a similar feeling of excitement in me. Although my parents no longer get to meet my teachers, I no longer show off all of my "A" papers and favorite art projects, and ice cream has been replaced by dinner at Spaghetti Freddy's, I still take pride in sharing my school with them. I enjoy showing them how I have succeeded at this large university, how wonderful my friends are, and showing them that their money invested in me has been well worth it.

As this year's Parent's Day, my final one, drew to a close, I could not help but feel a little sad. I will never again experience this event that I have looked forward to every year for as long as I can remember. A long chapter in my life is coming to an end, causing bittersweet emotions to run through me. There is no need to be sad, though. I will always have my memories.

And before I know it, I'll be going to my own children's parent's days. I can only hope that one day I am able to coerce one of my kids to go to UMass so I can sit in the stands at the football game and relive my college days. Chances are I'll be the one with the cowbell getting just a little too excited. I can hardly wait!

Amy Lounsbury is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

Meeting a success

To the editor:

I would like to thank all of those involved in making the MassPIRG fall recruitment drive such a huge success.

Our General Interest Meeting had an almost record turnout and because of the efforts of our amazing core members and the following, we were able to introduce our Youth Vote, waterwatch, Free the Planet, loxies and Hunger and Homelessness campaigns and get lots of incredible students involved. Events such as National Voter Education Day, stream clean–ups, Toxic Trick or Treat, and food drives, would not be possible without a solid volunteer base and strong coalitions.

We would therefore like to thank the following people:

Maurice Caston for being a continuous support and resource for MASSPIRG and an inspirational speaker.

SGA and Off–campus Housing/Commuter Services for use of telephones as well as Ski Club and LBGA.

The Fine Arts Center and Campus Center Hotel for material supplies as well as anyone else who supported us during the recruitment drive.

We look forward to continue working closely with these and other groups and individuals throughout the fall semester. We've gotten off to a great start! Thanks a lot.

Stacy Shackford
Chapter Chair
MASSPIRG

Former student voices opinion on IPO

To the editor:

Recently it has been brought to my attention that there has been some controversy regarding the behavior of the International Programs Office. As a UMass alumnus and former international student from Kenya at this University, I feel compelled to detail my own experiences in this regard.

Every time I consulted the Foreign Students Office, I found the behavior of the foreign student advisors to be obnoxious and offensive. Rather than attempting to comprehend my questions, in many cases the staff prematurely came to erroneous conclusions which were often disconnected form the questions I was asking. They did not seem to be able to listen to what I was saying. Instead of providing help and support, they always seemed to be erecting needless barriers and making everything I tried to do more complicated. I feel that their attitude was more orientated toward policing international students, in an attempt to remind us that we are "aliens" in this country with no rights.

It is my opinion that such behavior is not consistent with the mission of an office that really ought to support and help international students. Instead, their unhelpful attitude was often tinged with racism. Furthermore, I am well aware that I am not the only one who had such experiences with the FSO. Several of my friends and colleagues from Africa had similar encounters, and some were so wary of using the FSO that they resorted to calling friends in universities around the country and would only go to the FSO as a last resort.

Given my experiences as an international student at UMass, I would urge the University administration to ensure that all offices of the University are hospitable and cooperative, especially those supposed to directly serve international students.

Wairimu Magua
Providence

Trodden makes no sense

To the editor:

Andrew Trodden made one noteworthy point his article (Sept. 30th, "Application of Pride"): "it is true that many minorities receive poor education at the high school level as do many non–minorities." However, the rest of his article has zero merit. If the article focused on affirmative action based of economic disadvantages regardless of color, it may have been a decent article. Instead, Mr. Trodden chose to make "Pride" the focus of his article.

I ask Mr. Trodden the same question he asked every minority on this campus: "Wouldn't you be quite a bit more proud of yourself and your heritage in general to show that you can rise above and get in on your qualifications alone?" Since you believe this, demonstrate with your children. Enroll them in schools in either Roxbury of Bed–Stuy (Brooklyn, N.Y.). Make sure that many of their teachers are not of their race and in fact carry some attitudes against them based on your children's race. Have them work 20–30 hours per week and make sure not to pay for any tutors or test preparation courses (i.e. SAT prep). After all, this way you'd prove that everything they achieve, they achieve through hard work.

If this seems unreasonable to you, you may want to rethink the crap you wrote, especially the part about who needs the crutch and who puts in the work.

Joel Mason
Amherst

To the editor:

This letter is in response to the Sept. 30 opinion piece entitled "Application of Pride," by Andrew Trodden. The article begs for a response. The author seems to have missed a hugely significant point: namely, that the reason for affirmative action programs (and I do not mean quota systems, because if I understand the law correctly the implementation of quota systems is illegal) is to endeavor to deliver some justice for a group or groups of human beings that have been singled out and outrageously victimized by our nation's majority.

Mr. Trodden writes that he would be angered were he to lose out to a minority, despite having higher test scores, for an acceptance to some institution. Why? My personal opinion is that a minority (and I'm mostly referring to black Americans) in this country is entitled to a measure of compensation from the majority for our nation's history of enslavement, then segregation, lynchings, gross injustice in our courtrooms and economic isolation. I'm very familiar with the perspective that Mr. Trodden offers, and this view often rejects the idea of compensation on the grounds that we are not responsible for the actions of our antecedents. But doesn't there come a point where a group is so oppressed, and so for no conceivable reason, that this group ought to be helped by those whose ancestors were spared, or even complicit in, these atrocities? I don't mind losing a spot to a minority and I'll tell you why. There are other spots for me, but my fellow human being who happens to be have a different skin color may next time run into individuals of a like mind with the "Application of Pride" author, and be again excluded from opportunity.

There are several very troubling other aspects to the article, and I'd like to address a few. First, it may be argued in compelling fashion that the only real reason that some minorities may perform at a lower level than others is that these individuals have been historically locked out of the very opportunities that allow many others of us to achieve more of this type of success. Second, the joke about raising admissions standards so that one would now need to "be a minority times two" was in extraordinarily poor taste. Finally, to suggest that a minority in America, and especially a black American, is using his/her heritage as a "crutch" is a ridiculous insult.

Dr. King is oft–quoted (and deservedly so), but I'll quote him. If our society, and our nation, is to have any pride, it must "...rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed: 'We hold these truths to be self–evident: that all men are created equal.'" For that matter, all women are created equal too.

Peter McKenna
Southwest

Oslo still lives

To the editor:

The majority of Israelis and Palestinians are in favor of the continuation of the peace process in the Middle East. The Prime Minister of Israel had voiced interest in perpetuating the negotiations that the former government of Israel began several years ago. Unfortunately, the peace negotiations are plagued with Ill–doers who seek to break the strides of the current momentum. At UMass, we are cursed with such anarchical anti–peace supporters.

The current events that have swept over Israel and the occupied territories have had detrimental effects on the recent direction of peace between the Israelis and the Palestinians. The opening of the ancient tunnel in Jerusalem, which coincidentally does not touch the Temple Mount (the Muslim Holy site), has spurred armed conflict between the Palestinians and their "peace keeping" police force with the Israeli military. For fear of crushing the newly established Palestinian peace keepers, the Israeli army has held itself in check, preventing the massacre of this amateur force of sophomoric gun–toters.

Another issue that draws my concern is the fact that the chairman of the Palestinian Authority barely retains control over his armed troops, let alone his people. When Arafat asked his troops to refrain from firing at his Israelis, they ignored his command, continuing the losing battle against the militarily superior Israelis. How can the Israelis then believe that peace will be maintained when the troops have already become autonomous from their leaders.

I genuinely believe that the majority of the people in the Middle East desire a life of peace and tranquility, yet there will always be aggressors against this movement. This has been clearly exemplified in the past few days, and it is our job as a peace–loving community to ignore and combat these attempts at tainting our visions of peace. The Leaders of Israel, Jordan and the Palestinian Authority met in the White House on Oct. 1 to settle their differences and persevere at achieving a unilaterally acceptable peace. We need to take this sentiment as an example for our own campus, and strive to achieve the same ends.

Guy Chayoun
Amherst

Anti–Semitism clutters Multicultural page

To the editor:

Monday's Multicultural Affairs page "80 Palestinians die in defense of al–Aqsa mosque" was a display of one person's adamant biased opinion. Is the Multicultural Affairs page a forum for Multicultural issues or one for complete jaundice? On this page, the author expounds upon her complete hatred of Zionism and the state of Israel. It perplexes me why a semi–credible newspaper prints segments of a news wire of a known fundamentalist organization.

This blatant anti–Semitism has been ongoing over the years in the Collegian and has yet to cease. Since journalism is all about stating the facts and showing the whole picture, it seems strange that a newspaper would print only one side of the story and not the other.

The anti–Semitism that clutters this page is evident throughout. For example, the author does not acknowledge the state of Israel. She refers to the state of Israel as Palestine, which is a country that does not exist. The failure to use the word Israel and replacing it with the word Zionist is also an obvious sign of anti–Semitism. The state of Israel is a legitimate country and is recognized by all countries except for the Arab Emirates and other Arab countries.

What is currently occurring in Israel is a bad timing process by the Israelis over a smart financial maneuver. A second entrance to an archeological tunnel was constructed by the Israeli government in the Old City in Jerusalem. The tunnel runs alongside of the al–Aqsa mosque. It leads directly to the Western Wall which is the holiest sight in the Jewish world. The tunnel itself, which dates from ancient times, allows pedestrians to enter one of the oldest subterranean paths in Jerusalem from the Western Wall plaza and exit into the Via Dolorosa.

It must be emphasized that no part of the tunnel runs underneath the Temple Mount. The restoration of the tunnel does not violate the Interim Agreement between Israel and the Palestinians. The Israeli government is currently going through the proper channels towards resolving the current hostile situation. Since tensions in the region are very high, a response like this is not so unforeseeable. Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu is making every effort possible to resolve the situation and restart the peace process.

My final concern about the page is two fold. In using a fist with the words Allahu Akbar, the author is using a militant outcry to incite many Jewish students on campus. Placing a fist is not journalism but a blatant symbol of pure hatred. This is an immoral and illogical approach. In turn, the call for "more fighters willing to work and strive for the equality that all of us, as human beings deserve," also is seen as a militant call for action. The main goal of journalism is to educate, providing the facts and truths about the news not with falsities and lies which are displayed within the confines of the Multicultural Affairs page.

Adam Buxbaum
Hillel

Who's grant?

To the editor:

Massachusetts gives UMass $200,000 to "improve performance." Great! We can all look toward a better education, right? Wrong. Instead of using money to better our facilities and programs, the Office of Student Affairs has decided to give all of it away to high school valedictorians and saludatorians. Talk about "passing the buck!" Performance will increase, that's for sure, but through better students, not better education. This is not what the state intended. That money was meant for us. That money was supposed to increase our performance. Now it's just going to give a few students a free ride.

Jonathan Burk
Sylvan

Vote not so overwhelming

To the editor:

The opinions of Shyamala Ivatury and Hussein Ibish regarding the Graduate Student Senate vote of the International Programs Office memo (Sept. 30, "GSS Condemns IPO Leadership") are based on hyperbolical perspectives. They claim that the resolution to "condemn" Barbara Burn and her office "passed by an overwhelming majority."

The actual vote was, in fact, 10 in favor, 3 opposed, and 4 abstentions. While this represents a simple majority, I would not call 58 percent positive approval "overwhelming." In fact, many students — foreign and/or international and/or non–American and/or American Students — spoke in favor of the IPO, and many, including myself, voiced strong opposition to approving a "condemnation" which we had been handed only one hour earlier.

Ivatury and Ibish seem to glow with the recognition of their "condemning" voices, but could it be that not as many other voices join them as their vitriolic rhetoric suggests?

Timothy Shary
Dept. of Communication

Arts & Living

Truckin' album soars in fast lane

Rusted Root returns with unique blend of folk & world music

VARIOUS ARTISTS
Rig Rock Deluxe: A Tribute to the American Truck Driver
Upstart/Diesel Only

Despite the fact that professional truck driving is probably the most boring job on earth, it has inspired the imaginations of country musicians for decades, and songs about truck driving have become a rich part of American musical tradition. It's for this reason that Rig Rock Deluxe, a collection of songs about and for the American truck driver, is such an entertaining and surprisingly effective compilation.

One of the keys to Rig Rock Deluxe's success is the mixture of old and new talent. Classic jukebox names like Del Reeves, Don Walser and Kay Adams appear beside those of younger talents like Bottle Rockets, Son Volt and Jim Lauderdale. There are old and new songs as well — truck stop classics and modern reflections spanning the entire history of trucking. Underneath the twang and rockability snap lies an almost folkloric collection of experiences — a lifestyle documented in the humor, the tall tales and the tears of the lonely truck driver.

Performances throughout are outstanding. Highlights include Buck Owens' energetic "Will there be Big Rigs in Heaven," Kelly Willis' raw "Truckstop Girl" and Nick Lowe's swinging "I'm Coming Home." Rig Rock Deluxe is an impressive document and a entertaining ride through the musical world of truck drivers — a collection that is equally successful as a fun, catchy album and a heartfelt document of a cultural heritage. (Bradley Skaught) A–

NOA
Calling
Geffen Records

Calling is the wonderfully enchanting debut from Israeli artist, Noa. It is modern rock with an ethnic beat; hard-edge lyrics that are meshed together with soft instruments such as the cello. Noa has mastered the elements of fine songwriting with catchy melodies and impressive lyrics.

Noa has a distinctly middle eastern sound, it's hard to mistake her ethnicity, in fact Calling declares loudly that it's world music. She combines Lorenna McKennit's ethnic beats and rhythms with Liz Phair's empowering lyrics.

"All is Well" is a sarcastic look at the banality of bourgeois life. Noa also utilizes her religious knowledge on "Mark of Cain," a sad soliloquy about an unwanted pregnancy. In "Too Painful," Noa explores the darker side of her music, with a strong ballad that shows off her smooth alto voice.

The ancestral inflections of Noa's music make Calling a refreshing listen. Instead of capitalizing on the popularity of alternative music and recording an album that sounds like, everything else, Noa creates a great original sound. A– (Lisa M. Oliveri)

ROBERT BRADLEY
Blackwater Surprise
RCA

Sweet soul music is not dead. Not in Robert Bradley's mind, at least. This debut CD of Bradley's band (which includes Bradley singing, Jeff Fowlkes playing drums, and two brothers, Michael and Andrew Nehra, on guitar and bass respectively) showcases mellow soul that ferments on a stack of Otis Redding and Lenny Kravitz records.

With dense organ gracing many songs — played by a man named Jimmy Bones (Gotta love it now, don't you?) — Bradley croons his way through many commonplace mid- tempo tunes as well as the bright moments, like "California," "Governor" and the blues-rocking opener "Bellybone." His voice is a bit raspy, but it gives the songs body and the sense that there is true feeling behind Bradley. One interesting thing with this disc is Bradley's obsession with rain. He uses it in his lyrics prominently in two songs in a row. If we can assume that the rain is his tears, then this is true soul. B (Joshua Boyd)

RUSTED ROOT
Remember
Mercury

On this new album, Rusted Root prove they're on a separate plane from other folk-rock bands around now, but the problem is their original sound is often very repetitive.

Songs like the acoustic "Bullets In The Fire," and the adventurous "Voodoo" make this disc at least enjoyable, but there are 14 songs on this disc, and only eight or nine should have made the cut — giving the listener a little bit of an unnecessary excess (But with CD technology why not give your listeners 60-plus minutes?)

Michael Glabicki's voice seems very forced and one gets weary of listening to it song after song, hoping for a full tune with the ethereal voice of Liz Berlin instead. Some of their numbers ("River In A Cage," "Infinite Space") truly show the earthy-crunchy world music influence that they completely epitomize to some people, yet even those tunes display the well-used formula. A relaxed listen — one that you can enjoy using your CD programming option with. B– (J.B.)

JAWBOX
Jawbox
TAG/Atlantic

Jawbox is without a doubt one of the best unsung bands out there. In a musical era marked by the blandness of Bush and No Doubt, it's at once hard and easy to see why Jawbox is so overlooked by the general public.

Turn to TRAX page 7

COURTESY CATHERINE WESSEL

Rusted Root returns to their world beat roots on Remember.

Easy in that they never seem to use a simple 4/4 beat and are always trying out something new, often alienating the general alternative market by not making things easy for them. Hard in that they are just so damn smooth.

What comes out of this is a complex album that plays off all four members — Jay Robbin's voice and guitar interacting and reeling off of Bill Barbot's guitar and backing vocals. Kim Colletta has sturdy, bouncing basslines which accentuates Zach Boracas' incredible drumming (it can be argued that his off beat, jazz influenced drumming is the band's best feature). The whole band seems to take old music theories like jazz and swing and easily meld them with punk.

The best example of the band's work is "His Only Trade," with Robbins starting the song out like a slap to the face, then trading off lyrics with Barbot. Other highlights include "Mule/Stall," a jazzy song seemingly about being fake ("Try on your best sideshow smile...") and the poppy "Excandescent." There's also a hidden track that's a cover of Tori Amos' "Cornflake Girl" — a perfect fit, with both artist's love of off-kilter time and odd phrasings. A (Mike Messaros)

LEAH ANDREONE
Veiled
RCA Records

The recent surge in popularity of female rockers like Tracy Bonham and Joan Osborne have allowed for artists like Leah Andreone to be heard. She fits nicely into this up and coming genre. Her debut album, Veiled, is a solid first attempt.

Andreone seems much more mature than her young 23 years. Her songs are complex and conflicting; she writes about everything from pain and guilt ("You Make Me Remember") to unabashed first love ("Kiss Me Goodbye"). It isn't just straight guitar rock, either. "Who Are They To Say," sounds like it could have easily been a '70s disco hit. She also tackles incest in "Problem Child."

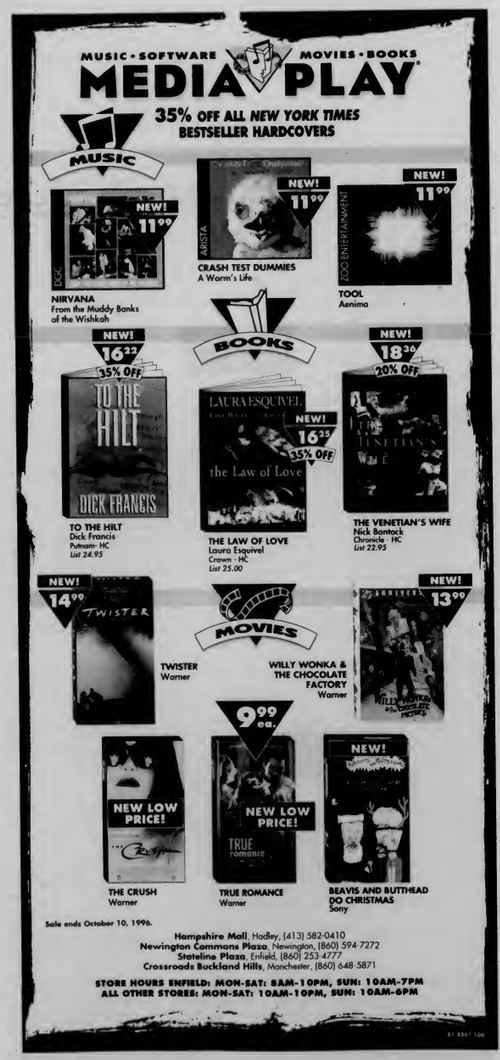
Andreone has a sound that demands to be heard. Her voice soars above the strumming of her guitar, coaxing her listeners into a soothing

COURTESY COLUMBIA PICTURES

Jennifer Jason Leigh delivers a fine performance in Georgia.

Georgia highlights new video releases

By Adam Levine
Collegian Correspondent



This column is designed to keep the general public up to date with brand new films recently released on home video, as well as classic movies many of us may have overlooked either in the theater or at your local video store. Here are a few you shouldn't miss and one that you should.

THINGS TO DO IN DENVER WHEN YOU'RE DEAD
Directed by Gary Fleder
with Andy Garcia, Christopher Walken, Steve Buscemi

Despite this film's catchy title, this movie is a complete disaster. After Quentin Tarantino's success, the new trend in independent filmmaking is to make wannabe hip mobster flicks with flashy, cool talking gangsters. Such is the case with Andy Garcia as an ex-hitman trying to go clean with his new business which provides the service of comforting the families of the recently deceased. When business is bad, the Denver mob boss played by Christopher Walken, hires Garcia to do a little project that entails scaring the ex- girlfriend of his child-molesting son so he won't marry her new love. To make a ridiculous story as short as possible, Garcia and his gang screw up the assignment and Walken decides to kill them. He then recruits Steve Buscemi who is some sort of super assassin to take care of Garcia and his crew.

This film's narrative is filled with awful gangster movie clichés and plays more like a cartoon than an action thriller. Movies like these are far more concerned with looking cool than actually having

Turn to LEIGH, page 7

BILINGUAL SENIOR CUSTOMER SERVICE REPRESENTATIVE

Florence Savings Bank is currently seeking a qualified candidate for the position of Bilingual Senior Customer Service Representative. The successful candidate will be responsible for opening and maintaining various types of accounts, cross-selling bank products and services, outreach efforts within Hampshire County, counseling customers on loan products and assisting them through the application process, and providing interpreting services to Spanish speaking customers.

The position requires bilingual (English and Spanish) skill, prior customer service experience in a bank environment, knowledge of bank loan products and experience with loan application process, and demonstrated presentation and facilitation skills.

A competitive salary and outstanding benefits package is offered. If you are interested in these opportunities, please forward your resume in confidence to: Vice President/ Human Resources Director, Florence Savings Bank, 85 Main Street, Florence, MA 01060. Florence Savings Bank is an Equal Opportunity Employer and encourages diverse candidates to apply for this position. No phone calls please.

Florence Savings Bank

COME SEE WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT...

SHAB

Gain Experience in Administrative Aspects of Health Care

Sponsor Health Promotion Events

Come join the Student Health Advisory Board

Next Meeting:
Wed. October 2, 5:30 -6:30pm
University Health Services Rm. 304

For more info call Tamara at the Health Education Office 577-5181

Witty Wooodbury delivers a must read murder novel

By Teresa McCarthy
Collegian Correspondent

FRANCINE G. WOODBURY
Shade and Shadow
Del Ray Discoveries

Its cover describes it as a novel of magic, mystery, and murder. Shade and Shadow is much more than that. It is a novel of real life and fantasy set in a real environment. Very fresh and alluring, this is the one paperback that can tirelessly whisk you away to London. It is not often these days that fiction has such powers of geographic relocation.

One doesn't have time to realize how super this book is until the last page. This is because it is an immediate engagement; fast-paced from the first paragraph onward. Taking place in the present day, it is about a 26-year-old professor of magic at Oxford University named Raoul and his daily encounters — one of which happens to be his involvement in the murder of a much-despised colleague.

Luckily, the author must have recognized that murder mysteries are becoming a dime a dozen and successfully steers the intrigue in interesting, unpredictable directions. Raoul is someone who shuns sleep, romance, religion, his peer group and conventional wisdom. Woodbury creates a spontaneous and hilarious character that will undoubtedly begin to absorb your interest as soon as you are introduced to him. Caustically contemptuous of social relations, he does not alter his personality much in order to glide frictionlessly through life's unavoidable situations. Simply put, he doesn't seem to care about how others perceive him. This is direct reader refreshment. Best of all, he is riotously alive. It's almost as if he would jump out of the page if he could just scorn the reader for living so vicariously.

Raoul, who spends a great deal of time creating spells with the aid of his computer, fortunately has a human friend. When they are together the humor intensifies, even while one is a homicide suspect trying to prove his innocence and the other is stuck in a hospital. The author's tone is light throughout the book, perhaps its most appealing attribute. Nothing is to be taken too seriously in life — an attitude the author evokes wonderfully. I must assume she is British because of her smooth, articulate ease, which ranges from casual eloquence one minute to unabashed, emotive slang the next. The dialogue is so natural and unforced that, at times, it's hard to believe the words are even printed. If this sounds too good to be true, do not listen to yourself and get thee to the bookstore instead.

Shade and Shadow is one novel you shouldn't pass up. It is a novel you can relate to and escape with, even if you think magic is just a conjuration. With this delightfully descriptive little book, Woodbury has found herself a new admirer. A–

Belafonte jazzes up Altman's Kansas City

By Jeremy Brothers
Collegian Staff

KANSAS CITY
Written and directed by Robert Altman with Jennifer Jason Leigh, Harry Belafonte, Miranda Richardson
Playing at Academy of Music

Robert Altman has been lauded as one of our country's finest filmmakers and sometimes this title is difficult to understand when we're faced with things like the still interesting Popeye or the not altogether terrible Ready to Wear. But with his latest, Kansas City, Altman delivers a film that is not only as good as anything else he's done, but one that may actually live up to his reputation.

In a manner that might seem irritating if tried by another director, Altman allows his camera almost lackadaisically to wander around picking up the most interesting tid-bits of conversation, following characters wherever they may take us. The result is more precise than Altman's signature — it comes off as his trademark.

The story focuses around Blondie (Jennifer Jason Leigh) as she kidnaps a politician's opium-addict wife (Miranda Richardson) to try and get help freeing her husband (Dermot Mulroney), who has been caught trying to steal from the local crime boss (Harry Belafonte). All of this occurring during the span of one day — election day no less.

Altman's uses his hometown of Kansas City as his canvas in a way comparable to his use of Los Angeles in Short Cuts or the eponymous Nashville. Kansas City's backgrounds seem to have a life of its own like in each of his films and its scenic designer will hopefully be remembered when nominations are being considered.

Belafonte's coke-snorting mobster is one of the high points of the film, and not solely for his maniacal performance. The scenes that occur in his club introduce the jazz segments that underlie entire segments of scenes that follow. This is where Kansas City gains its greatest strength — the jazz that accompanies the film ends up acting as a lynch pin, connecting themes and scenes in a thoroughly entertaining way.

If there is a down-side to Kansas City, it comes in Leigh and her incessant need to portray her characters with accents. Fortunately, after a needless series of flashbacks, the scenes with Leigh and the Richardson on the run end up being priceless, contrasting Leigh's rabid ranting with Richardson's drugged torpor.

Steve Buscemi delivers a frightfully amusing cameo as Leigh's labor organizing brother-in-law who beats the living crap out of one who dissents against his pollster ways. It's nice to see Buscemi here even if he's doing the same creepy thing always does.

Altman allows the film to end with a sense of cyclular closure. The subplot of a pregnant teen allows him to give Leigh's character more depth than even she might be able to handle, but which is needed by the time Richardson finally gets off the smack, with chilling results. A–

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS

Harry Belafonte

Punk legends, The Descendents grow up on new album

By Adam Dlugacz
Collegian Staff

THE DESCENDENTS
Everything Sucks
Epitaph Records

The Descendents are back... and they sound a lot like All. The Descendents are, and will always be, the godfathers of pop punk. If it weren't for the Descendents, bands like Green Day, The Queers, or any of the other pop punk bands on MTV would never be around today.

Everything Sucks has a much angrier side then anything the Descendents have ever done. In fact, musically, this album is more reminiscent of All's latest album Pummel then Milo Goes To College or I Don't Want To Grow Up. Milo, in essence, is the only difference between All and The Descendents.

Songs like "Doghouse" and "Eunuch Boy" show off the sillier side of the Descendents, bringing songs like "Wanna Be a Bear" and "My Van" to mind.

Of course it just wouldn't be the Descendents if Milo didn't sing about girls and being a nerd. Milo was the originator of nerd-punk.

This is also where the Descendents run into a wall of sorts. While "I'm The One," "Sick-O-Me," "She Loves Me" and "We" are dead on lyrically, the music doesn't match as well. In the past, the Descendents exhibited their poppier side on songs like "Good Things" and "Bikeage" that matched the lyrics perfectly; the new thrashier angrier Descendents fails to represent as well.

The other problem with this album is that Milo is old, he's married and he has a career; he's not the same high school geek we could all relate to. For instance "I'm The One," a song about longing for a girl who keeps going out with jerks is great, but when it comes from someone who is married it's a little harder to swallow. Everything Sucks is a great punk album. It contains the frenetic feel that most bands today ignore. It is not the watered down rehashed pop punk that most bands are playing today.

On the flipside, it doesn't give the same vibe we've come to expect from the Descendents. The slicker sound is great, but the rawness of the SST recordings helped make them so real.

Everything Sucks just feels like a great punk album but it doesn't give the special feeling that only the Descendents of old could give. B+

Colegian Graphics: Someone has to take the beating

■ trax

continued from page 6

calmness on one song, and then screams for consideration on the next. Andreone has this amusing trill in her voice, a forced falsetto that demands attention.

Though her songs do tackle some challenging topics, Andreone sings without whining, a step above many of her peers. B (L.M.O.)

LUSH
Lovelife
4AD/Reprise

The intrinsic problem of Lush's latest album, Lovelife, is that it fails to live up to the promise of it's first three songs. Taken together, "Ladykillers," "Heavenly Nobodies" and "500" present a wonderfully varied song cycle, going from catty to cynical to introspective to loving. "500" is so upbeat, you can't help but get wrapped up in it and "Ladykillers" will have everyone, male and female, cheering on the insights of the narrator — except for the "blondies" and "long hair and muscles" types she dismisses. The wide spectrum of emotions and attitudes, along with the upbeat rhythms and forward thrust of the music leave you hoping for an inspiring and upbeat album, but it's a let down.

Sure, there are some good songs. This isn't a bad album. "I've Been Here Before" recounts the endless cycle of bad relationships people fall into and "The Childcatcher" tells of the narrator's need for the men in her life to respect her as a grown woman and stop treating her as if she's a pampered child. "Ciao!" comes the closest to living up to the promise (and escaping it's stupid title) — it's a wonderfully snide duet where vocalist Miki Berenyi and guest vocalist Jarvis Cocker of Pulp trade insults as former lovers ("I can't believe I thought I was in love with you", he sneers, "I can't believe I fell for a loser like you", she replies) who can only agree that the other was "a big mistake."

But some of the later songs go on for too long, especially at the close of the disk. "Papasan" has some nice lyrical flourishes and a pretty, spare arrangement, but because of it, ultimately goes nowhere.

Like the title suggests, the album is a collection of songs about... well, lovelife. Each song tells a story of love lost. Those of us who hide true feelings by acting jaded can truly appreciate it — even if it's not as good as the first three songs. B– (M.M.)

■ Leigh

continued from page 6

any substance. More proof that a big named cast in no way means a well acted or strong film. F

GEORGIA
Directed by Uli Grosbard
With Jennifer Jason Leigh, Mare Winningham, Ted Levine

Jennifer Jason Leigh has continuously proved herself as a brilliant actress who chooses intriguing roles to portray. Georgia, one of the most fascinating character dramas of this decade is no different, but rather worthy as Leigh's best film to date. This is a truly mesmerizing tale which centers around the relationship between two sisters. One sister is named Georgia, and is enchantingly played by Oscar nominee Mare Winningham. Georgia is a successful and famous folk singer with a loving family and beautiful suburban home. Sadie, played by Leigh, is the darker half of this sibling duo. Sadie is a passionate, but less talented singer than her sister. She has drowned herself in a deep depression surrounded by alcoholism and heroin addiction. With her sister's help, she tries to escape from her broken world of playing bar gigs in between her own blackouts.

This film is amazingly honest. Sadie knows she can never climb out from her sister's shadows. She accepts this by playing her own harsh renditions of Georgia's sweet sounding ballads knowing well she will never be like her sister. Grosbard's direction is excellent by portraying Sadie as a sort of delinquent adolescent with a good heart who wants to do the right thing, but doesn't know how. This is a very dark film with a sad ending which will not only force you to re-evaluate your hopes and dreams, but also the value we each place on family. A

FARGO
Directed by Joel Coen
With William H. Macey, Francis McDormand, Steve Buscemi

The Coen Brothers have returned to their midwestern roots for their new satirical thriller starring William H. Macey, Steve Buscemi and Francis McDormand. Fargo is similar Coen Brothers style with dark humor and brilliant writing, which have made them the most innovative filmmaking team of our time.

The story is about a local businessman played by Macey, who decides to have two hitmen kidnap his wife in order to have his father in law pay the ransom. Joel Coen's real life wife, Francis McDormand, is the police officer trying to find the clues to solving the case. The plot becomes more complicated as a simple kidnapping escalates into a huge mystery resulting in a numerous body count.

The acting is superb as usual with many of the Coen Brothers stock actors like McDormand and Buscemi playing eccentric but lovable characters. Fargo is an extremely intelligent noirish drama which takes place in a small Minnesota town. A fantastic film by the brothers who gave us other excellent crime thrillers like Blood Simple and Millers Crossing. A–

Colegian Graphics:
Best thing on Campus

THE NETWORK AT MT. HOLYOKE COLLEGE PRESENTS
A Tribe Called Quest
Live In Concert!
ON SALE NOW
THUR. OCT. 10 - 8:00 PM
Chapin Hall, Mt. Holyoke College
General Admission- $17.50 Adv.
Advance tickets available at B-Side Records in Northampton, For The Record in Amherst, Tix Unlimited at U. Mass and all ProTix Outlets. To charge by phone call (413) 732-6200

INTERESTED IN FILM STUDIES?

Sign up now for the FILM STUDIES CERTIFICATE In the Interdepartmental Program in Film Studies. You get:

- a certificate for 18 credits of coursework in four years
- individual advising
- the only on-campus resource for graduate programs and schools in film and video
- exciting information on internships and jobs
- free subscription to the newsletter In Focus, with film course listings
- advance notice of upcoming film screenings and lectures
- a community of students interested in film and video

Apply in 101 South College during office hours or call 545-3659.

CHECK OUT OUR NEW WEBSITE!
http://www.umass.edu/film including listings of film courses, internships and competitions, grants and festivals, and links to other film sites

Come Party at Mikes

MIKES WESTVIEW CAFE

RAFFEL NITE
Mikes Tees & Mad Money
Thursday Nite 9-10
Free Hors'd'oeuvres

BEER BARGAIN OF THE WEEK
Miller 80 Bottles
$1.25

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS $10.
25 n. pleasant st amherst 256.0733
145 main st northampton 586.0155

Golden Key
National Honor Society
Campus Awareness Days
October 2, 3, 4 1996
9:30 - 3:00pm
Campus Center

NFL

continued from page 10

ing under new management next season.

The excuse Kotite can't use, however, is that the teams woes are all owner Leon Hess' fault. Hess wants a winner during his lifetime, and plans to keep changing coaches until he gets one. In the last four years, they've had three different head coaches (Bruce Coslet, Pete Carroll and Rich Kotite) as well as replacing Kotite with Ron Earhardt as offensive coordinator this year. The players never get used to a system due to Hess' haste in firing coaches and putting in mediocre replacements. Carroll is the perfect example. Hess fired him after his late-season collapse and replaced him with Kotite, fresh off a collapse that cost him his job in Philly. Carroll went on to build a tough defense in San Francisco.

With his track record, look for Hess to replace Kotite with Reeves, Mora, Buffalo's defensive coordinator and former Denver head coach Wade Phillips, Earhardt, or even Fontes should Detroit let him go.

The last team that could begin next year with a new head coach is the New England Patriots. The big question is whether Parcells wants to come back after cutting a year off his contract. Whether that happens depends solely on how the team does. Another year like last year, and Parcells is in permanent retirement. However, if Parcells enjoys himself, which means at least a winning season, if not a playoff berth, he should be back for one more shot. He wants to go out a winner and show the game hasn't passed him by. If his players don't respond though, look for assistant head coach Bill Belichick to succeed him.

One other possible vacancy could be in Big D, though it's not likely. Egomaniac Jerry Jones won't want to admit he made the wrong choice in bringing in Barry Switzer, which is probably the biggest thing in his favor. Then there's the fact that Jones may not have made the wrong choice two years ago. Despite his heavy criticism, Switzer has lead the beat up remnants of his team to two wins, the latter over a tough Eagles team. Switzer hasn't had to coach his first two years — now it's time to prove whether he can or not.

Kansas City's Marty Schottenheimer could also be in a little trouble, despite leading the Chiefs to an NFL-best 13–3 season last year and their first 4–0 start ever. The problem is that's nothing unusual for Schottenheimer, just like it wasn't unusual he lost his first game in last year's playoffs. A coach only gets so many chances to get it done. A single playoff win will assure another season in Kansas City, but bowing out after one game this year could result in him bowing out after the season.

And then there's the few coaches who aren't going anywhere, despite their lousy records. St. Louis' Rich Brooks, Tampa Bay's Tony Dungy, Arizona's Vince Tobin and Seattle's Dennis Erickson, despite a cumulative 4–15 record, will all be back next year. Never forget, rebuilding is a coach's favorite word.

Jacob W. Michaels is a Collegian columnist

NBA

continued from page10

blocks last year.

While in a Minuteman uniform Roe was a dominant force on the court, averaging 16.5 ppg. He posted a .532 field goal percentage and a .706 free throw percentage. Roe also grabbed 8.1 rebounds per game.

Bright was an instrumental member of the 1995–96 Minuteman team which reached the Final Four for the first time in school history. As a senior, Bright averaged 14.5 ppg and 5.8 rpg. He had the highest free throw percentage on the team, posting a .794. In addition, Bright dished out 64 assists and collected 43 swipes.

Bright has a scheduled return to his collegiate court, as former Minuteman coach John Calipari will bring the Nets to the William D. Mullins Center for a preseason exhibition game against the Washington Bullets on Oct. 13.

NHL

continued from page 10

goals in five minutes...no wonder the Philadelphia Flyers' Eric Lindros was crying on Team Canada's bench. Something was missing on that team, oh, I guess it was the defenseman of the century, the Bruins' Ray Bourque. Sorry, a defensive corps led by Mr. Stay-Away– From–Home Paul Coffey did not fill me with a warm, fuzzy feeling. No wonder the Detroit Red Wings, still, have not won anything meaningful.

•The leaves will turn colors, Clinton will win the Presidential election, the Eagles will charge your mortgage payment for a ticket and Jeremy Roenick will sign with the Phoenix Coyotes. One of these things will never, ever happen...guess which one?

Sorry, all of you Dole–heads, the right answer is Roenick, and for 25 million dollars which both you and him will never receive. It is not that one of the premier forwards in the game does not deserve it, but it will not happen in Phoenix. Their salary cap is full to the brim, even with unloading the highly–talented, abysmally–motivated Alexei Zhamnov in this enigma deal with Chicago. You have to get a high–scorer for Roenick, but Zhamnov seems to fit in the standard Russian stereotype: all–flash, no–smash.

It would be a great lift for an old franchise in a new town to have two teamers, as Roenick would probably be lined up with ex–Boston University superstar Keith Tkachuk. That is a great combo, but a load of cash would have to be dropped on the America West Arena for Phoenix to keep Roenick. Let him get signed by some other team (Mike Milbury and the Islanders would love that), and take the five–first round draft picks in compensation and run.

Why would you want to play hockey in Phoenix, anyway?

I am sorry, but in that area, I would be more worried about hitting my 7–iron, and making it stick on the green, than going out and sticking a hit on a number 77; especially if it's on a Bruin jersey.

•Speaking of the Bruins, it looks like the Big Bad Bruins of the early 1970's and 80's have returned. For me, I do not know if it is a good or bad thing for me, since I am the Elder Finnish Statesman in these parts, but I do remember those days. No kidding...really...let's talk, huh?

I am old school, through and through, bleeding Black and Gold...and, truthfully, coming into this season the idea of a Cream of Wheat lineup like last year's squad did not appeal to me. When the Bruins looked to rebuild after the Orr– Esposito Era, Harry Sinden went to a lineup that could basically punch your lights out first, and maybe sneak in a quickie with players like Rick Middleton and Barry Pederson around.

Sinden knew the squad after the departure of the Holy Ones was not going to out–finesse an opponent. Basically, it looks like the same case scenario, and believe me, Harry is looking for his chance, and will strike. Sure, dealing off Shawn McEachern was a surprise, but can you rebuild a franchise around a player of his marginal quality? Really now, McEachern was not the second coming of Cam Neely. Not even close.

By the way, when you're watching any Bruins game this season, get your buddies together in a circle; raise your glasses in the air; and give a toast to one of the all–time Bruins, Cam Neely. He will be missed, not just for the team, but for the game.

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

COLLEGIAN SPORTS, CATCH IT !!!

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Sigma Tau Gamma is looking for new members. STG is a newer fraternity with a different style. Call Will for information 6-4455.

The Sisters of Sigma Delta Tau would like to congratulate our new members Farah, Heather, Jaime, Jen, Michele, Sarah, and Steffany.

AUTO FOR SALE

1986 Oldsmobile Delta 88 $1,000 Runs Great. 323-1174

1986 Toyota Low mileage, standard $1000.00 586-9501 After 5:00 pm

1987 Mazda 626 129k miles but runs great, standard shift, P/W, P/L, sunroof, $1000 or BO. Call Jarrod 549-9282

1985 Buick Skylark Dependable Ask $1000 or BO. Call Brian (413)774-7167

EMPLOYMENT

Spring Break!! Earn Cash!!! Highest Commissions! Lowest Prices! Travel free on only 13 sales! Free Info! Sunsplash 1-800 426-7710

Cruise Ships Hiring Earn up to $2,000+/month! World Travel. Seasonal and Full Time positions. No exp. necessary. For info call 1-206-971-3550 ext C50015.

National Parks Hiring Positions are now available at National Parks, Forests and Wildlife Preserves. Excellent benefits and bonuses! Call 1-206-971-3620 Ext N50016.

Tropical Resorts Hiring Students needed! Entry-level and career positions available worldwide. Call Resort Employment Services 1-206-971-3600 Ext R50012

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS! Over 8 billion in public and private sector Grants and scholarships are now available. All students are eligible. Let us help. For more info call 1-800-263-6495 Ext F50014

International Employment - Earn up to $25-$45/hour teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S. Korea. No teaching background or Asian Languages required. For info call 206-971-3570 Ext. J50015

Now Hiring All Skills. Closing shifts available with bonus program. Hadley Burger King. Ask for Tim 584-5110.

Spring Break '97! Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica and Florida. Earn free trips and cash! Call (800)700-0790

Research Interviewers Evenings and weekends. Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Flexible hours: Monday-Friday 5pm-11pm, Sat. 11am-5pm, and Sunday 12pm-5pm and 5pm-10pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hour. Interested candidates please call AST Telephone Research Center at (413)587-1607. An Equal Opportunity Employer

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

486SX Compact Laptop, 4 meg. RAM, 120MB, MS Office 6.0, electronic pen, external CD ROM via PCMCIA, Canon Bubble Jet Printer, $950 or best offer 549-4850 Jason

Dorm Fridges 18"x18" Cheap and delivered!! Name Your Price! Call 585-1154

MacIntosh Performa 5215CD, 75MHZ CPU, 8MB RAM, 1GB HD, 15" monitor, 14.4 Fax/Modem, 16 Bit Sound. Asking $1500 OBO. Call 584-8402

Mac Powerbook 140 8/80, fax/modem, software and portable printer w/case $1,000. Call Mike 587-0347

Car Stereo AM/FM cassette, Dolby/noise reduction and 4 4.5" speakers (20 watts each) Features and digitally tuned. All for only $200/BO. Jeff 549-4334

2 Dave Matthews Tix Sun Oct 6. Floor seats, Row 27. Best offer. Sam 546-2982

Mac Powerbook 520CD + Laser Printer $1,100/BO. For more info call Amy 256-0413

1995 Trek 820 18" New derailer back wheel cranks. Grips/rh barends, toeclips. Just tuned. $750. 546-4849

10/6 DMB Tix Row 7 Floor, 3 tix. Call 256-8630 and leave a message for Chris

FOUND

Non-Prescription Sunglasses made by Guess. In WEB DuBois Library on 7th floor. Contact library to claim.

INSTRUCTION

Bartend with University Bartending 50% student discount. Amherst classes starting soon! Call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX for info

Boxing Lessons w/Darla Bumpus. Call for brochure 737-8817

WWW.SUCCESS.ORG Free business education from American Institute Entrepreneurship and Real Estate Investment Courses. Retire rich in ten years

PC/MAC Tutoring Cheap instruction for computer. Patient, valuable help and advice. Set ups, software, Internet (413)772-0633

English Language Consultant Available to International Students and Non-English Majors. Will edit papers and dissertations, also tutor ESL. Call Ms Reed, retired faculty member, for rate schedule and free initial consultation. 253-3354

LOST

Lost Dog Reward Missing from North Maple Street, Hadley since Sunday, Sept 22. Lab/Springer Spaniel Mix, answers to the name of Benny. Has lab features with shagger coat. Primarily black with tan paws and black and white fluffy tail. Would be considered medium sized, approx. 34lbs. 25 inches tall. Only wearing silver choke collar- no tags. Call with any info 549-1390. Ask for Shawn or Ben.

Lost near Totman Gym: Sewing Glasses If found call Mike at 546-1826

LOST

Lost- Motel Black Matte Frame Glasses. If found please call Marina 0549-3582

MOTORCYCLES

1980 CB 650 $500 or BO. 9050 miles runs well - must sell. Call 549-6646

1980 Suzuki GS750L 4-cyl., saddlebags, highway pegs, new battery, great street bike. $600/BO. Call Jesse 256-6142

MUSICIANS

Guitar Classes Start 9/10 Rentals and lessons available. 10 wks/$40.00 FTUG Pad 545-0579

Blues Jam Tues. 8:00pm Emerson 112 Check it out!

MISCELLANEOUS

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office. 545-1995

PERSONALS

Choices Not Chances Free contraception education. Every Mon & Thurs 3-4:30 and Tues & Wed 7-8:30pm in Rm 302 UHS. Men and Women welcome. For more information call Health Education Office 577-5181

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

ROOM FOR RENT

Room for rent bus route. Available now. 665-7822

SERVICES

Computer Problems? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Scream Savers. 549-0083

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK! Earn cash! Highest commissions/lowest prices! Travel free on only 13 sales!!! Free info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

Free Trips and Cash Find out how hundreds of student representatives are already earning free trips and lots of cash with America's #1 Spring Break Company! Sell only 15 trips and travel free! Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica, or Florida! Campus Manager positions also available. Call now! Take A Break Student Travel (800)95-Break

WANTED

Wanted 100 People New Metabolism Breakthrough. Lose 5-100 lbs Guaranteed. Cost $25. (800)776-9503

Another Happy Family thanks to.... Collegian Classifieds

Rates

$2.00 minimum /day

Students 20¢ per word /day

All others 40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21–April 20
Pressure at work eases as the week begins. Take the opportunity to attend to some personal affairs you've been neglecting. An old friend may be feeling a bit forgotten.

TAURUS
April 21–May 21
A reckless feeling may lead you into a situation that's over your head. Don't hesitate to ask for help, since the consequences of not doing so could be dire. A sporting event is a source of amusement.

GEMINI
May 22–June 21
Someone who rubs you the wrong way is about to get a fresh approach. Be prepared. If you're aware ahead of time, you may not find their actions quite so obnoxious.

CANCER
June 22–July 22
An old friend may need your support in handling a difficult problem. Be prepared to lend an ear, or perhaps some financial support, if you're able. A little compassion goes a long way.

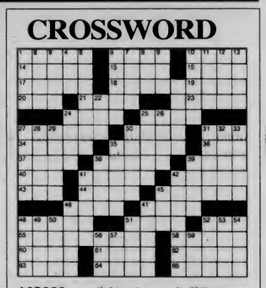
LEO
July 23–August 23
A group project flows nicely once a group leader permits everyone to have an equal say. A light touch goes a long way toward easing a situation that has become tense.

VIRGO
August 24–September 22
A relationship deepens with some effort and attention. Be clear about what you want, and your companion will equal your honesty. It's important to give trust in order to have trust.

LIBRA
September 23–October 23
Stick out a confusing relationship for a little while longer. You may gain insight, even if it still doesn't work out. The effort you make to avoid hurting another person will come back to you tenfold.

SCORPIO
October 24–November 22
A happy announcement may make you the center of attention early this week. Enjoy it while you can—stressful moments may be following closely behind.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23–December 21
A brilliant insight on the part of a co-worker may seem silly at first, but give the idea the benefit of the doubt. A trial run may be the very thing to prove its value.



CAPRICORN
December 22–January 20
Planning a big event proves more exhausting than you had anticipated, so enlist help from someone you trust to get things done in time. Save some energy so you can enjoy yourself, too!

AQUARIUS
January 21–February 18
A visit with a close friend or relative brings you up to date on some gossip you've missed. Ignore a catty remark from a co-worker, since their spitefulness is probably rooted in jealousy. Living well is the best revenge.

PISCES
February 19–March 20
A good week for catching up on minor projects you've been ignoring. Cover all your bases before making an off-the-wall suggestion—you don't want to make others think you're a fool.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1. Represent as similar
8. "Tubby the ___"
14. Abyss
15. "Remember the ___"
16. Monogram unit (abbr.)
18. Birthright seller
19. Subtraction word
20. Bar members
22. Place for props
23. Storybook Ferdinand, to a nino
25. Secretarial, e.g.
26. Twinkling bear
28. Leaping insect
29. Action film star Chuck
30. Blake, e.g.
31. 747
34. Use
35. Gold measurement
36. Scene of the Judgment of Paris
37. Mind: Lat.
38. DNA discovery man
39. Car pioneer
40. School subs.
41. Danish filling
42. Hand-dyed cloth
43. Compass reading
44. Rends
46. Smooches
48. Fidel's country
49. Garlic cover-up
50. Felt unwell
51. "You ___ Me" (Sam Cooke hit)
52. Police blotter inits.
55. Standoff
56. Norwegian dramatist Henrik
60. Cat's-paw
61. Speck
62. Without a stitch
63. ___ many words
64. Yodelers' mecca
65. Sounds of surprise

DOWN
1. Nasty flights
2. Neiman Nastase
3. "Metaphysics of Morals" philosopher
4. Large bird of Australia
5. Flared rains
6. Sparkling headdress
7. Night ___ Night (Paragon film)
8. Small part
9. From ___ Z
10. Type of salami
11. Ulster
12. "Play It As It ___"
13. Dynamite wick
19. One of Scarlett's hubbies
22. WWII intelligence agency
24. Old Vic author
25. "May the ___ be with you"
26. Sweeps
27. Black book's contents
28. Microwaves
29. Child's workplace
30. Hurts
31. Throws over
32. Sullivan's, to Topo Gigio
33. Chores
35. Drummer Gene
36. Bed with bumpers
37. Pottery kiln
41. Prim and proper one
42. Kind of arithmetic
45. Elly Mae and Jethro, to Jed
46. Rostropovich's instrument
47. Track events
48. Italian city
49. "Go Tell ___ the Mountain"
50. Nemi's neighbor
51. Quit it!
52. Inquires
53. Retain
54. Ampersands
56. Graduate deg.
57. Everybody
58. Coke quote

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

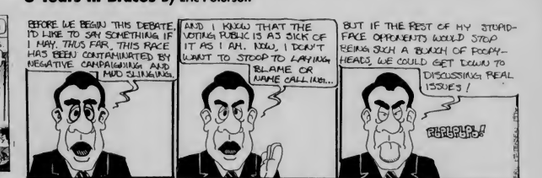
Standard Headings

Activities	Miscellaneous
Announcements	Motorcycles
Apartment For Rent	Personals
Auto For Sale	Room For Rent
Employment	Room Wanted
Entertainment	Roommate Wanted
For Sale	Services
Found (2 days Free)	Summer Sublet
Happy Birthday	To Sublet
Houses For Rent	Travel
Instruction	Transportation
Lost	Wanted to Rent
Musicians	Wanted

Always Wanted One of Those By A. Morse & S. Dumas

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan



Dilbert By Scott Adams

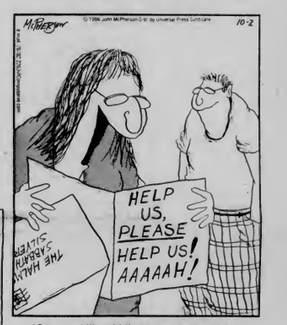
Frumpy the Clown Judd Winick

8 Years in Braces By Eric Peterson

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Leold (leold@javanet.com)
by Roger and Salem Salloom ©1996

My oldest brother Tito was a socialist in college. He used to share all his clothes and records with me. He had hope for the working classes all over the world. I was not sure what he was talking about, but I do know he was really a good guy. He said he was also in favor of democracy for those little countries and he didn't understand why it hadn't happened yet.



Nowadays, he seems kind of lost except when he goes to the Communists Anonymous meetings at the Unitarian Church on Monday nights.

Ah, ...well .... it's back to the books and libraries again.

University² By Frank Cho

Close to Home By John McPherson

Leedoo By Mike Rybicki

Social Norm By Mr.K

YOUR COMIC COULD BE HERE
instead of this stupid ad
TO RUN A STRIP IN THE COLLEGIAN CONTACT CHRIS CONNER, MANAGING EDITOR • 545-1672

Quote of the Day

"Winning insn't everything, it's the only thing"

–Vince Lombardi

Quote of the Night

"The trouble with jogging is by the time you realize that your out of shape, it's too far to walk back"

–Franklin P. Jones

Today's Staff

Mike "Principal Skinner" Burke
Night Editor

Lisa "Lisa" Oliveri
Copy Editor

Elizabeth "Sideshow" Brown
Photo Technician

Marc "Mr. Burns" Dionne
Production Supervisor

Kelvin "Scratchy" Torres
Mark "Itchy" McGrath
Production

Dining Commons Menu

Menu unavailable.
Please refer to this guide to help you decide where to eat.

1. First, go get some dice (6 sided, preferably).
2. Find one you like, and roll it.

If you roll:

- Go to Franklin D.C. for dinner.
- Go to Berkshire D.C. for dinner.
- Go to Hampshire D.C. for dinner.
- Go to Worcester D.C. for dinner.
- Get Pizza for dinner!
- Roll again.

Sports

NCAA Division I Women's Volleyball District I Rankings

1. Penn State	6. Temple
2. Florida International	7. Villanova
3. Connecticut	8. Rutgers
4. Harvard	9. Delaware
5. Connecticut	10. Yale

Men's tennis rolls over Engineers

Cheney & Manchester lead Minutemen to fifth consecutive victory

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Taking advantage of the warm, sunny weather, the Massachusetts men's tennis team rolled over visiting MIT yesterday, 6-1.

With the win at the Upper Boyden Courts the Minutemen improve to 5-0 on the year.

Underclassman talent UMass on the day, as sophomore Todd Cheney and freshman Rob Manchester picked up a pair of wins each. It took three sets but Cheney came away with the victory at No. 1 singles, defeating Eric Chen 5-7, 6-2, 7-5.

Cheney also teamed with freshman Bo Navarro to take the No. 1 doubles slot from Chen and Mik Mukherjee, 8-5.

Manchester had no trouble with Ben Cooke, as he won in straight sets (6-2, 6-1) to pick up the win at No. 5 singles. Sophomore Mike Skeels teamed with Manchester in doubles action and the two easily defeated Dan Wang and Jim Matysczak, 8-1.

Navarro was the only Minuteman to suffer a singles defeat at the hands of the Engineers. MIT's Jason Weintraub came away with the victory, 6-4, 5-5 (retired), at No. 2 singles.

Jason Blind faced a battle at No. 3 singles and fought through a tie-break in the first set to take the win from Matysczak, 7-6, 7-5.

Like Cheney, Alex Aller needed three sets in order to down his opponent in singles. After falling behind in the first set Aller came back to claim the win at the No. 4 spot, 2-6, 7-5, 6-3.

Mark Huckins rounded out the singles wins for UMass, easily taking the No. 6 spot from Mukherjee in straight sets, 6-2, 6-2.

Aller and Huckins teamed at No. 2 doubles, but dropped their match 8-4 to MIT's Weintraub and Lin Hank.

The Minutemen have had an impressive start to the year, as yesterday's win marked the third time this season UMass has taken home a 6-1 victory. Wins over Wesleyan and Rhode Island were also 6-1 decisions.

The team also claimed a pair of 5-2 wins, as they rolled to road wins over both Boston University and Connecticut by that score.

Sept. 18's scheduled game against Fairfield was postponed due to rain.

In last weekend's West Point Invitational the Minutemen had a strong showing, as Aller captured a pair of titles. Aller brought home the B Flight Consolation singles title and later teamed with Huckins to capture the B Flight Doubles crown.

Several other Minutemen put in solid performances as UMass advanced five singles players and a pair of doubles teams in the first round.

The Minutemen are in action twice next week. On Oct. 7 they travel to take on Fairfield at 3 p.m. and on Oct. 11 they return home to host Vermont.

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN
The Massachusetts men's tennis team had no trouble with MIT yesterday, beating the Engineers 6-1.

World Cup a success, Big Bad Bruins back in effect

Jovica Kanseman on the NHL

Now, the real season starts...

So many things to chat about, so many things to say and so long of a season to work with. Damn, let's stop this proper little chit-chat, and let's get on with the rock-em, sock-em action that is the NHL.

•First things first, the World Cup. Before the advent of our collective, nine month-long icy fates, who are the bozos out there who thought playing this was useless? Well, here's hoping a classic Johnny Bucyk body-check get's you in another life. I ask, with a purist's smirk, who took the Cup home? Yes, the good ole of U.S. of A. You heathens out there should be ashamed of yourselves.

The best of the NHL best faced off on rinks all over Europe, America and Canada, while the American hockey community had to squint deeply to catch it because of the lack of TV coverage. The MLS (Mediocre-Lame Soccer league) got more airplay than this world championship competition, watched all over the world where water freezes on a 200° by 85° surface. I am not dissing the sport of football, I mean, soccer, but I guess some things that we produce in life do float to the surface.

Due to the dismissal of the Canada Cup, which the World Cup is basically a direct copy of, the interest in this country has dwindled over the years. Wait a second, it has been non-existent, but I can not blame the viewing public. The best conglomeration of talent on the ice was the 1972 Canada Cup, otherwise known as The Summit, with the Homers vs. the former Soviet Union, and the USA team going out to the ball game. Our history in the premier exhibitions of hockey's best (besides the 1980 Olympics) have been as good as Ross Perot's separate bids to be elected President. That was before, and is now, very, very, very small...you sad, sad, sad people out there.

This sport goes beyond the American Big Three of baseball, football and basketball. Only the real game of soccer can bring together such a worldwide audience, and captivate their competitive attentions. The athlete actually plays for his country, not his shoe/skate company. When we got a chance to see it...

We were able to see the quality player the Hartford Whalers' have in Brendan Shanahan (eh?), and why ex- Bruins coach Terry O'Reilly wanted him so bad in the Black and Gold in the latter part of the '80's.

We were able to see how really good the Swedish National team is, led by the Colorado Avalanche's Peter Forsberg, as they came within a very dodgy, late goal of defeating the Mighty Mighty Canadian team in the semi- finals. By the way, wasn't the officiating absolutely awful in this tournament? Oh, sorry...nothing new there. Hopefully the new rules for offsides instated this season will actually make the officials "look," instead of look to the heavens (i.e. replay) for guidance.

And, we were able to see a relative group of no-names, in comparison to our aforementioned Northern losers, use grit, determination and national pride (things not always associated with American sport) to dig out of a late 2-1 hole, and win 5-2. Four

Turn to NHL, page 8

Dave Shula may get axed Jones' ego saves Switzer

Jacob W. Michaels on the NFL

Kevin Kennedy's firing after rallying the Boston Red Sox from their worst start ever serves as an ample reminder to coaches in any major sport that their job security is about as long as a Jets winning streak.

Already in week five, a number of head coaches should be looking over their shoulder as they can be let loose as quickly as they let an undrafted player in training camp go.

There are several coaches who are going to have to do a very good job in the next 12 weeks if they want to be working in the same town next year.

Number one on the NFL's most wanted list has to be Cincinnati head coach Dave Shula. He has a horrid 18–46 record in his first four years, which should make his 1–3 record no surprise. The difference is the Bengals finished 7–9 last year, and were expected to go somewhere this year with Jeff Blake, Darnay Scott, Carl Pickens and Ki–Jana Carter. Shula's contract is up at the end of the season, so he has to perform just to get an extension. If he doesn't perform, Shula is the coach most likely to get a mid–season axing.

After Dave's dad Don went into retirement at the end of last year, Jim Mora became the NFL's longest–tenured head coach. Next year, however, Buffalo's Marv Levy may have that title, as Mora is in trouble. Unlike Shula the Younger, Mora has a winning record with his team (91–68 in 10 years). However, they're off to their second consecutive 0–5 start. Owner Tom Benson likes and wants to keep Mora, who is the only coach in franchise history to ever bring them to the playoffs, even if he's yet to win a game in postseason. However, Mora troubles winning even regular season games now (it doesn't get much worse than a loss to the Cards, which is what happened last Sunday) will force Benson to find a new guy to lead his team.

Wayne Fontes is always high on the firing list, and unlike in New Orleans, it seems Lions management look for any possible excuse to fire him. Unlike every other year, however, Fontes managed to get his Lions off to a relatively hot start (3–2), which combined with their usual late season run, should get them safely into the playoffs. The big question now is, will the lack of pressure from a bad start and a William Clay Ford ultimatum result in no late run? If so, Fontes will probably fill someone else' job vacancy next year.

The Big Apple could be his destination, since both teams (if they can even be called that) could be looking for new leaders.

Dan Reeves will almost definitely be moving in the offseason. His contract is up and even if he can do the impossible — making the playoffs and getting the Giants to offer an extension — he probably won't take it. Reeves barely came back this year due to problems between him and general manager George Young. Even if he doesn't win again, Reeves will be kept until the end of the year, and the Giants are hoping (in vain) to lure Patriots head coach Bill Parcells to take his job. However, Reeves somehow has been managing to win even before facing the Cards, which should ensure he's coaching somewhere next year.

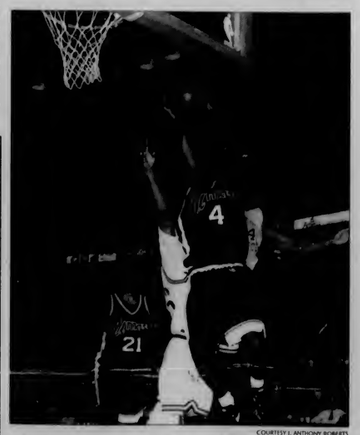
Elsewhere in the Big Apple, Rich Kotite is doing his usual magnificent job. So far he's managed a 3–18 record with the Jets, including opening the season 0–5. He can't be blamed for the first 13 of those losses, since he had no offense. However, his ownership listened to his complaints in the offseason and (tried to) solve the problems by bringing in a host of free agents. Kotite now has no excuse he can use to save his job, and the Jets should be fly-

Turn to NFL, page 8

UMass stars ink deals

Roe heads west to Golden State; Bright joins Calipari with Nets

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff



Marcus Camby and John Calipari won't be the only people in the NBA with ties to the Massachusetts men's basketball team next season. Former Minutemen Lou Roe and Donta Bright have signed to play professionally in the upcoming season.

Roe has signed with the Golden State Warriors, while Bright will join his former coach in the New Jersey Nets organization.

Roe spent last year playing with the Detroit Pistons, where he was used as utility player off the bench. Roe saw time in 49 games, starting two. He averaged 1.8 points per game and compiled a .356 field goal percentage, a .222 three–point percentage and a .750 free throw percentage. He collected 78 rebounds, 10 steals and eight blocks, while turning in 15 assists.

Roe posted single–game highs of 14 points, nine rebounds and three

Turn to NBA, page 8

COURTESY J. ANTHONY ROBERTS
Former UMass men's basketball standout Donta Bright reunited with coach John Calipari this week, signing a free agent contract with the New Jersey Nets.

Finally, field hockey to play at Totman

By Jen Ryder
Collegian Staff

Home, sweet home.

The Massachusetts field hockey team will play on Totman Field for the first time this season as they square off against No. 6 Northeastern University (4–3) today at 3:30 p.m.

The No. 5 Minutewomen (7–1, 2–0 Atlantic 10) were rained out two weeks ago at home against Yale in their only September scheduled game at Totman Field.

UMass continues to roll, as it wins its fourth in a row this past weekend, downing Temple 3–1. The team has not lost since it dropped a 2–1 decision to Iowa on Sept. 15.

Today's game against Northeastern is the first in a big week of matchups for the Minutewomen. This weekend they face West Chester and No. 2 North Carolina at Westfield State.

Where else does the Minutewomen offense need to look than the quartet of Erica Johnston, Saskia Fuchs, Kate Putnam and Kyle Rothenberger?

Johnston leads the team in goals (6), and is second in shots (24) and points (14). She scored a goal in the win over Temple.

Freshman sensation Fuchs has dazzled the opponent's defense, tallying five goals and six assists to lead the team with 16 points.

Putnam and Rothenberger each have three goals and four assists, for a total of 10 points.

It is said that defense wins games, and so far it's held true for UMass. The Minutewomen have held their opponents to just 10 goals so far this season, holding them to one goal in 54 chances on penalty corners.

Amy Ott has recorded two defensive saves, with Melanie Gore and Jen Gutzman adding one a piece.

In the net, senior Hilary Rose has 92 saves and two shutouts. Against Temple she faced five shots the entire game.

For Northeastern, the team's record hasn't reflected the talent it has. The Huskies' losses have come against three top teams: No. 1 Virginia (1–0), No. 1 Virginia (3–2), and No. 2 North Carolina (5–2). The Huskies possess a balanced scoring attack and strong goaltending.

Leading Northeastern in scoring with 7 goals is Keri Bettenhauser. Jen White (5), Kate West (2) and Tori Callo (2) are also among the team leaders in goals. The offense as a whole has outscored their opponents 19–15.

Defensively the Huskies have played Heather Stewart and Danielle Bustsch in the goal. Combined, they have allowed 15 goals and saved 48. The most goals they allowed in a game thus far this season was five against North Carolina. The defense has allowed only 38 penalty corners.

Minutewoman Notes: For the fourth time in five weeks Fuchs was named the Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Week, as Rhode Island's Erica Coggins is the only other conference freshman to take the award this season... Massachusetts, LaSalle and St. Joseph's are tied for the lead in the A–10 conference wins as each have posted a pair of A–10 victories.

Collegian staff member Casey Kane contributed to this article.

Women's tennis hits the road to face rival Connecticut today

By Michael J. Nam
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's tennis team will be on the road again today when it plays at the University of Connecticut, Storrs at 2:30 p.m. The match will be the Minutewomen's third consecutive game on the road.

UMass comes into the match undefeated in team play with a record of 3–0, including an important 5–2 victory against Columbia last Saturday.

"Columbia was the first Ivy League team that we've beaten," head coach Judy Dixon said. "Especially without our No. 1 [Ola Gerasimova] everyone had to play well, and they were up to the task."

The match will feature the debut of freshman Gerasimova, who had been ineligible to play until now due to questions involving the NCAA Clearinghouse.

"I want to see how Ola does, and how the team will react. I want to see if they can keep up the intensity," Dixon said.

The Minutewomen relied on the solid efforts of junior co– captain Caroline Steele during their current streak. Steele's play exemplified the capability of this year's team.

"What we're looking for with the UConn match is for everyone to play consistent tennis," assistant coach Tom Lowry said. "We're asking them to use different strategies, different styles of game and to be more versatile. After a big Ivy League win, the hardest thing will be to come back down. The emotions are extremely high."

Player intensity has become a trademark of coach Dixon's program, now in its fifth year. Dixon has posted a 41–19 record (.684 winning percentage) including a 15–3 mark last season.

"We're heavily favored to beat UConn," Dixon said. "UConn is in a flux right now, and even though there is an obvious rivalry between the two schools, I really feel there is nothing but positives in this coming match."

An emotional let–down is apparently all that the Minutewomen seem to be fearing, with confidence soaring, especially after the last two victories.

"We just don't want them to look ahead to Amherst," Lowry said. "Our doubles teams have been somewhat inconsistent, but with Ola returning, the singles and doubles teams can now be in their natural order."

The Ivy League victory gets the Minutewomen closer to a national ranking, and the undefeated record is important in gaining recognition.

"We need to beat the sectionally and nationally ranked teams to be ranked ourselves, but you don't get ranked by losing to teams your expected to beat," Dixon said.

Gerasimova's return will solidify the singles slots for the women, and provide an added lift to the team.

"I wanted the team during the Columbia match to feel that they were a solid team even without Ola," Dixon said. "With her return we'll be in a really good spot."

The Minutewomen return to local action on Friday to take on cross–town rival Amherst College at Amherst. Game time is scheduled for 3:30 p.m.

/The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 22 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Thursday, October 3, 1996

"So Much To Say"

The Dave Matthews Band brings their current tour to the Mullins Center Sunday night. Check out our cover story (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Overtime thriller!

Sharon Hughes scored the winning goal on a penalty stroke to give the Minutewomen a 2–1 victory over Northeastern yesterday (see Sports, page 14).

WORLD

Rebels in Afghanistan come closer to victory

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — The rebel fighters who control most of Afghanistan clambered over the mountains north of Kabul yesterday, tightening their siege on the lone valley still in the hands of former government soldiers.

Several hundred refugees anticipating more fighting were seen heading south toward Kabul, lugging bags of clothes and leading young children. They said the two sides were squared off about three miles apart.

Meanwhile, a U.N. envoy tried desperately to prevent separate outbreaks of fighting in a nearby part of the country. Norbert Holl met with northern warlord Rashid Dostum at his headquarters in Mazar-e-Sharif.

Dostum's army of ethnic Uzbeks and Tajiks, which controls most or all of seven northern provinces, is the only force standing in the way of complete Taliban control of Afghanistan. The warlord has reportedly sent 40,000 troops to bolster his front line.

NATION

NY child's suspension for harassment ends

NEW YORK (AP) — In the second such case this fall, a 7-year-old was punished for stealing a kiss that he called affection and teachers called harassment. Yesterday, administrators called the whole thing off.

De'Andre Dearinge's five-day suspension was abandoned after everyone from the boy's mother to Mayor Rudolph Giuliani criticized the punishment as political correctness run amok.

"I got what I wanted," the boy's mother, Erica White said yesterday. "I wanted the suspension ended, and for this not to go on... They're putting adult views in children's minds."

The little boy said he kissed the unidentified classmate last week because he liked her, and yanked at her skirt button as an homage to his favorite book, "Corduroy," a teddy bear who's missing a button.

"It appears as if this was kind of a normal, childish thing that happened and was misinterpreted," the mayor said. "It seems somebody made a mistake."

De'Andre had already served three days of his suspension, and school district officials decided to end the punishment there after meeting yesterday with the boy's mother and the girl's family, who agreed to the reduced punishment.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 50 LOW: 30	HIGH: 50 LOW: 30	HIGH: 60 LOW: 40

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 12
Comics .....page 13
Crossword .....page 12
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 14

Plan makes UM more affordable

Fair Share aims to lower tuiton and fees, increase state funding

By Jonathan Liberty and Beth McCarthy
Collegian Staff

Sen. Stan Rosenberg's (D–Amherst) Fair Share initiative is a plan designed to enhance the access, affordibility and quality of Massachusetts public higher education.

"The Fair Share plan was the result of a budget initiative within the State House which attempts to answer the question, 'What kind of consistent policy do we need to put into play to gain accessible quality to education?,' said Rosenberg.

Through state apropriation of funds, Fair Share will put the cost of tuition and fees back into balance.

"If Fair Share leads to lower tuition and fees and more state funding for the University of Massachusetts, then it is urgent that it be passed in legislation this year," said Marc Kenen, director of the Student Center for Education and Research Advocacy (SCERA).

The basic formula of the Fair Share initiative says that students at Massachusetts universities and colleges of public higher education will pay one–third of tuition and fees while state and private funding will cover two–thirds. At community colleges, students will be responsible for one–fourth of tuition and fees while state and private funds will cover the remaing three–fourths.

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN
Senator Stan Rosenberg

"Paying only one third of what I pay presently at UMass would greatly lessen the financial burden for my family," said junior political science major Kristy King. "If I paid less for school, I would have more time for academics since I would not have to work two jobs."

The Ways and Means Committee of the senate is presently developing formulas to determine exact percentages for each public higher education institution in the Commonwealth.

"It will be very imporatnt that the Fair Share initiative not only include tution, but also all mandated fees," said SCERA Student Coordinator Jason Vecchio.

Vecchio stressed that the climate surrounding public higher education was entirely different when the Fair Share legislation was drafted.

"When public higher education was receiving cuts, Fair Share meant stability," said Vecchio, "Now we have a new president [William Bulger] who is changing the way that we [UMass] look to the legislators. We should be receiving moderate increases to our budget over the next five years."

Vecchio added that Fair Share is no longer a necessity for stability, which is why students now have to make sure that it includes all student fees.

Fair Share will attempt to close the $125 million gap in educational funds over the next five years.

"We would like to see the budget for the state to grow by $125 million and see tuition come down by one–third or one–quarter," said Rosenberg.

An important piece of Fair Share is private fund raising. A law has recently been passed in legislation which creates a matching endowment system. The state will match dollar for dollar with private funds raised by universities. For instance, within one year if UMass raises $25 million, the state will endow $25 million to UMass.

"I want the University to get the $25 million," said Rosenberg, "That's the goal."

"We are slowly accomplishing the goals of Fair Share, even though it is not yet in the law," said Rosenberg. "Protection through the law would assure that Fair Share can continue."

Accountability measures are also being planned to ensure that the Fair Share initiative will not be abused.

"The measures allow us to recognize that people are working to the greatest excellence possible to improve management and efficiency," said Rosenberg.

The measures include ensuring that student to faculty ratios are appropriate, that admissions standards are followed and that graduation rates are within a reasonable margin.

"These external symbols can show us that that institutions are doing a good job and are worth giving money to," said Rosenberg.

Rosenberg added, Fair Share give us more for our dollars; students get a better education and the Commonwealth gets a better work force."

Rosenberg's Fair Share initiative passed unanimously in the senate. It will be debated on the floor of the house of representatives in the winter.

Musically inclined...

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN
Greg Saulmon, a freshman English major, practices playing his guitar in front of the Fine Arts Center.

Torie Osborn to speak on gay, lesbian empowerment

Tomorrow at the Five College Women's Research Center at Mount Holyoke College, Torie Osborn will be speaking at 4 p.m. in the Dickinson House living room. Osborn is the former executive director of the Los Angeles Gay and Lesbian Community Services Center and the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force.

Osborn will be the addressing the five college community about her new book Coming Home To America: A Roadmap to Gay and Lesbian Empowerment, as part of her three– month national book tour. The book serves as a motivational handbook, and includes the author's psychological and political perspectives on achieving personal empowerment in today's society.

Osborn expresses the idea that gay and lesbian Americans and their allies must take action to reveal the potential of the gay community regarding new public values and issues needed to rebuild America's hope.

Osborn has been a respected activist for 30 years, and brought great acclaim to the prominent gay and lesbian organizations she has led.

The National Task Force is alone noted for education and advocacy regarding issues such as domestic partnership, gays in the military and anti–violence issues. The Task Force was also a large part of the passing of the hate crimes bill.

She is also known for brokering the historic Oval Office meeting of gay leaders with President Clinton, and established herself as a national figure at the 1993 March on Washington for gay and lesbian rights.

Osborn received her Bachelors of Art degree from Middlebury College and M.B.A from UCLA, and is a former columnist for The Advocate. Osborn currently lives in Washington D.C. and works as a writer, lecturer and non– profit–organization management consultant.Torie Osborn will be speaking at the Five College Women's Research Center at Mt. Holyoke College at 4 p.m. tomorrow afternoon. The event is free.

Chabad House offers Sukkah to UM

By Beth McCarthy
Collegian Staff

The Chabad House will be offering temporary Sukkahs on campus next to the Campus Center Building this week to accommodate any University of Massachusetts student who would like to observe the Jewish holiday of Sukkot.

Sukkot, which marks the beginning of the "Season of our Rejoicing," began at sundown last Friday and ends at Sundown this Friday.

During this time, it is customary for Jews to take their meals in a Sukkah house, or temporary booth dwelling.

Some may even be required to sleep in one, according to Yonah Blum, director of programming at the Chabad House.

The Chabad House is a Jewish outreach organization on campus.

The holiday serves to remember the 40 years that Jews spent "wandering" in the "wilderness," leaving Egypt on their way to Israel.

During those years the Jews were protected by "clouds of glory," as told in the Book of Exodus.

Dan Wolfe, who is visiting the UMass campus for the holiday, said that because the Jews had to live in these temporary shelters when they fled Egypt, the tradition continues to be carried out.

A second reason to celebrate the holiday, said Wolfe, was to "stress unity."

According to Wolfe, farmers also made these temporary shelters their homes when it was time to harvest, which is also this time of year.

Gathering was done, and this act symbolized the idea of unity in the spiritual sense. It was a coming together of people, he said.

"This is a harvest holiday," Blum said. "It's gathering everyone together in unity."

This is the first year that UMass students will find the temporary Sukkahs. This is an addition to the mobile Sukkah that was available last year, which will be making its rounds through the Five Colleges this year as well.

The shaking of the "four kinds," which occurs after a blessing is given, will also be a part of the Sukkot experience.

This "four kinds" is the combination of four different tree branches intertwined together. This, again, strongly emphasizes the sense of unity among the Jewish community, said Blum.

"We will be here all week inviting people to have cake and receive blessings," said Blum, whose invitation extends to all students, even if they are not Jewish.

"People who aren't Jewish are very interested in Jewish multi–culturalism," said Wolfe. A number of students have stopped to ask questions and find out what this unfamiliar sight is about.

"I wondered what that was for," said Trisha Tillman, a interdisciplinary studies major, who noticed the booth from a distance. "I think it's a good idea. It gives them a way to practice their religion."

The structure of the Sukkah has changed since its beginning. The advancement of building technology has allowed for the changes in the Sukkah's structure, but the roof has remained the same.

"The roofing is the most important part of the Sukkah," Blum said. "It has to be made from cut plants. This defines the Sukkah."

The Chabad House's first priority is to make the Sukkah available to any Jew who would like to observe this holiday. Blum would also like to attract students of other religions, who may want to learn more about the Sukkot holiday and educate themselves about Jewish culture.

The mobile Sukkah will be visiting the Five Colleges, as well as stopping by any large groups of people in the surrounding towns, in case there is an interest.

Future plans for the Chabad House include setting up a bigger Sukkah next to the Kosher Dining Commons within the Hampden Dinning Commons.

The Sukkah will include chairs and tables, and be able to accommodate more than the two people who can squeeze into the current Sukkah.

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN
Yonah Blum and Dan Wolfe stand with a student near Chabad's House Sukkah yesterday.

Troop moves upset GOP

By Slobodan Lekic
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Angry at not having been consulted about Pentagon plans to send 5,000 additional troops to Bosnia, Republican legislators lashed out at the Clinton administration yesterday and said Congress should have a say in such a move.

"I've never seen anything like it before: a press report that we're going to keep 5,000 men and women overseas without any consultation with Congress," said Sen. John McCain (R-Ariz.).

A Pentagon spokesman said yesterday that the new U.S. Army contingent will soon leave Germany for a six-month deployment to Bosnia, where the troops will protect other troops slated to leave the country later this year.

The covering force is needed because the troops in Bosnia at present may be "completely consumed" with tearing down camps, loading up equipment and making sure no harmful wastes are left behind, said Navy Cmdr. Bob Anderson, spokesman for the U.S. European Command in Stuttgart.

Abrams tanks, Bradley fighting vehicles and artillery pieces will accompany the protective force as additional deterrents to anyone who might want to harm the withdrawing main force.

About 15,000 U.S. troops are currently serving in the 52,000-strong NATO-led force that has enforced the Bosnian peace agreement since last December.

In the past, administration officials repeatedly have stressed that U.S. troops would be out within 12 months, and that no extended deployment was planned.

But America's NATO allies have been pushing for a smaller force to remain on the ground beyond 1996, arguing the peace process could unravel without an international military presence.

At a hearing of the Senate Armed Services Committee yesterday, the former NATO commander in Bosnia said his force had "created an environment in which peace can take hold.

"But incompatible political aims and lingering hate and suspicion among the people, do not give me confidence that without some military presence in Bosnia beyond Dec. 20, a continuation of the current absence of war can be maintained," Adm. Leighton Smith said.

"Thus I favor a continuation of the military presence in Bosnia beyond Dec. 20, to protect the investment that we have already made in that country," he said.

Smith refused to be drawn into the controversy over whether the administration should have sought congressional approval for the additional deployment.

For Your Information

PYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Thursday, Oct. 3

GLBT — Deborah Elliston, graduate student and adjunct professor of Anthropology at NYU, will speak on "Representing Lesbianism: Gender and Sexuality in Polynesia," at 12:30 p.m. in Campus Center room 803. The event is free and wheelchair accessible. For more information, call The UMass Stonewall Center at 545-4824.

Meeting — Commuter Area Government Governing Board meeting will be held in room 430 of the Student Union. Any commuter is invited to discuss tenancy issues and more. Any questions, contact David at the CAG office at 545-2145.

Folk Dancing — All are welcome at Hillel House, 388 N. Pleasant St., to have fun and learn. Teaching sessions will be held from 7:30-8:30 p.m. and a review and request session will follow from 8:30-9:15 p.m. No experience is necessary.

Fund Raiser — Alpha Phi Omega, a national co-ed service fraternity, is sponsoring the 3rd annual Blue Bowl, a football game between the UMass and Amherst police. The game, held at Amherst Regional High School, will start at 7:30 p.m. Tickets, including a raffle for a stereo, will be available at the game for $5 each. Proceeds go to benefit the North Valley Special Olympics. For more information, call 584- 9377.

Meeting — The Distinguished Visitor's Program (DVP) will be having an informational meeting at 7 p.m. in Campus Center room 811. Anyone interested in bringing a speaker to campus is invited to attend. Help us prepare for our upcoming speaker, Nadine Strossen. For more information, call 545–0046.

Meeting — The Student Health Advisory Board (SHAB) will meet at University Health Services (UHS) in room 304 from 5:30–6:30 p.m. All are welcome to attend. For more information, contact the Health Education office at UHS at 577–5181.

Meeting — There will be an informational meeting for those interested in studying abroad in Spain or Latin America in the 3rd floor lounge of Herter Hall at 4 p.m. A short film will be shown, followed by a discussion with former participants in the program. If you cannot attend, please stop by the International Programs Office, 4th Floor, Hills South, or call Bad for more information at 545–2710.

Workshop — The Learning Resources Center is sponsoring a note taking workshop from 3:30–5 p.m. on the 10th floor of the W.E.B. Du Bois Library. Call 545–5334 to register.

Friday, Oct. 4

Community — Fourgone Conclusions Contradance at the Greenfield Star Grange. The evening starts with Scandinavian couples dances followed.

Lecture/Discussion — Mt. Holyoke College presents Torie Osborn, activist and author of Coming Home to America: A Roadmap to Gay and Lesbian Empowerment, at 4 p.m. at the Five College Women's Research Center in the Dickinson Living Room at Mt. Holyoke College.

Music — Spectral Voices will perform harmonic singing at the Montague Bookmill. Come hear their celestial harmonies and unique vocal styles, that draw from roots in Tibetan Buddhist chants. Admission, $7/door. For more information, call Jim at (860) 633–5057.

Religious — There will be a NFTY–Style creative service with guitar at 6 p.m. in the rec room of Hillel. Dinner will be served at 7 p.m. For more information, call 549–1710.

Religious — Hoshanah Rabbah morning service, 7 a.m. at Chabad House at 30 N. Hadley Rd., Amherst. Free and open to the public. For more information, call 549–4094.

Religious — Shemini Atzeret and holiday evening service, with a free holiday meal to follow, at 7 p.m. at Chabad House, 30 N. Hadley Rd., Amherst. Free and open to the public.

Religious — Two Shabbat Services — Regular and NFTY Reunion. 6 p.m. at Hillel House, 388 N. Pleasant St., Amherst.

Saturday, Oct. 5

Clean–up — MASSPIRG, together with Smith College, is sponsoring a clean–up of Oxbow Marina from 10 a.m.–1 p.m. Everyone is invited to attend. Meet at the MASSPIRG office, room 423A in the Student Union at 9:45 a.m. rides will be provided.

Religious — Big Five College Simchat Torah celebration and party, 7 p.m., Hillel House, 388 N. Pleasant St., Amherst.

Sunday, Oct. 6*MASSPIRG* — MASSPIRG Hunger & Homelessness Group is going to a local soup kitchen, Not Bread Alone, from 10:30 a.m.–2 p.m. If you are interested, please contact Amanprit or Frank at 545–0199 or come by the MASSPIRG office in 423A S.U.

Notices

Education — The HCAH HEAD START program has immediate openings for its free pre–school classroom and Home Base option. The two Amherst classrooms are open Mon–Fri from 8:30 a.m.–12:30 p.m. Breakfast, lunch, and transportation are provided. To obtain a pre–registration form or for additional information, call the Head Start main office at 582–4206 or the Amherst center at 549–3993.

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley offers rides to students to attend the 10 a.m. service in Amherst. Drivers arrive at the Knowlton and Prince bus stops at 9:45. Please call Mark to confirm, or for other stops, at 253–0361.

Everywoman's Center — Acculturation Group for Latina Women, facilitated by Mari Vicente, Thurs. from 4–6 p.m. Child Sexual Abuse Survivors Support Groups: Group I facilitated by Sara Elinoff, Mondays from 7–9 p.m. Group 2 facilitator, day, and time TBA. Coming Out Group For Lesbians, facilitated by Lynne Schachne, Mondays 4–5:30 p.m. Lifting Your Spirits, facilitated by Carla Brennan and Diana Dalendina, Weds. 4–5:30 p.m. Eco–Psychology for Women, facilitated by Carla Brennan, Fridays 10–11:30 a.m. Post Abortion Support Group, facilitated by Peggy Warwick, Wednesdays 5:30–6:30 p.m. Self–Esteem & Assertiveness for Women, facilitated by Carla Brennan, Wednesdays 6:30–8 p.m. Single Mothers Support Group, facilitated by Amy Rosebury, Tuesdays 1–2:30 p.m. Women & Divorce, facilitated by Ali Thompson, Tuesdays 6:30–8 p.m. All groups offered by the Everywoman's Center begin in October, and offer a safe and confidential space. For other groups, call 545–0883.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition meetings are every Tuesday at 7 p.m. in room 306 of the Student Union. For more information, call the ARC office at 5–1925.

Five College–REFLECT, the Five College Bereavement Support Program is a student organization devoted to helping those coping with grief. REFLECT is offering two free 8 week grief support groups this semester. Groups are forming now. Please call 577–5316 for more information.

Staff Needed — The UMass Index yearbook needs staff in all departments. Editorial positions are available in Photo, Layout, Copy, and Marketing departments. An assistant copy editor and assistant sports editor are also needed. Meetings are held on Wednesdays at 7 p.m., 304 Student Union, or call 545–0848 if interested.

Religious — The Muslim Student Association at the University of Massachusetts invites all Muslims in the Amherst area to weekly Friday prayer from 1 to 2 p.m. in the Campus Center. The room number will be posted on the Notice Board. For more information, call Utama at 256–8482 or Laili at 253–0874.

Amherst police receive grant; money goes towards more cops

By Beth McCarthy
Collegian Staff

A $375,000 grant from the United States Department of Justice will allow the Amherst police department to put five additional police officers on the street, according to Captain David Jankowski.

This grant, which is to go towards the Community Oriented Policing Services (COPS) program, was unexpected and surprised Barry Del Castilho, town manager, who had "applied for six officers more than a year ago, but got one."

"This is undoubtedly the largest we will receive," said Del Castilho.

The COPS program is a grant program, funded through the 1994 Crime Bill passed by the 103rd Congress and signed by President Bill Clinton.

According to Jankowski, additional grants have been offered, totalling $450,000 worth. The $375,000 is the most significant, he said, because it will go directly towards more police officers.

"This money makes a difference to our towns and cities, and I know that it will be put to immediate use to combat crime and violence in our communities," said U.S. Congressman John Olver (D–Amherst), who worked with the Justice Department in securing the grant.

"Community policing is one of the most effective tools we have to combat crime in our neighborhoods," added Olver. "I am pleased that I helped secure nearly $3.9 million for the First District in this latest round of COPS grants."

Although the five additional police officers will not be recruited until this summer, Jankowski believes that they will greatly benefit the force.

"We're seeing a difference already," said Jankowski. "As of two years ago we didn't have a mounted patrol, we didn't have bikes, or police walking the streets."

Jankowski believes that the visibility and accessibility of police officers can only benefit the community. Together, the citizens of Amherst and its law enforcement will be able to create a "more effective crime fighting system," Jankowski said.

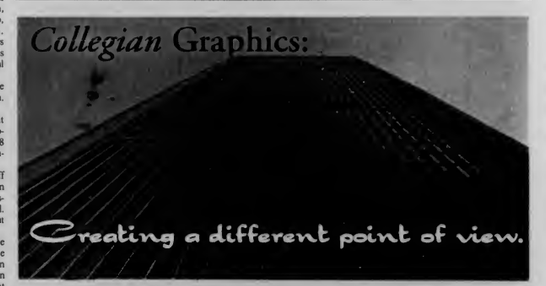
Debra Drake, legislative assistant to Olver, said the congressman is a strong supporter of the COPS program and is pleased with the amount given to the town of Amherst.

Drake highlighted an aspect of the program which she believed made is very effective; that being its focus on police departments in medium and smaller size towns.

The smaller towns, she said, can qualify for funding to not only hire more police officers, but also to compensate for expenses such as overtime pay and more sophisticated computers systems.

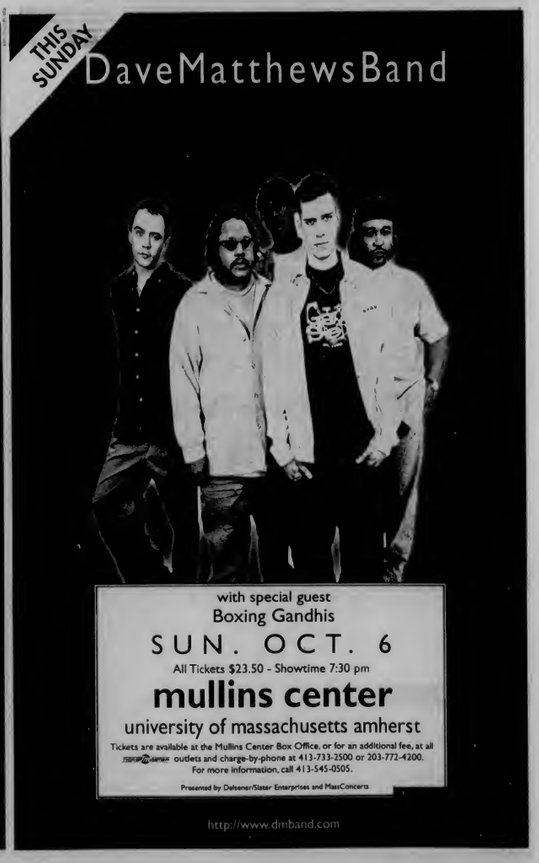
The grant does come with a string attached. The town will have to match 25 percent of the $375,000, which means that the town will have to come up with approximately $93,750.

Del Castilho, said that the source of match funds has not yet been determined, but there are proposals in the works.



"A good amount of the match will come from budgeted salaries of positions that have become vacant," said Del Castilho.

By this he means that if a town worker leaves their position while still under contract, the amount that was to be distributed as salary will then be put into the COPS matching fund.



" As to how this will effect the University of Massachusetts, Jankowski replied, "There is no fence around UMass.

"A good deal of our activity is generated by the two universities in town," said Jankowski. "Whether it be traffic offenses or what."

Collegian Graphics:

Weld, Kerry squabble over statements

By Martin Finucane
Associated Press

BOSTON — Gov. William F. Weld accused Sen. John Kerry yesterday of a "falsehood" for overstating the progress of a Kerry proposal in Congress to provide health care for children. In both speeches since June and television ads for the two men's U.S. Senate race, Kerry has touted a health care plan he said he "introduced" in the Senate in June. In truth, though, Kerry filed the bill only Tuesday — after an inquiry from a newspaper reporter. Weld said he was "flabbergasted" and "surprised" by Kerry's statements.

"I think it raises a question of credibility and the senator owes the public an explanation," said Weld, who also issued a written statement that called Kerry's statement a "falsehood." Kerry shot back that Weld was trying to divert attention from his own health care record, which includes a veto earlier this year of state legislation that would have extended health coverage to 160,000 uninsured children.

"He vetoed health care and I've been fighting to provide health care for children," Kerry said.

The senator said he had "misspoken" when he said in June that he had introduced the bill in the Senate. At the time, he acknowledged, he had only held a news conference to announce the idea for the bill.

"This is a tempest in a teapot," Kerry said.

On June 20 in Washington, Kerry, flanked by other Democrats, including Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.) and Senate Minority Leader Thomas Daschle (D-S.D.) unveiled the proposal to provide health coverage for uninsured children.

The next day Kerry said at a news conference in Boston's Dorchester section: "Our kids deserve health care. That's why I introduced yesterday in the United States Senate a bill to give 10 million kids in the United States of America health care with a voluntary subsidy program."

Yesterday Kerry said, "I misspoke and said 'bill' instead of 'proposal.' It's a technical word. But I have continued to work to put this together. And there's no gap. I have put it together." Weld, he said, was "trying to make an issue out of something that is mere technicality of language and not an issue. This is not an issue."

Kerry's campaign also has made a number of mentions of Kerry's "introducing" the plan. But Kerry drew a distinction between introducing the proposal and filing a bill.

"Did we introduce it? Yeah, we introduced it. Was it filed with the clerk? No, because we had to work on the legislative language," he said.

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

Quiet study...
Jeff Fitts, a junior communications major, found a quiet place to study near the campus pond yesterday.

Differences remain after summit

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Marathon negotiations between Israeli and Palestinian leaders failed to resolve bitter differences that exploded in Mideast violence and jeopardized the fragile peace process. But the two sides agreed to press ahead with nonstop talks beginning Sunday.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said the summit that ended yesterday "cemented the principle that the path to peace is through negotiations and not through violence." He added, "The children of Israel are safer tonight."

At the close of the White House-sponsored negotiations, President Clinton said, "We have not made as much progress as I wish we had." He said he was not certain the Mideast crisis was over but expressed confidence that violence would subside. "Please, please give us a chance to make this thing work in the days ahead," Clinton implored Palestinians and Israelis. He said he was sending Dentis Ross, the senior U.S. mediator, to Sunday's peace negotiations at Erez, a border crossing between Israel and Gaza.

The top priority will be Hebron, the West Bank town where Israel has refused to fulfill a promise to move its troops from Arab neighborhoods into Jewish settlements by March.

Netanyahu, talking to reporters at his hotel, said that if lower-level negotiators don't resolve the Hebron dispute, "[Palestinian leader Yasser] Arafat and I will sit down until we solve it. We agreed to do that." Netanyahu and Arafat sat stone-faced, side by side in the East Room with Jordan's King Hussein at the wrapup of the talks. By prearrangement, they declined an opportunity to talk there.

Leaving the White House, Netanyahu vigorously shook Arafat's hand, clasping it with both hands for several seconds. Clinton beamed. Arafat saluted Clinton before stepping into his car. The president returned the gesture.

Later, Nabil Shaath, a top aide to Arafat, said the summit's failure was Israel's fault. "There is no agreement about anything. President Clinton did his best to put the peace process back on track, but the Israelis wouldn't let him," Shaath said.

Five weeks before U.S. elections, the inconclusive summit brought Republican charges that Clinton had risked the prestige of his office and came up empty-handed.

Netanyahu, at a news conference, staunchly defended the president. "What did you want him to do? Did you want him to do nothing?"

Another sensitive issue left unresolved were Palestinian demands that Netanyahu close an ancient tunnel near Muslim and Jewish holy sites in East Jerusalem. The opening of the tunnel sparked last week's violence that left 76 dead.

"There are very tough problems ahead," Secretary of State Warren Christopher said.

Clinton said the meetings improved the understanding and trust between Netanyahu and Arafat. But he made no attempt to disguise the lingering deadlock despite all-night talks.

"I would say that the problems that exploded last week in violence, that the problems are still there," the president said.

"Let's not overreact," Clinton said. "We are in better shape than we were two days ago." If bloodshed had persisted in the West Bank and Jerusalem, he said, "imagine where we would be now."

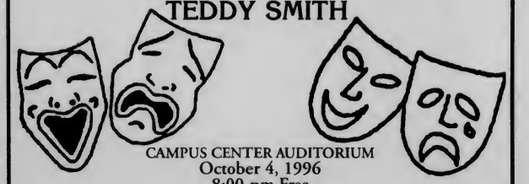
Netanyahu said, "There is a greater degree of mutual understanding than there was two days ago. I suppose over time this will increase. This is my hope."

In their private talks, Netanyahu referred to Arafat as "my partner and my friend," an administration official said.

Christopher said Sunday's negotiations would be conducted by Dore Gold on the Israeli side and Abu Mazem for the Palestinians. Both are senior advisers to their leaders.

Asked if the negotiations would take weeks or months, Christopher said, "I think we're talking weeks." Clinton said that no specific date was set for completing the talks. But he said they agreed "to start immediately on a full-time basis, with a priority on speed and a priority on Hebron."

An administration official close to the negotiations said it was up to Netanyahu to establish the same sort of trusting relationship with the Palestinians that was cultivated by his predecessors, Yitzhak Rabin and Shimon Peres.



UMASS ATHLETIC TICKET OFFICE
NOTICE:
NATIONAL ANTHEM AUDITION

There will be an audition for anyone interested in performing the National Anthem at UMASS athletic events.

The audition will take place on October 7, 1996 at the Curry Hicks Cage, 102 Hicks Way at 7:00PM.

Please direct all questions to 545-6060

CAMPUS ACTIVITIES AT THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PRESENTS
THE RETURN OF
A WEEKLY PROGRAM SERIES: SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY
featuring
Stand-up Comedian
TEDDY SMITH

CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM
October 4, 1996
8:00 pm Free
"DRAGONHEART"
Immediately Following
This series is made possible by a grant from Auxiliary Services and the Vice Cancellor for Student Affairs.
For more information, check our website:
http://www-unix.oit.umass.edu/~jtolson/calender.html

DON'T "FALL" FOR THE REST ... OUR PRICES ARE THE BEST
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive

Miller High Life 30-12 OZ. CANS 10 PACK $11.79 + DEP.
BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BAR BOTTLES $9.49 + DEP.
SAM ADAMS ALL FLAVORS 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.99 + DEP.
CATAMOUNT PALE ALE & AMBER 12 PK. BOTTLES $8.99 + DEP.
MICHELOB REGULAR & LIGHT 18-12 OZ. CANS 18 PACK $9.49 + DEP.
HORNSBY'S CIDER 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.99
EVERYDAY LOW PRICE
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LIGHT, BUD ICE, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LT, LITE, LITE ICE, RED DOG, ICEHOUSE, MICHELOB BOCK $39.99 + DEP.

WINE OF THE MONTH
NAPA RIDGE WINERY CHARDONNAY, ZINFANDEL, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML $5.99
5 LITER FRANZIA WHITE ZINFANDEL $12.99 5 LT. BAG-IN-A-BOX
LINDEMAN'S BIN 65 CHARDONNAY 750 ML $5.99
MELINI ORVIETO CLASSICO & BORGHI CHIANTI 750 ML $5.49
JOLIESSE CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML $4.99

IMPORTED CANADIAN MIST 1.75L SALE 10.99 MAIL-IN REBATE -4.00 FINAL COST $6.99
POPOV VODKA 1.75L $9.99
SEAGRAM'S GIN 1.75L $11.49
Captain Morgan SPICED RUM 750 ML $8.99
T.G.I. FRIDAY'S ALL FLAVORS 1.75 L $10.99
CLUNY SCOTCH 1.75L $12.99

We Accept Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 10/3/96 THRU WEDS. 10/9/96
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Applebee's
GRAND OPENING
America's Hottest Restaurant is coming to Hadley!
We are looking for:
- Food Servers
- Bartenders
- Host/Hostess
- Line Cooks
- Prep Cooks

Applebee's Neighborhood Grill & Bar is the most exciting and busiest restaurant in the country, and we can't wait to meet our new friends in Hadley.
If you are an outgoing, team player who likes to have fun while you work, then your great attitude and desire to work hard will be rewarded.
We offer great wages and excellent benefits including medical, meal discount, and promotion from within to management.
Stop by Monday-Friday 10-6 & Saturday 9-2 to:
100 Westgate Center Drive, Route 9, Hadley
Equal Opportunity Employer
Applebee's

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Morse Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor Josh Sylvester Editorial Production Manager
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor Sean Horgan Systems Manager
Mark McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Michael Elliott News Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

The other party

Dan Bodah

You may have heard of the Libertarian Party during the propaganda barrage released by the media in the wake of the Oklahoma bombing. They have received mention in the media primarily in association with the militia movement, or occasionally with the laissez–faire capitalists who enjoyed such glamour during the Reagan Administration's "party for the rich."

Those who've consumed more obscure information may know them as a sort of institutionalized anarchist organization. Looking at their platform (www.lp.org) it quickly becomes apparent that they manage to wriggle outside of simple left–wing/right–wing pigeonholes.

The guiding principle of Libertarian positions is the defense of our right to "self–ownership." As the party sees it, government has no role except to defend individuals against "fraud and force." This hearkens to the spirit of freedom and autonomy that birthed the U.S. and many famous political documents such as the Declaration of Independence, Mary Wollstoncraft's Rights of Woman, and Thomas Paine's Common Sense. The Libertarians are not shy about taking the idea of individual autonomy to some very logical conclusions. You might be able to sum up the Libertarian legal stance as "If you harm none, do what you want." It's only when harm occurs that government has a role.

Let's look at how this works out on specific issues. On the subject of crime the Libertarian platform focuses primarily on the elimination of all victimless crimes, such as drug use, consensual sex, speed limits, etc. Although they don't say so, I imagine most laws — such as those against theft, murder, assault, rape, etc. — would remain intact, with government responsible for their enforcement. This is consistent with their philosophy.

On the issue of free speech and expression, the Libertarians call for a complete repeal of all obscenity laws, federal regulation of television and radio signals, and federal attempts to regulate electronic communications networks such as the internet, cable, and telephone networks. This position is reasonable: these are all types of speech, fully protected not only by the Constitution, but also essential to the freedom of individuals. U.S. government regulation of communications media has never been any more consistent with freedom of speech principles than it would be if the government used eminent domain to seize ownership of all printing paper in the country, allowing freedom of the press only to the highest bidder.

On the issue of Native American nations, the Libertarians call for the abolition of the Bureau of Indian Affairs. They would also work to settle any treaties which provide perpetual welfare rights or other ongoing U.S. obligations to Native American nations by giving the nations uninhabited and unused U.S. lands. Also on the agenda would be the immediate cessation of all mining or other operations on reservation territory. The question of Native sovereignty would be dependent on the desires of Native populations.

Libertarian principles are best developed and also most contentious when it comes to economics. The policies they propose are firmly rooted in laissez–faire (hands–off) capitalism. So they would repeal all advertising restrictions, all restrictions on the chemical or other content of food and other products, abolish the FDA, and repeal labor legislation. Neither corporations nor citizens would receive financial assistance from the government any longer. The idea behind these policies is that the only economic system consistent with principles of individual freedom is the free market system. All economic regulations by the government are seen as intrusions on the individual sovereignty of human beings. Thus the government would no longer restrict the ability of U.S. companies to hire non–citizen workers.

For me, the main problem is with Libertarian economic policy. It does not come from the perspective of workers, but rather from the view of owners. What isn't questioned is the "theft" inherent in corporate ownership. Think about it this way: most, if not all, of you reading this column work now or will have to work immediately following graduation in order to get housing, food, and other necessities. When you work, you are generating income for your employer, of which they give you a small portion back.

Take the case of a friend who was a baker. He worked long hours beginning at 5 a.m. every day, producing muffins, and bread for a cafe. He was paid a measly $5 per hour for his labor, while the cafe earned on average $25 for selling what he made in one hour. Isn't that a form of theft?

While I sympathize with the Libertarian position on minimal government involvement in daily life, it's necessary that concurrent with government getting its hands off of us, we pry the choking grip of private property and economic exploitation off our own throats. I won't be voting for Libertarian presidential candidate Harry Browne or his running mate Jo Jorgensen this fall. Instead I'll write in my vote of no confidence.

Until we all begin freeing our minds and bodies from the control and ownership of others, we will never be free. We can start by throwing away or defacing all the pieces of clothing we have that are free advertisements for companies, boycotting non–local businesses, and supporting cooperation among producers and consumers. When we take control of the power that we already have, instead of giving it all to vampiric profit–mongers, we take the first step to a society based on mutual aid and individual freedom.

Dan Bodah is a Collegian staff member.

I admit it...

Bob Dunn

I'm going to do it, finally stop pretending and come to terms with who I am. I'm going to get up, stand in front of the mirror, take a deep breath and finally come to grips with it. Just to make sure, I'll even say it out loud to myself very, very slowly.

I... am... a... liberal.

Whoo! That's a load off my chest.

You may think it's no big deal admitting that. Hell, up until a few weeks ago, neither did I. But lately the term "liberal" has been given such negative connotations during the campaign, that if you're going to call someone a liberal, you might as well accuse them of smoking crack that's been processed through the efforts of child labor or accuse them of watching anything on UPN.

It's been a campaign of competing labels so far: Out of touch old man/draft dodger, out of touch old man/soft on drugs, out of touch old man/Whitewater crook. This "liberal" tag, though has been a hard one to shake for the Clinton boy. He's even resorted to running from it. "I don't think that makes me a closet liberal," he's been quoted as saying in a recent Dole attack ad, oops I mean campaign ad.

A "closet" liberal. Like it's something to be ashamed of. Maybe it is... let's look it up.

Liberal 2: Generous, Bountiful

–The Merriam Webster Dictionary New Edition, 1994

Oooh! Scary, huh? Now who would ever want to be thought of as a generous person? Gives you shivers, doesn't it?

Everyone runs from it, though. It smacks of the anti–communist hysteria during the McCarthy reign (Are you now or have you ever been in favor of socialized medicine?).

Well, Clinton can run from the label if he wants to, but not me, buddy. No way. I think it's time that all of us "closet" liberals not just come, but leap, out of the said storage space and come out raising our left wing proudly in the air and finally come forward. Let's shed that bell– bottom–wearing, hacky–sack–playing, tie–die–sporting image and let them know what we're really about!

I'll start. Feel free to disagree with me at any point (that's what us liberals do!). I think that church and state need to be separated from each other as far as possible, including keeping church leaders out of voting positions on school boards. I don't think there's anything wrong with producing industrial hemp as a cash crop. I think flag burning is a non– issue. I think a woman should be able to have the right to a legal and safe abortion if she deems it necessary. I think civil disobedience is a perfectly acceptable way to promote change. I think that we should have gone with "mind your own business" as the national motto. I hope that the newly formed ethics committee hangs Newt Gingrich up to dry. I think Clinton's anti–terrorism policy was reactionary at best, bordering on racist. I think that homosexuals should have open and free access to the military, no questions asked. I think one of the roles of the government is to help the disadvantaged until they can get by on their own.

It's a partial list, and (possibly) an unpopular one at that. But it brings up an interesting point. Our current president would probably never come out in favor of most of the above policies, and yet he's branded as a "closet liberal," when in reality on his best day he's a moderate, (whatever that means) making Dole's accusations not just misguided, but almost completely inaccurate.

But maybe Dole's policies and ideals are so far right, that Clinton policies like providing education benefits and eliminating certain types of assault weapons do seem ultra– radical.

You can run from the liberal label if you want to. You can hide behind the moderate tag, if you like. But remember this country was founded on radical ideas and change. You can line up behind conservatives if you wish, but the same dictionary quoted above defines "conservative" as: "disposed to maintaining existing views." Stagnation by any other name my friends...

Bob Dunn is a Collegian columnist.

Editorial/Opinion Policy

The Editorial/Opinion page welcomes letters from UMass and the rest of the Pioneer Valley Area.

Letters must be typed and double spaced, with the writer's name, local address and phone number attached. This information is subject to verification prior to publication. Letters should be no longer than 450 words.

The editorial staff reserves the right to edit letters and columns for grammar and length.

Any submission that is requested to be left unedited will not be considered for publication.

Anonymous submissions will not be printed.

The Editorial staff is not required to run all submitted material, especially letters that do not fulfill above requirements.

Submissions should be sent to the Editorial Desk, c/o Mark McGrath, 113 Campus Center, UMass Amherst MA, 01003.

Behind the interview lies

C. Taylor Conner

Sweating over resumes? Flipping out over interviews? If you stress out over that dreaded five stage interview process, that's probably because you prepare yourself to tell lies and exaggerations. I've been wondering what I'd say if I was able to tell the straight raw truth at interviews. This is what I came up with: the truth and lies of interviews...

Ms. Happy Recruiter: How are you today Mr. Chan? How about we begin our interview with you just briefly telling me about yourself?

The Lie: Well Ms. Recruiter, I consider myself to be a dedicated student with many aspirations. I am an individual who can combine self–motivation along with the ability to work effectively in team environments.

The Truth: I am the king of procrastination. I don't know how I've made it through three years of college. With lots of coffee I guess. I like to watch TV, surf the 'net, bar hop in Boston, and sleep. My eighth grade Biology teacher described me as a natural sleeper.

Ms. H. R.: Why did you choose to attend UMass?

The Lie: I chose UMass because of the numerous opportunities it had to offer. I was not certain as to what field of study I'd be interested in and I knew that UMass had the ability to accommodate me once I knew what I wanted to do. Also, I was attracted to the diverse student body and the affordability.

The Truth: I desperately wanted to get away from home. I also did not want to be too far away. Attending a school with a nationally ranked basketball team was also crucial to me. I applied to all large universities because all I cared about was the social atmosphere. I also figured that Amherst was the town to be in since it's near two all–female schools.

Ms. H. R.: What have been your most significant achievements?

The Lie: I'm very proud of my involvement in my school. I feel that I have established a healthy balance of school work and activities. Along the way, I have been able to help many of my peers. Helping people is always a cornerstone of personal achievement. In addition, I am also happy with the work experience I have accumulated.

The Truth: There have been times in which I've pulled off some amazing exam scores without studying or going to class. I think I can carry this great habit into the real world. I'm also proud of the fact that I've lived in five different dorms. Also, my body has endured dining commons food for three years without requiring any hospital visits. But my most significant achievements have been the weekends in which I wake up at three in the afternoon and lounge all day watching football.

Ms. H. R.: What are your strengths and weaknesses?

The Lie: I believe the strengths that I can offer you are experience, leadership abilities, and strong communication skills. In my past jobs, I have demonstrated myself as a hard worker and fast learner. As far as weaknesses are concerned, I guess I will consider my tendencies to over–work myself as a weakness. My worst critic is myself. I never allow myself a break.

The Truth: One of the things I do best is hit my snooze button. There was a morning when I hit it over 20 times. I'm so good at hitting my snooze button that I don't even have to look for it. I just instinctively know where it is. I'm also really good at relaxing and eating all day. I don't think anyone can beat me at that. Through my many experiences of driving down the Massachusetts Turnpike, I've also gotten pretty good at speeding without getting caught by the cops. As for weaknesses, I'm really bad at ironing clothes. I can't sew on a button either.

Ms. H. R.: Can you list some of your relevant skills?

The Lie: I have a strong background in computers. Some of the applications that I am competent in are spreadsheets, power point, and word processing. I've also figured out how to read Fortran through my past use of Pascal. I can also speak more than one language.

The Truth: I know how to swear in five different languages. I can drive while eating a Big Mac and drinking a milkshake.

Ms. H. R.: Why are you applying for this position with our company?

The Lie: Your company offers excellent opportunities for students in my major. You have a very reputable training program and I feel that your company is an opportune place to start and develop my career. I can also make significant contributions to your company with my skills and past experience.

The Truth: Your pay is decent and I need a job.

David Chan is a Collegian columnist.

Lumping our way through life

C. Taylor Conner

The strength coach stood there, shaking his head in stern disapproval.

"Your body fat is i0.3 percent — pretty high for a sprinter," he said.

But, hey, I thought to myself, It's pretty good for an offensive lineman. Even better for a baseball player.

Unfortunately, I am indeed a sprinter.

As my fellow short–distance runners revelled in their "4.8s," "5.5s" and (God forbid) "6.1s," I moped my way out the door to run some hills.

Later that night, I lay in bed thinking about the whole incident. My body was in good shape on the whole, when you consider the average male carries 15 percent or more of blobbiness. If I were a female, I'd probably be mistaken for a subject of some eating disorder TV "Movie of the Week" — so, why was I worried?

The reason: I'm just as obsessed as most of us are with maintaining the ideal physique. However, that same fateful night, I also realized the absolute lunacy of our general aesthetics for human perfection.

Think about muscles, breasts, butts, abs, etc. for a second. Proceed to — you can stop thinking now, perverts — proceed to think about lumps.

These can be lumps of any kind, from the sort likely to be found after leaving Cream of Wheat out for five minutes, to the types that develop in your thyroid gland and lungs from practicing on a track near the University sewage plant.

Any way you want to visualize them, lumps (hopefully) do not paint an attractive portrait in your mind. Even for the perverts still stuck a couple of lines up.

Now, for the piece de resistance, envision your interpretation of a lump underneath the muscles, breasts, butts, abs, etc of everyone you know, including yourself.

Try not to panic — I know it's a little scary, like that image in the seminal miniseries "V" when Marc Singer first ripped off the pseudo–humanoid alien leader's mask to reveal his true lizardian visage.

(I also know it's also a little scary that I just made a "V" reference, but bear with me.)

Consider the facts as viewed through "lump theory." We start out in life in one of three ways: very lumpy, moderately lumpy or lumpless. We get dissatisfied at some juncture with our God–given lumpiness, and soon we're going to the gym three, four, five times a week to reshape those lumps.

We suffer through endless sit–ups and crunches in the hopes of obtaining six symmetrical belly lumps. We bench and fly to create two big chest lumps. We curl and pull to make sure our arms have a multitude of uniquely shaped lumps.

When we're nicely lump–laden after weeks or months or years of toil, we then periodically stroll over to a mirror and say to ourselves (as translated into the Lumpian language), "Golly, I've sure got a lotta lumps, but this lump here and that lump there could still stand some extra lumping. Oh, well, back to the lump room."

If those of us (me included) who strive for excellence in lump–shifting were all to die tomorrow, we'd essentially be left with exactly what we detest in our oatmeal — a bunch of cold, hard lumps.

However, the worst offenders in the lump obsession are males, for one single reason: breasts. Look at the spellings of two slang term for the mammaries — bazooms and boobs — and it all comes into focus. Guys want two soft lumps (perfectly circular objects) sandwiched between a firm package (the surrounding consonants), thus placing the most unfair lump pressure on women.

Not only are women expected to keep the aforementioned lump parts conditioned, but they also must keep their chest lumps both appropriately lumpy and tight.

There is no lump justice.

However, despite the silly travails of those who meticulously mold their lumps, I would never condemn them. As an athlete, I need to hit the lump room and lift lump–shapers to reduce the risk of underdeveloped lump– related injuries. Other folks might just enjoy building lumps as a hobby, or need to see new lumps for enhancing self– esteem.

When you look at the big picture, as long as you're comfortable taking your lumps, ignore people who would lump you into a category.

(Sorry, readers — that was chintzy. But it was there.)

C. Taylor Conner is a Collegian columnist.

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ARTS & LIVING

Thursday , October 3, 1996

Weekend Edition • Volume CVI Issue 22

Ghandis get in ring with Dave Mathews

By Daniel E. Levenson
Collegian Staff

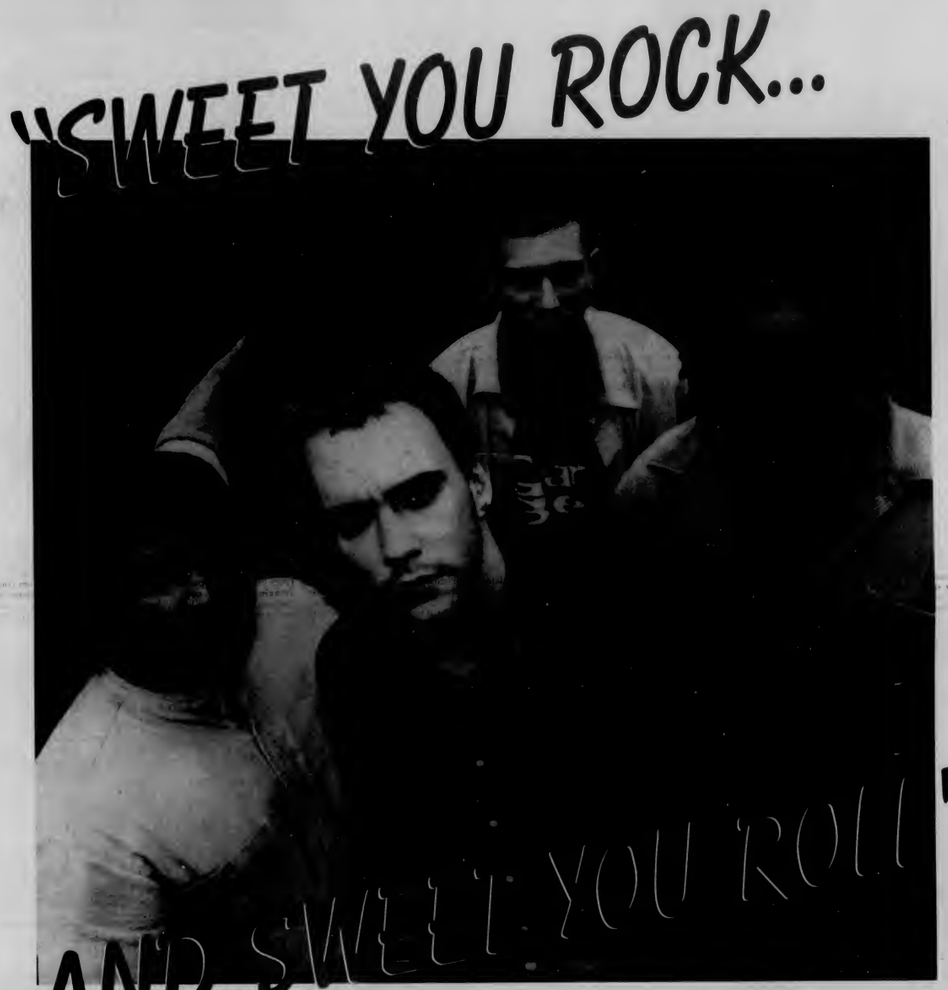
BOXING GHANDIS
Howard
Atlantic Records

Boxing Ghandis, a band with a smooth funky sound will be opening for Dave Matthews Band this Sunday at the Mullins Center.

David Darling, guitarist, main song writer and one of the vocalists, started the seven member band. Prior to their upcoming Howard on Atlantic Records, the band released a self–titled debut which sold fairly well displaying influences ranging from "Sly, Stevie Wonder, War, Tom Waits, Talking Heads."

The band has also been affected by such diverse musical styles as Motown, Miriachi, opera and jazz.

On Howard, which is slated for release in mid–October, the band offers listeners a creative musical mix ranging from easy–going and relaxing to foot–stomping fun.



In their song "Roll" the band produces a sweet, laid back tune that combines a nifty drum action with an unexpected harmonica rift at the end that does a good job of wrapping up the song.

"Piece in the Valley" is a slow, guitar–rich ballad about violence and youth. The backup singers bring the voice and guitar together to make for an excellent piece of music.

In "Promised Land" the band takes on a more rock 'n' roll sound with a beat that is reminiscent of country. There is also a strong blues influence apparent in this song.

On side two of Howard the Boxing Ghandis starts off

Turn to GHANDIS, page 10

DAVE MATTHEWS BAND TO CRASH MULLINS CENTER

Laura Stock

Before Sunday night's Dave Matthews Band show was announced, a friend of mine said, "I've been to Great Woods, I've been to Amherst College, I've been to the Meadows and I've been to the Fleet Center — it's about time for Dave to come to me."

Sure enough, Dave Matthews & Co. will bring their trademark funk–rock–jazz amalgamation to the Mullins Center Oct. 6 — part of a grueling tour that has travelled across the U.S. and Europe.

For a band that got its start playing bar gigs and college venues in Charlottesville, Va., it is refreshing to find that with all of their success, Dave Matthews Band have not neglected the young audiences that made their sound so popular.

Last spring, Matthews and frequent back–up guitarist Tim Reynolds tantalized audiences with an up–close–and–personal acoustic show at the Le Frak Gymnasium at Amherst College.

This weekend, his entire entourage will be in town — Cajun/Gypsy violinist Boyd Tinsley, R&B saxophonist Leroi Moore, jazz bassist Stefan Lessard and pop–percussionist Carter Beauford.

This unique musical blend, coupled with Matthews' sometimes serious, sometimes spirited lyrics, have skyrocketed the band to the top of the charts.

A spot on the 1994 H.O.R.D.E festival tour didn't hurt either, as this was the first major exposure Dave Matthews Band had to eager crowds.

A simultaneous release of the band's second album, Under the Table and Dreaming, which sold over 3 million copies, sealed the band's fate of becoming a big hit. Their first album, Remember Two Things, which has experienced a newfound popularity, only sold 350,000 at its introduction.

As per the protocol for becoming a "big hit," Matthews and his band have gradually had to perform in larger and larger venues. Thankfully, they have not abandoned their small club–sound; the only thing that has altered their style is the vastness of some of the arenas they have filled.

Matthews filled the Fleet Center in Boston Tuesday night, however, and managed to deliver their usual fare — Matthews' little jigs onstage, funked–up, syncopated versions of their popular songs and stellar instrumentals.

If Tuesday's show is any indication of what we should expect this Sunday, most of Matthews' set list will consist of tracks off their latest release, Crash. The radio–popular "Too Much" and "So Much to Say" are safe bets at any of their current shows.

Matthews often spices up the set with the sultry "#41" and "Say Goodbye" combo, and "Crash Into Me." a song about a young boy's lust.

Another stage favorite, "Tripping Billies," so named because the sound was described as hillbillies on acid, was re–vamped from DMB's first album to go on Crash.

While the band tends to shy away from performing "What Would You Say" without guest harmonica player John Popper, a few other singles from Under the Table are usually included in the mix. The feel–good, upbeat "Ants Marching" is a popular finale.

But the greatest thing about Dave Matthews Band is you never know what to expect. Whether it be what kind of new instrument they use, how many violin solos Tinsley belts out, or how many unexpected songs are performed, a crowd is rarely left disappointed.

Matthews' take on Jimi Hendrix's "All Along the Watchtower," which is featured on Remember Two Things, is often included in most of the band's performances.

With its obvious, but certainly not isolated, popularity among "Gen–X" listeners, the Dave Matthews Band is often credited with being in touch with young audiences.

For example, fans can go online and check out the band's World Wide Web page, or one of the various Internet newsgroups dedicated to the Dave Matthews Band. Matthews himself told the Philadelphia Inquirer that he loves the Internet, and is "honored that people talk about us there, because I think it's the last vestige of anarchy."

In a lukewarm review of Crash, Rolling Stone implied that the band was a Grateful Dead wannabe. With DMB's following growing exponentially, perhaps some similarities have risen. Matthews, however, does not purport to be a Jerry Garcia. With his clean–cut look and down–to–earth sound, the resemblance is pretty slim.

Matthews developed his ear for music through his

Turn to DAVE, page 10

Layout & Design by C. Tony Morse & Laura Stock • Photo Courtesy C. Taylor Conners

~ CALENDAR OF EVENTS ~

THURSDAY, OCT. 3

Amherst College — The German comedy film series continues with Baghdad Café. The film will be shown in the Campus Center Theater at 4 & 7:30 p.m. Free. Also, in the Campus Center Frontroom — Beyond Shadowside, a portrayal of love between author C.S. Lewis and poet Joy Davidman. This theater production is free and begins at 8 p.m.

Bay State Hotel, Northampton — Slumberland performs with Meristem. The show is 21+. Call 584-8513 for more info.

Hamden Commons — The documentary film, Home to Tibet, is being shown in the Southside room as part of the Festival of Tibet. Sponsored by Fine Arts Center Asian Dance, Music and Residential Arts. Tickets are $5 at the door. Call 545–1980 or 545–0680.

Iron Horse — El Vez, the Mexican Elvis, performs at 10 p.m. and tickets are $8. Call 584–0610 for more info.

COURTESY PAULA COUAT

Monologuist Spalding Gray will perform at the Academy of Music Tuesday evening.

COURTESY CAROL FRIEDMAN

Mose Allison

Pearl Street — H20 plays with Warzone, 10 yard fight, Follow Through and Dismay. The show begins at 7:30 p.m. and is all ages. Call Pearl Street at 584–7771 for more info.

Smith College — La Migracion will be performed by members of FOMMA (Fortalez de la mujer Maya, a women's educational and theater group from Mexico) in the Helen Hills Chapel at 8 p.m. Free.

FRIDAY, OCT. 4

Amherst College — South Indian Classical Music performs pieces featuring the flute, violin, mridangam and the ghatam. The concert begins at 7 p.m. in the Buckley Recital Hall. Free.

Hampden Commons — Arya Tara: A Three Day Empowerment Session, led by His Holiness Rizong Rinpoche will be held beginning at 7 p.m. Tickets are $25 at the door, and attendance is mandatory for all three days to receive the initiation. The event will take place in the Southside Room. Call 545–1980.

Iron Horse — Mose Allison, blues and jazz singer performs at 7 p.m. Tickets are $12.50.

Also, blues legend, Ronnie Earl takes the stage at 10 p.m. Tickets are $14.

Mount Holyoke College — Long time gay activist Tori Osborn will speak about her new book, Coming Home to America: A Roadmap to Gay and Lesbian Empowerment. It will be held in the Five College Women's Research Center at 4 p.m.

Pearl Street — Sebadoh with Steve Westfield and The Slow Band/Hospital will perform at 7 p.m. for an 18+ show. Tickets are $8 in advance/$10 at the door. Also, Scarce with Fuzzy and The Maggies will perform. The 18+ show begins at 9 p.m. and is free with a Sebadoh ticket.

SATURDAY, OCT. 5

Iron Horse — Folk singer Catie Curtis with Carrie Newcomer and Jennifer Kimball of the Story performs at 7 p.m. and tickets are $10. Also, at 10 p.m. Michael Ray and the Cosmic Krewe. Tickets are $10.

Pearl Street — Aquarium Rescue Unit and Gibdoll Band. The show is 18+.

Smith College — Sweet Honey in the Rock performs at John M. Greene Hall at 8 p.m. Tickets are $17.50–19.50 in advance. Call 586–8686 for more information.

Unitarian Meetinghouse — Jackson Krall Quartet makes a rare area appearance. 121 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. Show begins at 8 p.m. and tickets are $7 in advance, $9 at the door. Call 584–9592 for more information.

SUNDAY, OCT. 6

Iron Horse — Kristen Hall and Peter Mulvey perform at 7 p.m. Tickets are $8.

Fine Arts Center — Sacred Music Sacred Dance Concert will be presented at the Concert Hall at 3 p.m. Tickets are $5 for students, children and seniors, $15 all others. Ten percent of all tickets sales will benefit Tibet Fund. Call 545– 2511 or 1–800–999–UMAS.

COURTESY UMASS THEATER DEPARTMENT

James Belisle (left) and Ron DesRosiers star in one of three one–act plays to be presented this week.

COURTESY R. MICHELSON GALLERIES

Robert Masla's Pioneer Valley Landscapes will be on display at the Michelson Galleries starting Tuesday.

Mullins Center — Dave Matthews Band performs with Boxing Ghandis. The show is at 7:30 p.m. and tickets are $23.50 (general admission). Call 545–0505.

Pearl Street — Porno for Pyros, rescheduled from Sept. 22 will perform with the Fun Lovin' Criminals at 9 p.m. The show is sold out. Call 585–7771.

MONDAY, OCT. 7

Iron Horse — Blues and country artist Junior Brown takes the stage at 7 & 10 p.m.

Pearl Street — Ska legends The Specials performs with Shlep Rock for an 18+ show.

Smith College — Nobel Prize winning author Toni Morrison will both read from and discuss her works in John M. Greene Hall at 12:15. Free.

TUESDAY, OCT. 8

Academy of Music — Master of monologue, Spaulding Gray, performs at 8 p.m. Tickets through the Northampton Box Office at 586–8686.

Pearl Street — Los Lobos will perform with Nil Lara for a 21+ show. Tickets are $16 in advance, $18 at the door.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 9

Fine Arts Center — A One–Act Stand: Three One–Act Plays about Trying to Connect will be performed at the Curtain Theater at 8 p.m. Plays include George Bernard Shaw's Overruled, Robert Spera's The Field and Terrence McNally's The Wibbly, Wobbly, Wiggly Dance That Cleopatra Did. Tickets are $6/$3 for group rates. Call 545– 3490 for more info.

Iron Horse — Boxing Ghandis, fresh off their Mullins Center date will play at 10 p.m. —with Belizbeha

STARS ON SALE!

pearl jam

PEARL JAM NO CODE

12.99 CD

Also On Sale 311's first 2 Albums: "Grassroots" & "Music"

12.99 CD

TONIC

9.99 CD

The FIRST WIVES Club

12.99 CD

SOUL FOR REAL For Life...

11.99 CD

Face to Face

9.99 CD

Hundreds Of CD's On Sale This Week!

Vince Gill

VINCE GILL high lonesome sound

12.99 CD

16 Cass. Carry Case 4.99

36 Cass. Carry Case 8.99

BMI

THE X FILES

- Darkness Falls/The Erlenmeyer Flask
- Beyond The Sea/ E.B.E.
- Squeeze/Tooms

12.99 VIDEO each

Also Available: 3- Video Box Set

Bargain CDs Just 7.99 Or Less!

TOP 30 Summer SALE

Featured Titles On Sale Sept. 26- Oct. 6

Strawberries MUSIC & VIDEO

SPRINGFIELD, 1600 Boston Post Rd. (413)543-1517
AUBURN, 390 Southbridge St. (508)832-5781
FRAMINGHAM, 50 Worcester Rd. (508)879-7310
HADLEY, Route 9, Campus Plaza (413)256-3160
HOLYOKE, 2275 Northampton St. (413)536-2222
LEOMINSTER, Market Basket Shpg. Ctr (508)537-6894
PITTSFIELD, 241 North Street (413)499-0357
PITTSFIELD, Berkshire Crossing (413)448-2911
W. SPRINGFIELD, Century Plaza (413)737-4128
SHREWSBURY, White City Shpg. Ctr (508)757-3443
SUDBURY, 436 Boston Post Rd. (508)443-8933
WESTBORO, Speedway Plaza (508)366-0017
WORCESTER, 10 Front St. (508)755-4783
WORCESTER, Webster Square (508)831-3535

BILINGUAL SENIOR CUSTOMER SERVICE REPRESENTATIVE

Florence Savings Bank is currently seeking a qualified candidate for the position of Bilingual Senior Customer Service Representative. The successful candidate will be responsible for opening and maintaining various types of accounts, cross-selling bank products and services, outreach efforts within Hampshire County, counseling customers on loan products and assisting them through the application process, and providing interpreting services to Spanish speaking customers.

The position requires bilingual (English and Spanish) skill, prior customer service experience in a bank environment, knowledge of bank loan products and experience with loan application process, and demonstrated presentation and facilitation skills.

A competitive salary and outstanding benefits package is offered. If you are interested in these opportunities, please forward your resume in confidence to: Vice President/ Human Resources Director, Florence Savings Bank, 85 Main Street, Florence, MA 01060. Florence Savings Bank is an Equal Opportunity Employer and encourages diverse candidates to apply for this position. No phone calls please.

Florence Savings Bank

TRAVEL SMART!

FROM NEW YORK

	One Way	Roundtrip
LONDON	$179	$341
PARIS	$224	$427
ROME	$288	$549
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA	$235	$446

Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.

Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs /immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.

PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave. NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

~ MUSIC PREVIEWS ~

Sebadoh celebrates homecoming

Barlow & Lowenstein return to Valley for a rare local show

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

Most bands relish the chance to play in their home area, in front of their friends and family — but not Sebadoh, a Valley based band that has toured the world over, but ignored Northampton, until now.

Due to Sebadoh's tendency to downplay their connection with the Western Massachusetts music scene, it has become hard to consider them a 'local' band — but the band's roots are strongly grounded in this area.

Sebadoh's Lou Barlow is still remembered, by at least a few fans, as the one–time bass player from Dinosaur Jr., the Amherst band led by J. Mascis. Prior to their work in Dinosaur Jr., both Barlow and Mascis teamed up as the hard core outfit, Deep Wound. Together they recorded one seven inch single.

Mascis held center stage completely for Dinosaur Jr.; at times it seemed he was the only one even on the stage. Barlow and Mascis didn't even talk for months at a time. Set deep on the backburner, Barlow began recording under the name of Sentridoh and Sebadoh with his pal Eric Gaffney.

Distributing home–made tapes in Northampton, Sebadoh quietly gained a name for themselves. Eventually Barlow and Mascis split on shaky terms allowing Barlow to focus his work on Sebadoh.

With the addition of Jason Lowenstein, the trio, in the early '90s began churning out records, tapes, and singles at a record pace. Barlow, alone, has released at least 300 songs since his departure from Dinosaur Jr — many of them, brilliant love songs. His recent bands besides Sebadoh include: Sentridoh, Folk Implosion, Deluxx Folk Implosion, Beltbuckle and Leaky Chipmunk.

While Barlow has been gaining underground sainthood, Mascis has been attempting, ever so hard, to recapture one iota of the brilliance missing in his band since their seminal album You're Living All Over Me.

Sebadoh's success has taken nearly everyone by surprise. SPIN named their 1993 album III, one of the best albums of the year — later elevating it to one of the Top 100 alternative records of all time. III sums up the band beautifully as all sides of the multi–faceted band seep through the 70 minute album. From Barlow's tender love songs to Gaffney all–out noise assaults, Sebadoh suffered from a mild case of schizophrenia that hooked the underground world.

Soon after III, Sub Pop signed the band. With Barlow as the poster boy of the sensitive male, Sebadoh's popularity reached new heights with love songs such as "Soul and Fire," one of Barlow's most intimate and emotional songs. Listening to Barlow's lyrics can be as heartbreaking and depressing as breaking–up itself.

Gaffney left the band after two releases with Sub Pop, Smash Your Head On the Punk Rock and Bubble & Scrape. With his noise fetish behind, Sebadoh geared down a more conventional path, adding aboard Bob Fay.

Their 1994 album Bakesale remains the band's finest output since III, although the albums sound worlds apart. Bakesale's songwriting was split evenly between Barlow and Lowenstein. Missing, though, was the band's edgy experimental side due to the departure of Gaffney.

COURTESY CHARLES PETERSON

Sebadoh returns home in support of Harmacy.

On their latest release, Harmacy, which has spurned the hit single "Oceans," the band borrows a few pages from the Gaffney notebook, but overall their sound is even more polished and perfected. While Harmacy may be one of the best albums released so far this year, it lacks the emotional attachment of III or Bakesale.

In beween the release of Bakesale and Harmacy, Barlow, almost accidently, became an MTV rock star. One of his many side projects, the Folk Implosion, which also features John Davis, recorded half of the hit soundtrack to Kids including the Top 40 single, "Natural One."

Although it has been over 10 years since Barlow sold his home–made Sebadoh tapes in Northampton record stores, the Valley still views Barlow as one of its finest success stories — even if he doesn't agree. Reluctantly, they last played the area at a benefit in Westfield in 1994. Tomorrow night offers a rare chance to see one of the area's best bands in a sort of homecoming.

Sebadoh performs at Pearl St. Friday night at 7 p.m. with Steve Westfield and Hospital. The show is 18+. After the show Sebadoh show ticket holders are welcomed free–of–charge to see Scarce, Fuzzy and the Maggies downstairs at Pearl St. Call the club at 584–7771 for more information.

Salamanders wiggle into Noho

By Daniel Bodah
Collegian Staff

Northampton–based quartet Salamander Crossing will pour out their full–bodied, home–brewed spirits for the audience tonight at the Iron Horse in Northampton.

Fiddle–whittler Rani Arbo, bass–plucker Andrew Kinsey, guitar and mandolin maestro Jeff Kelliher and banjo–banger Tim Farnham have been developing a following for the last four years with their contemporary blending of bluegrass, country, folk and blues traditions. The sound is full and sweet, notable for extraordinary lead vocals and infectious melodies.

Their debut eponymous album (on Signature Sounds records) has a number of covers, ranging from Kate Wolf's chilling and gorgeous "Desert Wind" to the Beatles' "Things We Said Today" to Bruce Cockburn's "Child of the Wind." But this is not a band limited to playing other people's music. A number of original compositions grace the album, including Arbo's jazz–tinged "Burning Bridges" and "Fire in the Sky," a stripped–down tune penned by Kinsey in classic southern folk tradition. The album includes contributions from bluegrass banjo–player Tony Furtado, Matt Flinner and David Grier. This disc has been spinning in numerous folk– fan CD players, and charted in at No. 9 on the Gavin Americana charts.

Those who were lucky enough to catch Cordelia's Dad (also local folk heroes) at Northampton's Fire and Water cafe in mid–September got to see Arbo sitting in, adding her fiddle–weavings to their early American folk renderings. Hearing her singing is sure to be an additional treat, as Salamander Crossing is especially known for their strong vocals, with all members contributing to the singing.

So, although the show may not thrill with ear–shattering distortion, or blind with a fiery light show, it promises to wrap the audience in intimate and enduring music for the soul. They have a straight–forward, no–nonsense stage presence and on their home turf will be sure to give their fans, loyal and new, an evening of music with integrity and a mellow, folk sweetness.

Salamander Crossing is playing at the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton tonight at 7 p.m. Call 584–0610 for more information.

El Vez to begin Mexican revolution

Elvis was the king, but he could have been so much more. It takes a different kind of man to see beyond the rhinestones, the drugs and the sandwiches. It takes a man like El Vez, The Mexican Elvis, to pull together all of the disparate threads of the Elvis legacy — all of the charisma, all of the music, and all of the Mexican socio–political commentary.

El Vez calls himself the hardest migrant working man in show biz, and when he takes the stage at the Iron Horse tonight, it will be up to the audience to decide. The "Rock and Revolution" tour promises to be pure, unadulterated El Vez, with a little help from his fellow revolutionaries, The Memphis Mariachis and The Lovely Elvettes.

Before you dismiss El Vez as another novelty — another greasy tousled–hair wannabe — give his latest record, G.I. Ay, Ay! Blues, a spin. From the very beginning El Vez unleashes his cry for Latino revolution — revamping "Bossa Nova Baby" into a manic musical explosion documenting the life of Chicano activist Cesar Chavez. Still confused? Join the club. But any way you look at, El Vez is a force to be reckoned with — a dynamic revolutionary giant sprung full formed from the crown of Elvis.

El Vez and the Lovely Elvettes perform at the Iron Music Hall tonight at 10 p.m. Call the club at 584–0610.

-Bradley Skaught

COURTESY EL VEZ

El Vez, the Mexican Elvis, shakes his hips and more.

Today, the Collegian was brought to Discover THE FINEST SINCE 1976

Handmade diamond engagement rings & featuring ideal cut Lazare Diamonds®

Setting the standard for ...BRILLIANCE™

Full in-house repair service. We buy diamonds & gold. Free ear piercing with purchase of studs. Watch batteries replaced & eyeglass frames repaired.

silverscape designs

GOLDSMITHS GEM GALLERY

One King St., Northampton 584-3324
264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-3324

MICHAEL'S BILLIARDS

Voted Best! 1996

$5/Hr. Everyday Unlimited Players!

- 60" Big Screen T.V.
- 8- 9 ft. Tables
- Live Entertainment Every Fri. & Sat.
- All Sporting Events
- Every Thursday Night $5 Cash 8-Ball Tournament 7:30 pm

Saturday Crawdad's 9:30-12:30. 21+

10A Belchertown Road
Amherst, MA 01002
256-8284

Amber Waves

FAR EAST
Asian noodle soups, salads & stir-fries
63 Main St.
253-9200

MID EAST
Arabian delights salads & sandwiches
31 Boltwood Walk
253-9299

OCMP Delivery Express

SLUMBERLAND
TAPE RELEASE PARTY
MERISTEM OPENS
BAY STATE HOTEL, NORTHAMPTON
THURSDAY, OCTOBER 3, 9 PM
$ BUCK OFF WITH AD $

Spirit Haus

Specialty Beverage Center

FULL REDEMPTION CENTER

Over ~500~ Microbrews

Attention Grad Students: Take 10% off Regularly Priced Fine Wines

MICROBREWS

Magic Hat Ale, #9, Blind Faith	$5.99/six
Moosebrown Ale	$4.99/six
Sierra Nevada Pale Ale, Porter, Stout	$6.99/six
Ipswich 64 oz bottle Ale, Dark Ale	$4.49
1/2 Keg Petes Wicked Ale	$75.00

BEER SPECIALS

Bud Dry 12-pack cans	$5.99
Red Dog & Icehouse 18-pack cans	$8.99
Natural Light & Ice 12-Pack cans	$4.99
Miller Genuine Draft case bottles	$9.99

LIQUOR SPECIALS

Captain Morgan	$8.99/750ml
Gordons Vodka	$5.99/750ml
Jagermeister	$8.99/375ml
Cuervo Gold	$11.99/750ml
Boones All flavors, 5 for	$9.99/750ml

VISA MasterCard DISCOVER

Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses

Rt. 9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E

"I got mine at Zanna"

Dr. Martens

ZANNA downtown Amherst

1:12 P.M. END OF SEMESTER. NO CASH. NO MAJOR FOOD GROUPS IN SIGHT. CALL MOM 1-800-COLLECT TO PREVENT STARVATION.

1-800-COLLECT

SAVE UP TO 44%

For long-distance calls. Savings based on a 3-min. AT&T operator-dialed interstate call.

Enjoy fall foliage from the comfort of a canoe

Alfresco News with Liz Anderson

Cars capped with red, yellow, orange and green canoes and kayaks flow north in streams up Rts. 9 and 91 to rivers and dams throughout the Pioneer Valley. As fall's "peak seasons" approach, the trees in the valley will reflect the colorful hues of these traveling canoes and kayaks.

Many people think that summer is the best time to go canoeing or kayaking, but with fall's cool temperatures, and fabulous foliage, October is a prime time to enjoy this spectacular sport.

Take advantage of New England's beauty, grab a canoe or kayak and ride the soothing currents of the Connecticut and Deerfield Rivers.

The Connecticut River flows along Rt. 9, less than 30 minutes away from the UMass. It is not only beautiful to look at, but a place full of abundant recreational opportunities for canoeing and kayaking.

Except for a few dams and rapids, most of the upper Connecticut River from northern New Hampshire to Western Massachusetts is smooth for canoeing and kayaking.

The rugged shore lines of the Connecticut River offer the public access to numerous boat launches, parking and picnic areas free of charge. The most easily accessible boat launch to Amherst residents is the Sportman's Marina Boat Rental Company off Rt. 9 in Hadley.

From these established starting points you can charge up the Connecticut River and explore its surrounding mountains. Numerous mountains trails surround the northern section of the Connecticut River that provide hiking and camping. Due to the river's unpredictable conditions, it is important to scout the sections of the river that you will be canoeing on.

If you continue in your car up Rt. 9 over the Connecticut River, get on to Rt. 91 north until you reach Greenfield or Charmont, where you can launch your canoe or kayak onto the Deerfield River.

The Deerfield River rises east of the Green Mountains in southern Vermont and flows south into Massachusetts. Once in Massachusetts the river turns east and joins the Connecticut River near the town of Greenfield.

A combination of rapids and riffles, the Deerfield River, has many different sections that run into various dams and reservoirs that surround it.

The Monroe Bridge–Bear Swamp Reservoir is a southern section of the Deerfield River that has several rapids and narrow straits allowing canoers/kayakers to ride only on its left hand side.

One mile above the Hoosac Tunnel and just below Bear Swamp Dam canoers/kayakers can launch their boats and take off on one of the river's most beautiful sections through the Berkshire Mountains.

This area can also be reached from the Mohawk Trail by taking the River Road to the east end of the Mohawk Trail Bridge in the town of Charmont.

The Mohawk Trail Bridge is also the gate way to the Shelburne Falls. This section of the river is shallow and at times difficult to read. However, it is an excellent place for beginner kayakers to tackle white water.

If you are interested in canoeing or kayaking, there are several paddling clubs in the Pioneer Valley.

The UMass Outing Club, Connecticut Water Shed and Autobound are only a few organization who sponsor canoeing/kayaking trips throughout the Valley.

Canoe or kayak rental is available at the UMass Outing Club for less than $20 a day. Along Rt. 9 you can find canoe or kayak rentals at the Wild Water Outfitter or the Sport's Man's Marina Boat Rental Company for $20-$25 a day.

For more information about canoeing or kayaking in the Pioneer Valley check out the UMass Outing Club board near the Student Union Ballroom.

Liz Anderson is a Collegian columnist.

Vintage clothing stores offer cheap buys

Lauren Lobik

Growing up, I was always told when shopping for a car buy used because you will get more for your money. Maybe that's not necessarily true and just something my parents believed, but this belief is definitely something to live by when shopping for clothes. If you don't have a lot of money, but still want to look great, vintage clothing stores point out the direction to be headed. The latest retro looks are sure to be in abundance on the racks of these shops. Even if retro isn't your thing, a wide array of styles and looks can be acheived by mixing and matching different pieces.

Wondering what to expect from a second hand shop? You're sure to find most of what you're looking for. Not only will you be able to locate the perfect ensemble, but the accessories needed to complete the outfit won't be far behind. Many used clothing stores also supply everything from hats and coats to jewelry and shoes. Other larger ones like the Salvation Army Thrift Store also provide fashions for your home decor. Not only can you look great for less, but so can your dorm room.

Now you know how to save money, but you're still a little weary. Some people I know think others will look down on them if they're seen coming out of a second hand shop. Don't feel that way any longer because even high fashion designers can be seen gracing the doorways of some of these shops.

In October's issue of In Style magazine, designer Anna Sui talks about how she loves to shop in New York City's vintage clothing stores to get great deals on present looks. Sui loves to travel to these sites because she believes the search for the perfect ensemble is the best part of the quest. This isn't something new to Sui. The designer's been buying her clothes here since she was a teenager in the 10th grade.

Just how much money should you be willing to spend? Sui was able to find two great outfits for around $100 in New York City's East Village. That is definitely the number to shoot for. The outfits the designer put together contained shoes and one accessory. The first outfit which came to a whopping $103 was made up of a yellow knit shell, matching zip-front jacket, black polyester bell bottoms, a yellow quilted purse, and black patent leather shoes. The cost for the second outfit totaled $99. This outfit consisted of a black, red, and white scarf, a black, red, and white coat, purple polyester pants, and silver shoes. All these things for just $100. You can't beat that.

Do things sound too good to be true? You should beware because sometimes they are. In Style gives some important vintage tips to follow when shopping for used clothing. Number one, always try things on. Next, inspect the garment carefully. Just because they're on the rack doesn't mean they're in mint condition. Hold the piece up to a light to check for hidden holes. The third tip is if the clothing has an odor or is stained, check the washing instructions. Dry cleaning usually won't get the smell out. Lastly, find the true cost of your garment before you purchase it by calculating all alterations. This way you'll know exactly what you're paying for.

You have a few bucks and it's burning a hole in your pocket. Make that buck go further by bringing it to the local second hand shop. Take a drive to Northampton or just stay in Amherst. Whatever you decide, it's sure to be worth your while.

Lauren Lobik is a UMass student

New fall line–up welcomes back stars of the past

Tube Notes with Lauren Lobik

The new fall programs have begun to make their debuts and TV Guide has been filled to the brim with feature stories on every new program that makes up the primetime schedule. Everyone who is anyone has their own show and the fall line-up is filled with yesterday's stars trying to make a comeback.

Remember the great sitcoms of the '80s? Many of the icons from this period of time are back to try it again. Members from the casts of shows like "Family Ties," "The Facts of Life" and "Cheers" are being seen on the three major networks throughout this fall's primetime schedule.

Michael J. Fox was a hit when he played Alex Keaton, a young Republican, on "Family Ties." He then went on to make what is sure to become one of the greatest movies of all time, Back to the Future. For the years following this hit, Fox participated in many films that just didn't measure up. Now he's back this fall starring in "Spin City." This time around he plays the deputy mayor of New York. Quite a switch from previous roles.

Fox isn't the only actor from "Family Ties" to star in a sitcom this season. Justine Bateman, who played Alex's ditzy sister Mallory Keaton, is back on the scene. Bateman seems to be the voice of reason amongst the male testosterone in "Men Behaving Badly." This show tends to be extremely crude, but it's absolutely hysterical. The critics are in store for a live one here.

Another duo coming from a popular 1980s and early 1990s sitcom is Rhea Perlman and Ted Danson from "Cheers." Danson traded in the bar for a newsroom in "Ink." He'll be co-starring with wife Mary Steenburgen as a divorced couple who still work together at a newspaper. Danson's barmate Perlman, formerly Carla, is now a widow who decides to go back to college despite the hand time her snobby professor hands her.

The last two stars trying to make a come back are the two '80s fans will be most excited about, Molly Ringwald and Brooke Shields. It's great that they're back on TV. The former red headed member of the "Brat Pack," Ringwald, will be starring in "Townies." She's part of a trio of waitresses who work in a small town in New England. Hopefully this will be the big comeback Ringwald has been yearning for. Since her small role as Molly on "The Facts of Life," her acting career has been a rollercoster.

Andre Agassi's sweetheart, Shields, is also making a comeback. Thank God it's not as a special guest on the next Bob Hope special, but as a naive young magazine writer on "Suddenly Susan." If she's half as funny as she was on "Friends," then this show is sure to take off.

The fall season is jammed–packed with surefire hits, but they can't all make it. My picks are "Suddenly Susan" and "Men Behaving Badly." Many study breaks are sure to fall within these time slots.

Lauren Lobik is a Collegian Correspondent.

Calvin Klein

25% Off Calvin Klein Basic Underwear Styles

2 Weeks Only! October 1-14

J·RICH CLOTHING FOR MEN

22 Masonic Street Northampton • 586-6336 Open 7 Days • Thurs 'til 9

Friendly's presents

The New Jersey NETS battle the Washington Bullets

Sunday October 13th 7 p.m.

Tickets on sale now at MULLINS CENTER

See 7' 6" Shawn Bradley, Ed O'Bannon and Kerry Kittles of the Nets and Bullets' 7' 7" Gheorghe Mureson, Chris Webber, and All Star Juwan Howard.

See basketball again in the "Cal Zone" as this game marks the return of Coach John Calipari!

NEWS 40 WHMP DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE TODAY'S 93 MODERN ROCK

Don't Let The Marshall Catch You Going Anywhere Else!

Marshall STEINBECK COLLISION REPAIR & AUTO BODY

53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center

• Imports and other unibody vehicles are our specialty.
• Users of Sikkens paint products
• Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass repair.

256-8157 256-1385 Shop Reg # RS1212

4 SEASONS RTE. 9 HADLEY 584-8174 Monday- Saturday 9:00am-11:00pm Not Responsible for typos Visa, Mastercard & Discover accepted

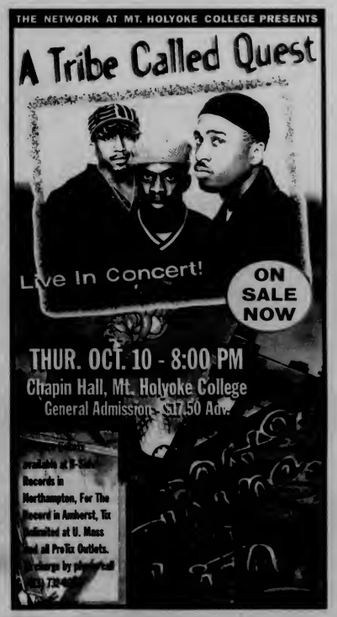
DISCOUNT LIQUORS BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE • CIGARS

NEW! BEER DISPLAY AREA ... WE NOW STOCK OVER 100% MORE ICE COLD MICROS & IMPORTS!

SAM ADAMS 24-12 oz. Bott. $17.99 except seasonals + dep.	CATAMOUNT 24-12 oz. Bott. $17.99 + dep.	DEVIL MOUNTAIN 24-12 oz. Bott. $17.99	HEINEKEN 24-12 oz. Bott. $18.99 + dep.	CORONA 24-12 oz. Bott. $16.99 + dep.	COORS & LT. 30 pk $15.49 + dep.
BUSCH & LT. "30-pk-cans" $11.99 + dep.	M.G.D. & LT. 24-12 oz. Bar Bott. $9.99 + dep.	BUD DRY 24-12 oz. Bar Bott. $9.99 + dep.	MILWAUKEE'S BEST "30 pks" $10.49 + dep.	NATURAL LT. & ICE 24-12 oz. cans $8.99 + dep.	AMERICAN 24-12 oz. cans $7.49 + dep.
CAPTAIN MORGAN SPICED RUM $16.49 1.75L	SOUTHERN COMFORT $14.99 1.75L	SMIRNOFF VODKA $13.99 1.75L	J&B SCOTCH $24.49 1.75L	POPOV VODKA $9.99 1.75L	MR. BOSTON BRANDIES $12.99 1.75L
CANADIAN CLUB $15.99 1.75L	BOMBAY GIN "Saphire" $13.99 750 ml	MALIBU RUM $8.99 750 ml	SKY VODKA $16.99 1.75L	TEQUILA $6.99 1.0L	LEROUX BRANDIES $14.99 1.75L
ROUND HILL $9.99 1.5L	SEBASTIANI HERITAGE WINES $8.99 1.5L	M.G. VALLEJO WINES $8.99 1.5L	FETZER SUNDIAL CHARDONNAY $5.99 750 ml	BEERBALLS $22.99 + dep.
WOOD CHUCK CIDER $4.99 6 pk.	CIDER JACK $4.99 6 pk.	SEAGRAM'S WINE COOLERS $2.99 + dep. 4 pk.	BOONES FARM $1.99 750 ml	WE DELIVER 584-8174

KEG OF THE WEEK! BUD $38.99 + DEP.

"KEGS" BUD ICE, MICHELOB - ICEHOUSE, RED DOG, MICHELOB LT, LOWENBRAU DK., MICHELOB DK., LITE, LITE ICE ... $39.99 +DEP.



NATURAL LT. NATURAL ICE $34.99 + DEP.

MICRO KEGS SAM ADAMS $89.99 PLUS OREGON $89.99 MANY SARANAC $89.99 MORE J.W. DUNDEE $69.99

ICE 10 LBS. ..... $1.29 50 LBS. ..... $5.99 100 LBS. $9.99

SALE GOOD THRU 10/17/96

THE NETWORK AT MT. HOLYOKE COLLEGE PRESENTS

A Tribe Called Quest Live In Concert! ON SALE NOW

THUR. OCT. 10 - 8:00 PM Chapin Hall, Mt. Holyoke College General Admission $17.50 Adv.

Available at Pipeline Records in Northampton, For The Record in Amherst, Tix Unlimited at U. Mass and all ProTix Outlets. Charge by phone/fax! 733-8866

Play honors Puerto Rican actor

Son Corazon celebrates life of woman who loved too much

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

The life of an extraordinary Puerto Rican actress will be celebrated in Son Corazon: Heartstrung for Myrna Vazquez. The bilingual performance begins at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

The play is about Myrna Vazquez, described as "the woman who loved too much." Given only 15 years to live after being diagnosed with a heart condition, Vazquez made much of the rest of her short life.

The actress was a mother to three children and a political activist. In addition, she was a union organizer, teacher and community volunteer. Vazquez died at the age of 40.

Son Corazon, written by Rosa Luisa Marquez, incorporates masks and puppets to honor Vazquez's memory. Marquez also included dream-like sequences that address the emotions of passion and obsession, of women and life, and of course, the theater.

Facts about Vazquez become vague, as a fire destroyed her home and theater. This cloudiness is reflected in Marquez's script.

Information about Vazquez's life was culled from interviews with Vazquez's family and friends who live in Boston. Also included in the script are fragments from two of the most important plays Vazquez starred in: The Oxcart by Rene Marques and The Passion According to Antigona Perez by Luis Rafael Sanchez. Dramaturg Brenda Cotto-Escalera and actress Noelia Ortiz Cortes were responsible for unearthing much of the research on Vazquez.

Son Corazon was commissioned this summer as part of the New Works for New World and was co-produced by New WORLD Theater and the University Theater Department.

Tickets for the play can be obtained in advance by calling the Fine Arts Center Box Office at 545-2511 or at Bowker Auditorium before the performance. Tickets are $8 general admission and $5 for students, children and senior citizens. The New WORLD Theater can be reached at 545-1972. Bowker Auditorium is located in Stockbridge Hall at the University of Massachusetts.

■ Dave

continued from page 5

traveling experiences early in life. He spent several years in South Africa (the inspiration for the Crash single, "Cry Freedom") and grew up in Johannesburg, New York and London. His southern, funky sound reflects his Virginia background, as his humble beginnings took place bartending in Charlottesville.

Prior to popular conception that Sunday's show, is sold out, there are tickets still available through the Mullins Center Box Office. Opening band Boxing Ghandis will get things going at 7:30 p.m.

When Dave Matthews takes the stage, however, be prepared for a spectacular show from a band who knows how to please a crowd.

Laura Stock is a Collegian staff member.

COURTESY C. TAYLOR CROTHERS

The Dave Matthews Band takes on the Mullins Center on Sunday.

■ Ghandis

continued from page 5

with a song entitled "Funky Little Princess," which tells a tale of drug abuse and loss of innocence.

"Far From Over" the second track on this side of the album, is a seriously funky combination of flute, voice and deep drums.

Overall this is a pretty good album, which should appeal to a wide variety of musical tastes. There are obvious and strong undercurrents of jazz, funk and blues present in many of the songs.

Concert goers can expect to see an eclectic musical presentation on Sunday that should get them psyched up for Dave Matthews Band. B

Movie explores vengeance and justice

By Justin Daniel Smith
Collegian Staff

GIRLS TOWN
Directed by Jim McKay
with Bruklin Harris, Anna Grace, Lili Taylor
Playing at Pleasant St. Theater

Girls Town is an important film that relies on the truth and justice that exist in our society and how we are expected to deal with them.

It begins with four high school senior friends hanging out at a street corner in an inner city. The girls, best friends for years, realize that they did not really know each other when one of them, Nikki, commits suicide.

It seems as though Nikki had a bright future — plans to attend Princeton in the fall and get away from the urban jungle. But what her friends did not know was that underneath it all was a girl crying for help, looking for a way out of the suffering that she has had since she was raped.

Angela (Bruklin Harris), a basketball playing poet, Emma (Anna Grace), a coming-of-age teen and Patti (Lili Taylor), a hip-hop mechanic, do not find out Nikki's problems until they read her diary, which was her only console. When the girls learn of Nikki's problems and that she kept them all in, more secrets come out of the other girls.

It turns out that Emma had been raped as well. The emotions stir the girls to enact vengeance. The girls retaliate against their tormentors which at first makes them feel great but it eventually catches up to them. The vigilantes learn that even justice cannot undo the past so the only place that they need look is to the future.

The actresses, with director Jim McKay, came up with the dialogue for the film over the span of two years. Throughout that duration they were able to create their characters through intensive sessions with input from the cast and the producers. Their arduous work paid off.

The cohesion between the players suggest a real friendship. Newcomers Harris and Grace give powerful, theatrical performances. Taylor continues to show her versatility, reprising a high school senior role eight years after she made her debut in Say Anything. She has became the quintessential actress of independent cinema.

Music video director McKay offers a strong debut, often using flavored hip-hop from various artists including Guru, who is credited with the score. Girls Town is a potent film that is not about real life — it is real life. A-

Baltimore leads series 2–0 over Cleveland

By David Ginsburg
Associated Press

BALTIMORE — First, the Baltimore Orioles used a display of raw power to beat the Cleveland Indians. Then they took advantage of a throwing error on a controversial play.

Now the Orioles need to come up with just one more win, regardless of technique, in order to eliminate the defending AL champions.

Cal Ripken scored the tiebreaking run on a disputed play in the eighth inning, and the Orioles defeated Cleveland 7-4 yesterday for a 2-0 lead in their best-of-5 playoff series.

Baltimore moved within one win of becoming the first wild-card team to advance while pushing the Indians to the brink of elimination. Game 3 will be tomorrow in Cleveland.

"Anything can happen, but I like our chances at this point," Baltimore manager Davey Johnson said.

"We were looking for a split but now we're up 2-0. We're in a good situation," said Baltimore second baseman Roberto Alomar, who has been surrounded by controversy since spitting in the face of umpire John Hirschbeck last Friday.

A few hours after the game, Alomar dropped his appeal of a five-game suspension. A hearing had been scheduled for today. In this game, though, another Alomar was the center of attention in a play involving an umpire.

Brady Anderson homered for the second straight day, helping the Orioles take a 4-0 lead. Albert Belle homered as the Indians rallied, tying it with a run in the eighth.

Then Baltimore bounced back in the bottom of the eighth. Bobby Bonilla drew a leadoff walk from Eric Plunk and Cal Ripken, in his first playoff series in 13 years, hit a ground-rule double. Eddie Murray was given an intentional walk to load the bases.

Paul Assenmacher relieved, and B.J. Surhoff hit a tapper back to the mound. Assenmacher threw home for a forceout, but — with Surhoff running on the wrong side of the baseline — the throw from catcher Sandy Alomar, Roberto's brother, bounced off the glove of first baseman Jeff Kent.

"He definitely blocked my view," Sandy Alomar said. "I was trying to aim the ball but couldn't see Jeff clearly. Either [Surhoff] was running close to the grass or inside the line."

The wild throw allowed Ripken to score for a 5-4 lead, and brought Indians manager Mike Hargrove out of the dugout to discuss the play with plate umpire Greg Kosc.

"Obviously Sandy did not make a good throw, but our contention was he had to alter his throw because Surhoff was running inside the line," Hargrove said. "In the umpire's judgment, they said that it didn't have anything to do with the way the play turned out."

Replays cleared showed Surhoff to the left side of the baseline as he approached the bag.

First base umpire Tim Tschida said, "The fact that the baserunner is inside the line doesn't in and of itself constitute interference. His being inside the line has to prevent whoever is covering the bag from catching the ball. In our judgment, it was simply an errant throw."

Once play resumed, Anderson hit a sacrifice fly and Roberto Alomar added an RBI single.

The loss left the Indians in the position of trying to become only the fourth big league team to rally from an 0-2 deficit in five-game playoff series. Cleveland led the majors with 99 wins this season.

"It's going to be difficult," Hargrove admitted.

"It was obviously a huge win for us," Anderson said. "If we go in Cleveland 1-1, then I'd say that they have the advantage." Mike Mussina will pitch for Baltimore against Jack McDowell tomorrow before another sellout crowd at Jacobs Field. The crowd of 48,970 at Camden Yards was the largest ever at the young ballpark. With the Indians down 4-0, Hargrove gathered around a dozen of his players together in the dugout before the sixth inning for what appeared to be a low-key pep talk. The Indians immediately responded by playing the brand of baseball that earned them two straight AL Central titles.

Kenny Lofton singled with one out and promptly stole his first two bases of the playoff before scoring on a groundout by Kevin Seitzer. Jim Thome then singled and Belle got his first hit of the series, a home run into the left-field seats that cut the lead to 4-3.

In the seventh, Baltimore starter Scott Erickson issued two straight walks with two outs and was replaced by Jesse Orosco, who struck out Lofton on a 2-2 pitch. Seitzer and Thome singled to open the eighth, chasing Orosco, and Julio Franco tied the game with a sacrifice fly off Armando Benitez.

Benitez, who avoided further damage by striking out Manny Ramierez and getting Sandy Alomar on the popup, wound up as the winning pitcher and Plunk was the loser. Randy Myers pitched the ninth for a save.

"We go home. The home team has won all the games so far, so we've got that on our side," said Cleveland starter Orel Hershiser, who lasted only five innings.

The Orioles took a 1-0 first-inning lead for the second straight day. After Hershiser walked Alomar and Rafael Palmeiro, Baltimore got an unearned run when a two-out grounder by Bonilla went through the legs of Seitzer at first base.

After Anderson homered in the fifth, Palmeiro got a two-out single, Bonilla walked and Ripken lined an RBI single to left, his first hit in 14 career at-bats against Hershiser. Murray then doubled, scoring Bonilla for a 4-0 lead, but Ripken was thrown out at the plate.

Notes: The start of the game was delayed 37 minutes by rain. Tuesday's game started 17 minutes behind schedule because of the late arrival of the umpires... Belle was 11-for-52 lifetime in the playoffs (.212) before his homer... Anderson has homered in three straight games, including the season finale.

KPMG The Global Leader℠
Send e-mail to kpmg@yoyo.com.
Play the In-Site Game.
Win a 7-day trip to the Caribbean for two.
Give us a piece of your mind
at the KPMG in site
Your one-of-a-kind source for everything you'll need to know.
Watch for our In-Sites at www.kpmgcampus.com

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring, "Sam Adams" Lager $16.99 case
Absolute Vodka 80° $19.99 1.75 liter
Bud Dry bots $9.99 case
"The 6/PK. Bonanza"!
Catamount - Porter, Wheat, Gold, Pale Ale, & "Octoberfest"!
Devil Mountain - 5 Malt Ale, Railroad Gold, + "Blk Honey"!
Rhina Chassers- Amber Ale, Roosted Lager & "Peach Wheat"!
Shipyard - Blue Fin Stout, Expert Ale, + "Moose Brown Ale"!
Petes - All Flavors including the "New Winter Brew"!
Mix/Match "two" 6/PKs . . . $9.95
Vodka 80° $8.99 1.75liter
Jack Daniels $10.99 750 ml
Captain Morgan Spiced $8.99 liter
All Beers Plus Deposit OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD •Delivery Available•

MIKARA'S
MUSIC ROOM & NIGHT CLUB
270 Cooley St. Springfield (413)796-7127
Presents
ROCK THE VOTE 96
with
The Urge
Phunk Junkeez
Too Skinny J's
Saturday Oct 5 · 9PM · 18+
Register to Vote and Win CD's T-shirts and More!
Free Snowboard Raffle!
TODAY'S 93 WHMP FM
Advocate Newspapers
Ski Haus
E. Longmeadow
SAMUEL ADAMS
Tickets $8.00 advance, $10.00 door
Available at Strawberries, Protix or The N-Hampton Box Office

Braves beat Dodgers 2–1 in 10 inning battle

By John Nadel
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — John Smoltz dominated the Dodgers for nine innings yesterday, which was no surprise considering his terrific season and Los Angeles' recent ineptitude at the plate.

Then, his catcher finished them off in the 10th.

Smoltz, the major league leader in wins and strikeouts this season, allowed only four hits and Javy Lopez homered off Antonio Osuna as the pitching-rich Atlanta Braves beat the Dodgers 2-1 in 10 innings in the opener of their NL playoff series.

"Obviously, today was a big blow to them," Smoltz said. "They're not out of it, but this hurts. This is a big win for us, guaranteed going home with one victory and with [Greg] Maddux going tomorrow."

Maddux (15-11), the four-time Cy Young Award winner whose streak will likely be stopped by Smoltz, will pitch for the NL East champion Braves in Game 2 tonight. Ismael Valdes (15-7) will start next for Los Angeles in the best-of-5 series.

"It's a must-win tomorrow for us," said Dodgers manager Bill Russell, who lost in his first postseason game as a manager. "We'd hate to go to Atlanta down 2-0."

As expected, the matchup between the teams with the top two ERAs in baseball was a classic pitching duel. There were a total of just nine hits — four by Atlanta.

"Low-scoring, whoever catches the break," Braves manager Bobby Cox said. "I thought we caught it today."

Smoltz, 24-8 this year, retired his final 15 batters. He struck out seven, walked two and threw strikes on his last 17 pitches in improving his life-time mark to 6-1 in postseason play.

"It was a great-pitched game all day," Smoltz said. "I think that's what everybody expects all series. We play some dull games in the postseason because of our pitching."

Mark Wohlers, who had a club-record 39 saves, worked around a one-out single by Greg Gagne in the 10th to preserve the victory for the defending World Series champions.

"How can you get more out of Smoltz that we did today? The only thing else he could have done was throw a no-hitter," Wohlers said. "He made big pitch after big pitch. He's been doing this all year, and he's been doing this in the postseason since he's been with us."

Ramon Martinez matched Smoltz for eight innings, giving up just three hits. But his bullpen did not do the job as the Dodgers lost their fifth straight game, a streak that cost them the NL West title, left them as the wild card team, and puts them in great jeopardy now.

Lopez, who had grounded out in his only previous at-bat against Osuna this season, fell behind 0-2. He then worked the count full and fouled off three pitches before hitting a drive far over the fence in right-center field off a 92-mph fastball.

Lopez will be rewarded with a spot on the bench tonight, in favor of Eddie Perez, who frequently catches Maddux. But Lopez said he didn't mind.

As far as his homer was concerned, Lopez said, "When I fell behind 0-2, the first thing that went through my mind was, 'I'm going to get jammed.' So I kept my shoulder closed. That way, if there was a pitch away, I would be able to hit it. So every pitch they threw me, I was ready to hit — or at least make contact." He made contact all right, and won the game.

Osuna nodded and smiled grimly when asked if he knew the ball was gone.

"I was trying to throw the ball inside and it tailed on me," he said. "I've pitched to him four or five times, and nothing." Martinez left after the eighth, having thrown 131 pitches. With his last pitch, he retired Mark Lemke on a grounder with a runner at third.

Martinez, who struck out six and walked three, said he knew he had to be near-perfect for the Dodgers to win.

"Every time you go out there, you go with the pressure that you can't give anything to the other team," he said. "That' the way I looked at it when I went out there today. Against the Cy Young Award winner, you don't expect to get too many runs."

The Dodgers didn't. They scored their lone run in the fifth on a leadoff double by Gagne and a two-out double by slumping rookie Todd Hollandsworth, who finished the regular season with just two hits in his final 23 at-bats.

Hollandsworth was 0-for-2 with a strikeout before slicing his hit just inside the third-base bag on the first pitch from Smoltz. The run snapped a 21-inning scoreless streak for the Dodgers, who hadn't scored since the third inning Saturday in the next-to-last game of the season — a 4-2 loss to the San Diego Padres.

The Dodgers were beaten 2-0 in 11 innings by the Padres on Sunday with the NL West title at stake. Los Angeles has scored only six runs during its five-game skid, and just once in its last 27 innings.

Atlanta took a 1-0 lead in the fourth when Marquis Grissom singled, stole second, went to third on a groundout and scored on a sacrifice fly by Fred McGriff.

■ field hockey

continued from page 14

first chance against Rose. Katie West fired the ball to Rose's lower right side to give the Huskies a 1–0 lead.

Rothenberger answered with a goal of her own moments later, as the ball found the net after bouncing on Husky goalie Danielle Butsch's pads.

Rose then blocked America East Player of the Week Keri Bettenhauser's shot, and UMass jumped on its opportunity. Ott, who also had a strong outing defensively, sent the ball past Butsch on the goalie's left side.

"Amy's confidence has really gotten stronger every game," Hixon said.

For the second time that day history appeared to repeat itself as Hughes' shot, the final UMass stroke, careened off Butsch's stick on her lower right side and into the net for the tally in a near-mirror image of Rothenberger's stroke.

The Minutewomen have no chance to rest on their recent laurels; instead they face a pair of big games this weekend. They host No. 1 North Carolina on Saturday at 1 p.m. and West Chester at 2 p.m. on Sunday, both at Westfield State College. UMass upset then–No. 1 UNC at Westfield State in 1994.

■ Hughes

continued from page 14

shootout, sending the ball to Butsch's left side. The Totman crowd cheered.

Husky Jen White and UMass' Saskia Fuchs each had their shots blocked. Then Northeastern put the pressure on, as Melissa Landers tallied a goal high to Rose's right. The stroke score stood 2–2.

Sophomore Erica Johnston fired high. In Northeastern's final shot Jill Haiko shot to Rose's right side. Rose came up with the save, and as she walked away Rose pumped her fist.

"You have to have the confidence that if I'm going to save them, they're going to put them away," Rose said.

Moments later Sharon Hughes put the final tally away.

Hughes, who scored the game winner against Boston College, imitated Rothenberger's earlier shot and sent the ball into the NU cage off of Butsch's stick, to give UMass the 3–2 stroke edge and the 2–1 win.

The Minutewomen and their fans went crazy.

"It was a wild one," Hixon said.

■ Ohio State

continued from page 14

their spanking at the hands of Arizona State a few weeks back. This could be a year where the national champs will not be undefeated. Florida and Florida State play each other the weekend after Thanksgiving. Michigan and Ohio State still have to play each other, Miami and Florida State still have to play each other, and there is no way Arizona State goes undefeated.

When all is said and done, we could see Nebraska back in the No. 1 slot, if everyone else gets a loss, and the Huskers look very, very, very sharp. But don't ask me about national championship predictions just yet. It's too early to tell.

• Booty Schwag of the Week award

And the winner is... Luke Meredith. A few weeks back I wondered aloud what happened to the Big 10. Apparently they listened (Well, I mean they didn't really listen, but let's just say they did). Michigan destroyed UCLA last weekend, they're undefeated, as are aforementioned Penn State and Ohio State. Minnesota is 3-0, with a win over Syracuse under its belt, and Northwestern has rebounded from an early season defeat at Wake Forest. Meanwhile, the Big 12 is starting to look like a big flop, with Nebraska and Texas losing out of conference and Texas A&M starting out 1-3. Their only win? North Texas.

• Tonight's Game

Tennessee travels to University, Miss., to take on Ole Miss in a game which airs on national television only because it's Peyton Manning against daddy's old school. The Rebels are 3-1, but look for Tennessee to take out some post-Gator aggression tonight and restore some order back to the SEC standings. By the way, who calls their town University anyway?

• There's only you and me, and we just disagree

One of my colleagues, Fred Hurlbrink Jr., wrote in his Around the Horn last week that the UMass football team is not real college football, and that the marching band is bigger, stronger and has a better completion percentage than the Minutemen.

Hey Fred, UMass is real college football. They may not be on TV every week, and they may not be going to a bowl game come January, but ask Justin Reimer or Khari Samuel just how real the football they're playing down at McGuirk is. I'm sure they'd love to show you. And as far as the marching band goes, I walk past the Chapel on my way to class every day, chief. They're not bigger, they're not stronger, and they're not in first place in the Yankee Conference.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

A CONTEST FOR A NEW OMBUDS OFFICE POSTER

The Ombuds Office has retired its old poster in response to student criticism --

The Ombuds Office hereby announces a contest to find the design for a new poster --

The poster should be a placard (12" x 18" or larger) containing the office name and location, as well as a design motif related to the functions of the Ombuds Office on campus.

Any currently registered student may submit a sketch of a proposed design to the Ombuds Office by October 25.

A winning entry will be awarded a $250 prize.

Details may be obtained in the Ombuds Office, Campus Center 823.

Representatives from the Ombuds Office will be in the Campus Center (check the schedule for the room) on Thursday, October 10, 4 - 6 p.m. to discuss poster projects.

(The Ombuds Office reserves the right to refuse all submissions.)

an undergraduate study abroad program in Classical, Byzantine and Modern Greek studies
BEAVER COLLEGE STUDY IN GREECE
The Beaver College Study in Greece program is designed to provide North American students with a comprehensive academic and cultural experience including opportunities to undertake accredited upper division college courses in Classical, Byzantine and Modern Greek studies. Our program features:
✦ leadership and teaching by recognized scholars
✦ intensive use of local resources for field study
✦ required study of modern Greek
✦ student apartments in a local neighborhood
✦ field-study trips
✦ program-arranged cultural and social activities
Our program emphasizes experiential learning and uses the country and its people as an extension of the classroom. Students enjoy individualized attention and can enroll in a semester or a full-year program with courses on offer in areas as various as Classical Languages and Literature, Modern Greek Politics, the Byzantine Tradition and Mediterranean Ecology.
Speak to your study abroad advisor about Beaver College programs or call for a free catalog today.
1.888.BEAVER-9 (1.888.232.8379)
cea@ beaver.edu
http://www.beaver.edu/cea/

Lacrosse club wins in OT, women's rugby earns tie

UMass Lacrosse Club wins in OT

• The Massachusetts men's IV-level lacrosse club downed the Franklin County Lacrosse Club in a tight 8–7 game last Sunday. The teams were under–manned, yet UMass keepers Ian Martinelli and Mike Nowlan did the honors at both ends. Faceoff specialist Mike Kelley and longstick midfielders Erick Becker and Tim Mooney fought hard and successfully for the ball.

Massachusetts shot itself in the foot with penalties this game, giving up three goals while playing man-down. Shooting was off with two pipe shots and an open–goal miss on the books, but the hardworking defense led by Phil Dorman and Greg Smith kept turning the ball back over to the offense. The UMass front line was led by Chris Ellis (3 goals), Greg Resnick (2 goals) and while Levence Eutsay notched the game winner.

"If we had assaulted the goal all game with the fiery will we showed the last four minutes, this contest would probably have gone into overtime," head coach Judy Dietel said. "After brilliant passing sequences or good clears, we'd lose focus. Consistent and accurate intensity plus coordination are our current challenges."

Women's rugby ties Amherst College

The University of Massachusetts women's rugby team took huge strides in establishing itself as one of the best teams in the Northeast this weekend. However, UMass fell short of the win in a 5-5 tie with Amherst College.

Massachusetts put up a stellar effort, but was continually kept out of the zone. Amherst scored first, taking an early 5–0 lead in the first half.

UMass came roaring back to tie the score before halftime. Senior co–captain Bridgett Nowd collected a loose ball off the base of a ruck and dove in for the try. Nowd was unable to convert the ensuing extra kick, leaving the game knotted at five.

The second half proved to be a test for the UMass defense as Amherst kept the ball in the UMass 22 for much of the second frame. The team was able to deny Amherst and come out of the contest with a tie.

Massachusetts suffered an unfortunate loss as junior Moe Duhamel sustained injuries to her nose and cheek early in the first half. She will most likely be out of action for three to four weeks.

Sports Briefs

On the B side, UMass lost its first game this season 5–0 at the hands of the Jeffs. The young squad, led by Tracy Cicoria put up a fine effort but were unable to stop a bigger and more experienced Amherst team.

Massachusetts looks to avenge a preseason loss to Radcliffe this Saturday. Radcliffe beat UMass 15–0 on Sept. 14 in the team's first game of the season. Kickoff is set for 2 p.m. on the lower Boyden fields.

UMass bike club takes to the hills

• On Sunday, Oct. 6, the UMass bicycle racing club will be holding its annual mountain bike race. The race is held on campus in the area between Orchard Hill and Sylvan residential areas.

The public races start at 9 a.m. while the collegiate races are slated to begin at 11 a.m., while the highlight race will begin at 2:15 p.m.

Over 100 students from 100 colleges in New England, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania are expected to attend. At last year's race, the University of New Hampshire and Plymouth State College raced very strongly overall in 2nd and 3rd respectively.

UMass hopes to repeat its victory of last year and should continue the tradition if riders such as Keith Burgoyne, Dan Coady, and freshman Ken Avery and Mike Chopchitz race well.

For race info, contact Dan Coady at 256–8175.

Sports Briefs was compiled by Collegian staff member Chris Stamm.

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.- Sat. 9a.m.-11p.m. Tel: 549-2692
Shop Scott's & Save Lotts! THANK YOU FOR YOUR PATRONAGE
Bud Light 30 packs $15.99 +dep.
Natural: Light & Ice 24-12oz. cans $8.79 +dep.
Heineken Cases 24-12oz. bottles $18.99 +dep.
Rolling Rock: Cases of Reg & Light, 24-12oz. bar bottles $12.99 +dep.
Octoberfest 6 packs $4.99 +dep.
Sam Adams, Harpoon, & Catamount
Check Out Our Other In Store Specials!
Hornsbys Cider 6 packs $4.99
Krank2O 24-500 ml bottles $12.99
Aftershock 750ml $13.49
Jack Daniels 750ml $10.99
Kahlua 750ml 12.99
Peachtree & Buttershots 750ml 6.49
Go 4 it
MasterCard VISA MasterCard
Tele-Check for your personal check
Check Out Our Other Great In Store Specials
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
Baskins Abagail Adams Fredrics University Drive SCOTTS Victory Market Friendly's

Friends & Seinfeld
* Big Screen TV
*Pub Style menu
Need a Break?
Come relax and watch "Seinfeld" & "Friends" at the TOP with yours!
TOC Bar & Grill
Monday - Friday 4:00 pm - 12:30 am
Saturday 3:00 pm - 12:30 am
Daily Munchie Specials 4 pm - 7 pm
11 th floor Campus Center

football

continued from page 14

"For my first couple years in high school I played fullback if you can believe it," Shalala said. "Then one summer I came back and I gained about 60 pounds, so from then on I got put on the line."

Shalala says he enjoys playing for the Minutemen and wants to continue the tradition of the offensive line that has been here in the past.

"I love playing for UMass," Shalala said. "There has been great tradition here, not only with championships but with the offensive lines in front of us. And when I came in I told myself that I wanted to be great like them. I worked for it, and until the last snap goes off against Connecticut, I'm going to do my best to try to make myself the best ball player I can."

Shalala is looked upon as a great leader on this team and appreciates the opportunity to hold such a prestigious position as co-captain.

"It's a great honor, and I wanted to step up to the challenge," Shalala said. "But what was more of an honor is the fact that I love these guys we're playing with, and I respect all of them, and to think that's how they thought of me it was more of an honor. I just try to step it up and be the best leader I can be."

Ron Felice, junior right guard (6'2"292) — Felice started his playing career back in Bellmore, N.Y., where he played at Wellington C. Mapham High School. After transferring from Nassau Community College prior to the 1995 season, Felice is the returning starter at right guard as last year he started in all 11 games.

Felice has played defensive lineman, center, and switched to guard when he came here to UMass. Felice was one of the stellar five offensive linemen that helped the Minutemen achieve so much success with the running game last year, and says that it's a great feeling when you help the offense to score.

"We don't really get much recognition like the running backs or the quarterbacks do, but you know inside that when your guys do it right it makes the whole offense click," Felice said. "If we don't block correctly or do the right thing the running backs aren't going to go anywhere."

Felice thinks it is great to play with the same five guys for the second year now and believes they all work well together.

"We have so much experience, and we know that we can definitely rely on each other," Felice said.

Felice has so far enjoyed the scene here at UMass, and felt this was the best place to be as he goes out and looks forward to playing the position that he wanted to play.

"I like it here and they told me the type of team they are, and I think it's my style," Felice said. "I really wanted to play guard and I had an opportunity to play that here. I just think there was great tradition here and this was definitely the place for me."

Matt Alegi, junior center (6'2", 290) — Alegi comes from Germantown, Md., and played his high school football days at Seneca Valley where he was a three year letter winner. This is his second consecutive season starting at center for the Minutemen.

Throughout high school, Alegi's concentration was at the defensive end and defensive lineman positions, before making the change to center when he came to UMass.

Last season Alegi started in all 11 games and was a second team All Yankee Conference selection where he helped the Minutemen lead Division I-AA in rushing. Alegi knew that from the start this is a position that you play for pride and your own gratification.

"You know from the day you get there the first thing they tell you is that no one is ever going to see you play except for your coach, so you go into it with that attitude and it doesn't bother you that nobody knows what you're doing," Alegi said.

Alegi gets excited when he knows that it is his and the offensive line's effort that helps put points up on the board.

"I love it, to hear the cannon go off in the endzone and celebrate with the running back, I think it's great," Alegi said. "Unless they break it for like 80 yards and then I got to run and get the oxygen."

At center, Alegi is an integral part of the Minuteman offense starting off every play while playing a position he enjoys.

"I love it. I think most people would complain about being on the offensive line, I think we love it," Alegi said. "We have fun being on the offensive line, and I don't play any different than these other guys play their positions."

Overall Alegi likes the UMass atmosphere.

"I love playing for UMass," Alegi said. "They put me on the offensive line, and I'm having fun knocking people around. Right now we want to bring the tradition back."

Mark Zych, senior left guard (6'3" 279) — Zych comes to UMass right across the state from Quincy, Mass., where he was a three year letter winner playing for Quincy high school, with numerous all-state and all-star selections.

Zych didn't start playing high school football until his sophomore year and was put at the offensive line position. He also played a little at the defensive line spot.

This is the third season in a row that Zych is starting at left guard and playing along side Dan Markowski to form an intimidating left side of the offensive line.

Zych has the attitude of a whole team effort and enjoys it when you know you do your part and the team scores a touchdown.

"It feels good, it's good to know everyone is working towards the same goal," Zych said. "You see it all come together and when we cross the goal line, everybody just knows how hard you worked to make that play happen. Everybody's got to do their part on every play, and it's worthwhile when you cross that goal line."

He also feels that the position of offensive line is misinterpreted by many people as well.

"People think we're just like big, dumb, and block whoever you see in front of you," Zych said. "Little do they know we need to know just as much as the quarterbacks."

Zych will be one of the three guys on the line ending his career this season and he feels that it has been a great ride.

"I love it, I learned a lot about what UMass football is all about, and what this school is all about," Zych said. "I love it, and I've meet a lot of great people, made a lot of great friends and gone through some great times together. I can look back on my experience here and say that I thoroughly enjoyed it, and it was worth while me coming here."

Dan Markowski, Senior left tackle (6'5" 302) — Markowski began his career in Liverpool, N.Y., and was an offensive lineman his whole career from when he started playing through his days at Liverpool High School.

He has said that he has enjoyed the opportunity to play for a great organization at UMass and has had a great time and success doing his job out there.

"I came here, and I've had a chance to play for four years, Markowski said. "The tradition that's been here, the players I've played with, the players that played before me, the players that are coming, the tradition is just great. I'm having a great time."

He is the starting left tackle for the fourth consecutive season here at UMass and has his likes and dislikes about the position.

"The offensive line is a great position because you work together so much with somebody else, and you feel you can get more accomplished if you're working with somebody else," Markowski said. "The negatives, getting beat up all the time isn't the best thing in the world, but it goes with the positives."

Markowski believes that the offensive line gets a lot of credit from the team because they know that they're doing a lot of hard work and doing the best job they can.

"The team definitely shows support, because everybody in football knows the offensive line doesn't get credit, so we get it from our team and our coaches, but we're going to get the positives and negatives," Markowski said.

Being on a team and working with the guys that help set school records in numerous rushing categories is not as pleasing to Markowski, as he says the win/loss record is much more important.

"Our record right now is 3-1; it's a great start and hopefully we can keep it going," Markowski said. "I really don't care about the statistics as long as the wins keep coming."• • •The offensive line of UMass shares many characteristics and are a great bunch of guys. They just want to be regarded as regular people with a job to do on the field. When they're not chowing down, or playing their favorite football games on Sega, they are an integral part of the Minuteman offense. The offensive line, a group in football that is not to be overlooked.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CHINESE FOOD KAI CHI Delivering Sunday-Thursday to 2am, Friday and Saturday to 3am

The Sisters of Sigma Delta Tau would like to congratulate our new members: Farah, Heather, Jaime, Jen, Michele, Sarah, and Steffany.

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car inspected? Do you know your rights? Contact the Student Legal Service Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

1990 Dodge Dynasty automatic, 4 doors, air bag, A/C. Excellent condition $2875 (508)-544-3782

1986 Oldsmobile Delta 88 $1,000 Runs Great. 323-1174

1988 Toyota Low mileage, standard $1000.00. 586-9501 After 5:00 pm

1987 Mazda 626 129k miles but runs great, standard shift, P/W, P/L, sunroof, priced for quick sale. $1200 firm 549-0701 days, 323-9233 evenings

1984 Honda Accord AT, AC, PW, PL, cruise, 110k, mint. Call Jarrod 546-9282

1985 Buick Skylark Dependable Ask $1000 or BO Call Brian (413)774-2107

EMPLOYMENT

Business Opportunity. Need additional income? Want the energy to earn it? Earth-Friend, company looking for distributors. Wild Organic Food, free tape 1-800-977-7527 ext. 7368

Spring Break!! Earn Cash!! Highest Commissions! Lowest Prices! Travel free on only 13 sales! Free Info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

Cruise Ships Hiring - Earn up to $2,000+/month! World Travel! Seasonal and Full Time positions. No exp. necessary. For info call 1-206-971-3550 ext C50315

National Parks Hiring - Positions are now available at National Parks, Forests and Wildlife Preserves. Excellent benefits and bonuses! Call 1-206-971-3620 Ext. N50016

Tropical Resorts Hiring. Students needed! Entry level and career positions available worldwide. Call Resort Employment Services. 1-206-971-3600 Ext. R50012

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS! Over $ billion in public and private sector Grants and scholarships are now available. All students are eligible. Let us help. For more info: call 1-800-263-6495 Ext. F50014

International Employment - Earn up to $25-$45/hour teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S. Korea. No teaching background or Asian Languages required. For info, call 206-971-3570 Ext. J50015

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-9747

FOR SALE

Word Processor 4 Sale, excellent condition. $250.00 OBO, call Lisa 253-8195

Computer for Sale Macintosh LC for sale 10Mb RAM, External 100Mb RAM hard drive, Global Village 28.8 Global FAX external modem, System 7.1 software included. $700 or B/O. Call for more info, more software included. Scott 253-7838

Sofa for sale, oversized, modern, beige, like new. Orig. $525, asking $250. Call 256-1757

486SX Compact Laptop, 4 meg RAM, 120HD, MS Office 6.0, electronic pen, external CD ROM via PCMCIA, Canon Bubble Jet Printer, $950 or best offer 549-4850 Jason

Dorm Fridges 18"x18" Cheap and delivered!!! Name Your Price! Call 585-1154

Macintosh Performa 5215CD 75MHZ CPU, 8MB RAM, 1GB HD, 15" monitor, 14.4 Fax/Modem, 16 Bit Sound. Asking $1500 OBO. Call 584-8402

Mac Powerbook 140 8/80, fax/modem, software and portable printer w/case $1,000 Call Mike 587-0347

FOR SALE

Car Stereo AM/FM cassette, Dolby/noise reduction and 4 4.5" speakers (20 watts each) Features and digitally tuned. All for only $200/BO. Jeff 549-4334

2 Dave Matthews Tix Sun. Oct 6. Floor seats, Row 27. Best offer. Sam 546-2982

Mac Powerbook 520CO + Laser Printer $1,100/BO. For more info, call Amy 256-0413

1995 Trak 820 18" New derailer back wheel cranks. Grips/left barends, toestraps. Just tuned. $750 546-4849

1995 DMB Tix Row 7 Floor, 2 tix. Call 256-8630 and leave a message for Chris.

FOUND

Non-Prescription Sunglasses made by Guess. In WEB DuBois Library on 7th floor. Contact library to claim.

INSTRUCTION

Bartend with University Bartending 50% student discount. Amherst classes starting soon!! Call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX for info.

Fencing Lessons w/Opra Bumpus. Call for brochure 732-8817

PC/MAC Tutoring. Cheap instruction for computer. Patient, valuable help and advice. Set-ups, software, Internet (413)772-0633

English Language Consultant Available to International Students and Non-English Majors. Will edit papers and dissertations, also teach ESL. Call Ms. Reed, retired faculty member, for rate schedule and free initial consultation 253-3354

LOST

Lost Dog Reward - Missing from North Maple Street, Hadley since Sunday, Sept 22. Lab/Springer Spaniel Mix, answers to the name of Benny. Has lab features with shaggier coat. Primarily black with tan paws and black and white fluffy tail. Would be considered medium sized, approx. 34lbs. 25 inches tall. Only wearing silver choke collar- no tags. Call with any info. 549-1390. Ask for Shawn or Ben.

Lost near Totman Gym- Seeing Glasses. If found call Mike at 546-1876

Lost- Metal Black Matte Frame Glasses. If found please call Marina @549-3582

MOTORCYCLES

1980 CB 650 $500 or BO. 9650 miles runs well - must sell. Call 549-6646

1980 Suzuki GS750L 4-cyl., sadlebags, highway pegs, new battery, great street bike. $800/BO. Call Jesse 256-8142

MUSICIANS

Guitar Classes Start 9/10 - Rentals and lessons available. 10 wks/$40.00 FTUO. Call 545-0579

PERSONALS

Choices Not Chances Free contraception education. Every Mon & Thurs 3-4:30 and Tues & Wed 7-8:30pm in Rm 302 UHS. Men and Women welcome. For more information call Health Education Office 577-5181

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

ROOM FOR RENT

One room available in Amherst, on bus line. $285+ a month. 256-0535

ROOM WANTED

Looking for room in apt. on bus line for Spring 1997, call Amy 546-4700

SERVICES

Computer Problems? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Scream Savers 549-0063

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK! Earn cash! Highest commissions/lowest prices! Travel free on only 13 sales!! Free info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

Free Trips and Cash Find out how hundreds of student representatives are already earning free trips and lots of cash with America's #1 Spring Break Company! Sell only 15 trips and travel free! Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica, or Florida! Campus Manager positions also available. Call now! Take A Break Student Travel (800)95-Break

WANTED

Need Extra Phish Tix for Mon. Oct. 21 show MSG. 253-6658

Just some of the items bought and sold everyday through the Collegian Classifieds

Rates
$2.00 minimum /day
Students 20¢ per word /day
All others 40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
Candy or flowers are the gifts of choice to heal a romantic rift this week. Talk is cheap at the moment, at least as far as your sweetie is concerned. It's still important to keep the lines of communication open, though, so don't be afraid to try again.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
Your complete attention helps you pick up on a detail others will miss. Tactfully pointing this out could save a large project from certain disaster. A subtle reminder keeps a family member from committing a major faux pas.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
An argument between friends has everyone begging you to take their side. Don't be tempted: even though things may seem out and dried to you. You'll create even more animosities and prolong the healing process.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
A summer heat wave may have you feeling as though you can't cope. A brief rest and a cool drink may be all it takes to recharge your batteries. Don't hesitate to take a long weekend, though, if things are really bad.

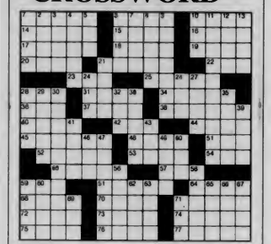
LEO
July 23-August 23
A road trip will be more fun if someone else offers to do the driving. A careful, pre-trip check may reveal a mechanical problem that's small—for the moment. A financial situation begins to improve.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
Acquiring a new skill proves to be a worthwhile enterprise this week. Your adaptability may soon be put to the test. A good week to find ways to economize—your ingenuity is flowing freely.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
An expansion, involving either your professional or your personal life, seems unnerving. But once you have all the information, you'll be able to make a good decision. Don't allow a small risk to dissuade you.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
A stubborn person may give you fits, especially if you are related to them. A good time for catching up if you've let some work slide for a while. Joint finances may be a source of tension—discuss them freely with all concerned parties.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
Although it's easy to squander money this week, try to avoid the temptation. A major expenditure may be in the offing. A group that shares your itinerants may be a good place to look for a romantic partner, if you're in the market.



CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
High energy levels and enthusiasm carry you through a particularly busy time. Compromise is in order when you knock heads with a strong-willed individual—the results could be extremely productive.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
A sweetheart may be in need of extra TLC. Find out what's bothering them when you have the opportunity. You'll be much better equipped to help that way. Little things, like cooking a meal for them, will help their morale a lot.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
A gathering of friends provides fertile ground for a discussion. Brainstorm as many ideas as possible, and then let the group's expertise sort out the genuine possibilities.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1. Drink deeply
6. Handle
10. Wan
14. Wiggly, for one
15. Midlands king
16. Passage for smoke
17. Style of expression
18. "___ True What They Say About Dixie?" (2 words)
19. Recount
20. Brouhaha
21. Accounts receivable, for one
22. Hit the hammock
23. Male sheep
25. Emulated Betsy Ross
28. Goof up
31. Hong ___
34. Olympic judge
36. Dasey ___ Yokum
37. Johnson of "Laugh-In"
38. Shaking in one's boots
40. ___ tacto
42. Laughing sound
44. Like Fox's "Roc"
45. Meager quantity
46. Sought reparations
51. Last letter
52. Word after freeze, often
53. Writer Gardner
54. Shade provider
55. Edition
57. Sweater size (abbr.)
58. Kind of room
61. Carved piece of jewelry
64. Creep
68. Four-cycle gas engine inventor
70. Muddled
71. Actress Dern
72. Aids for actors
73. Social events
74. Ria
75. Jeers
76. Mademoiselle's pronoun
77. Turns white

DOWN
1. Resign
2. Take down
3. Corrosive liquid
4. It's kept under the rug
5. Girlish (abbr.)
6. Kinds of rap
7. Famed Scottish loch
8. Acting awards
9. Horseshoe hitters
10. Rudder locale
11. Trim down
12. Story-telling dance
13. Complaint from Fido
21. "___ It Write"
24. New Zealand vine
26. Fem. soldier
27. Last shortener
28. Give birth
29. ___ transit
30. Exclusive
32. Utmost degree
33. Grayings
35. Make very merry
36. Consider
41. Cornelia ___ Skinner
43. Continental continent (abbr.)
44. ___ Girls
47. Teach
48. Roper or Lincoln
50. Letter on a Tigers uniform
56. Art stand
58. Fleet Street's favorite newspaper
59. "___ Around the Clock"
60. Toiletry case
62. Repeat
63. Leisure
65. Amounting to zero
66. Saskatchewan tribe
67. Barrels
68. Wartime agcy.
71. ___ gloss

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

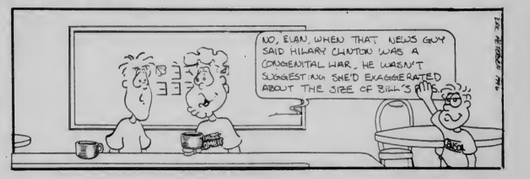
Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

Always Wanted One of Those By A. Morse & S. Dumas

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan



Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown Judd Winick

8 Years in Braces By Eric Peterson

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

I think one of the secrets of a contented life is obvious... Plan out your day, your month, or your week so that you are occupied by things you find delightful... Even if it is quiet and you are alone. For instance... On:

Mondays - have a nice dinner with friends

Tuesdays - watch your favorite T.V. show with a tasty snack

Wednesdays - do a home improvement job or clean something cherished

Thursdays - sit alone in the dark for hours

Fridays - go to a local lovely natural setting

Saturdays - do something athletic which pushes you to a new limit

Sundays - sit alone again in the dark until you cry.

University² By Frank Cho

Generation X By Chris Lehman

Hear Say By Emily Yang

Bastards By Matt and Greg

Close to Home By John McPherson

Dave hadn't lost a ball in seven years.

Today's Staff

Jacob W. Michaels
Night Editor

Lisa Chiu
Copy Editor

Jennifer Jutras
Photo Technician

Josh Sylvester
Production Supervisor

Joylyn Lombard
Jack Myers
Production

Dining Commons Menu

Menu unavailable. Please refer to this guide to help you decide where to eat.

1 First, go get some dice (6 sided, preferably).

2 Find one you like, and roll it.

If you roll:

- Go to Franklin D.C. for dinner.
- Go to Berkshire D.C. for dinner.
- Go to Hampshire D.C. for dinner.
- Go to Worcester D.C. for dinner.
- Get Pizza for dinner!
- Roll again.

Quote of the Day

"Nothing can save you. Not your friends, not the best Fred Astaire musical you've ever seen, the grace of it, not your mothers beauty, not a line from a letter you find at the bottom of a drawer, not a magazine or the next day. Nothing can save you. And you stand in the moonlight and as sweetness comes off the top of the trees, and the fence around you seals you off from the dark and you cannot breathe. It is all so familiar and possible. It is too simple that there is this much good in there and you don't know how to have it. And it makes you wonder when it was you lost your place. Then you catch a breeze so warm and ripe, that it makes you hope that someone will come along who also cannot save you, but will think that you are worth saving."

–Susan Miller

Sports Notice:
There will be a MANDATORY meeting for all Collegian sports staff on Thursday night at 7 p.m. in the Collegian office. If you can't attend, you must call Casey or Chris at 545-1762.

Sports

In a nailbiter, field hockey outstrokes Northeastern

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts field hockey team apparently has a flair for the dramatic.

After playing Northeastern to a 1-1 tie in regulation during yesterday's game at Totman Field, the Minutewomen held off the Huskies for two sudden-death overtime periods before taking the win during a penalty stroke shootout.

The victory pushes No. 5 UMass' record to 8-1, 2-0 in the Atlantic 10 while No. 7 Northeastern drops to 4-4.

MASSACHUSETTS 4
NORTHEASTERN 3
Overtime

On the heels of two crucial defensive plays during overtime by senior Melanie Gore, junior Sharon Hughes found the back of the net on UMass' fifth and final stroke to give the team the win. Kyle Rothenberger and Amy Ott also scored on their strokes as UMass came away with a 3-2 advantage in the shootout.

"However long we have to stay out there we will," UMass coach Pam Hixon said. "We've never been in this position, we've never taken a stroke-off before."

Northeastern took an early lead after the Huskies were awarded a penalty corner with 9:43 before halftime. After the initial shot off the corner was blocked, Jackie Carl grabbed the rebound and knocked the ball past the Minutewoman defenders as UMass goalie Hilary Rose shifted to get into place.

Massachusetts came out firing in the second half, fighting for three unanswered corners. The third time was the charm for the Minutewomen, as Rothenberger tied the game with 15:09 remaining in regulation. Hughes and Kate Putnam set up Rothenberger's goal on the corner.

UMass held the advantage for the rest of the second half, with the Minutewomen being awarded four corners to Northeastern's one.

For both teams, each overtime period was dominated by defense. Through a rule change that was instituted last year, the extra period is played with only six players plus a goalie from each team on the field. In theory the idea was to open up scoring, but yesterday the exact opposite held true.

Gore stepped her game up to a new level and came away with what Hixon described as a career day. With 13:30 remaining in the first overtime the Huskies had a break opportunity. When Rose came out to stop the shot, the ball trickled by and appeared headed for the goal. Gore, who raced back from midfield, was able to get to the UMass net in time to clear the near-goal.

"Mel's really fast, she has really good skills and she's a tough competitor," Hixon said. "She elevated her game. Overall, Mel was the player of the game for us. She was everywhere, she really did a great job."

It was then Rose's turn to keep the Minutewomen in the game, as she came up with a pair of crucial saves with just under five minutes left in the extra period.

The Minutewomen and the Huskies headed back onto the field after the first OT to play an encore. And as if a case of deja vu enveloped Totman, with 8:50 to go Northeastern had a two-man break headed for the UMass cage.

After working past the defender, the Huskies faced Rose, who came out to meet the shooter. As the ball got past the UMass goalie, it was Gore who again saved the day for the Minutewomen, clearing the ball away from the goal.

"I figured [Rose] had [the saves] so I was just covering her," Gore said. "When I saw them sneak by I just decided it wasn't going in."

In the penalty stroke shootout, visiting Northeastern capitalized on the

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 11

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Melanie Gore saved the day with two huge defensive saves to propel the Minutemen to a 2-1 OT win over Northeastern.

Hughes claims penalty stroke spotlight with winning shot

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

The fans stood through the rain during regulation. They stayed for the first overtime. They remained for the second overtime. And when the time came for penalty strokes, they gathered at the sidelines to cheer their team on.

It was all worth it, as the Massachusetts field hockey team netted its final stroke of the best-of-five shootout to beat Northeastern yesterday at Totman Field, 2-1.

In collegiate field hockey if the game is tied at the regulation there is a 15-minute sudden death overtime period. If the score remains tied after that, another overtime is played. If after both extra periods there is no change in the score, the game goes to strokes.

Each team is given the chance to take five penalty strokes, alternating in order beginning with the visiting team, with the winner scoring the greater number of goals.

Yesterday's shootout was the first time UMass faced an overtime series of strokes.

"We've never been in this position, we've never taken a stroke-off before," UMass coach Pam Hixon said. "I told them not to worry about it."

As the rain started to pick up, the fans climbed down from the metal bleachers and gathered at the sidelines by the goal UMass had been defending during the overtimes. The two teams lined up on the 25-yard line, ready to cheer on either their stroker or goalie.

Northeastern's Katie West stepped up and fired a shot past UMass goalie Hilary Rose on Rose's lower right side. The Huskies and their fans cheered.

Senior midfielder and All-American Kyle Rothenberger took her place for UMass. After her shot bounced off NU goalie Danielle Butsch's pads, it trickled in to tie the shootout at one all. The UMass faithful echoed the cheers.

America East Player of the Week Keri Bettenhauser approached the line. She let loose with a shot to Rose's right, but Rose blocked it, sending a disheartened groan through the Husky huddle.

Amy Ott, who had played a solid game in the UMass backfield, took her turn at offense and turned in the second Minutewoman goal of the

Turn to HUGHES, page 11

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Mark Shalala (77), Ron Felice (50), Matt Alegi (66), Mark Zych (73) and Dan Markowski (79) make up the UMass offensive line.

Offensive line fights without fanfare

By Mike Carey
Collegian Staff

Too often in football you hear the phrase, "The line blocked great." And that is supposed to do justice to five guys who grind it out, fight off the defenders, scrape up their hands, bruise their bodies, and sacrifice themselves so the running back can run up the middle for 20 yards, or so the quarterback has all day to throw to the receivers? I don't think so.

The offensive line is by far the most underrated position in football. It's a position that nobody would like to play, and 99 percent of the time a position that is taken for granted. How often do you hear people say, "Come on, block." Most people do not know what that entails. Most of the time it means fighting off a 6-foot-3, 285 pound defensive lineman so your offense has time to develop.

And what gratification do these positions receive? Do you see a lineman jumping into the crowd after the team scores a touchdown, screaming with the fans, "Yeah, wasn't that block great." Not really. Although, much of the time this should be the case.

It's the offensive line that most definitely contributes to why your running back scores a touchdown, or why your quarterback throws the TD pass.

These are the guys that work hard and muscle it out so that your team can put points up on the board. And while other players have statistics to show for their accomplishments, what does the offensive line have? There should be something given to these guys, a label or something to show their achievements, because without them, the offense does not run.

So who are these guys anyway? Not many people know who they are, they rarely get interviewed, and hardly receive the amount of press necessary when talking about a football team and how well the offense performed on a certain day.

So here are the five starting offensive linemen from the University of Massachusetts Football team, the same five guys that from a year ago paved the way for the Minutemen to have the top rushing offense in the nation, while allowing only 12 sacks. This is the group that helped the Minutemen set school records for total yards rushing (3,329), rushing yards per game average (302.6), and rushing yards per carry (5.3). And this is the group with the talent and experience that has enabled the Minutemen to get off to a 3-1 start so far this season.

Mark Shalala, senior right tackle (6'2" 285) — Reigning from Niskayuna, N.Y., Shalala is co-captain for the team and is starting for the third consecutive season at right tackle for the Minutemen. Shalala made the switch from center to right tackle this season and has started 17 times the past three years.

"In the offensive line we all get to play as one," Shalala said. "When we put together really good drives and we score. It's like the best feeling, no other feeling really beats it."

Shalala was not always an offensive lineman though, as back in high school he tried out other positions before making the switch.

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 12

Ohio State building steam, Peyton plays daddy's team

LUKE MEREDITH on College Football

I spent a lazy July afternoon this past summer climbing Mt. Greylock, the jewel of the Berkshires, with a devoted Ohio State fan. When the subject of his beloved Buckeyes came up, he said, "Watch out for the Red and Grey. Luke, because they just might surprise you."

I pondered his assessment for a minute or two, and then, with the grace and dignity that have become my trademarks, responded with, "Yeah right!"

Well, consider me surprised.

Can you believe how good Ohio State looked last Saturday? The Buckeyes trounced Notre Dame 29-16, and in the process may have established themselves as the team to beat in the Big 10. Quarterback Stanley Jackson has filled Bobby Hoying's shoes very well and the emergence of PePe (LePew) Pearson has given OSU a balanced offensive attack. And as far as offensive lineman Orlando Pace goes, Lou Holtz proclaimed him the best lineman in football before the game, and, for once, the always dramatic Holtz may have been right. I honestly didn't think that the Buckeyes could lose Hoying. Terry Glenn, Eddie George and Rickey Dudley and still compete for a Big 10 crown. After years of being maligned as a bad coach, John Cooper may finally be given the credit he's due.

All of this is irrelevant, of course, if the Buckeyes don't win this Saturday. Joe Paterno and the Penn State Nittany Lions come to Columbus ranked No. 4 in the country, outscoring their opponents 161-34 in the process. We all know about Curtis Enis, who I praised four weeks ago. Curtis hasn't let me down, but Penn State QB Wally Richardson has.

Penn State has beaten an overrated USC team and squeaked by Wisconsin last week. That's just not good enough, Papa Joe. If the Nittany Lions aren't careful, they could be down by 50 points before halftime, with dreams of Rose Bowl glory fading like a northern Ohio sunset.

Besides the Ohio State-Penn State showdown, there's really not much else going on this weekend.

Nebraska gets another test Saturday when they travel to Manhattan to take on Big 12 North leader Kansas State.

The Cornhuskers can't afford another loss, and if they get past the rest of their schedule, they could still be in the hunt for a third straight national title. The pollmakers haven't dropped the Huskers too far down, despite

Turn to OHIO STATE, page 11

Nash and Nolan leaders in new and improved squad

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

One year has made quite a difference for the Massachusetts volleyball team.

Despite losing only two (non-starters) to graduation, the roster has received a complete makeover. Questioning their commitment level, coach Bonnie Kenny removed Giza Rivera, Rachel Sky, and Maria Dueño from the squad, while Leigh Readey removed herself.

It's quite a risk when you send home your leading scorer (Rivera) and your leader in hitting percentage and blocks (Sky). In addition, the Minutewomen also lost graduating senior Cass Anderson, who relinquished her starting job last season to Katie Pearce, yet was the team's all-time leader in assists, and provided sound veteran leadership.

However, the risk was a well-calculated one, for two reasons: Dionne Nash and Lesley Nolan.

Nash, a senior, and Nolan, a junior, comprise perhaps the most feared duo of outside hitters in the Atlantic 10 conference. They've witnessed first-hand the transition from a talented, yet uncohesive group of teammates to a younger bunch, full of chemistry and enthusiasm. And maybe even one with more wins.

"I think last year there was a lack of dedication," said Nash. "You need a true love and desire for the sport to play volleyball. Devotion is so important at the Division 1 level. This year we have that. It's more fun, it's no longer a chore. Last year it seemed like we were running suicides more than we were celebrating."

Nolan echoed her partner's words.

"To be honest, I didn't look forward to practicing last season," she said. "It's so hard to stay motivated when you don't have a full commitment from everyone on the team. Volleyball has a lot to do with how much you put into it. As a team we sort of made it hard last year by coming into the season with a negative attitude.

"This year is great. I like the chemistry of the team and the fact that everyone works hard, all the time. To get better, everyone is willing to do what it takes. We really get along well. Last season we had a few cliques, but not now."

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN
Dionne Nash combines with Lesley Nolan to form the core of a revamped volleyball squad.

So far, Kenny's work off the court has paid off. She saw what was happening in 1995, and went out and recruited some young blood, including a top 50 prospect in Kari Hogancamp, and the recently named A-10 Player of the Week, Jill Meyers. Pearce, Michelle Paciorek and Susan Maga, all playing better than ever, are the other returnees. Right now, UMass is 13-3, and 2-1 in the A-10. No question, she's replaced the old talent. And her old attitude?

"Coach has mellowed out this year," said Nolan. "I think she realizes that we're here not just for volleyball and academics, but to enjoy ourselves [in other ways]. And the fact that we're working hard and playing well makes her job easier."

Although the two have yet to hit mid-season form completely, revealing milestones have already been reached. Nash, who entered the season as the only Minutewoman to ever earn 1,000 kills, became the very first to reach the 1,000 dig mark. Pearce has since joined her in both categories and still will return next season.

The two complement each other on the court, and compliment each other off of it.

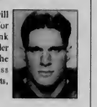
"I love playing with Lesley," said Nash. "She is so consistent, which is really important in volleyball. I respect her as a player, she can do it all. She's played injured, and never complains."

"I love Dionne," said Nolan. "It won't be the same next year without her. UMass volleyball is Dionne Nash, you know? And she's one of the best players in the conference."

So, instead of this being a down year for the program, the Minutewomen figure to be in the thick of things down the stretch. At least that's where these two expect to be.

"I definitely want to make it to the [A-10 Championships]," said Nolan. "I'm excited to play Rhode Island. I know they beat us the first time, but it wasn't our best night, myself included. And then if we could make the NCAA's, that would be great. I'm not going to leave here until we make those!"

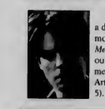
"Winning the A-10's is my primary goal," said Nash. "And then whatever we could accomplish after that. If we stay focused on our goals, and keep working hard, we can do it."



And they probably can. The freshmen are still learning, and it's scary to think they'll only get better. Individual consistency and coming back from deficits seem to be two of the biggest problems with the club, but it's a good time of the year to have those types of woes.

Nash and Nolan probably figured they'd take on a leadership role at this time in their collegiate careers, however, it seems as if they welcome the task.

"I'm really enjoying this situation," said Nash. "We have a good group of girls who want to play and want to win."



The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 23 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Friday, October 4, 1996

Minutemen look to Ram URI

Matt Jordan will have to step in for the injured Frank Allesio and shoulder the burden of the maligned UMass offense (see Sports, page 10).

Is there a doctor in the house?

Hugh Grant plays a doctor in his latest movie, Extreme Measures. Check out our review of the medical thriller (see Arts & Living, page 5).

WORLD

Israel won't pull-back; Palestine retaliates

HEBRON, West Bank (AP) — Palestinian demonstrators burned U.S. flags and stoned Israeli soldiers yesterday after a Washington summit failed to meet Palestinian demands that Israel set a date for a troop pull-back in Hebron and close a Jerusalem tourist tunnel. Across the West Bank, Israel kept tanks and soldiers posted outside Palestinian towns to put down possible riots, but officials said Israel's grip might slowly be eased if violence does not erupt anew.

Tanks pulled back from the Palestinian town of Qalqilya in the West Bank, out of sight of residents, and travel restrictions were eased around Bethlehem and Jericho.

For the past week, Palestinians in the West Bank have been barred by Israeli troops from leaving their communities, keeping workers from their jobs.

On the hills outside Ramallah — where Palestinian police and Israeli troops fought armed battles last week — Israeli snipers were set up in eight positions, and a tank stationed nearby.

"We will stay this way as long as necessary," Brig. Gen. Dovik Tal, a tank commander, said on Israeli army radio.

NATION

Senate works on bill for better FAA safety

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators eager to end a long and fractious session made progress yesterday on one of their last pieces of business, a Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) bill snarled in a divisive labor dispute.

The Senate voted 66-31, six more than the 60 votes needed, to cut off debate and move toward final passage on the FAA bill authorizing airport improvements and new security measures over the next two years.

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said that with airline safety a major concern to the nation, the bill was too important for further delay.

"This would be a senseless roll of the dice if we did not invoke cloture this morning."

Completion of the FAA bill, and possible action on a federal parks bill, would bring to an end the 104th Congress, the first in 40 years to be controlled by Republicans.

There is wide support for the basic provisions of the FAA bill. But Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., and other Democrats have blocked action because of what they say is inclusion of a special interest favor to Federal Express — a provision making it more difficult for Federal Express workers to organize.

Regardless of the vote, Kennedy said, the debate had "placed a spotlight on a cynical Republican attempt to help one of their corporate friends at the expense of that company's employees."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 50 LOW: 40	HIGH: 65 LOW: 35	HIGH: 60 LOW: 40

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 10

PVTA schedules cut

Reduction attributed to shortage of staff

By Daniel E. Levenson
Collegian Staff

Starting on Oct. 7 and continuing until the end of the semester on Dec. 21, PVTA buses will be running on a reduced schedule during non-peak hours.

The reduction is due mainly to a shortage of bus drivers. According to the PVTA, fewer students applied for employment this year than expected.

According to Michelle Goldberg, Director of Marketing and Public Relations for the PVTA, the lack of student drivers has put significant strains on full-time personnel.

"Even the manager has been driving buses," Goldberg said.

The affected bus routes will include those servicing North Amherst, South Amherst, Belchertown Road, Sunderland and the campus shuttle.

These routes will run every 20 minutes instead of every 10 minutes during the day time week day schedule. However, during the peak times from 8-9:30 a.m., the schedule will continue to run every 10 minutes.

Goldberg emphasized that these measures are not permanent, calling them "short term."

"This is a temporary solution," she said.

Students have expressed concerns over the serious potential for overcrowding that is likely to come with the change in bus schedules.

Goldberg explained that if drivers are unable to accommodate all the passengers at a stop, they will be able to radio to the dispatcher and request a "helper" bus to accommodate the surplus passengers.

"Hopefully there won't be too much of an effect on the overcrowding situation," she said.

The PVTA hopes to restore normal bus route schedules in the spring.

Normally, the PVTA employs 155 student drivers — so far only 115 drivers have been hired this year.

The PVTA is currently seeking student applicants who have their Commercial Drivers Licenses.

Jeff Coker, Secretary of Finances for the Student Government Association (SGA), said that the reductions by the PVTA are probably going to have a negative effect on the students who depend on the buses as their primary source of transportation. He noted that lack of interest of students, not the actions or inactions of the University, has led to this problem.

"If services are cut what's going to happen to the students?" asked Coker. "Are they going to be running to the campus every morning to get to school?"

Coker commented that the main reason for the cutback is lack of student employees — apparently many student drivers either graduated last year or did not seek re- employment this year.

If overcrowding becomes a enormous problem, Coker said that although the PVTA is not directly connected to the University, it is a student service and the SGA will attempt to be of some use.

COURTNEY SMITH/COLLEGIAN
Slam!
Lisa Martinovic, on tour with the Ozark Poets from Arkansas, inspired coffee-drinkers at Claudia's Cafe Wednesday evening. Claudia's holds poetry readings the first Friday of each month.

Toni Morrison to read work at Smith College

By Michelle Hillman
Collegian Staff

Nobel Laureate, author and writer Toni Morrison will read and discuss her work Monday, Oct. 7, at Smith College in the John M. Greene Hall.

Morrison, an immensely popular contemporary author of six major novels including The Bluest Eye, Sula, Song of Solomon, Tar Baby, Beloved and Jazz. Morrison was the recipient of the National Book Critics Award for Song of Solomon in 1977, the Pulitzer Prize for Beloved in 1988 and the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1993.

Morrison also has a collection of essays entitled Playing in the Dark and edited a collection called Race-ing Justice, En- Gendering Power, Essays on Anita Hill, Clarence Thomas and the Construction of Social Reality.

Morrison has degrees from Howard and Cornell Universities, has been a Robert F. Goheen Professor in the Council of the Humanities at Princeton University since 1989, has taught at Yale, Bard and Rutgers and has lectured and held visiting professorships elsewhere. She also was the Albert Schweitzer Professor in the Humanities at the State University of New York at Albany from 1984 to 1989.

Morrison has been awarded several honorary degrees from many institutions and prestigious awards such as the Rhegium Julii Prize for Literature; the Condorcet Medal, Paris; Pearl Buck Award; Commander of the Order of Arts and Letter, Paris; and the Modern Language Association of America Commonwealth Award in Literature.

Morrison's other accomplishments include senior editor at Random House for 20 years, founding member of the Academic Universelle Des Culture, a member of the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters, member of Africa Watch and Helsinki Watch Committees.

This event is sponsored by the Campus Climate Working Group and is free and open to the public.

Student harassment addressed by Faculty Senate, Rep. Harold Lane

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

At yesterday's Faculty Senate meeting, Representative Harold Lane gave an address and Graduate Student Senate (GSS). President Deepika Marya spoke on behalf of the international students who have been harassed.

Lane, who is a University of Massachusetts alumnus, began the meeting by informing the faculty senate about the present state of public higher education in the Commonwealth's legislation.

"I feel the legislation needs to spend as much time on public higher education as it has on K through 12," said Lane.

According to Lane, important areas concerning higher education in the legislation are a 7.7 percent increase to the higher education budget and the successful severing of the UMass system to contribute to the $64 million Board of Higher Education (BHE) fund.

Because of the increase, public higher education received $30 million more than what Governor William Weld recommended in his budget.

"Public higher education has improved significantly over the past three years," Lane said.

The BHE has created a $64 million dollar fund which they will distribute to public higher education institutions based on merit. However, schools will have to contribute to this fund.

"The fact that UMass is severed from contributing to the Board of Higher Education fund is nearly as important as the 7.7 percent increase," said Lane.

Lane also said that Senator Stan Rosenberg's Fair Share initiative is very important to public higher education. He hopes to be a principle sponsor of the bill when it arrives to the House in January.

Turn to Lane, page 3

Reporter discusses Northern Ireland

By Joe Spackman
Collegian Correspondent

The peace process in Northern Ireland is at a crossroads, according to Boston Globe reporter Kevin Cullen.

Cullen, a graduate of the University of Massachusetts, gave a talk for the Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies in Machmer Hall Wednesday evening.

His speech aimed to give an unbiased view of the current state of Ireland based on his experiences there.

"When people talk about the situation in Northern Ireland," Cullen said. "They seem to take either an 'everything is rosy' or 'the sky is falling in' approach. I want to offer some balance. I have got good news and bad news."

According to Cullen, there seems to be a new attitude emerging in Ireland against violent action, which is the beginning of the good news.

"The loyalist cease-fire is still holding and the IRA (Irish Republican Army) in Northern Ireland at least, are more concerned with agitation than assassination," he said.

Cullen compared the reactions to the violent riots of 1969 and 1996. In 1969, he said, the result was nationalist outrage and the reforming of a militant IRA. The reaction this year was far less extreme. The IRA seemed able to contain nationalist anger and channel it into more peaceful protests.

"Violence is no longer seen as the quickest or most pragmatic way of achieving the nationalists goal of a united Ireland," Cullen said.

According to Cullen, there is also a noticeable difference in the recent activities of the IRA in Ireland. They may be continuing their terrorist activities in Great Britain but they are restraining themselves in Northern Ireland.

At a rally in Belfast in August, to mark the 25th anniversary of Interment, Cullen says the new attitude of the IRA was evident.

Interment was the British response to increased unrest in Northern Ireland, which included military and police actions.

He recognized a couple of known IRA members pretending they were policemen as a part of a theater show.

"It seemed to me the prospect of IRA making fun of policemen rather than shooting them bodes well for the peace process," Cullen said.

Cullen also says that it is good news that almost all the sides are currently represented in discussions.

The future is not all promising though, as Cullen is quick to point out. Violence is continuing despite the rhetoric.

"Republicans and loyalists are burning each others churches, halls, places of business," Cullen said. "And like Nero, the politicians are fiddling."

The fresh bombing campaign in Great Britain highlights the IRA's distrust of London but also ensures the loyalist cease-fire is unlikely to hold out in face of the increasing nationalist violence.

Cullen says another difficulty is the predisposition of hatred and tension on all sides of the conflict.

"The essence of a war mentality is that one side must lose, or be seen to lose, and one side must win, or be seen to win," Cullen said.

According to Cullen, the future of Northern Ireland depends on eliminating this old view and encouraging the emerging opinion, which is more prevalent among the younger generation in Ireland — that 25 years of violence have solved nothing and benefitted no one.

"The peace process ultimately is about convincing the vast majority of paramilitaries and the people who support them on the ground that there are alternatives to violence," Cullen said.

According to Cullen, these new ideas need to permeate people's thinking before Northern Ireland leaves the crossroads it has reached along a path leading away from the prospect of permanent peace.

EDIC promotes growth

By Beth McCarthy
Collegian Staff

The town of Amherst will attempt to persuade its citizens to approve of the formation of an Economic Development Industrial Corporation (EDIC) on Oct. 9 at a public meeting held by the Amherst Economic Development Industrial Task Force.

According to Connie Kruger of the planning department in Bangs Community Center, the EDIC is a special corporation that will be able to buy, sell and own real estate on a "very limited" basis.

The non-profit corporation would be controlled by the town. By purchasing land, the EDIC would be able to direct development prospects toward local investors and merchants.

"The ultimate control is with the town meetings," said Jane Weisner, co-chair of EDIC. "We wouldn't be recommending this if there wasn't strict control by the town."

Weisner explained that EDIC would not be able to purchase property until they obtained prior approval from the board of selectmen at town meetings.

Hill Boss, an Amherst Selectboard member, who is in full support of this special corporation, added that EDIC would "act as an agent of the town."

With its present proposal, EDIC would not be able to take any steps in "committing town finances" without a two- thirds vote at town meetings, said Boss.

"The town has adequate safeguards," Boss reassured.

One of the primary goals that Boss wanted to reach for when he first ran for his position was to diversify Amherst's economy.

"Diversification is only one of the needs for economic development," said Boss. "There are over 17,000 employed people in Amherst and 8,800 are employed by the three academic institutions."

According to a study done by UMass for the town of Amherst, 7,800 of the 8,800 employees work for UMass, 600 are employed by Amherst College and 340 by Hampshire College. Those numbers equal approximately half of the total amount of employed people in Amherst.

According to Kruger, the town is "too reliant on one main employer," meaning the universities. She also pointed out that when there are cut-backs at these institutions, it affects the entire town, and EDIC would attempt to secure that from happening.

EDIC is not looking to attract a

Turn to EDIC, page 3

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Friday, Oct. 4

Lecture/Discussion — Mt. Holyoke College presents Torie Osborn, activist and author of Coming Home to America: A Roadmap to Gay and Lesbian Empowerment, at 4 p.m. at the Five College Women's Research Center in the Dickinson Living Room at Mt. Holyoke College.

Music — Spectral Voices will perform harmonic singing at the Montague Bookmill. Come hear their celestial harmonies and unique vocal styles, that draw from roots in Tibetan Buddhist chants. Admission $7 at the door. For more information, call Jim at (860) 633–5057.

Religious — There will be a NFTY-Style creative service with guitar at 6 p.m. in the rec room of Hillel. Dinner will be served at 7 p.m. For more information, call 549–1710.

Religious — Hoshanah Rabbah morning service, 7 a.m. at Chabad House at 30 N. Hadley Rd., Amherst. Free and open to the public. For more information, call 549–4094.

Religious — Shemini Atzeret and holiday evening service, with a free holiday meal to follow at 7 p.m. at Chabad House, 30 N. Hadley Rd., Amherst. Free and open to the public.

Religious — Two Shabbat Services: Regular and NFTY Reunion, 6 p.m. at Hillel House, 388 N. Pleasant St., Amherst.

Saturday, Oct. 5

Clean–up — MassPIRG, together with Smith College, is sponsoring a clean-up of Oxbow Marina 10 a.m.–1 p.m. Everyone is invited to attend. Meet at the MassPIRG office, room 423A in the Student Union at 9:45 a.m. Rides will be provided.

Religious — Big Five–College Simchat Torah celebration and party, 7 p.m., Hillel House, 388 N. Pleasant St., Amherst.

Retreat — United Christian Foundation's Student Fellowship invites interested students to a 24–hour retreat in the Berkshires. Meet at the Folsum House, 367 N. Pleasant St., at noon; return by Sunday at 1 p.m. For details, contact Yuland Daley at 546–3659, or Kent Higgins at 549–3501.

Tournament — A volleyball tournament, sponsored by the Math dept., will be in Boyden Gym at 2 p.m., with the undergrad math majors taking on math grad students. All math majors are invited to attend, but please sign up in 1521D of LGRT. Pizza party to follow.

Sunday, Oct. 6

Meeting — Are you from the West Indies or the Caribbean? Or do you have relatives from there? Do you want to learn more about the history and culture of these places? Everyone interested is cordially invited to attend a meeting at 7 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge. For more information, contact Tony at 546–6487, or Nizam at 546–3967.

MassPIRG — MassPIRG Hunger & Homelessness Group is going to a local soup kitchen, Not Bread Alone, 10:30 a.m.–2 p.m. If you are interested, please contact Amanprit or Frank at 545–0199 or come by the MASSPIRG office in 423A S.U.

Notices

Education —The HCAH HEAD START program has immediate openings for its free pre-school Classroom and Home Base option. The two Amherst classrooms are open Mon–Fri 8:30 a.m.–12:30 p.m. Breakfast, lunch and transportation are provided. To obtain a pre–registration form or for additional information, call the Head Start main office at 582–4206 or the Amherst center at 549–3993.

UMass Hang Gliding Club — Learn how to hang glide. The UMass Hang Gliding Club is sponsoring a beginner weekend on Oct. 19–20. Sign up now because space is limited. This is the cheapest way to learn how to fly — no experience necessary. Meetings are on Tuesdays at 6:30 p.m.; everyone is invited to attend. Check board by SU ballroom for location of meetings and office hours. For more information, call 545–0804 and leave a message.

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley offers rides to students to attend the 10 a.m. service in Amherst. Drivers arrive at the Knowlton and Prince bus stops at 9:45. Please call Mark to confirm, or for other stops, at 253–0361.

Everywoman's Center — Acculturation Group for Latina Women, facilitated by Mari Vicente, Thurs. 4–6 p.m. Child Sexual Abuse Survivors Support Groups: Group 1 facilitated by Sara Elinoff, Mondays 7–9 p.m. Group 2 facilitator, day, and time TBA. Coming Out Group For Lesbians, facilitated by Lynne Schachne, Mondays 4–5:30 p.m. Lifting Your Spirits, facilitated by Carla Brennan and Diana Dalendina, Weds. 4–5:30 p.m. Eco–Psychology for Women, facilitated by Carla Brennan, Fridays 10–11:30 a.m. Post Abortion Support Group, facilitated by Peggy Warwick, Wednesdays 5:30–6:30 p.m. Self–Esteem & Assertiveness for Women, facilitated by Carla Brennan, Wednesdays 6:30–8 p.m. Single Mothers Support Group, facilitated by Amy Rosebury, Tuesdays 1–2:30 p.m. Women & Divorce, facilitated by Ali Thompson, Tuedays 6:30–8 p.m. All groups offered by the Everywoman's Center begin in October and offer a safe and confidential space. For other groups, call 545–0883.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition meetings are every Tuesday at 7 p.m. in room 306 of the Student Union. For more information, call the ARC office at 5–1925.

Staff Needed — The UMass Index yearbook needs staff in all departments. Editorial positions are available in Photo, Layout, Copy and Marketing departments. An assistant copy editor and assistant sports editor are also needed. Meetings are held on Wednesdays at 7 p.m., 304 Student Union, or call 545–0848 if interested.

Religious — The Muslim Student Association at the University of Massachusetts invites all Muslims in the Amherst area to weekly Friday prayer 1–2 p.m. in the Campus Center. The room number will be posted on the Notice Board. For more information, call Utama at 256–8482 or Laili at 253–0874.

Discussion Group — "A Course in Miracles" will meet 7– 8:30 p.m. for 10 weeks on Mondays starting in September. For more information, call 253–3795.

Dance — The Northeast American School of Dance Studio in Northampton will hold a dance spree every Friday 8:30 p.m. to midnight every Friday. People can dance to variety of music in a smoke and alcohol–free environment. All ages welcome. Sliding scale. For more information. call 584–8167.

Work–Study — All undergraduate students who have received federal work–study as part of their financial aid package must be on payroll by Friday, Oct. 11, 1996 or have a deferral form filed at the Student Employment office by that same date. If you do not get on payroll or do not defer your work–study, you will only receive your spring portion of your award. Any questions, please call the Student Employment office at 545–1530, or visit our office located in room 243, Whitmore.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage
Sept. 30
There was a minor accident on Governors Drive.
Oct. 2
There was a minor accident with no injuries on North Pleasant St.

Alarm — (Pre) Fire
Sept. 30
A smoke detector malfunctioned in Gorman Residence Hall.
Oct. 1
A smoke detector was activated by burnt toast in McNamara Residence Hall.

Assist Citizen
Sept. 30
AAA was contacted for assist with keys locked in a vehicle at the Police Station.
AAA assisted with a dead battery in parking lot 13.

Assist Agency
Oct. 2
Mt. Holyoke reported two missing females; a return call stated that the missing females had returned.

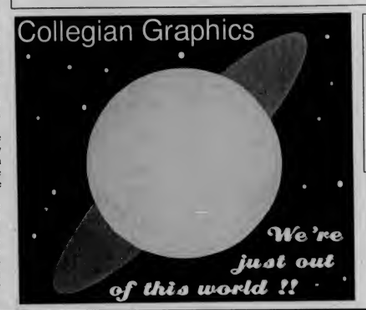
Burglary/Breaking and Entering
Sept. 30
The apiary and beehive garage was broken into.
Oct. 1
The apiary garage reported that nothing appears missing.
An office in Bartlett Hall was entered and tampered with.

Drug Law Offenses
Sept. 30
The odor of marijuana was reported from Mackimmie Residence Hall.

Larceny
Sept. 30
A mountain bike was reported stolen from Lederle Graduate Building.
A wallet was reported stolen from Herter Hall.
Oct. 1
A GT bicycle found in Mackimmie Residence Hall was turned into the police.
A meter was reported missing from parking lot 34.
A blue mountain bike was reported stolen from Gorman Residence Hall.
A missing notebook was reported located in the Campus Center.

Lost/Found Property
Oct. 2
A purse found was turned into the police; the owner was notified.

Noise Complaint
Oct. 2
A loud story was reported from Brown Residence Hall.



Restraining Order Service
Sept. 30
Jerry Reid, 37, of 555 Pufton Village Apartments, was arrested on a warrent.

Suspicious Vehicle
Oct. 1
A vehicle in parking lot 32 reportedly had a windshield smashed; appeared to be old damage.
A vehicle in parking lot 32 appeared to roll out of its space.

Suspicious Person/Activity
Oct. 2
Individuals were reportedly collecting leaves for a project outside of Machmer Hall.
A caller from Tobin Hall reported receiving a threatening note.
Skateboarders were gone on arrival at the Fine Arts Center.
Oct. 3
A bottle was thrown at an individual at Brown Residence Hall.
Individuals in parking lot 22 were questioned about breaking into a vehicle. Owners were notified and assisted in checking property.

Stolen Motor Vehicle
Sept. 30
A motor vehicle was reported stolen from parking lot M2.

Vandalism
Oct. 1
A vending machine in Mary Lyon Residence Hall was tipped over.

With your help, MDA is building a tomorrow without neuromuscular diseases.
CONSTRUCTION AHEAD
MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association
1-800-572-1717
CONSTRUCTION AHEAD

Let's get down to business.
Consider FIDELITY.

We're almost there. Fidelity Investments® will be on campus on Wednesday, October 9th. Intrigued? We hope so. If you're a dynamic, hard-working individual with an entrepreneurial spirit, there could be a place for you at Fidelity.

If you're interested, come talk to us.

Fidelity Investments Systems Company Information Session

Wednesday, October 9th at 7:00 p.m.
Campus Center

Business Casual Attire

Systems Company Associates Program

The Systems Company of Fidelity Investments provides systems and software development, operations support and technology services to the business units of Fidelity Investments. We are currently recruiting graduating seniors for a select number of positions in the Systems Company Associates Program. This program provides an individual with rotational assignments over a 24 month period in various technical disciplines. Individuals will work with information-systems solutions across multiple technological platforms. Business and technical training will be provided in addition to the regular day-to-day job responsibilities.

This program is designed for those who wish to use their systems and academic experience to support our business objectives. Fidelity Investments is committed to advanced technology encompassing the latest development tools, systems upgrades, and leading-edge applications.

For information regarding on-campus interviewing, please contact your Career Services Office.

If you are unable to attend our information session or on-campus recruiting, please e-mail your resume to julie.pedicini@fmr.com or send your resume to:

Julie A. Pedicini
Fidelity Investments Systems Company
82 Devonshire Street, Mail Zone A9C
Boston, MA 02109-3614

Fidelity Investments®

Fidelity Investments is committed to creating a diversified environment, and proud to be an equal opportunity employer.

■ Lane

continued from page 1

Representative Lane awarded the Legislation a B+ for this year's budget. Yet he said that Weld deserves no better than a D.

"His [Weld] words never matched his proposals," said Lane.

Lane stressed that higher education needs to become much more accountable for what is done in education itself.

"We are in a new age which necessitates telling the public exactly what we are doing with their money," said Lane, "We need your [faculty] help to tell the story of UMass to the public."

He added that there was a need to see a cultural shift of how people perceive UMass.

"Faculties need to be more political," said Lane. "UMass needs to find other champions of education other than Sen. Rosenberg and Representative Ellen Story (D–Amherst)."

Chancellor David K. Scott said that Lane always stands strongly behind education.

In his brief address to the faculty senate, Scott said, "Thanks for getting this term kicked off on an extremely positive note, even with the extra stress being caused by the increase in students."

Scott also thanked the persons from the physical plant and all other grounds people who have made the campus look great.

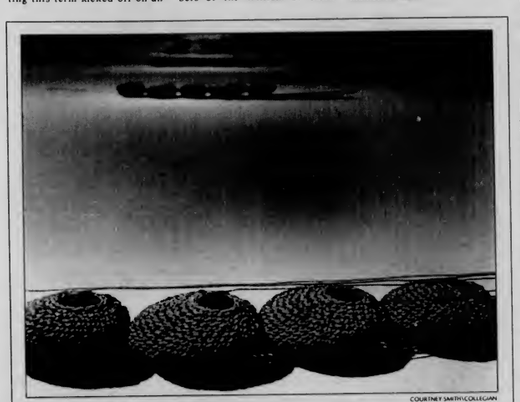
Scott also asked faculty members to take the United Way/COMEC campaign to a new level. Presently the rate of participation is 22 percent, but Scott said that the goal for this year is 50 percent.

Scott himself presently donates 2 percent of his own $150,000 salary to the campaign.

"The most important reason for us to raise our percentage is that we can save and rescue more lives in our community," said Scott.

GSS President Marya informed the senate of a memo sent to the Foreign Student Task Force, which formed in 1995 in order to address the concern of harassment of international students. Mayra told the senate of several acts of harassment towards students by police, staff, faculty and other students.

The memo was from three members of the William S. Clark International Office, Barbara Burns, Carole Cumps and Janet Johnson.



Although the memo states, "There should be continued attention paid to educating the University community on matters of cultural diversity as these pertain to the foreign population," Marya pointed out that it also said, "We do not share the sense that foreign students, in general, have overwhelming problems..." as well as "We also do not share the sense that there is great demand for us to augment our staff with persons of color..."

Marya said that the Director of the International Office needs to take full responsibility for the statements.

Also, Provost Crosson was asked many questions by Senator Platt about multiculturalism, in terms of the Annual Faculty Report (AFR).

Within the AFR, faculty members are given the opportunity to speak on multiculturalism, if they want.

Platt, on behalf of Sociology professor Paul Hollander, asked if it was reasonable to have faculty be evaluated by such a vague term as multiculturalism.

COURTNEY SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Nina Payne's "Spine I–VII", made of linen, willow sticks, bone needles and found branches, is among many of her works in waxed linen on exhibit at the University Gallery. The exhibit is open through Oct. 18

Group focuses attention on children

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

Members of the Northeast district of Circle K, a international collegiate service group, have been doing their best to, as their motto says, put "children first."

Circle K is part of the "K family" in which there are three levels. The first level is the Key Club for high school students. The middle level is Circle K for college students and the highest level is the Kiwanis group.

The Kiwanis group is for those people who wish to continue their community service involvement after graduation.

Members of the Circle K at the University of Massachusetts have volunteered at places such as Greenfield Animal Shelter, Marks Meadow Elementary School and Not Bread Alone — a community soup kitchen in Amherst and various shelters for battered women and the homeless.

They have also participated in and organized many food and toy drives, as well as Christmas caroling in nursing homes.

For the past three years, Circle K's New England District has been raising $25,000 in order to help the Kiwanis Pediatric Trauma Institute in Boston start a project called "Seatbelt Safety for Children."

"Members of Circle K want to set up different programs to talk to children about the importance of seatbelt safety," said Aimee Charlebois, lieutenant governor of the Western Division. "Although we will spend more time talking to younger children, we will also want to address high school students before the prom."

"Kiwanis put together this hospital and got all the necessary and specialized [medical] equipment for children. Now they want to do things that will prevent them from having to use the equipment," Charlebois said.

Currently Circle K members are working on an international program to fight Iodine Deficiency Disorder (IDD).

"IDD is the biggest cause of mental retardation. It can be prevented very easily and we want to make that happen," said Tashamma Smith, president of the UMass Circle K chapter.

"There are a number of people in Third World countries who have IDD, especially children. One teaspoon of iodized salt in a person's life time can prevent this disorder," Charlebois said.

A major symptom of IDD is goiters — a disease in which the thyroid gland becomes inflamed because it is working twice as hard because it is not getting the necessary hormone. Eventually, a infected person will die.

"We are a service institute working towards improving the future of the world's children," Charlebois said.

Members working on this international project are aiming to eliminate IDD by the year 2000.

UMass' Circle K will be visiting the UMass–Dartmouth group this weekend to take a group of 150 children to the Roger Williams Park Zoo, R.I.

"These kids do not have a great school system and don't get to go to the Museum of Science and places like that, so we take them twice a year — once in the fall and once in the spring," Charlebois said.

There are currently 24 members and they are looking for more.

"We want this club to be a diverse club, anybody is welcome," Smith said.

Circle K will be sponsoring a blood drive on Oct. 28 in the Campus Center and needs at least 60 volunteers in order to reach their goal of 50 pints of blood.

Circle K holds their meetings on Tuesdays at 7 p.m. in 409 Student Union Building. If you are interested and would like more information, please call Tashamma Smith at 546–5573.

■ EDIC

continued from page 1

large amount of new businesses to the area, however, said Weisner.

"What we'd like to see is support to the businesses that are already here," said Weisner. "At the present, we don't have the space to do so."

The study that UMass conducted showed that of the 31 businesses that they surveyed, all 31 expect to increase their work force by 600 percent in the next five years.

90 percent of these enterprises indicated that they expect to need two and a half times the space that they already occupy.

Boss is in full support of creating a secure and concrete base that would give existing businesses a reason to stay in the area.

"If we develop a desired space for them, they'll stay in Amherst," said Boss. "If we can't, we'll loose these businesses."

As it stands, Amherst is losing businesses that are expanding because the town does not have adequate space for them, according to Boss.

Kruger believes that Amherst has a "strong market here."

"I think corporations see that there is a niche here for certain businesses," said Kruger.

Weisner considers EDIC to have more of a support role to companies within the town, and a go–between to smooth the way for those people who are looking to open a business in town.

Although this non–profit corporation has the potential to develop and build, those who are trying to jump EDIC into a reality, have no plans to take this course of action.

Weisner envisions EDIC to primarily function as a research service industry. They will not, he said, act in a contracting role. Residents of the town would oppose far reaching developmental power be granted to the accord, Weisner said.

Boss believes that not only is there is a need for more diverse economic activity, but there is also a demand for an expansion of tax bases in Amherst.

Because UMass is exempt from paying property taxes to the town of Amherst, 52 percent of property within the town is tax–exempt and it has to be "picked up by the other 48 percent of property holders," Boss said.

Boss also strongly believes that EDIC could only benefit the universities that exist in Amherst.

"I think it will have a very positive effect," said Boss. "It will take some pressure off the University of having the town breathing down its neck saying, 'We want more. We want more.'"

EDIC has been in the works for over a year now, according to Kruger and Boss estimated that it will take about five years "to fully develop our research parks."

The informational forum will be held Wednesday, Oct. 9, at 7 p.m. in the Amherst Junior. High cafeteria for anyone who would like to hear more about EDIC and listen to the Amherst Economic Development Industrial Task Force (EDITF) discuss its proposal.

Tonight: Friday, October 4th at 9:00pm...

Celebrate the end of the week at the TOC with Karaoke

FREE POPCORN!

Munchie Special: Mon. - Fri 4-7

TOC Bar & Grill
11TH FLOOR • LINCOLN CAMPUS CENTER
(413) 545-3217

Monday - Friday 4:00 pm - 12:30 am
Saturday 3:00 pm - 12:30

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Morse Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Mark McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor
Michael Elliott News Editor
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Josh Sylvester Editorial Production Manager
Sean Horgan Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majestrowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

A quest for peace?

David Bloch

Since the election last June, the new Israeli government has pursued a policy with the intention to keep the peace process on track.

On numerous occasions, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu reiterated his commitment to honor the Oslo agreements, both in Oslo 1 and Oslo 2. Netanyahu authorized all members of the Israeli government to meet with Arafat. He eased the closure of the territories, which was imposed by Shimon Peres and the Labor party, after various tragic Palestinian attacks on Israeli civilians.

Netanyahu has offered to enter into negotiations with Syria, Lebanon and the Palestinians without any preconditions. Yes, Israel wants peace more than anything; and its government is working towards achieving this goal. No later than yesterday, Netanyahu, during a live interview on CNN, stated: "Peace is our deepest inspiration..."

This clearly shows that the Israel is determined to pursue peace in the region. But what did Arafat do? Well, not much compared to what his partner in peace accomplished.

Last week, the Israeli government opened an archeological tunnel which links the Western Wall to the Via Dolorosa. The reason to open, or should I say re-open, the tunnel to the public, since it dates back to the second Temple, was purely economical.

The Old City of Jerusalem is one of the most visited places in the World and the re-opening of the tunnel was necessary to promote tourism in the area. The ancient tunnel runs alongside the Al-Aqsa mosque, not under it, and it is certainly not disturbing any holy places.

The archaeological tunnel being harmful to Islamic holy places is a totally false statement. This is false because all previous Israeli governments including this one, maintain a policy to protect and respect the holy places of all three major religions.

Netanyahu has stated many times over that "there never will be any damage to the holy sites from us because we are just as meticulous about looking after Muslim holy sites and Christian holy sites as we are looking after our own."

Is there a willingness to advance peace on the Palestinian side? What a worthless excuse of using a archeological tunnel for blaming the Israeli Prime Minister and his government for the recent violence. Arafat could have done a better job if he really desired peace.

If Arafat really wanted peace he would not have been silent when the Palestinian Authority incited the riots amongst the Palestinian people. What is the role of the Palestinian Police if they do not uphold law and order?

This question is one that is quite perplexing. Arafat has the power to control the situation and he proved it on Saturday when no deaths were reported and the calm was then restored. What Arafat had in mind was to destabilize Netanyahu and cause unravelling in Israel.

Peace agreements are only valid if both parties are involved together. It is called reciprocity and Arafat has to understand the meaning of the word if he wants the peace process to progress.

In my opinion, Israel has done the right thing to re-open the archeological tunnel and has no apologies to make to anyone. This tunnel is not an issue and should not be brought up on the agenda in Washington this week since its opening wasn't spontaneous but long known by Palestinian Authority.

It was just an excuse for trying to awake the intifada, as called by a Hamas spokesperson in Amman, Jerusalem as and will be forever, the unified, undivided capital of the State of Israel.

Once more, Arafat has shown the world he hasn't gone forward in the peace process by breaking three rules of the Oslo agreements. Arafat has no desire for peace, otherwise he wouldn't be doing such things.

In what direction is the peace process going? That is for the Palestinian people and its leader, Arafat to decide. If the Israeli government allows the Palestinian police to keep their guns in the future, are they going to use them to maintain order by protecting the peace agreement or are they going to fight the Jewish State?

In essence, it is up to the governments on both sides to come to an agreement and resolve the situation. It is up to Netanyahu, Arafat, Assad and Mubarak to work along side President Clinton and the United States to achieve peace in the region. I fully support the Likud government and all of their actions and endorse all actions made by Prime Minister Netanyahu.

David Bloch is a UMass student.

Indebted for life

Liana Melinnis

If I try hard enough I can remember back to the days when a weekly allowance of twenty dollars was like winning the lottery. When a cute smile was enough to score a new pair of shoes and a good day meant a manicure and pedicure... on Mom. And sure, I'll admit, my charming smile still rewards me with a new sweater once in a while, and I can't seem to live without my biweekly visit to the salon. It all seems so simple, right? Well, not really, these days $20 is barely pocket change.

A few days ago I stalked out the American Express table in the Campus Center. First, it was a particularly young looking Spanish boy, then a cute, giggly freshman, soon followed by a group of about three or four guys applying for their first credit card. I stood there and watched victim after victim get sucked into a world I have grown to despise, a world I sometimes wonder if I will ever escape from — a world made out of plastic.

It was easy — too easy to see myself at this table, 18– years–old, far away from home for the first time, needing and wanting easy money. It was not long ago, in fact, it was just seven months ago when I applied and was approved for a Discover and a Mastercard. My mother warned, "You'll go crazy, Liana, don't do it. You'll regret it."

Well, the woman knew what she was talking about; the shoes and sweaters my charming smile had earned went right onto her credit cards and she was deep in debt.

But, I was stubborn, or shall I say stupid, and swore until I was blue in the face, that I wouldn't max the cards. And I really did mean it. The plan was to use the Discover card for books, personal supplies and groceries; the Mastercard would be used if I wanted or needed to "treat" myself, every once in a while.

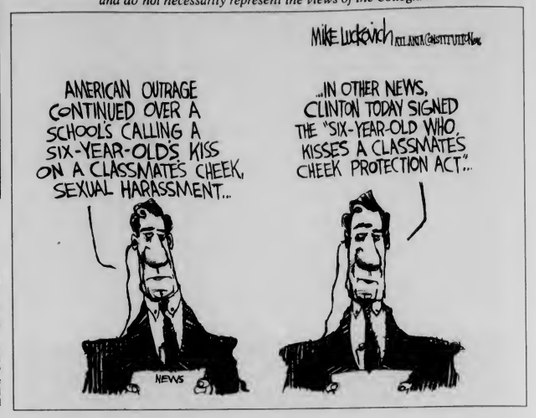
Well, before I knew it I had a new wardrobe, just about every piece of jewelry from Claire's, designer perfume, perfectly manicured nails and a plane ticket to North Carolina to see my sister graduate from college. The best thing about my Mastercard was that it doubled as a calling card, so when I ran up my ACUS bill, I used the plastic. Hell, I called my family and friends in New York, North Carolina and Indiana every week, as well as my aunt in Australia, and of course my boyfriend on Long Island... every day. Pretty soon, all these charges, phone calls and the cash advances added up to a lot of money, money I didn't have. Somehow I knew the credit card companies were looking over my records and laughing.

"We got another one," I could almost hear them say, while high–fiving one another. Bastards.

My roommate, my sister, my boyfriend... we're all in the same exact situation. We're students, we're young and we're in debt... over $2500 each. And now, when I open the mailbox, I cringe when I see its contents. I don't have a bank account and I'm on work study, so I make no more than $60.00 a week. To just about anyone else, this would be fine. It would be great, but I have so many bills to pay that I have no money to live on. Paying the minimum on my cards each month doesn't make a difference because the interest just piles up, and sometimes, I can't even do that. I don't go shopping anymore, no more trips to the salon; the only thing I buy are cigarettes and sometimes, its hard to scrap up $2.45 for a pack.

But please, don't feel sorry for me, that is not the point of this article. I made my own decisions and filled out those applications on my own free will, nobody forced me. But now, I am 19–years–old and indebted, for perhaps the rest of my life. I didn't use the cards to go on a luxury vacation, or buy books or finance a car, I just blew it. Each night I lie awake in bed and make myself sick over my financial status. My credit could be permanently screwed up for the rest of my life. I have thought of extreme and scary ways to earn/acquire money: selling my plasma, hawking my favorite jewelry and even becoming a stripper. This might sound like one big joke, but I am completely serious. I came close to doing these things.

I'm constantly watching my money and unfortunately, I am forced to be cheap. I can't buy beer on the weekends, I can't eat out, I can't even do laundry more than twice a month. And to think, if I didn't have these cards to pay, the $60.00 I earn a week could be mine, not Mastercard's or Discover's, but mine. I earn it and they get it. I absolutely hate this aspect of my life and I hate myself for being so stupid. I could have avoided all of this heartache if I'd only listened to my mother and sister who go through the same hell as I do each month when the bills arrive. I learned the lesson the hard way, and all I really want is to prevent anyone else from having to go through this never ending nightmare.



I'm hoping, that many of you will read this, especially freshman, and be scared, please, be scared. Having a credit card is not all the fun and freedom it may seem to be: you eventually have to pay back the money you charge and paying the minimum really doesn't get you anywhere. I worked at a clothing store this summer and aside from customer satisfaction, our biggest priority was opening new credit card accounts. My boss put tremendous pressure on all the sales associates to open at least two per shift. It killed me to do it, but each day I smiled brightly and said, "Would you like to open an account with us? You'll save 10 percent off your purchase, even if you don't get approved." Thanks to me, at least 40 people have one extra card to pay off each month.

It's not worth the 10 percent off, or the free tee–shirts and CD's, playing cards and slinkies. And it is certainly not worth the agony of stressing over where this month's minimum payments will come from, and it is not worth being indebted for, perhaps, the rest of your life. A cute smile may have worked on Mom, it still may, but Discover card is simply not going to fall for it — I'm living proof.

Liana Melinnis is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Let's talk about sex

Jorma Kansanen

Pardon me while I hook you all in with a little three–letter word, that means the world to all of us...

Sex.

Yes, with our highly developed intellects, finely–tuned cerebral cortex and massive buildup of knowledge through the centuries, a three–letter word holds the human species within its mighty grip. Well, actually, I do not think I should use "grip." How about "mighty power?"

It does not matter what country you come from, or if you are black, white or any color in the rainbow. Nor does it discriminate between Protestant, Catholic, Muslim or any other religion from here to Confucius; and even if you are heterosexual, bisexual or homosexual, the joy of the sexual experience enraptures and encapsulates us all.

But is sex about love?

Or, is it the love of sex, that is the main question we all face?

The first thing we have to confront with this topic is where we morally stand as students. Morals and ethics are very funny things when you put them to the sphere of the college student — especially for such a touchy, feely subject as this one. It is not that I am bragging when I say I possess something many men at our age do not have, and that is a conscience, because it can be a double–edged sword.

It seems with what I have seen so far in specifically, this University, and generally, university life, the sides of self– consciousness are at different ends of the spectrum. You have one side that is handing out pamphlets on the Union steps and Campus Concourse, leading the charge for every cause underneath the sun and also, in the back of their ever– so–socially conscious mind, wondering when will be the next time they will get lucky, while the other side that likes "a good beer buzz early in the morning" is too busy worrying about what they look like, where they are going to go tonight and also, when will be the next time they are going to get lucky.

I am not saying that either side is the way to go. With the pamphleteer side, I do not believe that even a slight minority of them have seen a real bad day in their whole lives — where they had to live with a gun to their head, no food on their plate for more than a few hours, etc. It seems that is all a part of rebelling against whomever (e.g. your parents) or whatever (e.g. the system), and with most that I have met, they do not even exactly know who, what or where they are fighting for. It almost seems fashionable, sometimes, and I do stress "sometimes." This side dreams about true love, but they can not find it without three–day old clothes on and a protest sign in front of him/her.

On the other side, the truly fashionable deal with the superficiality of everyday life, and wonder if Biff/Buffy is going to like them anymore if they do not look top notch at the club tonight. Nothing is wrong on their little planet, as arguments from governmental mentality to sexual morality get lost in the shuffle of a North Pleasant Street bar room. These factors are an awful waste product of the teenage years, and believe me, it does continue past graduation, marriage, divorce, marriage, etc. This side dreams about true love, but unfortunately does not find it without putting on their rose–colored glasses.

There is so much middle ground between the two, but not enough who take advantage of it, and I cherish the times when I encounter the people that stand in it.

But now with our collective morality on display, back to my question: is sex about love or is it the love of sex?

Sorry, but I am going to have you let you down. Yes, even though I am a semi–conscious, I mean, conscious male, I really do not know the answer. It is up to you. You have to delve deep into that 80 percent of your brain that you do not use and find out for yourself. For myself, I have grown tired of waking up in the morning, and the first thing I say to the person lying next to me is, "Excuse me, what is your name again?" But if that is your kind of taco, crunch away.

Just remember this, and see how it feels. That special someone that has just rocked your world, and you want to have their baby. Who you met either at the local MassPIRG fundraiser or Miller Lite Night at Time Out the night before, might lovingly roll over and then, look deep into your eyes, and slowly, with a kind of sensual tone in their voice, say: "Excuse me, what is your name again?"

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Critique unprofessional

To the editor:

In his review of the recent UMass Symphony Orchestra concert, Michael Charles Medeiros reveals a profound lack of knowledge of classical music and an equal lack of anything of importance to say.

While he obviously has good intentions, and the review is essentially positive, his comparisons of classical composers to pop culture icons belittle music that is high art, as well as the efforts of the players over three weeks to bring this music to life. True critique of a performance involves appraisal of the performance itself. One's opinion (uninformed in this case) of the material presented should not take precedence over this.

While taste is highly subjective, and disliking a piece is acceptable, paralleling Brahms' music alternately with the ranting of a fat professor and to the Beach Boys seems rather pointless, and does not evaluate the music as its own entity. Criticism by its very nature is opinionated but such comments as found in Medeiros' review say very little about what was presented. In the future, I hope that Mr. Medeiros would avoid such meanderings and devote more time to serious thought about what he is critiquing. Such a poor quality of review reflects badly on the Collegian as well.

Matthew Whittall
Amherst

Columnists' approach inappropriate

To the editor:

Hussein Ibish and Shyamala Ivatury have used columns in this paper and the floor of the Graduate Student Senate to criticize a long–term employee of this University. Their attacks, which have been scathing and deeply personal, repeatedly name this person. Regardless of their grievances toward this employee, their approach is inappropriate.

Ibish and Ivatury seem to think that the First Amendment is a license to hurl personal insults and unsubstantiated allegations at others. But common courtesy (and the state's defamation law) dictate otherwise. The personal nature of their criticism and the hysterical tenor of their rhetoric do not serve their cause well and cheapen the value of public discourse on this campus.

The Collegian and the Graduate Student Senate should think carefully before they allow their fora to again be used as vehicles for Ibish and Ivatury to pursue this ugly personal vendetta.

Hal Goldman
Amherst

Multi– what?

To the editor:

As recent arrivals from the United Kingdom, we are staggered by the crassness and bigotry found in your so– called multicultural and "international" coverage. Monday's first Multicultural Affairs page was right to discuss the recent atrocities in the Middle East, but did so in a most biased manner.

The attempt to move away from a "Eurocentric" (U.S.– centric?) perspective is laudable, but to do so by presenting the one–sided reports of the Al–Akhbar news service of the objective truth is deplorable.

Any news report which consistently uses the term "Zionist" in place of the term Israeli cannot be considered unbiased. If this report had been placed in context, perhaps with some equally subjective coverage from an Israeli newspaper, this would have been of interest, but as printed, the page cannot claim to be in any way multicultural. Lisa Chiu's own misconceptions of the Middle East are apparent in her claim that Western colonialism has created the volatile situation there, as though the two opposed religious communities had nothing to do with it.

Catherine Sangster
Sarah Jillings
Southwest

A breath of fresh air

To the editor:

I would like to thank Erik Molitor for his article "High on life." The article was a breath of fresh air compared to the usual pot–stinking clouds that usually drift out of the Collegian. As a fellow non–smoker I can say that I am also having quite a fun time here at school. As well as getting an education.

For those who think this is a one–sided letter, they are wrong. There was a time in my life when I frequently smoked weed, and now having seen both sides of the coin I can clearly say that one does not need to get high in order to have a good time. I think Erik has been a delightful addition to the Collegian staff, shedding light on the conservative aspect of issues of current times.

Mikey Melillo
Southwest

Arts & Living

New Hugh Grant movie in need of miracle

By Jeremy Brothers
Collegian Staff

EXTREME MEASURES
Directed by Michael Apted
with Hugh Grant, Sarah Jessica Parker, Gene Hackman
Playing at Mt. Farms Four Theater

It was only a matter of time before Hollywood got its jaws around Hugh Grant once and for all. Divine Brown jokes aside, Grant seemed ready to take the helm of art–house hero with such non–commercial critical hits as Merchant–Ivory's Remains of the Day and Roman Polanski's Bitter Moon.

The success of Four Weddings and a Funeral made Grant more commercially viable than he perhaps ought to be. Grant's goofy charisma and good looks can't compensate when he swims into the shark–infested waters of schizophrenic Hollywood pictures.

Extreme Measures tells the story of Dr. Guy Luthan (Grant), a supposedly brilliant Englishman working in a New York hospital. Guy makes a shocking discovery when a patient mysteriously dies on his emergency room table, and the web of conspiracy that he encounters when he tries to probe deeper.

Helping him along the way is his faithful nurse, Jodie (Sarah Jessica Parker). Parker doesn't really have much to do, so she lets her eyebrows do the acting as she lounges around in comfortable looking wool sweaters looking more and more like an anorexic ballerina.

As Guy gets closer to the truth, he finds his life falling apart as the nefarious Dr. Myrick (Gene Hackman) sets hired guns, nicely played by Bill Nunn (Do the Right Thing) and David Morse ("St. Elsewhere"), to plant pharmaceutical coceine on him. Guy is now forced to do that fugitive–on– the–run type thing, turning to a homeless man he used to help when he worked at the hospital.

And for a few silly minutes, Extreme Measures turns into an action film with Grant running around beneath the New York City's catacombs. Grant, or perhaps Englishmen in general, shouldn't try to be action heros — they use adverbs too often and they don't swear effectively. You can almost imagine Grant rehearsing by himself while he keeps blushing when he gets to the naughty bits.

Extreme Measures offers some thrilling moments that make you jump out of your seat, but certainly not enough to keep you occupied for over two hours. However, the film is somewhat redeemed by interesting moral questions which are raised with Guy's odyssey. While he objects to Myrick and his unethical experiments, he has no problems writing out prescriptions for his homeless helpers or snooping through confidential documents.

By the end of the film, we are left to wonder how far is too far when intentions are noble. Unfortunately, the film never seems to care to ask these questions and we are left with Grant, looking befuddled as ever, holding all of the dubious research in his hands and walking away with it instead of throwing it out. C–

COURTESY CASTLE ROCK ENTERTAINMENT

Hugh Grant and Sarah Jessica Parker star in the medical thriller Extreme Measures.

Jazz legend Allison to ride Iron Horse

By Daniel Bodah
Collegian Staff

If you love mellow, witty jazz and blues played with gentle passion, get yourself down to the Iron Horse tonight to see Mose Allison.

Born in 1927 in the Mississippi delta town of Tippo, Allison grew up in an environment suffused with the blues. A few years of grade–school piano lessons combined with this environment sent young Allison down the road to a lengthy and influential career in the blues/jazz world.

There are more than 20 Mose Allison albums — many of which have been re–released over the years. Allison worked with such jazz luminaries as Al Cohn, Zoot Sims and Stan Getz before putting out his 1957 debut album Back Country Suite. His influence has affected musicians such as Peter Townshend of the Who (who said "Allison was my man") and Black Francis (who penned the tune "Allison" on the Pixies' Trompe L'monde album about his hero Allison.)

Listening to any of Allison's many albums will quickly reveal the reasons for his popularity. That sweet, smooth voice; beautiful, intricate piano excursions; and humorous lyrics with hidden surprises and implications. Some of his originals have become classics ("Parchman Farm," "Your Mind Is On Vacation") while he has given a particular emphasis to the many standards in his repertoire ("The Seventh Son," "A Thousand Miles From Nowhere" and "You Are My Sunshine.")

Perhaps a whiff of his cool, ambiguous wit can be caught from the lyrics of "Do Nothing Till You Hear It From Me." In the song he responds to a lover who's heard that he's playing around, saying "Do nothing till you hear it from me — you never will."

Nearing 70 years old, Allison can still hold his own — he won't be accompanied by the duo he sometimes tours with, but will instead take to the stage solo. Attention can focus on his famed piano stylings, which combine avant–garde blues, swing and jazz into an inimitable amalgamation. Allison has said that he only does "tunes that express a point of view I can live with."

Interesting to note, then, the surprise some fans have shown when they discovered Allison is white. When he sings "sittin' here a thousand miles from nowhere, in this one room country little shack — my only worldly possession, a raggedy eleven–foot cotton sack," Allison makes the sense of isolation and loneliness palpable. And that's something you can't argue with.

Mose Allison is playing at the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton tonight at 7 p.m. For more information call 584–0610.

COURTESY CAPITOL RECORDS

Jazz legend Mose Allison entertains the Iron Horse this evening.

Sweet Honey pours out voices at Smith

By Daniel Bodah
Collegian Staff

This weekend the Pioneer Valley will fill with Honey — that is, the complex, heavy vocal treat poured out by Sweet Honey In The Rock. The all–woman a capella group has brought their blending of spirituals, scat–singing, folk harmony and fierce social commentary as far into the mainstream as such things can go.

Since their formation in the early '70s, Sweet Honey In The Rock has won numerous awards, including a 1989 Grammy for their contribution to the Woody Guthrie and Leadbelly tribute album, A Vision Shared.

Ysaye Maria Barnwell, Nitanju Bolade Casel, Aisha Kahlil, Bernice Johnson Reagon, Carol Maillard and Shirley Childress Johnson join their voices — and their hands — together to take the listener on incredible journeys, from gentle, shiver–inducing love songs to powerful and righteous raps. A full member of the group, Johnson simultaneously performs the concerts in American Sign Language. Noted for their intricate polyrhythms and complex, multi–line harmonies, the group is famous for conveying these into ASL, with all six members signing and singing through a number of passages.

All accomplished vocalists, each singer takes a turn soloing. Attendees of past concerts will recall that each succesive solo takes the listener further into astonishment, never failing to surprise and inspire. And when combined, these voices are capable of creating a wild tapestry of eerily alien vocal sounds, resolving it into a powerful and percolating multi–rhythmic social justice plea, then stepping on with barely a pause for applause to a gentle hymn of devotion and love.

Sweet Honey In The Rock concerts tend to last somewhere near two hours, giving the group ample time to cover their broad range of styles and topics. Concerns given eloquent voicing through their music include racial discrimination, poverty, oppression of women, motherhood, African– American identity and a cultural interest in Africa which leads to the inclusion of African vocal pieces.

Stylistically ranging from children's songs (of which they've made several albums) to blues songs to barbershop to aching jazz ballads, Sweet Honey In The Rock celebrates the diversity of African–American music and culture.

Sweet Honey In The Rock will perform at Smith College. The show begins at 8 p.m. on Saturday. Reservations are suggested; call 586–8686 or 1–800–THE–TICK for more information.

Are you a fan of fine arts? Tired of reading endless articles on rock 'n' roll? Come join Fine Arts Lovers Anonymous, and write for the Collegian!!

Call 545-1361 today and talk to Mike Burke!

THIS SUNDAY
DaveMatthewsBand

with special guest
Boxing Gandhis
SUN. OCT. 6
All Tickets $23.50 - Showtime 7:30 pm
mullins center
university of massachusetts amherst
Tickets are available at the Mullins Center Box Office, or for an additional fee, at all TicketMaster outlets and charge-by-phone at 413-733-2500 or 203-772-4200.
For more information, call 413-545-0505.
Presented by Delsener/Slater Enterprises and MassConcerts
http://www.dmband.com

UMASS ATHLETIC TICKET OFFICE
NOTICE:
NATIONAL ANTHEM AUDITION
There will be an audition for anyone interested in performing the National Anthem at UMASS athletic events.
The audition will take place on October 7, 1996 at the Curry Hicks Cage, 102 Hicks Way at 7:00PM.
Please direct all questions to 545-6060

Johnson out with knee, Jets just out

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. — Things just keep getting worse for the New York Jets.

Already 0-5 and ravaged by injuries, they lost their premier attraction, top draft pick Keyshawn Johnson, for three to four weeks with torn cartilage in his right knee.

Johnson, the No. 1 overall pick in this year's draft, was scheduled to undergo arthroscopic surgery today.

Johnson was hurt when his knee banged into the helmet of cornerback Aaron Glenn. He limped off the field and moments later was taken to Lenox Hill Hospital in Manhattan to see Dr. Elliott Hershman, the Jets' orthopedist.

Hershman diagnosed Johnson with a sprain of the right medial collateral ligament and a bruised knee. An MRI test later revealed the torn cartilage.

"It's unfortunate what happened, but we're relieved to find out that the injury wasn't more serious," coach Rich Kotite said. "We'll certainly miss Keyshawn's big-play ability and his animated style of play, but we know he'll come back and pick up where he left off."

Already this week, the Jets lost middle linebacker Marvin Jones for at least a month because of a severely sprained right knee. Receiver Jeff Graham, a costly free agent, is out for Sunday with cartilage damage in his knee.

One of the few bright spots in a dismal start for the Jets, Johnson has 21 receptions for 250 yards and two touchdowns. He leads all rookies in receptions and yards.

The rookie from Southern California was chosen first in the draft after an All-America season. He is expected to be the centerpiece of a rebuilt offense that also includes free agents Neil O'Donnell, Graham, Jumbo Elliott, David Williams and Webster Slaughter.

Earlier Wednesday, Johnson spoke about the disappointing start for his team and the uncertainty of it all.

"I don't know what to expect around here," he said. "We played good as an offense against Miami and look what happened the next week against the Giants. We stunk.

"Who knows at the point in time what's going to happen." An hour later, he was injured.

Eagles dig deep, sign Rypien for one year

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Former Super Bowl MVP Mark Rypien has agreed to a one-year contract as back-up quarterback for the Philadelphia Eagles.

Rypien, an unrestricted free agent, will replace quarterback Rodney Peete, who had surgery Tuesday for a knee injury suffered in Monday night's loss to Dallas.

"I had a couple of years to heal, and I feel good about my health, and if given an opportunity, I'm looking forward to it," Rypien said before the agreement was reached.

"This is a good football team and a good football town. You can't ask for any more than that."

Negotiations were relatively easy but took more than six hours because of a couple of missed phone calls.

Eagles senior vice president Joe Banner said.

Rypien, who turned 34 Wednesday, spent about three hours talking with Eagles coaches and was on the field for a closed practice. He was the only quarterback brought to Philadelphia for a personal look.

The MVP of the Super Bowl following the 1991 season when he led the Washington Redskins to a 17-2 record, Rypien made $750,000 last year but refused to re-sign when the St. Louis Rams offered $500,000 for this season.

He hasn't taken a snap since starting the final three games of the 1995 season for St. Louis.

"I was able to have that opportunity last year, in the last three games in St. Louis, we played fairly well," Rypien said. "We didn't win any of them, but I least showed to myself or proved to myself that I can still get up, and get it done."

The loss of Peete had left the Eagles with two quarterbacks, Ty Detmer, whom coach Ray Rhodes has named his new starter, and rookie Bobby Hoying, a prospect who is not ready for the backup role. Rhodes said Detmer would remain the starting quarterback. "This team can win with Ty Detmer," Rhodes said. "We're going to win with him."

Detmer, the 1990 Heisman Trophy winner, is expected to make the first start of his five-year NFL career on Oct. 13 when the Eagles (3-2) play the New York Giants. The Eagles are off this week.

Red Sox race for Jim Leyland

By Alan Robinson
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Jim Leyland warned he wouldn't get enticed into a bidding war. The Florida Marlins, Chicago White Sox and Boston Red Sox and California Angels apparently didn't listen. The former Pittsburgh manager, baseball's hottest free agent, talked with the Marlins and Red Sox on Wednesday and will likely choose his next team by the end of the week. The Angels dropped out of the race Wednesday.

"California and I have decided that we don't have a match," Leyland told the The Palm Beach Post in Florida. "We couldn't reach an agreement, so we're both moving in different directions now. I am down to three teams."

The Marlins assured him in a face-to-face meeting they won't be outbid. A Red Sox delegation led by chief executive officer John Harrington met with leyland on Wednesday night before returning to Boston to interview other candidates.

No matter where Leyland goes, his next contract will likely be worth as much or more than St. Louis manager Tony La Russa's $1.5 million-a-year deal, currently the richest among managers. Leyland made nearly $1 million with Pittsburgh.

Not bad money for a man who once said, "I was happy when I had a pack of cigarettes and a buck in my pocket."

"We knew there would be a lot of interest," Marlins general manager Dave Dombrowski said. "We didn't know what the numbers would be. We're still hopeful and optimistic that he'll join us." The Marlins have been the frontrunner since Leyland announced Sept. 17 he would leave the Pirates. An aide to team owner H. Wayne Huizenga said Monday that Leyland's hiring was a "done deal." But that was before the White Sox pitched a deal worth at least $1.4 million annually. The Angels had topped that with an offer that included Walt Disney Co. stock options, a free home and incentives. The total value would have approached $2 million a year.

After that proposal became public, Marlins president Don Smiley and Dombrowski flew to Pittsburgh to persuade Leyland they will compete aggressively with any offer.

"Wayne Huizenga is not going to be outbid on something he really wants, by (Chicago White Sox owner) Jerry Reinsdorf or anyone else," said a source close to Huizenga.

The offers, Leyland said, are "overwhelming. I can't imagine getting any better offers."

The Angels' bonus-laden package included $1.2 million annually in salary, a free house, vacation trips, performance incentives and stock options in the Walt Disney Co.

Because he does not have an agent, Leyland plans to have his accountant analyze the offers before he makes a decision.

"This isn't about money. I would have stayed in Pittsburgh if this were about money," Leyland said. "But I never got past high school, and I want somebody smarter than me looking at these. There are real outstanding offers."

Although friends have advised him to try managing in both leagues before his career ends, Leyland would prefer to stay in the National League. He has known Dombrowski and Huizenga for years, and they assured him the Marlins will aggressively pursue free agents.

"We're looking to making the club better," Dombrowski said. "We wouldn't be pursuing Jim unless that was the case."

Ohio State–Penn State Big 10 battle

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

For so long, the rivalry between Penn State and Ohio State has been played out in the living rooms of high school sensations all over football-fertile Ohio and western Pennsylvania.

The playing field has expanded. Rapidly.

With Penn State in its fourth Big Ten season, recruiting wars are now overshadowed by Rose Bowl fever. And sometimes, like this season, the stakes are even higher.

When the No. 4 Nittany Lions (5-0) play the No. 3 Buckeyes (3-0) before 95,000-plus at Ohio Stadium on Saturday, the winner also remains in the national title chase.

"It's becoming a very intense football game," Penn State coach Joe Paterno said. "As we play games and they become significant ones like this one, there will be a tradition that will build up." The foundation, thanks to annual battles for players, has been there for decades. And now that the schools are playing on a regular basis, it's remarkable to see how similar the programs really are.

In addition to recruiting many of the same players, the Buckeyes and Lions are among the NCAA all-time leaders in victories, bowl appearances, attendance and sending players to the NFL.

Penn State has 700 wins, 32 bowl appearances and 32 players on NFL opening-day rosters. Ohio State has 682 wins, 28 bowl appearances and 35 players on NFL rosters.

Ohio State had a Hall of Fame coach in Woody Hayes for 28 years; Penn State has Paterno, in his 31st season.

Both teams have similar approaches to the game. On defense, the watchwords are attacking and hard-hitting. The Lions have allowed 27 points in five games; the Buckeyes 23 in three games.

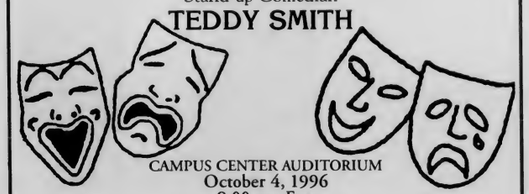
On offense, it's power and patience, with Ohio State throwing in a dose of explosiveness. Ohio State leads the nation in scoring at 57 points per game, while Penn State averages 32.2 per game. A natural rivalry if ever there was one. When the Big East was created, Penn State wanted no part of it, preferring to become the 11th team in the Big Ten. The match seems to be a good one. Penn State-Ohio State really heated up last season in the 11th game between the border rivals. Ohio State's Eddie George ran 6 yards for a score with 1:42 left to lift the Buckeyes to a 28-25 win at State College. Penn State leads the series 7-4.

"The fact that we've played them the last three years, I think more about them and they know more about us, " Ohio State coach John Cooper said.

The schools are 311 miles apart, but recruiters travel the same interstates in search of high school stars. The competition is fierce, and it's probably one of the main reasons the on-field rivalry has become so intense so quickly.

Many of the players in Saturday's game, including Penn State running back Curtis Enis and Ohio State cornerback Shawn Springs, received the full recruiting treatment from Paterno and Cooper. Enis, Ohio's Mr. Football in 1993, was pursued from all angles. And when the Buckeyes slipped up, the Lions moved in for the kill. As a sophomore at Mississinawa Valley High School, Enis received a recruiting letter from Ohio State. It was addressed to: Chris Fenis.

Oops. Enis said the mistake stuck with him and it gave Penn State the edge. But the Buckeyes didn't give up until Enis signed on the dotted line.



"I was still within the recruiting process and they wanted to see if I would adjust my decision and go to Ohio State," said Enis, who needed a year at Kiski Prep to qualify academically. "But I gave coach Paterno my word."

Paterno wasn't thrilled with Ohio State's extra effort. "I didn't think he was wavering," Paterno said. "I know Ohio State put a lot of pressure on him to get him to change his mind, which obviously we were not happy with."

Pearl Street Nightclub
Live Music & Dance Club
EVERY WEDNESDAY
ALL NEW RAVE NIGHTS!
With D.J.s, DREAM, G-WIZ, BAM-BAM, and OSHEEN
EVERY THURSDAY
THE AREA'S BIGGEST
HIGH ENERGY Dance Party
Great Giveaways from INTERSTATE 91
Like absolute Laser Show Tag Game
Hosted by Adam Wright of Today's 99.3
EVERY FRIDAY 9-2am FREE BEFORE 10:00
RETRO NIGHT
WIN TWO MONTH PASS TO HAMPSHIRE FITNESS CLUB
MUSIC FROM THE 70's, 80's & 90's
THIS SATURDAY OCT. 6 9PM-6AM
TOYLAND
REGION'S BIGGEST RAVE
DJS INCLUDE OSHEEN, PHARAOH, JAMES FUSION, LRD WAVE, OZONE, MONA, KEN ON-E, DJ FRIENDLY
THIS WEEK LIVE
Thurs. Oct. 3 @ 7:30 pm
H2O
W/ARZONE/10 YARD FIGHT
FOLLOW THROUGH/DISMAY
Fri. Oct. 4 @ 7:00 pm
SEBADOH
STEVE WESTFIELD & THE SLOW BAND
HOSPITAL
Sat. Oct. 5 @ 8:00pm
AQUARIUM RESCUE UNIT
W/THE BIBB DROLL BAND
Mon. Oct. 7 - 7:30pm
THE SPECIALS
W/SHLEPROCK
JOHNNY TOO BAD & THE STRIKE OUTS
Sun. Oct. 6 18+ SPECIAL CLUB APPEARANCE
PORNO FOR PYROS
W/ FUN LOVIN' CRIMINALS
Tues. Oct. 8 @ 8:00 pm
LOS LOBOS
15TH ANNIVERSARY PARTY!!!!
W/ NILS LARA
COMING TO PEARL STREET
Fri. Oct. 11 ALL AGES
GRAHAM PARKER & THE FIGGS
Sat. Oct. 12 ALL AGES
OVERCAST (AFTERMATH)
Tues. Oct. 15 18+
BLAZE (BMG)
Sat. Oct. 19 ALL AGES
DAVID BLUES TIME
Sat. Oct. 26 ALL AGES
PRO PAIN
Sat. Oct. 26 ALL AGES
BEATNIGGAZ
Sun. Oct. 27 ALL AGES
JIMMIE MORRIS
Sun. Nov. 17
MATT "GUITAR" MURPHY
OCTOBER IS FRIENDS OF AIDS CARE MONTH AT PEARL STREET
Advance tickets available at the Northampton Box office 586-8686, 1-800-THE-TICK Strawberries Record Stores: For The Record in Amherst About Music in Greenfield Tra Unlimited in U Mass
10 PEARL STREET, NORTHAMPTON
http://www.virtual-valley.com/pearl.html
413-584-7771

Discover
THE FINEST SINCE 1976
Handmade diamond engagement rings & featuring ideal cut
Lazare Diamonds®
Setting the standard for ...BRILLIANCE™
Full in-house repair service. We buy diamonds & gold.
Free ear piercing with purchase of studs.
Watch batteries replaced & eyeglass frames repaired.

silverscape designs
GOLDSMITHS GEM GALLERY
One King St., Northampton 584-3324
264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-3324

CAMPUS ACTIVITIES AT THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PRESENTS
THE RETURN OF
A WEEKLY PROGRAM SERIES: SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY
featuring
Stand-up Comedian
TEDDY SMITH

CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM
October 4, 1996
8:00 pm Free
"DRAGONHEART"
Immediately Following
This series is made possible by a grant from Auxiliary Services and the Vice Cancellor for Student Affairs.
For more information, check our website:
htttp://www-unix.oit.umass.edu/~jtolson/calender.html

"I got mine at Zanna"

Dr. Martens
ZANNA
downtown Amherst

© 1996 AT&T
Staying in touch with home from the USA
Sure, there's a world of choices. That's why every International Student needs this.

NAFSA'S International Student Handbook
It's free when you sign with AT&T. Call 1 800 533-6198.
AT&T

League's spitting in own face

Unless you were in a cave over the past week, or if you're in the dorms and have to get your sports from Mike Ratte, Beasley Reece or Evan Rubin, (Guhh!) you've heard about the Roberto Alomar spitting incident. The issue is still up in the air, so I thought I'd throw in my two cents.

This phlegm-faux pas couldn't have come at a worse time for major league baseball. The playoffs started on Tuesday, and this year's match-ups seem to justify baseball's decision to expand the playoffs in 1994. All four divisional series look to be battles, and with last year's fiasco known as the Baseball Network behind us, fans will once again be able to see every game in its entirety. Young, marketable stars such as Juan Gonzalez, Chipper Jones and Hideo Nomo have a chance to add post-season glory to their resume, and do it in front of the whole country. They've even put some of the playoff games back on in the daytime, giving kids a chance to see some of this October magic.

Luke Meredith

The game has been plagued over the last 20 years by dwindling TV ratings, a perceived lack of fan interest, superstar temper tantrums and contract squabbles that have alienated many of the game's top stars from their public.

This is not going to help.

Alomar has long been lauded as one of the classier players in baseball. He was instrumental in the Toronto Blue Jays' championships in 1992 and 1993 and the soft spoken second baseman never did anything to alienate the fans north of the border. There were even stories of Alomar living in SkyDome's hotel, because the Puerto Rican native was too shy to find a place by himself in an unfamiliar country. He let his performance on the field speak for him, becoming the game's premier second baseman and an All-Star hitter.

But now Alomar has damaged his reputation in a way that can never be restored. There is no excuse for spitting in another man's face, especially in the middle of a baseball game watched live by 40,000 fans and viewed by millions more on television. For a game struggling to regain its reputation as the national pastime, this spitting scandal is just another chink in the armor.

But the scary part about this whole thing is that when Alomar was introduced to the Camden Yards faithful before Game One of their divisional series with Cleveland, he was cheered. Cheered! For Christ's sakes, he spit in another man's face only a few days before, and here he was being lauded as a misunderstood individual. By giving Alomar a standing ovation, the fans in Baltimore condoned his actions.

My question to them is this: What about that 10-year-old kid who got to skip a day of school and go to a ballgame with his Dad? You know that that kid will remember that game for the rest of his life. If you're his Dad, how do you explain to your impressionable young son why Roberto Alomar got such a roaring cheer when they called his name?

Do you say, "You see, son, Roberto spit in an umpire's face, and then made remarks referring to his deceased son, but he's sorry now, so that makes it okay?"

The way it was handled by the league was even more reprehensible. With the commissioner's office empty, (Bud Selig does not count) the league let this thing sit a few days before they acted. This tells me that they really didn't consider this a big deal, and that's a problem. I hasten to say that if former commissioner Bart Giammati was alive today, he would have suspended Alomar immediately. Playoffs. Regular season. It wouldn't have mattered.

That's what baseball should have done here. The integrity of the game is hanging by a thread as it is, and quick action would have at least stopped the bleeding somewhat. What people have to understand is that the length of the suspension the league gives Alomar is irrelevant. It's how they handle the situation that's important, and they've already dropped the ball on that issue.

Fair or not, the people who run baseball have to realize that the American people expect more out of baseball than other sports. People have memories that are indelibly attached to the game, indelibly attached in a way that football, basketball and hockey never can. It's the national pastime; the game fathers teach their sons in the backyard; the game many of us remember from Little League; the game that gave us Joe DiMaggio, Roberto Clemente and Ken Griffey Jr.; the game that, despite its failings, we still love.

Though they own the teams, run the leagues and pay the players, the game is not theirs. It's ours. At the risk of sounding like a Boy Scout, there is a responsibility that the owners have to the game that goes beyond the balance sheet. If the powers-that-be would have had the courage to protect the integrity of the game, some luster could have been restored this week. They didn't, and no matter what happens now, the damage has been done. The spit has hit the fan.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

■ women's soccer

continued from page 10

"It is going to be a duel, and I think our midfielders will look forward to it," Rudy said.

Rudy received a scouting report out of No. 20 Wake Forest, who played them earlier in the season, and the trio of seniors Krista Garberina, Laura Winchester and junior Lauren Huminski were rated as one of the best midfields the Demon Deacons had faced this year.

Winchester has had over 35 shots on net this season so far, while Huminski's speed on the right flank is dangerous if you underestimate it. In the net, freshman keeper Kristen Washburn's stats have not been impressive (75.9 save percentage, 2.11 GAA), but under the surface, her performances, in Rudy's words, have been "not good, but spectacular."

The matchup on Sunday versus GW looks to be the toughest A-10 test for UMass this season, as they are coming off of last season's A-10 West Division title, led by the Vogel sisters, seniors Tanya (6 games, 12pts.) and Jennifer (3 games, 2 assists, 8pts.), and 1995 Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Year Jane Anderson (3 games, 1 assist, 7pts.), the GW side is the strongest UMass has faced up to this point in the season.

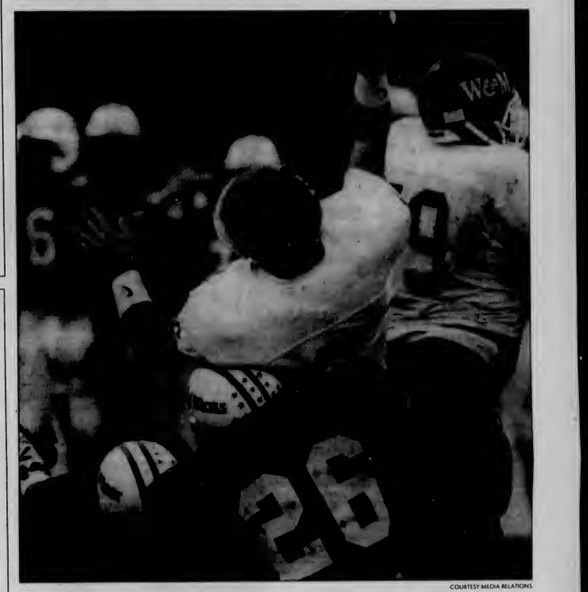
For Rudy, though, junior forward Chemar Smith (8 games, 2 assists, 16pts.) is the scariest of them all.

"[Smith], who gives us all sorts of problems, is back up front," Rudy said. "A good left-footed, fleet, attacking player who can beat you, and can play into our style of play, and do it well.

"They have it, and I mean, shoot, that's the best looking roster I have seen so far this year, player for player," Rudy said.

GW was hampered with early season injuries, but now have most of the same team back that took UMass to 1-0 and 2-0 decisions last season. They were upset by Villanova in a tight 4-3 defeat, but have played top-ranked opponents like No. 19 Clemson (2-0 loss) and No. 17 James Madison (3-1 loss); while after challenging UMass, they will play No. 12 William & Mary, No. 11 Virginia, No. 14 George Mason, and No. 15 Wisconsin.

For Rudy, strength of schedule is an attribute of the Colonial Women that he wishes for his team.



"Their record does not do them justice," Rudy said. "At Maryland (5-0 loss), they just got cranked, but they didn't have their full team, and Maryland (No. 5 in the nation) has beaten everyone so far. Their schedule is so much better than ours, it's embarrassing.

"It is something that, unfortunately with our affiliation here with the A-10, we won't be able to see a schedule that strong ever again."

Minutewomen Notes: A week of acclaim follows UMass on the road, as two of their players received both conference and national honors. Senior midfielder Rebecca Myers (8 games, 1 assist, 17 pts.) was chosen both for Soccer America magazine's National Team of the Week, and A-10 Player of the Week for becoming the all-time UMass goals (38) and points (101) scorer.

Junior keeper Danielle Dion is also among the national elite, as her 0.15 GAA places her second nationally, behind the 0.10 GAA of Maryland's Miss Price. By the way, UMass leads the nation by only allowing one goal this season.

Collegian Graphics
TICK...TICK..TICK.....
The Mass Daily Collegian
Better than getting bashed in the melon by a hockey puck.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

The defense never rests.
Khari Samuel is one of the leaders on the Minuteman defensive unit that will be key to the chances for a UMass win as Jeff Smith makes his first start under center.

IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL
20 Center St. Northampton
ALL AGES ALL THE TIME
saturday, october 5 • 10 pm
MICHAEL RAY AND HIS COSMIC KREWE cosmic funk & jazz $10
monday, October 7 • 7&10pm
JUNIOR BROWN
Talking Cash meets Hendrix $10
wednesday, october 9 • 10 pm
BELIZBEHA AND BOXING GANDHIS
dave matthews openers $6
thursday, october 10 • 10 pm
four piece SUIT
cocktail exotica from Barrence Whitfields band • $6
saturday, october 12 • 10 pm
SCHLEIGHO AND 100 ICED ANIMALS jazz funk grooves • $5
wednesday, October 16 • 10 pm
STRING CHEESE INCIDENT AND NEW BROWN SUIT
grassroots grooves from Colorado • $5
MUSIC SEVEN NIGHTS A WEEK
Coming this month: Ferron, Bill Miller, Greg Brown, Jazz Mandolin Project, Mavis Saunders, Dan Byron, moe, Dave Brubeck, Combustible Edison
TICKETS At the door from For the Record in Amherst at the Northampton Box Office or call 586 8686 to charge by phone. You must have very positive ID to drink
24 hour Concert info: - 3 0610

BILINGUAL SENIOR CUSTOMER SERVICE REPRESENTATIVE
Florence Savings Bank is currently seeking a qualified candidate for the position of Bilingual Senior Customer Service Representative. The successful candidate will be responsible for opening and maintaining various types of accounts, cross-selling bank products and services, outreach efforts within Hampshire County, counseling customers on loan products and assisting them through the application process, and providing interpreting services to Spanish speaking customers.
The position requires bilingual (English and Spanish) skill, prior customer service experience in a bank environment, knowledge of bank loan products and experience with loan application process, and demonstrated presentation and facilitation skills.
A competitive salary and outstanding benefits package is offered. If you are interested in these opportunities, please forward your resume in confidence to: Vice Presidents' Human Resources Director, Florence Savings Bank, 85 Main Street, Florence, MA 01060. Florence Savings Bank is an Equal Opportunity Employer and encourages diverse candidates to apply for this position. No phone calls please.
Florence Savings Bank

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY LIMITED TO SEATING
• Dolby SPECIAL ENGAGEMENT
MT. FARMS 9 MT. FARMS MALL ROUTE 9 HADLEY 584-9150
Call Theatre For Showtimes
EXTREME MEASURES* R
LAST MAN STANDING R
D3: THE MIGHTY DUCKS* PG
FLY AWAY HOME PG
HAMPSHIRE 6 HAMPSHIRE MALL ROUTE 9 HADLEY 584-7755
Call Theatre For Showtimes
THAT THING YOU DO* PG
THE SPITFIRE GRILL PG-13
BULLETPROOF R
*THE GLIMMER MAN R
2 DAYS IN THE VALLEY* R
THE FIRST WIVES CLUB PG

We Deliver!
Kai Chi
Chinese - American Cuisine
Restaurant & Bar
MT. FARMS MALL
ROUTE 9 • HADLEY • 586-2774
Delivery: Sun.-Thurs. Noon-2 a.m. Fri. & Sat. noon-3 a.m.
Enjoy HALF PRICE APPETIZERS
9 PM-Close • 7 Days a Week
21 SELECTIONS!
Ex: Pu Pu (for two) reg. 11.99 Now 5.99
No other promos apply
EAT IN ONLY

Hewlett-Packard — Performer of the year.
We like the sound of that.
Hewlett-Packard, the world's most admired technology company, is also Forbes magazine's 1995 Performer of the Year. We are a world leader in the design, manufacturing and distribution of computer and electronic test and measurement equipment because of a core set of performance-based values we call "The HP Way." Currently, we have employment opportunities available for Electrical Engineering majors (BS, MS, or Ph.D) in the following departments:
• Research and Development • Technical Support
• Manufacturing • QA
• Marketing • Custom Solutions
Successful candidates must have excellent interpersonal, problem solving, and written/verbal communication skills. Individual must be self-motivated, detail-oriented, and able to work in a team environment.
Interested candidates please contact the University Career Center and meet with our hiring managers on campus October 9th and 10th, 1996. To learn more about HP and our employment opportunities, visit our Homepage on the World Wide Web at: http://www.jobs.hp.com
Hewlett-Packard Company is an equal opportunity employer dedicated to affirmative action and work force diversity.
HEWLETT PACKARD

Alomar suspended, but will umpires walk out?

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Roberto Alomar will serve his five-game suspension for spitting on an umpire next season. That much is clear.

Whether umpires will walk out Friday is uncertain.

And once again, baseball finds itself in the middle of a big mess.

The Baltimore Orioles' All-Star second baseman withdrew the appeal of his suspension Wednesday night, canceling a hearing before American League president Gene Budig that had been scheduled for today.

Now umpires must decide if they'll violate the no-strike clause in their labor agreement and walk out Friday in protest of what they believe is a too lenient penalty.

"(Budig) has elected to cancel tomorrow's hearing and grant Mr. Alomar a five-day spring vacation, with pay, for spitting in the face of an umpire," umpires union head Richie Phillips said. Once Alomar dropped his appeal, the suspension became automatic. Both the owners and the umpires said they expect to be back in federal court Friday in Philadelphia, where the American and National leagues had asked for an injunction that would prevent umpires from walking out.

"It was a tragic event, but major league baseball must move forward with resolve that no such thing happens again," Budig said.

Union head Donald Fehr, speaking during an unusual news conference at Yankee Stadium during the New York-Texas playoff game, denounced Phillips, who wants Alomar suspended immediately. "The last thing this sport needs is more confrontation like that," Fehr said.

Citing past precedent and the union's expired labor agreement with owners — kept in force by a federal court order — Fehr said it would have been unprecedented and impossible for Budig to suspend Alomar for postseason games.

"Gene Budig or the owners' lawyers can't go in willy-nilly because Richie Phillips wants them to and say that they're changing their agreement with the players," Fehr said.

Alomar, speaking earlier in the day, said he wasn't having any problems coping with the controversy.

"I'm going to sleep the same way I sleep my whole life," he said. "I have nothing to worry about."

Fehr suggested that representatives of players, owners and umpires meet during the off-season to defuse tensions.

"Maybe we're at a stage where everybody can take a deep breath and say this is a wake-up call and get together over the winter and talk about it," he said.

A management official, speaking on the condition he not be identified, said acting commissioner Bud Selig had agreed to such a conference but that Phillips was refusing to answer Selig's telephone calls.

Some umpires expect U.S. District Judge Edmund Ludwig to issue an injunction if the sides don't settle. The labor agreement umpires signed in May 1995 contains a no-strike clause.

"We signed a contract to work and we're obligated to do that," umpire Drew Coble said Wednesday before the Indians-Orioles game. Coble sounded as if he would prefer that umpires take a softer approach to negotiations with baseball's lawyers.

Smith

continued from page 10

we're completing right now, that's all."

Catterton will sit on the sidelines for the first time in 11 games after he took over the starting duties last season. Throughout the first four games Catterton was 25-for-65 passing (39.7) for 457 yards, five touchdowns and four interceptions. Inconsistency became a factor, which was the impetus for the change.

"I talked with Anthony about it and I explained the reasons to him," Hodges said. "It's not an easy decision to make. I know it hurt the young man. He's a great kid, and I don't want to hurt anybody, but it's what we feel we have to do to help this football team win on Saturday."

Smith says he will approach this game the best he can, and says he is not trying to worry about the pressure and just to go out there and perform.

"I haven't put much pressure on myself," Smith said. "I don't think the team has put much pressure on me, I think they'll be behind me. I'm surrounded by the best players in the Yankee Conference in my opinion. This is the only way I would have it."

Hodges feels that Smith will just give the Minutemen a better opportunity to get the victory and feels good about the decision to have Smith in to start.

"We have confidence that he will go in there and get the job done," Hodges said. "He has a lot of poise, he has a lot of ability, the only thing he doesn't have is a lot of experience and we're going to get him some of that starting Saturday."

The Minutemen were pretty strong in passing the first two games, but since then they have dropped off in that category a little bit. Smith hopes to bring them back up and get the passing game working again.

"We just need to go out, try to have a balanced attack, and go out there and execute, bottom line," Smith said. "Rhode Island plays good [defense]. They have good athletes on defense and we just need to execute our assignments. I just need to focus and get my reads set, pull the offense together, and we've just got to go out and be focused every down and ready to play."

Make no mistakes about it. This is a big football game coming up tomorrow, and Smith will be instrumental in leading his team into battle and in trying to come up on the plus side of the scoreboard.

"This is as big of a football game we could be playing in right now," Smith said. "The most important thing is for our team to win. I want to win football games, and if I can play a part in winning them, then I'm going to try my best to win."

Volleyball goes to Philly for A–10 action

La Salle, Temple on docket, then Fordham

By Jeremy Adams
Collegian Correspondent

The Massachusetts women's volleyball team heads south to put the heat on three conference opponents this weekend. Today the Minutewomen travel to the City of Brotherly Love to face La Salle and Temple, and tomorrow they take Interstate 95 North to meet Fordham in the Bronx.

Massachusetts goes into the weekend with a 13–3 record. It won both of its games last weekend beating St. Bonaventure and Duquesne in the Curry Hicks Cage. Its conference record stands at 2–1, Rhode Island being the lone blemish.

St. Bonaventure (2–11) posed few problems for the Minutewomen. They swept the Bonnies 15–13, 15–3, 15–10. Freshman Jill Meyers provided 11 kills, seven digs and a career-high seven block assists. Senior Dionne Nash contributed 11 kills and 11 digs to lead the way.

Against Duquesne, UMass lost the first game 15–12, but came back to win the match in four games. In the second and third games the Minutewomen came from behind late in the games to scrape by with consecutive 17–15 results. The issue was settled convincingly in game four at 15–5.

Coach Bonnie Kenny reports that the celebration was short, and focus shifted quickly and surely to this weekend.

"This weekend is critical," said Kenny. "Some teams are really struggling now so if we can play well and improve this weekend it will be a big step forward."

La Salle (0–12) leads off the fight card for Massachusetts, as they begin a five-match road trip that will last through this weekend and pick up again next Friday at Xavier and Dayton.

Temple (8–3, 3–1 in the A–10) is seen as Massachusetts' hardest competition for this weekend.

"Temple is a very effective offensive hitting team. They're bigger at the net than we are. Hopefully our ball control and defense can help us out," said Kenny.

The match with Fordham will be on Saturday in New York.

"Fordham is a much improved team. They've had a really good recruiting year. I expect a tough match," said Kenny.

Big games were turned in by junior Lesley Nolan, Nash and Meyers. Nolan had 22 kills and 10 digs, and Nash had 21 kills and seven block assists. Meyers established herself another career high with her 21 kills. She hit a team high .367, picking up nine of her kills on 11 attacks in the first game. Sophomore Katie Pearce played almost every minute of the match, and she picked up 72 setting assists in the effort.

Other contributors have included Kari Hogancamp, whose 13 digs led all against Duquesne. Coach Kenny expects more production from Sarah Watters, Susan Maga and Nolan, who has been recovering from a hairline fracture in her foot.

Individual honors have also been bestowed upon the Minutewomen this past week. Meyers' numbers did not go unnoticed; she was named A–10 volleyball Rookie of the Week. Her performance has been inproving over the course of the season as dictated by her improving statistics.

Their strong start has earned the Minutewomen their best ranking in the history of the program, at No. 3 in the NCAA Division I District I. National powerhouse Notre Dame is ranked first, and Atlantic 10 nemesis Rhode Island is ranked second.

"By next week we should be at midseason form," said Kenny, whose team's next home match will be Friday, Oct. 10 at the Cage.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Katie Pearce looks to help keep the Minutewomen on top of the A–10 with a solid performance this weekend.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Sisters of Alpha Chi Omega would like to invite all university women to Open Rush. On Saturday 10/5 at 1 pm. we will be taking a fitness walk around Amherst. On Tuesday 10/8 there will be dinner at 5:30 pm - Come see our house! 10/10 at 6:30 is ice skating and on 10/16 there is a self-defense workshop. All events are at 38 Nutting Ave. Any questions please call Patrice @ 549-4802

AUTO FOR SALE

1990 Dodge Dynasty automatic, 4 doors, air bag, A/C. Excellent condition $2875 (508)-544-3783

1986 Oldsmobile Delta 88 $1,000 Runs Great. 323-1174

1984 Honda Accord AT, AC, PW, PL, cruise, 110k miles. Call Jamal 548-9292

1985 Buick Skylark Dependable. Ask $1000 or BO Call Brian (413)774-2107

EMPLOYMENT

Business Opportunity. Need additional income? Want the energy to earn it? Earth-Friendly company looking for distributors. Wild Organic Food, free tape 1-800-977-7527 ext. 7368

Spring Break!! Earn Cash!! Highest Commissions! Lowest Prices! Travel free on only 13 sales! Free info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

Cruise Ships Hiring Earn up to $2,000+/month. World Travel. Seasonal and Full Time positions. No exp. necessary. For info call 1-206-971-3550 ext. C50215

National Parks Hiring Positions are now available at National Parks, Forests and Wildlife Preserves. Excellent benefits and bonuses! Call 1-206-971-3620 Ext. N50016

Tropical Resorts Hiring Students needed! Entry level and career positions available worldwide. Call Resort Employment Services 1-206-971-3600 Ext. R50012

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS! Over $ billion in public and private sector Grants and scholarships are now available. All students are eligible. Let us help. For more info: call 1-800-263-6495 Ext. F50014

International Employment - Earn up to $25-$45/hour teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S Korea. No teaching background or Asian Languages required. For info: call 206-971-3570 Ext. J50015

Babysitter/Light Housekeeping in Amherst Tuesday and/or Thursday 2-7pm Car, non-smoking. Call Robin 256-0860 9am- 9pm

Spring Break '97! Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica and Florida. EARN FREE TRIPS AND CASH! Call (800)700-0790

Copacabana! A Multicultural After School Program for Grades K-6 is interviewing students (with work study only) for teaching positions. Call Jan or Sheena @ 253-5698

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-9747

FOR SALE

Word Processor 4 Sale, excellent condition $250.00 OBO, call Lisa 253-8195

Computer for Sale Macintosh LC with color monitor for sale 10Mb RAM External 100Mb RAM hard drive Global Village 28.8 Global/FAX external modem System 7.1 software included $700 or B/O Call for more info, more software included. Scott 253-7936

486SX Compact Laptop. 4 meg. RAM 120HD, MS Office 6.0, electronic pen, external CD ROM via PCMCIA, Canon Bubble Jet Printer, $950 or best offer 549-4850 Jason

Macintosh Performa 5215CD, 75MHZ CPU, 8MB RAM, 1GB HD, 15" monitor, 14.4 Fax/Modem, 16 Bit Sound Asking $1500 OBO Call 584-8402

Mac Powerbook 140 8/80, fax/modem, software and portable printer w/case $1,000 Call Mike 587-0347

Mac Powerbook 520CO + Laser Printer $1,100/BO For more info, call Amy 256-0413

1995 Trek 820 18" New derailer back wheel cranks Grips/soft barends, toestraps . Just tuned. $250 548-4849

1986 BMB Tix Row 7 Floor, 3 tix Call 256-8630 and leave a message for Chris.

Dave Matthews Tix 10/6 Good seats Call Jimmy 549-0318

KEGulator Keg System with 2 taps $250 or BO Call 256-4201 or (617)354-9258

Basement Sale! Everything must go!! 549-1578

FOUND

Blue Univega Bicycle and blue Jansport backpack with leather bottom Found September 29th. 6-0847

INSTRUCTION

Bartend with University Bartending 50% student discount. Amherst classes starting soon! Call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX for info

Boxing Lessons w/Dyana Bumpus. Call for brochure 727-8817

FC/MAC Tutoring Cheap instruction for computer. Patient, valuable help and advice Set-ups, software, Internet (413)772-0833

English Language Consultant Available to International Students and Non-English Majors. Will edit papers and dissertations, also tutor ESL. Call Ms. Reed, retired faculty member, for rate schedule and free initial consultation 253-3354

LOST

Lost Dog Reward Missing from North Maple Street, Hadley since Sunday, Sept 22. Lab/Springer Spaniel Mix, answers to the name of Benny. Has lab features with shaggier coat. Primarily black with tan paws and black and white fluffy tail. Would be considered medium sized, approx 34lbs. 25 inches tall. Only wearing silver choka collar- no tags. Call with any info: 549-1280 Ask for Shawn or Ben

St. Anne Medal Will pay reward. Call 546-7164

MOTORCYCLES

1980 CB 650 $500 or BO 9650 miles runs well - must sell. Call 549-0646

MUSICIANS

Guitar Classes Start 9/10 Rentals and lessons available 10 wks/$40.00 FTUG Fred 545-0579

PERSONALS

Choices Not Chances Free contraception education Every Mon & Thurs 3-4:30 and Tues & Wed 7-8:30pm in Rm 302 UHS Men and Women welcome For more information call Health Education Office 577-5181

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

ROOM FOR RENT

One room available in Amherst, on bus line $265+ a month 256-0535

SERVICES

Computer Problems? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Scream Savery 549-0083

Have you been ripped off by a retailer? Contact the Student Legal Services Office regarding your rights as a consumer 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK! Earn cash!! Highest commissions/lowest prices! Travel free on only 13 sales!!! Free info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

WANTED

Need Extra Phish Tix for Mon Oct 21 show MSG 253-6659

Rates
$2.00 minimum /day
Students
20¢ per word /day
All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

You can read 'em with your headphones on.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
Collegian Classifieds
Collegian Classifieds
Collegian Classifieds
Collegian Classifieds
Collegian Classifieds
Collegian Classifieds

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21–April 20
The best way to handle financial problems this week is by cutting expenses. Reevaluate exactly what is a necessity and what is a luxury, and you should notice results almost immediately.

TAURUS
April 21–May 21
A professional decision begins to impact your working environment early this week. Although change can be stressful, try to think of all the implications—there may be some that are favorable to you, especially financial.

GEMINI
May 22–June 21
Getting together with a partner means more than doubling your effectiveness for a particularly knotty problem. Avoid taking credit cards when you go shopping this week because the temptation to spend what you don't have may be too great.

CANCER
June 22–July 22
A problem that flares up again may be easily solved, if you step back from it and change your perspective a little. Avoid all distractions to improve your odds of finding a solution, and don't allow office politics to interfere with your efforts.

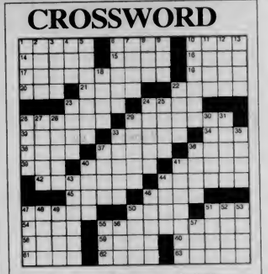
LEO
July 23–August 23
Someone in a position of power is likely to notice anything unusual that happens this week. Making an extra effort to impress them, without being obvious, is likely to pay dividends at this time. Put on your thinking cap, and go for it!

VIRGO
August 24–September 22
A good week for making long-term plans. Your insight is keen, and your diplomatic streak is running strongly—you can probably get certain people to do just about anything. Arrange for a discussion on a controversial subject.

LIBRA
September 23–October 23
Advice from an old friend proves to be right on the money in financial matters. Seeking alternate sources of income may prove fruitful—perhaps you can market a skill you didn't realize you had. Avoid a tendency to overspend and break the budget.

SCORPIO
October 24–November 22
A recent fling may have left you feeling broke. Economizing in little ways will keep creditors at bay and leave you feeling stronger. If health problems are bothering you, do your own research. The experts may have missed a vital clue.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23–December 21
An itch to travel may be an early sign of burnout. Take energy steps to refresh your energies—eat well, sleep enough and ask for extra TLC from friends and family. Planning a vacation carefully means it will be relaxing instead of stressful.



CAPRICORN
December 22–January 20
An evening get-together is fun for everyone involved, so perhaps you should issue a few extra invitations, just in case things go up. A chance you take in the romantic arena could pay off big time, if you say what you really feel.

AQUARIUS
January 21–February 18
This week, your practicality is a virtue as you stretch your paycheck through a pinch. Plan on a few indulgences in the near future, though, so you don't feel deprived. A class that's forming soon could be just what you're looking for.

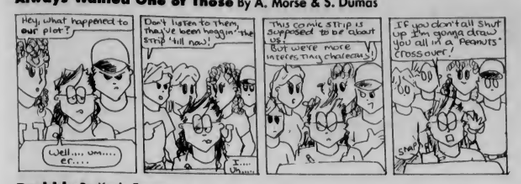
PISCES
February 19–March 20
Something you've been pondering for a long time could suddenly become very clear, if you stop agonizing and focus on another topic for awhile. Enjoy a younger person's fresh ideas and optimism for a break in your everyday routine.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1. Harmonize
6. Mince
10. Kauai's neighbor
14. Copland or Spelling
15. They try harder
16. David's news partner in the '60s
17. Official copy
18. Domesticate
20. Lilac or Magpie, to Bart
21. Pork fat
22. Groundwork
23. Sclanter Sir Humphry ___
24. "___ Peace"
26. Gain
29. Cultivated plots
30. Fur ___
33. Diminishes
34. Admiring exclamation
36. Frenzied
37. Prevail
38. Ill temper
39. Actor Beatty
40. Minute
41. Conundrum
42. Fills the Minolta again
44. Mother with a Nobel Prize
46. TV trophy
48. Where Rhett came to call
47. Speed
50. Leif's son
51. ___ the breeze (chitchat)
54. Sleep ___ (postpone a decision)
55. Hasten
56. Dull one
58. Darkness laugh
60. Du Pont discovery of 1935
61. Stunning blow
62. Vegas machine
63. Enthrall

DOWN
1. "Memory" show
2. Last name in spyglass
3. Gershwin and Levin
4. ___ Oncle d'Amerique
5. Domicile
6. Author Gordon
7. Desirous
8. Drink slowly
9. After FDR
10. Anti-knock rating
11. Ones of discovery
12. Half- prefix
13. Shoshonean Indians
16. Batman's headquarters
22. Estimates in envelopes
23. Frisbee, e.g.
24. Flavorful
25. Small songbird
26. College official
27. First name in wabbit hunting
28. ___Janeiro
29. Profits
30. Clamor
31. Shoe bottoms
35. Scrawny
36. Greek goddess of marriage
37. Enlarge, as a hole
38. North wind
40. "Drink ___ only" (Ben Jonson)
41. Agent's commission
43. Piece of mail
44. Peacock's showy feature
46. Bribery for a lot
47. Freddie the Freeloader, e.g.
48. Ever and ___
49. Regal title
50. Audio reflection
51. Salve
52. Over
53. Canvas shelter
56. Sounds of appreciation
57. Pocket filler in a nursery rhyme



Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

Always Wanted One of Those By A. Morse & S. Dumas

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

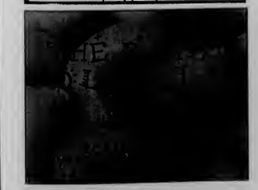
Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown Judd Winick

8 Years in Braces By Eric Peterson

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

My mom's solar calculator was dirty so I put it in the dishwasher.



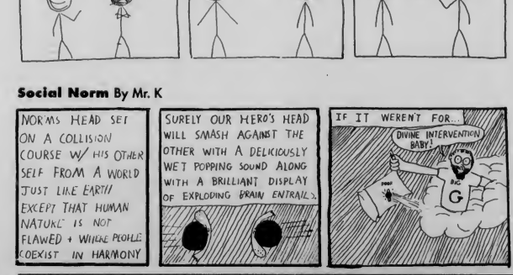
It's very clean now, but it doesn't work.

Actually it does work, but it doesn't give the correct answers anymore... like myself.

Mom was very upset. She called me all kinds of names some of which I liked.

So it all worked out for the best.

University® By Frank Cho



Close to Home By John McPherson

Prospective dates first had to give a full presentation to Debbie Wexler's parents.

Loedoe By Mike Rybicki

Social Norm By Mr. K

So you think you're funny, eh?
Think you can make better Scrod jokes than the usP Well come on down and prove it pardner! I dare you!!
WRITE HUMOR FOR THE COLLEGIAN!

Quote of the Day

"Everything is walking distance—if you have the time."

–Steven Wright

Top 10
The Masachussets Daily Collegian
By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Signs that you're getting old

10. When playing cards, you refer to a "2" as a "deuce."
9. Your car gets 23 furlongs to the hogshead.
8. You and everything around you reeks of moth balls.
7. On Friday nights you hit the town looking for some "swell dames."
6. Standard apparel? Slacks, with a jersey and a cap.
5. Word "cockamamie" litters your vocabulary.
4. Your radio still takes a few minutes to "warm up."
3. You're Bob Dole.
2. Love making usually cut short by all too common phrase, "That's okay honey, you're not exactly 18 anymore."
1. You're still pissed off that your side lost the civil war (thanks Torbino).

Today's Staff

Laura Stock
Night Editor

Seema Gangatirkar
Copy Editor

Courtney Smith
Photo Technician

Christopher Brown
Production Supervisor

Dan Bodah
Matt McCarthy
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Scrod on a Bun
Grilled Scrod on Brannola
Scrod & Cauliflower Casserole

DINNER
Scrod Parmesan
Rotisserie Glazed Scrod
Hungarian Scrod Bake
Scrodsicles

Hampden

LUNCH
Scrod Cutlet on Rye
Spaghetti with Scrod Sauce
Scrod Chili

DINNER
Scrod Divan
Tri-colored Scrod
Pineapple Upside Down Scrod

Worcester

LUNCH
Vegan Scrod Tacos
Macaroni and Scrod
Scrod on a Stick

DINNER
Savory Scrod Strudel
Scrod Alfredo
Scrodabilities
Scrod a la mode

Berkshire

LUNCH
Scrod Pizza
Foot-long Scrod Dogs
Scrod Cheese Steak Sandwich

DINNER
Breaded Scrod Tenders
Savory Scrod Wings
Scrod Kiev
Scrod Jello

Sports

Minutemen head to URI to butt heads with Rams

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts football team hits the road this weekend; looking to extend a three game winning streak when they take on the University of Rhode Island (2–3, 0–3 Yankee Conference). UMass (3–1, 2–0 Yankee Conference) has been on a roll, but that hasn't stopped head coach Mike Hodges from tinkering with the squad.

Following junior quarterback Anthony Catterton's disappointing 3–13 outing last Saturday against Northeastern, coach Hodges has decided to start freshman Jeff Smith against the Rams. Hodges has inserted Smith in the second half of every game so far this year, but this will be the first collegiate start for the Worcester Academy product.

"We need to be a little more consistent throwing the football," Hodges said. "So we decided to make the change. We're committed to the passing game. We've got to complete more balls, and we're hoping Jeff can do that for us."

This week's opponent is URI, a team that would seem easy to overlook. They're 0–3 in the conference, suffering losses to William and Mary and New Hampshire at home, and were spanked 58–19 by Maine in Orono on Sept. 21. But Rhode Island was 7–4 last year, and one of those victories was a 34–0 whitewashing of the Minutemen. The Rams' junior quarterback Chris Hixson passed for 299 yards and 2 touchdowns, and senior flanker Cy Butler added seven receptions for 116 yards in the blowout. Coach Hodges is looking forward to another shot at the Rams.

"Sure there's a little extra incentive," Hodges said. "We were embarrassed down there last year. It's an opportunity to go back to the same place and come back [with different results]."

Once again Rhode Island will be led by the strong arm of Hixson. The junior has completed 70 of 123 passes for 804 yards so far this season, with 5 touchdowns and 5 interceptions.

His favorite target has been Butler, who has already earned Yankee Conference Player of the Week honors this season, and was a first team All–Yankee Conference selection for his work as a return specialist last season. Butler hasn't missed a step in 1996, compiling 24 receptions for 439 yards and five touchdowns.

Rhode Island employed primarily a passing offense last season, but has spread the ball around more effectively so far in 1996. The Rams have gained 590 yards on the ground in their five games, led by Clemson transfer James Jenkins. Jenkins, who was the Tigers starting tailback for their season opener in 1995, has amassed 367 yards and six touchdowns for Rhode Island so far this year. Sophomore Shyron Sanford has contributed with 268 yards and two TD's, and is second on the team in receptions with 17.

The Minutemen head down to Meade Stadium banged up. Senior tailback Frank Alessio is doubtful with a shoulder contusion, which he hurt in the first quarter of last week's win over Northeastern. Senior cornerback and return specialist Kory Blackwell has been hobbled by a sprained right ankle and probably won't see action, and senior free safety Bryan Mooney's hamstring problems will keep him out of action, according to Coach Hodges.

There is bright news for UMass. Senior linebacker Justin Reimer was selected as the Yankee Conference Defensive Player of the Week for his play in the Northeastern game. Reimer registered 16 tackles and a sack as the Minutemen defeated the Huskies 21–14. On the season, Reimer has 54 tackles, second in the Yankee Conference, and is now fourth on the UMass all–time career solo tackles list.

The loss of Alessio is devastating, but the emergence last week of sophomore tailback Matt Jordan should fill the void. Last year Jordan gained 564 yards, but didn't play the first two games with a hamstring injury, and had only one carry in Richmond. Last week Jordan saw his first real action, and stepped it up in place of the injured Alessio. He rushed for 112 yards and 2 touchdowns, including a 70 yard burst on only his third carry of the season.

Minuteman Notes... With a win on Saturday, the Minutemen will improve to 3–0 in the conference. The last time the Minutemen started Yankee Conference play 3–0 was 1990, when UMass last captured the YanCon title.

MASSACHUSETTS VS. RHODE ISLAND

Justin Reimer

Tomorrow
1 p.m.
at
Meade Stadium
Kingston, RI

On The Air
WMUA, WHMP

Sy Butler

Freshman QB Smith under center for Minutemen

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

Tomorrow afternoon when the University of Massachusetts football team travels to Kingston, R.I. to take on the Rams, there will be a new quarterback taking the snaps for the Minutemen. Freshman quarterback Jeff Smith will get the starting nod over junior QB Anthony Catterton who started the first four games of the year for UMass.

Smith has seen action in three of the four games for the Minutemen so far this season, and in those three games he has thrown for 149 yards on 11–for–28 passing, one touchdown and no interceptions. Smith's most noted performance came in the third game of the year against Richmond where he led the Minutemen down the field, and threw a 20–yard touchdown pass to Erik Henry with three seconds left to force overtime.

Smith is from Rochester, N.Y. and went to Worcester Academy before coming to UMass. He will be making his first collegiate start tomorrow in what he feels is going to be a very big game for him as well as the team.

"This is a big game for me personally," Smith said. "I need to go in right where Anthony left off and not skip a beat with the offense and make it as smooth as possible.

"This is definitely one of the biggest games of the season, we're 2–0 in the Yankee Conference and Rhode Island is a good team. We need to come out with a win. This would be big for our season, and big for us to reach our goals."

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN
Freshman quarterback Jeff Smith (12) steps in for the ineffective Anthony Catterton this weekend against URI.

The decision to make Smith the starting quarterback for this week, was made by head coach Mike Hodges and the coaching staff after looking at the films on Sunday, Hodges said.

"We just felt that we need to be a little more consistent, and to complete more passes," Hodges said. "We're committed to the throwing game, it's part of our offense, and we have to be better at it than we're doing right now.

Turn to SMITH, page 8

UMass field hockey set to battle NC

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Two years ago, the Massachusetts field hockey team took its place on the turf at Westfield State College to play against then–No. 1 North Carolina. When the game was over, the Minutewomen walked off the field victorious in the 1–0 contest, courtesy of Kyle Rothenberger's lone goal.

On Saturday at 1 p.m. the two teams will face off for the first time since that meeting, once again at Westfield State. And once again North Carolina is the top team in the nation.

But that's not all the No. 5 Minutewomen (8–1, 2–0 Atlantic 10) face this weekend. On Sunday at 2 p.m. they will return to the WSC turf to match up with new A–10 opponent West Chester.

"This is the week from hell," UMass coach Pam Hixon said. "Northeastern [on Wednesday], and then of course North Carolina and then Westchester."

Hixon is downplaying the UNC game, instead shifting the weekend's focus to the conference tilt.

"The scheduling is a little unfortunate for us, because West Chester now is in our conference," Hixon said. "I probably would have scheduled West Chester–Carolina in reverse, because the conference game is the game that really counts."

Hixon does understand the importance of playing the Tar Heels however. The series, which dates back to 1983, consistently produces some of the best field hockey games in the nation.

"[The Tar Heels] are truly the best team in the nation," Hixon said. "They may have a loss, but they are really a cut above the rest in every category. Our expectations are just to compete and see where we are in the end."

For the casual field hockey fan, Sunday's game against West Chester may look to be nothing more than a conference game. But to those who follow the sport, and specifically the A–10, the game is more serious than that.

With the inclusion of West Chester in the A–10 as an associate member in field hockey only, the winner of the conference tournament will compete in a play–in match against the winner of the Mid–American Conference Tourney champs.

"Our main focus right now has to be on West Chester," Hixon said. "Our focus is on the conference games, because that's going to be our ticket into the tournament.

West Chester is a somewhat unfamiliar opponent for the Minutewomen. The series between the two schools, which began in 1980, stands even at 1–1–1. The schools last met in 1988, but UMass' last win came back in '80.

UMass heads into the weekend riding a three–game winning streak, including Wednesday's 2–1 nail–biter over Northeastern. While Hixon focused on the NU game without really looking forward to the weekend, the players indicated that the mid–week win was a confidence booster heading into a tough weekend.

"I think everyone's going to be pumped for UNC," UMass goalie Hilary Rose said. "If we put in an excellent performance people are going to start taking notice."

Minutewomen on road to face Colonials

Undefeated UM needs away win

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

One saying that has incessantly been beaten into the ground concerning team sports is "defense wins championships." True, but if a team wants to reach the championship, they have to win on the road.

This weekend, the No. 6 Massachusetts women's soccer team (8–0, 3–0 in Atlantic 10) will be making its first extended road trip of the year. Today they will face the Explorers of La Salle (2–7, 0–2 A–10) in Philadelphia at 4:30 p.m., while on Sunday they travel to the nation's capital to face the Colonial Women of George Washington at 2 p.m. (5–3, 4–0 A–10).

These two games look different on the surface, but the fact of the matter is that both possess a common attribute: the Road–Win factor.

"This is our first weekend road trip, so that provides some interesting things," coach Jim Rudy said. "It will be our first playing after flights, which is always interesting to see how badly we get beat up by travel."

La Salle's record coming into this contest with the No. 2 ranked team in the Northeast does not bode well for them, that is, in a numbers sense. But they do have something that UMass has not faced this year — a good midfield.

"Irregardless of La Salle's record, we are finally facing a team that has got some experienced midfielders," Rudy said. "Usually we have dominated the midfield in every game, and we have done it in a big way, but we are facing three kids off the La Salle side who are rated very good.

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER, page 7

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN
Tina Lightning, and the rest of the Minutewomen, look to stay on a roll as they hit the road for conference competition.

UM polo looks for self-discovery

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

The UMass water polo team heads down to Providence with a lot of extra baggage in preparing to compete in the Brown Invitational this weekend.

Although they won't be swimming off against the host Bears, whom the Minutemen have beaten twice already this season, they will take on the region's top team — at the moment — the Navy Midshipmen in the culmination of a weekend where the Minutemen (10–2) have to re–find themselves. They will also face Princeton and Bucknell.

After sustaining the loss of Marc Staudenbauer (broken thumb) for the remainder of the season, coach Russ Yarworth will be using this weekend to search for some answers, i.e: a permanent replacement for Staudenbauer.

Scott Stevens started in his place last weekend in the Minutemen's exhilarating 15–14 victory over Brown. Stevens contributed mightily on the defensive end, but Yarworth is uncertain as to who is going to step in this weekend.

Along with Stevens, other candidates who could attempt to fill Staudenbauer's rather large shoes are: speedy freshman Rich Slingluff, sophomore Carlos Mendez, sophomore transfer Jake Howard or physical Massachusetts native Chad Filiault.

Yarworth will be looking for all of his players to step up regardless of the situation they are in, and looks forward to this weekend's matches as a showcase for his bench.

"These games will be good in the sense that they don't mean anything as far as league standings go, but it's still good competition," he said.

Another problem that has plagued the Minutemen early on this season is their penchant to start a game slowly, without intensity or aggressiveness.

"All you can really do is talk about it," Yarworth said. "I'm pleased with the practices lately."

The intensity was obviously not there last weekend as UMass struggled against Harvard, and came out sluggishly against Brown. The starters didn't even play against the Engineers from M.I.T.

Yet another glitch in the system that the Minutemen are looking to fix is the prolonged slump that Brian Stahl seems to be stuck in.

Stahl was largely ineffective throughout the duration of last weekend's Minuteman–Bear clash as a trio of Brown defenders combined to shut down UMass' top sniper. But, with the outcome still in doubt, Stahl came up with a huge score and then assisted Ron Gonen on the Minutemen's game–winning goal.

Stahl has become the focal point of the UMass offense, a burden which he didn't have to bear last season thanks to the presence of Minuteman water polo legend Luis Limardo. The not–so–svelt sophomore is adjusting to opposing teams changing defensive schemes on almost every possession to just shut him down.

Men's soccer to face pair of A–10 foes

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's soccer team is back on the road as they travel down south this weekend to face two teams that have struggled early on in the Atlantic 10. Today, UMass squares off against Virginia Tech before travelling to George Washington on Sunday.

The No. 25 Minutemen (5–2–1, 2–0–0 Atlantic 10) are looking to continue last weekend's winning ways. While UMass faltered in its only two home games thus far, they mustered a pair of shutouts in Philadelphia last weekend blanking St. Joseph's (1–0) and Temple (4–0).

Coming up big for UMass was junior forward Joenal Castma who transferred from St. John's this fall. In his first two starts in maroon and white last weekend, Castma notched two goals in the blowout over Temple.

On the other side of the ball, sophomore netminder Jeff Jablonski stepped up when starting keeper Tim Pearson injured his shoulder in pre–game warm ups. With only three games under his belt and only 108 minutes of action, Jablonski managed four saves in the shutout over the Hawks while saving three shots in the win over the Owls.

Last weekend, the Minutemen picked up the pace in the scoring department and look to keep opposing A–10 keepers on their toes. Leading the UMass attack is the powerful tag team combination of senior Dave Siljanovski and junior Mike Butler. Siljanovski is currently tied for fifth in goals (28), first in assists (24) and fourth in points (80) in the Massachusetts record book. Butler is currently sixth in assists (14) and ninth in both points (56) and goals (22).

First up for the Minutemen is Virginia Tech. The Hokies enter the contest at 4–5 and have yet to tally a goal in the A– 10 let alone a victory as they have fallen to LaSalle (3–0) and Fordham (1–0).

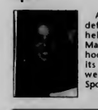
The faltering Hokie attack is led by a tandem of leading scorers as well. Stanislav Licu and Mark Ludwig are at the top of the Virginia Tech scoring list with three goals each.

Throughout the season, the Hokies have two keepers splitting time in junior John Sexton and sophomore Alexey Salmin. With six starts this season, Sexton boasts 525 minutes between the pipes with a goals–against–average of 1.71. In three games with starting appearances, Salmin boasts a GAA of 1.67.

As for the Colonials, coach George Lidster's club has dropped its only two A–10 contests thus far. Perhaps they are working from the same playbook as the Hockies, since both defeats come at the hands of Fordham and LaSalle, the two A–10 clubs that have routed Va Tech as well.

Overall, GW posts a record of 5–4–0 due to the offensive play of freshman scoring sensation Sebastian Rodriguez. The Santiago, Chile native leads the team with six goals, three of which propelled the Colonials on to victory. Other than Rodriguez, the George Washington scoring has been spread around with a handful of players with one or two tallies.

In between the pipes, the Colonials put all their eggs in one basket with freshman Colin Berenhaut. The Winnipeg, Canada native has racked up all 840 minutes of game time while netting 51 saves. In addition, Berenhaut owns a 1.71 GAA.



UMass returns to Richard F. Garber Field on the weekend of the 11th where they will face Dayton and then Xavier on the 13th.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 24 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Monday, October 7, 1996

DMB hits Mullins Center

The Dave Mathews Band put on a rocking concert last night to a packed house at the Mullins Center (see Arts & Living, page 6).

Weekend split

Amy Ott's strong defensive play helped the Massachusetts field hockey team split its games this weekend (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Corsican separatists suspected in bombing

BORDEAUX, France (AP) — Authorities suspect Corsican separatists in a late-night bomb that tore through city hall hours after the mayor — Premier Alain Juppe — had left for Paris, a TV station reported yesterday.

No injuries were reported in the blast, which occurred shortly before midnight Saturday. It damaged the ground floor reception hall and surrounding rooms and broke windows on all three levels of the 18th-century building.

The French television station LCI reported that authorities suspect Corsican separatists were behind the bombing in this southwestern city.

Corsican nationalist groups have waged a violent campaign for independence for the French Mediterranean Island, but mostly have restricted their attacks to the island itself.

Investigators said they did not know whether the bomb targeted Juppe or city hall. No one claimed responsibility and there had been no warnings, said prosecutor Patrice Davost.

"The state cannot give way before terrorism [and] must not let itself be intimidated," Juppe said in an interview with television network TF1.

NATION

Mormon leader says women shouldn't work

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormon Church President Gordon Hinckley said yesterday that, if possible, mothers should forgo full-time jobs in favor of hiring their children at home.

"It is well-nigh impossible to be a full-time homemaker and a full-time employee," Hinckley said in a sermon directed to the women of the 9.6 million-member Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Hinckley recognized that many women cannot stay at home to raise their children because of economic reasons.

"To you I say, do the very best you can," he said. "I hope that if you are employed full time you are doing it to ensure that basic needs are met and not simply to indulge a taste for an elaborate home, fancy cars and other luxuries."

Speaking on the concluding day of the faith's 166th Semiannual General Conference, Hinckley said he often is asked by reporters about the role of women in a church where only males can hold offices in the lay priesthood.

"They do so in an almost accusatory tone, as if we denigrate and demean women," said Hinckley, 86, who became president and prophet of the church last year.

"I invariably reply that I know of no other organization in all the world which affords women so many opportunities for development, for sociality, for the accomplishment of great good, for holding positions of leadership and responsibility," he said.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tuesday	Wed.
HIGH: 65	HIGH: 65	HIGH: 60
LOW: 45	LOW: 45	LOW: 50

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds.....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword.....page 8
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News.....page 3
Sports.....page 10

Sparks fly as Clinton, Dole meet at debate

Contenders for the White House tell the nation their views on each other, the future in clash

By JOHN KING
Associated Press

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — President Clinton and Bob Dole clashed vigorously over tax cuts, Medicare, education and the economy last night in a spirited prime-time debate over who should be trusted to lead America into the 21st century.

"I think the best thing going for Bob Dole is that Bob Dole keeps his word," the Republican challenger said in a 90-minute debate critical to his hopes of launching an October comeback.

"It is not midnight in America, senator: We are better off than we were four years ago," Clinton said in making his case for a second term.

The Democratic incumbent and his Republican challenger stood just a few feet apart on a red-carpeted stage, challenging each other again and again in a showdown that ushered in the final month of the White House campaign.

Clinton took credit for an economy that had created more than 10 million jobs, for cutting the deficit by 60 percent and for vetoing Dole-backed Republican budgets he asserted would have cut $270 billion from Medicare and another $30 billion from education. Looking ahead, Clinton said his $100 billion in tax credits targeted to making college more affordable were far more responsible than Dole's "$550 billion tax scheme."

"We have the right approach for the future," Clinton said.

Dole forcefully disagreed, and accused Clinton of running a campaign designed to scare elderly Americans. "I am trying to save your Medicare, just as I rescued Social Security," Dole said.

The former Kansas senator told the viewing audience, "If I could not cut taxes and balance the budget at the same time I would not look you in the eye tonight."

Entering the debate, Clinton was ahead by a dozen points or more in most national polls and in surveys from the major Electoral College battleground states. The two candidates will meet again in 10 days, in another one-on-one encounter because of the controversial decision to exclude Ross Perot.

Dole was the aggressor throughout the night, asserting time and again that Clinton's conservative election-year rhetoric about curfews, school uniforms and welfare reform was at odds with a liberal record of giant tax increases and a giant government takeover of health care.

Turn to DEBATE, page 3

ASSOCIATED PRESS
Bob Dole

ASSOCIATED PRESS
Bill Clinton

He said that given his record of deficit reduction, paring welfare rolls and supporting the death penalty, "I just don't think that dog will hunt this time."

For all the sharp exchanges, there were several moments of laughter. "You can probably tell we like each other, we just see the world in different ways," Clinton said.

And indeed they did.

"I trust the people, the president

Dole offers little to students; President takes safe route

News Analysis

By Michael Elliott
Collegian Staff

Republican Presidential nominee Bob Dole did his best to make himself a man of the people in what was his first debate with President Bill Clinton. His success was, undoubtingly, mixed.

With many mainstream political commentators virtually writing off his chance at election, Dole had few options but to paint himself as someone who, as he said, "trusts the people, not the government."

Surprisingly, Dole attempted to appeal to constituences which Republicans have, traditionally, ignored or failed to communicate clearly with; specifically, low–income working class people, young people and, to a lesser extent, women.

He even, at one point, went against party grain, throwing his support behind some measure of gun control — a platform which will certainly infuriate a weakening National Rifle Association.

He blasted Clinton for a tax scheme, which he said removes out of working class pockets 40 percent of their earnings, for federal spending.

He reached out to young people and students during his closing remarks, focusing on drug usage, providing viewers with a truly unimaginative mantra of, "just don't do it."

University of Massachusetts students, for a variety of reasons, had little to be impressed with.

Both candidates discussed education at length, disagreeing as to how the other translated their stance on issues such as school choice and financial aid.

Dole balanced most of his arguments on providing state governments with more flexibility through what could envolve into a national voucher program for elementary and secondary education. Offering private education at a public school price was key, he said.

However, he spoke little on the rising costs of college education and even less as to how financial aid programs would be administered if the Department of Education was elimated, as Clinton says Dole will do.

Another notable omission on the part of both candidates was a discussion on the role of Affirmative Action programs in higher education.

On the back–burner since California Gov. Pete Wilson eliminated all such programs in the nation's largest university system two summers ago, the debate side–stepped what will continue to be a dominant issue in education politics.

Turn to ISSUES, page 3

GLB writer encourages activism

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN
Tori Osborne spoke at the Dickinson House at Mount Holyoke College Friday afternoon on her new book "Coming Home to America: A Roadmap to Gay and Lesbian Empowerment."

By Jamie Sinsheimer
Collegian Staff

Last Friday afternoon, gay rights activist Tori Osborn spoke at the Five College Women's Research Center at Mount Holyoke College. A celebrated speaker and advocate, Osborn read passages from her new book "Coming Home To America: A Roadmap to Gay and Lesbian Empowerment," held a question and answer period, and signed copies of her book.

As part of her three–month national book tour, her speech was a moving and empowering talk about how far the gay movement has come addressing various issues including the government.

To an almost all female crowd, she started her speech by reading the introduction from her book. Reading slowly and allowing the crowd to absorb all that she was saying, Osborn began to speak of the 1993 gay and lesbian March on Washington and other political victories and defeats for gay Americans.

"As I took my place at the podium that day, I felt a part of a new and promise–filled moment history," Osborn said.

That "optimism and buoyancy" did not last too long, she said. With the onset of the ban of gays–in–the–military a few months later, the political pessimism that followed "spread through the gay and lesbian community like a dense, dark rain cloud."

Osborn read several other passages from her book including pieces on coming out, the impact activism has had on the world, and how to change the world. Her speech was targeted to a younger generation: college students and young activists committed to making a difference in the world.

After she finished speaking, the crowd was invited to ask questions. The first question was asked addressing Bill Clinton and the Defense of Marriage Act that Clinton recently signed. Osborn felt that since Clinton signed this bill a lot of the gay vote would be forced away from him since the gay community feels "abandoned."

"It is a serious mistake for people not to vote, especially in the GLBT [Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender] community," Osborn said.

"Our movement has moved forward this year and I don't understand how anyone who cares about our issues could vote for Bob Dole," Osborn said.

The topic of discussion then switched to "outing" and how Osborn felt about it.

"Outing is immoral, delicious political revenge, that is a very unsuccessful strategy for anything. It is often used as a threat to parlay votes and it mostly alienates our allies," Osborn said.

She feels that people should come out themselves and the gay community as a whole should encourage them.

Osborn then spoke of her book and the writing process which she described as an "intensely lovely experience" that required a lot of discipline and faith.

She spoke of diversity and identity politics and the importance of them in our society.

Since "nothing is fixed and nothing stays the same," she said she feels that as a culture, society can change the way things are perceived. "We can fashion an activist culture, too much diversity work turns into too much us versus them," Osborn said.

"We have to find a way to get people to talk about differences and not be afraid of them," she said. She went on to say that in today's society people tend to shun those who are different and that is the cause of a great deal of our distress.

Closing off, Osborn said that activism is important and organizing and leadership are the key ways to do it well.

"We have a world to change," Osborn said "and we have to start working together to change it."

100 vehicles damaged in construction project

By Joseph Fountain
Collegian Staff

Car owners in Lot 26 got a big surprise last Wednesday when an oil emulsion solution being sprayed by Lane Construction on a part of Governor's drive that was being repaved was carried by the wind and hit nearly 100 parked automobiles.

"My car is not too bad, but this car — I wouldn't be happy with. Maybe I was lucky," said one irate motorist.

The contractor had been notified about the hazards posed by the high winds, according to John Mathews, manager of the University's Facilities Planning Division's Engineering and Design department.

"The contractor is fully responsible for and very willing to repair the damage by the overspray of emulsion," Mathews said. "We are very sorry that vehicles were damaged and we want to see these vehicles repaired as expeditiously as possible."

Roger Benton of Lane Construction refused comment on the incident, however, the company handed out leaflets on Friday, listing the company's Westfield phone number for those who have complaints.

"Common sense would tell you not to spray on a windy day," said Leon Caragulian, a university employee. "Why weren't we just told to park in lot 45, across the way? That parking lot is never filled."

According to a different flyer printed by facilities management, Lane is

Turn to TAR, page 3

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN
"The Best of What's Around."
The Dave Matthews Band captured the spirit of the crowd with their lively sounds last night at the Mullins Center.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Monday, Oct. 7

Audition — Come audition for the comedy Improv troupe SAPRE CHANGE in the Fine Arts Center, Curtain room 02, at 6:30 p.m. Call Aaron at 546-3393 for more information.

Class — "Feminism and Mysticism," a free, drop-in class for women focusing on women and Jewish mysticism at 7 p.m. at Chabad House, 30 N. Hadley Rd., Amherst. Free and open to the public. For more information, call 549-4094.

Meeting —An organizational meeting for the 1997 UMass program abroad in Siena will be held at 7 p.m. in 301 Herter Hall. The director, Prof. Elizabeth Mazzocco, will be on hand to answer questions and give information about applications, expenses, and deadlines. If you need additional information, call Prof. Mazzocco at 5-3453. The deadline for applications is Tuesday, Oct. 15.

Meeting — Amnesty International (the human rights organization) will sponsor a letter writing campaign at 7 p.m. in Campus Center room 911. For more information, call 545-1925.

Tuesday, Oct. 8

Meeting — The public is invited to the Annual Meeting of the Friends of the Jones Library System at 7:30 p.m. in the Large Meeting Room on the lower level of the Jones Library. The featured speaker of the evening is the new curator of the Dickinson Homestead, Cindy Dickinson, who will speak on "Perspectives of the Dickinson Homestead." There will be time for questions afterward, as well as refreshments. For more information, call Edith Barton at 549-1748.

Wednesday, Oct. 9

Forum — A forum on election year alternatives, independent political action, and grassroots organizing entitled "Campaign '96: Will Your Vote Count?" will be held at 7 p.m. at the Unitarian Meetinghouse, 121 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. Speakers include Eric Chester, Socialist Party vice-presidential candidate, and Jonathan Leavitt, Co-chair, Massachusetts Green Party.

Meeting — Interested in learning about deaf culture and practicing American sign language? HANDS club will hold its first general meeting of the fall semester at 7 p.m. in Machmer W-25. For more information, call the office at 5- 1925 or stop by room 306 of the Student Union.

Meeting — The UMass Ski Club will hold its second general meeting and Montreal trip sign-ups at 7 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. All those interested must attend. For more information, call 5-3437.

Meeting — The UMass Italian Club will be holding an organizational meeting at 7 p.m. in 301 Herter Hall. New members are welcome. For more information, call Bill at 585-7806, or e-mail at wacava@student.umass.edu.

Meeting — The Anthropology Undergraduate Collective will hold its next meeting at 7:45 p.m. Meet outside of the Machmer Lounge. Newcomers are encouraged to attend.

Thursday, Oct. 10

Lecture — Ifti Naasim, a poet from Pakistan, will read his poetry and discuss his work in a lecture entitled "On Being Gay and Creative in South Asian Culture," at 12:30 p.m. in Campus Center room 803. The event is free, wheelchair accessible, and is part of the GLBT Studies Lecture Series, and is co-sponsored by the Stonewall Center. For more information, contact the UMass Stonewall Center at 5-4824.

Friday, Oct. 11

Lecture — Wolf Eston, from the University of New Mexico, will give a lecture entitled "The 2.06 Ga Bushveld Catastrophe, South Africa, and Its Possible Global Effects on the Proterophytic-Paleophytic Boundary," in Morrill II South, room 131 at 3:30 p.m. This lecture is a part of the Geosciences Lecture Series.

Opening Reception — The Student Union Art Gallery welcomes Benigna Chilla back to Amherst for an exhibition of her current works. Her art will be on display at the Student Union Art Gallery from Oct. 10–Nov. 1. The reception will be from 5–7 p.m. For more information, call 5-0792.

Notices

Final Exam Schedules — The Fall '96 Final Examination Schedule will be available beginning Friday, Oct. 18. Copies will be delivered to students in residence halls, and will be available to off-campus students in the Registrar's Office (213 Whitmore).

New Organization — Attention Biracial and Multiracial Students on campus. A new organization is forming and your help is needed. If interested, call Jordan at 6-3548.

UMass Hang Gliding Club — Learn how to hang glide. The UMass Hang Gliding Club is sponsoring a beginner weekend on Oct. 19-20. Sign up now because space is limited. This is the cheapest way to learn how to fly — no experience necessary. Meetings are on Tuesdays at 6:30 p.m.; everyone is invited to attend. Check board by SU ballroom for location of meetings and office hours. For more information, call 5-0804 and leave a message.

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley offers rides to students to attend the 10 a.m. service in Amherst. Drivers arrive at the Knowlton and Prince bus stops at 9:45 a.m. Please call Mark to confirm, or for other stops, at 253-0361.

Everywoman's Center — Acculturation Group for Latina Women, facilitated by Mari Vicente, Thurs. from 4–6 p.m. Child Sexual Abuse Survivors Support Groups: Group 1 facilitated by Sara Elinoff, Mondays from 7–9 p.m. Group 2 facilitator, day, and time TBA. Coming Out Group For Lesbians, facilitated by Lynne Schachne, Mondays 4–5:30 p.m. Lifting Your Spirits, facilitated by Carla Brennan and Diana Dalendina, Weds. 4–5:30 p.m. Eco–Psychology for Women, facilitated by Carla Brennan, Fridays 10–11:30 a.m. Post Abortion Support Group, facilitated by Peggy Warwick, Wednesdays 5:30–6:30 p.m. Self–Esteem & Assertiveness for Women, facilitated by Carla Brennan, Wednesdays 6:30–8 p.m. Single Mothers Support Group, facilitated by Amy Rosebury, Tuesdays 1–2:30 p.m. Women & Divorce, facilitated by Ali Thompson. Tuesdays 6:30–8 p.m. All groups offered by the Everywoman's Center begin in October, and offer a safe and confidential space. For other groups, call 5-0883.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition meetings are every Tuesday at 7 p.m. in room 306 of the Student Union. For more information, call the ARC office at 5-1925.

Staff Needed — The UMass Index yearbook needs staff in all departments. Editorial positions are available in Photo, Layout, Copy, and Marketing departments. An assistant copy editor and assistant sports editor are also needed. Meetings are held on Wednesdays at 7 p.m., 304 Student Union, or call 5-0848 if interested.

Religious — The Muslim Student Association at the University of Massachusetts invites all Muslims in the Amherst area to weekly Friday prayer from 1 to 2 p.m. in the Campus Center. The room number will be posted on the Notice Board. For more information, call Utama at 256-8482 or Laili at 253-0874.

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Look out below...
ROTC cadets were training by doing rappelling exercise off a dam near Westhampton on Saturday afternoon. See Tuesday's Collegian for story.

BILINGUAL SENIOR CUSTOMER SERVICE REPRESENTATIVE

Florence Savings Bank is currently seeking a qualified candidate for the position of Bilingual Senior Customer Service Representative. The successful candidate will be responsible for opening and maintaining various types of accounts, cross-selling bank products and services, outreach efforts within Hampshire County, counseling customers on loan products and assisting them through the application process, and providing interpreting services to Spanish speaking customers.

The position requires bilingual (English and Spanish) skill, prior customer service experience in a bank environment, knowledge of bank loan products and experience with loan application process, and demonstrated presentation and facilitation skills.

A competitive salary and outstanding benefits package is offered. If you are interested in these opportunities, please forward your resume in confidence to: Vice Presidents' Human Resources Director, Florence Savings Bank, 85 Main Street, Florence, MA 01060. Florence Savings Bank is an Equal Opportunity Employer and encourages diverse candidates to apply for this position. No phone calls please.

Florence Savings Bank

Student Discount at

EAST HEAVEN HOT TUBS

FOR RESERVATIONS 586-6843

33 West Street, Northampton

Tub for 2 for 1/2 hr. $15 Special!!

Monday - Thursday

Holiday Not Included, Valid til 11/15/96

TOC Bar & Grill

1 FM ROOM • LINCOLN CAMPUS CENTER (413) 545-2217

Munchie Specials Mon-Fri

On The Big Screen!

Chiefs vs. Steelers

Catch All Your Sports At The Top!

FREE Popcorn

Mon-Fri: 4pm - 12:30am

Sat: 3pm-12:30am

11th Floor Campus Center

MORGAN STANLEY

Information Technology Division
Graduate Associate Position

We are seeking the best UMASS students from all majors to bring their talents to technology projects of worldwide scope. Benefit from a dynamic, highly creative environment which uses the most advanced technology available anywhere. Some of the technologies you will work with include:

Parallel Processing • Object-Oriented Database/Languages
GUI Development • Real-Time Data Distribution
Document Architectures • Distributed Computing
Genetic Algorithms • Mainframe Systems
State-Of-The-Art Trades Processing Systems

You are cordially invited to attend our presentation at

7:00p.m.
October 17th
Room 903, Campus Center

Both December and May graduates will be considered.
Job descriptions available at Mather Career Center.
Morgan Stanley contact:
Jean Ellen Murphy (212) 762-2559
Please email your resume to murphyje@ms.com as soon as possible.

Morgan Stanley Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

The color of my pumpkin...
Children participated in decorating their own pumpkins in preparation for Halloween at the annual Apple Harvest/Crafts Fest on Saturday afternoon at the Amherst town commons.

Founder of RSO has high hopes discussion on racism, diversity will improve student relations

By Christina Heaphy
Collegian Correspondent

As a freshman at the University of Massachusetts, Joe Wojnas met people who were the butt of racist and homophobic jokes — jokes he used to make himself.

As a junior and residential assistant in Southwest Residential Area, he was a witness as some students were harassed because of the color of their skin or sexual orientation. He said that facing these issues head on has allowed him to see a broader social reality.

Now he is inviting all people on campus to form an informal discussion group focusing on issues of diversity, prejudice, and understanding.

The first meeting will be held tonight at 7 p.m. in the Center for Diversity and Development (CDD). The CDD is located in Moore Residence Hall, Southwest Residential Area, on the edge of the "horseshoe."

Wojnas said the purpose of the group is "not to make clones, like the group stands for this or stands for that, but to gain an appreciation and understanding of other people's views."

Wojnas said he worked in the CDD for a year and realized having informal conversations about diversity with co- workers was a productive way to hear the views of others.

He said the University is fortunate to have people from all over the globe, representing different religions, ethnicities, sexualities, and views of the world.

However, he added that he feels many students don't take advantage of what a diverse campus can offer.

But, he said, "[an open discussion] could break down some of the lines between RSOs [Registered Student Organizations]. All different RSOs can realize that they can work together on some issues and become even stronger. That doesn't mean they have to change their platforms. I think RSOs do a good job, but they can work together on some common initiatives."

Wojnas said that after he finished his year as a RA, he wanted to find a place to openly talk about people's views on issues such as race, sexism, homosexuality, and others. But, he said, he could not find another RSO which would foster this kind of discourse.

Wojnas said one of "the best things about starting a new group is that there are no bylaws to follow."

He emphasized that there will be no formal structure to the organization and that each member will have a voice of equal strength and influence.

Wojnas said that issues of diversity are sensitive for a lot of people. He has found, however, that there are more who wish to discuss such issues than leave them in the dark.

■ tar

continued from page 1

arranging to have all of the damaged cars repaired in Amherst at no cost to the vehicle owners. Those affected are instructed to call Roger Benton of Lane Construction at (413) 562-6711 or John Matthews at (413) 545-6442.

Facilities Management said the remaining part of Governor's Drive will be finished, on schedule, by early November. The road around the PVTA parking facility will be re-opened when construction is completed. The cost of the project was $2.25 million.

There will also be "pollution-free" lights installed instead of the normal flood-light type street lights. In the spring, there will be red oaks planted all along Governor's Road. The cost of landscaping will be $200,000.

Mathews added motorists should be careful near the new crosswalks on Governor's Drive, which are flatter then the roadway creating a "speed bump" effect.

"The crosswalks are designed in accordance with Massachusetts guidelines to alleviate tripping hazards and ease wheelchair movement for the campus's handicapped pedestrians," he said.

Asian/Asian-American residential floor a success

By Lia Wong
Collegian Correspondent

The Asian/Asian-American Special Interest Residential Program (SIRP) held its yearly Open House Tuesday night in the basement of Dwight residential hall in Northeast.

Approximately 50 students and staff gathered for the official welcome to the SIRP, located on the fourth floor of Dwight.

The SIRP is the result of the work of four student founders who initiated and planned for the floor three years ago, with the help of Lucy Nguyen, director of the United Asia Learning Resource Center (UALRC), and Thea Costine, Housing Assignments Office manager.

According to Hassan Mohammad, resident director of Dwight/Leach/Hamlin Cluster, the last academic year was supposed to be the first year of the SIRP, but due to unforeseen circumstances, it could not go along as planned.

One of the student founders, Marchella Ming, said that when they were planning for the SIRP, they wanted to do something for the Asian community, something that was "...of our time. Something established while we were still here."

Another founder, Vira Douangmany said, "Sometimes going to such a large university, it is hard finding oneself as the only Asian on a floor."

Special thanks were given to Celina Chan, the resident assistant of the SIRP. Douangmany said that the success of the floor this year was due in large part to Chan, who put in so much time and effort.

Chan added that it was not just her alone, but the help of everybody on the floor to make the SIRP successful.

Members of the SIRP floor helped plan and prepare for this event, working since early Tuesday.

Darius A. Burton, area director for Northeast/Sylvan said he was extremely ecstatic to hear that there was a space for the Asian community.

Students had to be turned away because the SIRP had been filled to full capacity. This semester there was a 102 percent fulfillment of the SIRP, with even the swing-space, the fourth floor lounge, filled.

The current make up of the floor include students from Asian and Asian–America backgrounds such as Chinese, Korean, Vietnamese, Taiwanese, Indian, Hmong, Laotian and bi-racial Asian–Americans.

According to Acting Assistant Director for Residence Life Hiza Norman, "This SIRP is one of the most successful programs this year. But, we shouldn't stop there, let's keep on going and do bigger and better programs."

Burton added that because so many interested students had to be turned away that they should think about expanding the Asian/Asian American SIRP floor.

■ debate

continued from page 1

trusts the government," Dole said.

Clinton said he trusted the people, too, but that the government had a critical role in areas such as protecting the environment, putting more police on the street and regulating tobacco sales to keep children from smoking.

Dole said the economy was not growing nearly as fast as it could, and that millions of Americans were feeling an economic squeeze.

"Americans are working harder and paying higher taxes," he said. "I want the government to pinch pennies for a change instead of the American families."

Dole recalled Clinton's own admission that in 1993 he "had raised taxes too much." A bit later, Clinton recalled a decade-old quote from Dole's running mate, Jack Kemp, who said Dole "never met a tax he didn't hike."

With answer after answer, Clinton sought to portray Dole as bent on cutting or gutting vital government programs such as Head Start and student loans. He also criticized Dole's proposal to eliminate the Education Department.

"I think my ideas are better for the future," the president said.

Dole was equally determined to shed any suggestion he was hardhearted, referring obliquely to his own struggles overcoming grave World War II wounds and making the case that his school-choice plan would allow poor inner-city children to go to better schools. "I'm not some extremist out here," Dole said. "I care about people."

Clinton and Dole waged the debate on a stage at Hartford's Bushnell Theater. Shut out by the debate's sponsor, Perot took to the airwaves before and after the debate to complain.

Although Clinton and Dole had vigorously debated tax and education policy, foreign affairs and a host of other subjects, Perot said on CNN: "My concern is that they never went to the core problems. The core problem is that we have two parties that control our government."

Roughly 400 Perot backers joined other protesters near the debate site, many holding American flags upside down as a sign of their displeasure.

With his deficit in the polls, Dole was running short of time to build support for a Republican campaign anchored on a promise to cut taxes by 15 percent and the theme that Clinton is a "warmed-over liberal."

■ issues

continued from page 1

For his part, Clinton played it safe — a believable strategy for some one who is already drawing up plans for a second term.

Dole, in all his efforts to turn his party into a one of inclusion, failed to score a break–through victory over Clinton, by not appealing to audiences whose votes he desperately needs, such as students.

However, for those already with tens of thousands of college debt, Clinton was no knight in shining armor. He briefly mentioned in his opening statement a vague proposal to make college education more affordable, but offered nothing concrete, such as a national "Fair Share" bill.

Both candidates contradicted themselves as much as they called for more bipartisan solutions to dilemmas such as Medicare expenditures and the U.S. military role in the United Nations.

Dole accused Clinton of instigating a "campaign of fear," while simultaniously asserting that "there is a lot wrong with America."

Clinton, speaking on the U.S. role abroad, defended himself against Dole's attacks by emphaising that he takes the nation's interests into sole account when making his foriegn policy decisions, but did not articulate what those values will be in the 21st century.

Correction
In the Thursday, Oct. 3 edition of the Collegian, the article entitled "Torie Osborn to speak on gay, lesbian empowerment," was written by Amy Risely.
The Collegian regrets the error.

Calvin Klein

25% Off Calvin Klein Basic Underwear Styles

2 Weeks Only!
October 1-14

J•RICH CLOTHING FOR MEN

22 Masonic Street
Northampton • 586-6336
Open 7 Days • Thurs 'til 9

Illustration by Kim Neumann

The Women's Health Project Wants You To Get In Touch With Your Body:
Practice monthly self-examination

Visit our Campus Center table this month
10am - 3pm, Mondays and Wednesdays
Call us for more information at 577-5181,
Health Education Division, University Health Services

Hewlett-Packard — Performer of the year.

We like the sound of that.

Hewlett-Packard, the world's most admired technology company, is also Forbes magazine's 1995 Performer of the Year. We are a world leader in the design, manufacturing and distribution of computer and electronic test and measurement equipment because of a core set of performance-based values we call "The HP Way." Currently, we have employment opportunities available for Electrical Engineering majors (BS, MS, or PhD) in the following departments:

- Research and Development
- Manufacturing
- Marketing
- Technical Support
- QA
- Custom Solutions

Successful candidates must have excellent interpersonal, problem solving, and written/verbal communication skills. Individual must be self-motivated, detail-oriented, and able to work in a team environment.

Interested candidates please contact the University Career Center and meet with our hiring managers on campus October 9th and 10th, 1996. To learn more about HP and our employment opportunities, visit our Homepage on the World Wide Web at: http://www.jobs.hp.com Hewlett-Packard Company is an equal opportunity employer dedicated to affirmative action and work force diversity.

HEWLETT PACKARD

The Collegian
****
Up All Night!

EXPERT AUTO BODY REPAIRS, AUTO PAINTING and GLASS REPLACEMENT

MARSHALL STEINBECK
PROFESSIONAL COLLISION WORK

• OVEN BAKED URETHANE FINISHES
• FREE ESTIMATES & CLAIMS ASSISTANCE
• INSURANCE APPROVED GLASS REPLACEMENT
• PROFESSIONAL UNIBODY REPAIR AND FRAME STRAIGHTENING

256-8157 256-1385

53 South Prospect Street, Amherst, Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Morse Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Mark McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Steinheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor
Michael Elliott News Editor
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Josh Sylvester Editorial Production Manager
Sean Horgan Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quirl Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Land for peace not the answer

Early this summer the people of Israel elected Benjamin Netanyahu as their leader. The election between Netanyahu and Shimon Peres, the incumbent, was a referendum on the peace process.

The election of Netanyahu was not a rejection of the process — something evident in the fact that this weekend Netanyahu and Yasser Arafat have returned to the negotiating table. On the contrary, the Israelis declared they wanted an accountability attached to the process. To this date, the Israelis are the only people who have given while the Arabs dictate.

History records that this is nothing new. In 1937, when the British drew early plans to create Jewish and Palestinian nations, the Palestinians rejected it because they refused to accept a Jewish presence in the Holy Land. This original plan gave the Jews only 30 percent of contemporary Israel. Nonetheless the Palestinians refused.

Matthew Wurtzel

In 1947, the United Nations drew up new plans to form two nations in the Holy Land. This plan equally split the Holy Land between the two groups, but again the Palestinians refused. Unlike the British, who abandoned their attempts after a lack of an agreement, the UN created the nation of Israel despite the Palestinians. War shortly broke out, and the Israelis won.

Not only did the Israelis survive the War of Independence, but they won all the proceeding wars that followed in 1956, 1967 and 1973. After each war, they won land in the process.

The Israelis commanded the Golan Heights, the West Bank, the Gaza Strip and Sinai Peninsula following the four wars. In the late 1970s, the Israelis returned the Sinai Peninsula to Egypt in the name of peace. Although Gaza was originally Egypt's, it is odd that they refused its return.

Imani Carter and the United States brokered this peace that set a precedent on many fronts. Not only did Israel achieve peace with one of its chief aggressors, but Arabs now expected that "peace" could be achieved if Israel bartered away its land.

The peace with Egypt was the right thing, and some concessions for peace are acceptable. However, there is only so much land that the Israelis can offer before the nation becomes smaller than Rhode Island. It's easy for us Americans to mindlessly chant "land for peace" because we don't understand how vital land is to smaller nations since our own nation is practically a continent.

The Israelis have selflessly given other non-land concessions in the name of peace. During the Persian Gulf War, the Iraqis lobbed SCUD missiles at Israel, which was not involved in the war. However, the Israelis did not react because the United States insisted it would be best for the UN allied forces that included oil-rich Arab nations such as Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates. In the name of peace the people of Israel endured nights of terror until the war ended.

Following the war, they returned to the negotiation tables to discuss the possibilities of peace. Eventually agreements were established with Jordan in 1993.

The biggest problem with the process is reciprocity. The Jews have fulfilled their side of the bargains. They have given the Palestinians some self rule, and helped establish a Palestinian police force. However, the Palestinians have not cracked down on terrorists, nor crimes committed against Jews in the areas that they control.

Innocents are still senselessly murdered by men who are afraid to show their cowardly faces. Hamas bombs buses, and shells Israeli territory from points practically inside UN refugee camps in Lebanon.

Despite this deplorable activity that is committed by Palestinians with the support of Syria, the world expects the Israelis to continue to give up their land and security to nations that with a sneer call foreigners infidels, and Jews Zionists.

The election of Netanyahu assures that the Jews will not allow themselves to go quietly into the night again, as we did in Europe over 50 years ago. We have survived the Spanish Inquisition, Russian pogroms and the Holocaust; and we will continue to thrive despite our enemies because we are God's chosen people.

Matthew Wurtzel is a Collegian columnist.

Looking for a job?

Why are you reading this column when you could be driving a PVTA bus? Imagine all the fun you could have sitting in the driver's seat of a bus, waving to other bus drivers. I am so jealous, maybe I should quit my job here at the Collegian.

Tell me why are there only 115 student drivers this year at the PVTA, 40 short of the needed supply? Due to this shortage, the rest of the campus suffers from massively decreased service, but you could change all this — you too can be a PVTA bus driver.

"Maybe these freak experiences are related to our shortage of bus drivers. How many of your friends actually enjoy spanking Mormons who puke surf, much less drive them around town?"

Mike Burke

Just like Otto, the stoner bus driver on the Simpsons, you could walk the fine line of death every morning while your passengers are still in the process of waking up. You could cut corners, cut off cops, even cut off other PVTA busses. All this power could be in your hands. If you were a real rebel, you could try breaking some of the golden rules. Allow talking between driver and passenger. Allow students to stand on the yellow line. Allow passengers to stand in the back stairwell. And if you really want to make some noise... wave to every vehicle that you pass except other PVTA busses.

Plus, think of the social advantages to driving a PVTA bus. On rainy days, you will become everyone's best new friend (unless you are drivlng an out-of-service bus — in this case, suicide may be a viable alternative).

Think of all the fun on Thursday nights transporting the freshmen to Hobart Lane and Puffton Village. On the way to their hip parties they are obnoxious and anxious. On the way back, after a night of Natty Light, they show their gratitude by puking all over their seats. Freshmen plus North Amherst/Sunderland busses equals fun.

Besides the alcoholic freshmen, there are many more wonderful scenes to observe. Just by taking a peek in your rear view mirror, you can observe a never-ending sitcom bound to make you chuckle or laugh. I'm not even a driver and I've seen many weird sights pass in front of my eyes.

• Puke Surfing. Oh yes, the wonderful sport that no one should miss. Here are the rules: 1.) puke on bus 2.) allow puke to spread to increase spillage 3.) wait for bus to pick up speed 4.) surf in the puke while bus roars down Rt. 9 at 60 mph. 5.) game ends when you fall in puke. 6.) Bonus points awarded if you fall in puke that is not your own.

Two years ago I honestly saw two grown men (i.e. 30 years old) surf in their puke. After the fun grew old they sat at their seats and spit on the windows, while arguing who was the better spitter.

• Religious Conversion. I must give the Mormons credit. When is a better time to convert the world then on the PVTA? Think about it. After a long day of school, religion may very well seem the answer to solve your questions.

Here's a few hints on how to spot a converter a mile away, or at least a few seats away. If you see a young man conservatively dressed be wary, but not frightened — not yet. But be careful. First they will ask, "Do you go to UMass?" If you say "yes" they will jump to question two: "What do you study?" and then go from there. If you say no to question one they will make a weak attempt at finding a common ground. They always fail, miserably. It's pretty sad.

So far I have never see a true conversion. I am just waiting for the chance to drill them on issues like homosexuality and the role of women in society. I can't wait to be told that I am bound for Hell.

• Spanking. That's right, good ole spanking. Sorry for all you regular readers of "Ask Isadora," but I have seen parents violently whack their children for no good reason. Just last week, a seven-year-old girl asked her mother, "Mom, why do you like Bob Dole? He's an idiot." Suddenly Mother Superior started beating her child as if the child questioned about the strange naked man with her mother last night.

Maybe these freak experiences are related to our shortage of bus drivers. How many of your friends actually enjoy spanking Mormons who puke surf, much less drive them around town? Now, of all those friends, how many have a Commercial Drivers License? If your friends are remotely like mine, there aren't too many potential drivers out there.

But we need drivers. Otherwise I may be commuting to school in an ox-pulled wagon. There are more benefits taking up the drivers seat — good pay, free training and the chance to test your brakes while your friends puke surf.

Mike Burke is a Collegian columnist.

Editorial Policy

The Editorial/Opinion page welcomes columns, letters and cartoons from UMass and the rest of the Five-College Area.

Letters and columns must be typed and double spaced, with the writer's name, local address and phone number attached. This information is subject to verification prior to publication.

Anonymous submissions will not be printed.

The editorial staff reserves the right to edit letters and columns for grammar, clarity and length.

Any submission that is requested to be left unedited will not be considered for publication.

Submissions become the property of the Collegian and will not be returned.

The Editorial staff is not required to print all submitted material.

Letters should be no longer than 450 words and columns should be about 70 typed lines.

Submissions should be sent to the Editorial Desk, c/o Mark McGrath, 113 Campus Center, UMass Amherst, MA, 01003.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Education not always academic

There is no doubt in my mind that everyone who has ever been in an argument has felt that they were in the right. I'm sure that at one time or another that everyone in the world has been so absolutely pissed off that they have decided that the only way to get their argument across is to scream or yell. I know full well that at times nations have been moved to such anger and wanton malice that it has consumed them.

I know all this.

What I don't understand is the way that people think they can resolve gigantic conflicts, problems which are bigger than the people who are involved in the dispute themselves, by kicking around all sorts of little details and arguments.

To solve epic problems we must be willing to think in larger scales than the petty, often base, level at which we seem to conduct discussions.

Take for example the idea of racism. It exists. It is not a myth, a lie, or a joke. Hate crimes and discrimination occur every day.

Racism, a personal definition: When one human defines another human as being something less than human out of ignorance and fear.

In short, stupidity.

If a person can go through this life and learn only one thing, it should be that there is a genetic difference between frogs and elephants, not white and black.

If you can remember that, then you should be all set.

Don't worry about going to class, graduating or getting a job. If you can make it through the never-ending barrage of crap and still keep an open mind about things, you will have accomplished something that few people seem to be able to do.

At UMass, we are constantly exposed to a kaleidoscope of opinions, ideas and thoughts. Some we agree with, others we do not. That is our right. We have the privilege, ability, responsibility, whatever, of listening to what and who we want to.

Some of these messages and images are confusing; people become caught up in the passion of their convictions and fail to deliver clear messages. But if we are willing to closely examine the ideas behind the words, then perhaps we can start to understand some of them.

"If a person can go through this life and learn only one thing, it should be that there is a genetic difference between frogs and elephants, not whites and blacks."

Daniel E. Levenson

That, it would seem to me, is the reason for being here, the point of getting an education.

If I were only interested in my own opinions I could sit on a log all day, pick my nose and drool. That way I wouldn't have to meet new people or hear different ideas. I could be perfectly content and never have to deal with anything real. I would never have to consider other people's feelings or how my life was affecting others.

Believe it or not, there are some people who are like this, apathetic, spending their days sitting on the proverbial log of life, picking away at their meager existence, rotting on the inside.

And then there are the people who could make the world a better place for others if they spent their time sitting on a log, conducting nasal reconnaissance missions.

There are some things I know, and some things I don't, and that's why I'm here. I'm not here to get good grades, build up my resume or drink myself into a coma.

I'm here for one simple thing: an education.

To me that means a chance to learn from others what I cannot teach myself.

Four years isn't really all that long, and I've got no time for ignorance or the people who embrace it.

Dan Levenson is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

More followers than you'd think

To the editor:

Erik Molitor's editorial (Oct. 2, High on life) points out to us that the young conservatives on campus have some catching up to do. The Cannabis Reform Coalition would like to offer them a quick political update.

Mark McGrath stated in his anti-marijuana essay of Sept. 19, that UMass is a "liberal" university and that is the only reason why legalization gets any attention here. Incorrect. Legalization is an issue sweeping the nation as we speak. Misters McGrath and Molitor might be surprised to know that many other schools, like the den of hippies at Columbia University, have active chapters of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, and legalization is, yes, a hot topic there.

Such flaming liberals as William F. Buckley Jr. and George Schultz endorse making cannabis legal. Respectable organizations — churches, town councils, nurses associations, even the entire Bar association of New York City endorse legalization. Do you recognize the name Cato Institute? Them too. This idea that legalization is a "hippie radical" issue is going the way of the hula-hoop. We have famous lawyers and judges, church leaders and professors too numerous to mention on our side now. This is not your mother's marijuana movement.

So, Mr. Molitor — with all these powerful and successful people on our side of the fence (Did we mention Milton Friedman?) — if anything is going to hurt your chances of getting a good job with a UMass degree, maybe it's your own weak knees. If you had the guts to seriously consider thinking about the issues instead of trying not to ruffle any feathers, your future employers might realize that you have a mind of your own.

Brian S. Julin
CRC Founder and Alumnus
This letter was signed by five other members of the CRC.

Multicultural coverage biased

To the editor:

"Multicultural Affairs," as your Sept. 30 issue demonstrates once again, is simply a fancy code term for anti-white, anti-American and anti-Israeli bigotry.

To trust the Arab reporter's one-sided account of the tragic violence in the Mideast is like trusting Pravda's truthfulness during the Stalin era. The violence stopped, as it had started, when Arafat issued orders. To see the deadly consequences of trying to be an independent Arab reporter or publisher in Arafat's kingdom, read the chilling article in the October issue of Commentary.

The one glaring truth in the entire report was the Arab's calculated avoidance of the word Israel. "Zionist occupiers" and "Zionist soldiers" were the repeated terms. Is there any wonder why Israel is cautious in making paper agreements with an Arab power elite that still denies it the right to exist?

Professor Arnold Silver
English Dept.

Columnist not credible

To the editor:

I am writing in response to Christopher Hassett's latest column (Oct. 2, An alternative experience). Any intelligent reader should note that Mr. Hassett is a little off the pace of the mainstream of our society by virtue of his attendance at a meeting in the basement of Mary Lyon.

Aside from that, any journalistic integrity credited to him on previous occasions ought to be dismissed on the basis of his opinionated critique of individuals whom he had written unbiased articles on in the past. In addition, I find fault with his ability as a writer in failing to specify what the abbreviation D.O.M.A. represents, a major theme of his piece.

The Defense of Marriages Act represents the view held by over 80 percent of the American public, that sexual relations between members of the same sex is morally wrong. Mr. Hassett states that, "The idea of marriage is a cultural and universal institution, which has been around as long as human culture." However, he fails, once again, in that no reference is made to the fact that all civilized cultures and major religions throughout the history of the world have viewed marriage as a holy covenant between a man and a woman. Hassett contradicts himself by favoring same-sex marriages while opposing the redefinition of the institution's guidelines.

Our social structure must be preserved to avoid the systematic destruction of American culture. I do not favor rewriting multi-millennia old traditions. In fact, I abhor the very thought. However, D.O.M.A. does the opposite. It protects the sacred institution of marriage.

Phil Milson
Sylvan

Collegian appreciated

To the editor:

To the intelligent Tara MK Connelly. I admire your courage for standing up and yelling at this University for its lack of recognition. I know what I think isn't much, but it's the best I can do. Let me just say that I am one of the few who reads the work done every day by you and others at the Collegian, and to thank you for stressing yourself so much just to get a non-profiting newspaper out to the students of this campus. It is an admirable job, and I hope you continue to hold your head high.

Jeff Sanborn
Belchertown

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Black Affairs

Monday, October 7, 1996

Political rhetoric

For most of us, this November marks the first time we'll have exercised the right claimed by our great great grandmothers and grandfathers many years ago.

This November, thousands of students of color from across the nation will cast their votes for the next President of the United States of America.

And once again, it seems as though we are forced to bless the lesser of two evils with the seat we would all like to hold for a day.

How many times have you thought about what you would do if you were president for a day? No doubt, things would be different, but the reality is we aren't in such a position so we have to elect someone to carry out our ideals and goals for this nation as if we were in the White House ourselves.

Humphrey brown III

Sorry to say, my friends, but there hasn't been one president in the history of the United States that has even come close to following through and adhering to the needs and demands of the black community.

When John F. Kennedy even began to mention that he was going to care, somebody, somewhere made sure that he didn't live long enough to do anything. So, can anybody tell me one reason why we should expect either of the current presidential nominees to do anything different?

Clinton's antics as president these past four years haven't exactly been great for black people. Let's keep it real. Not only has Clinton embraced the death penalty, which means certain doom for thousands of brothers locked up right now, but he's most recently signed a Republican Welfare bill that will literally put millions of families on the street. He's fallen crazy short on promises concerning education, affirmative action, violence in the inner cities, and financial aid for higher education. I'm not even going to mention the Lilliputian amount of attention he's paid to the drug situation.

On paper, it doesn't look too great for Bill, but here's something that looks even worse:

A Republican-run White House with complete control over every branch of government — the Executive branch, Congress and the Supreme Court.

That scares me more than a Million Klan March.

As black people and as a multicultural community we can not afford to put Dole in office. It's that simple. We're talking about a man that is already extremely out of touch with his own young people.

How the Hell can we expect him to understand or want to address the needs and concerns of young black people? That just ain't gonna happen.

There are a lot of things that the Republicans say that seem to make sense when it comes to issues that don't affect the non-white community directly. But let there have to be a decision that has to be made concerning blacks, Native Americans or any other "minority" group, and see how quick they are to do the worst. Proposition 187 ain't nothin' compared to the kind of plans and propaganda that Dole and the rest of the good ol' boys have up their sleeves.

Putting someone like Bob Dole in office would be like cutting off our own feet, because that's exactly what's going to happen if he's there. Just like in times of slavery when a slave tried to run away from his master, there will be no escape for people of color trying to get out of the vicious cycle of self destruction caused by oppression and "hidden" (only blind minds can't see) racism.

It would be so nice to be able to pull a "Brewser's Millions" and pick none of the above, but that would never work. If we don't vote it's over for us, because it's the vote of the nation-wide ALANA community that keeps us in the game. Without it, the game is over and we loose.

So, what are we to do?

As much as it may pain us to do so, we have to put Bill back in office and let him finish the job he started. Only this time, we have to hold his butt to the fire. Hold Clinton responsible for his actions and have him make good on some of those nice things he promised us when we were putting his campaign signs on our front lawns. I'm talking about a major political movement among all people of color.

A movement reminiscent of the Black Power movement that dominated the mentals of brothers and sisters during the '60s and '70s.

A movement that challenges government policies and propaganda and puts power back in the hands of the people. All people.

A movement of such magnitude will cost us, though.

It'll mean a little sacrifice. A little dedication. And, oh yeah, a little unity (That means coming together for those brothers and sisters who don't seem to understand what the word means).

It's got to happen people and you know what? It's already in the works.

The Revolution is in the preliminary stages.

Keep those third eyes open.

In the mean time, read, vote and stay in knowledge. Peace.

Humphrey brown III is a Collegian staff member.

Gay entertains diverse audience

Tashama Smith
Collegian Staff

Last Thursday, the Everywomen's Center held their fourth annual Women of Color program.

The main event this year was stand-up comedy by artist/activist Emmy Gay.

The evening began with appetizers. There was a little of everything from cold cuts to chicken fingers; something for everyone. Women used this opportunity before the show to socialize and get to know new faces.

Gay fired up the audience with a "Macarena" intro which carried her into her main points of interest through stand up comedy — race, gender, and politics. The crowd was responsive to Gay's performance.

She concluded with a favorite story that she likes to share at the end of her acts. Gay has performed on many campuses across the US, Europe, and at the Fourth World Conference on Women In Beijing.

Gay has also appeared on the "Tonight Show with Jay Leno," "New York Undercover," and "Lifetime TV."

"[The show] was great and something different," said freshman Tina Ferendes. "I wish there were more programs like these."

Students were not the only ones drawn to the program. Many working women from the Amherst community were present as well, all coming from a variety of cultures and ethnic backgrounds.

"I am new in Amherst and I got to meet a loi of people of color," said Vienedre Roberts. "The networking was great."

After the program, Gay signed autographs and stayed for questions. She said she felt she had the ideal audience.

"The women of color tonight were very much alive," Gay said. "I could go much deeper with this audience because I could relate to the people. I don't always have such a diverse crowd that I can talk to."

Gay left the audience with some encouraging words to all students of color across the Five-Colleges: "Students of color; stay out there. Be bold."

Rap forum takes look at real issues

By Gregory Casimir
Collegian Staff

On Oct. 2, the fraternity of Phi Beta Sigma, in conjunction with Room 307, sponsored a discussion group dealing with the issue of how rap music affects black society.

The discussion was facilitated by a panel of speakers which included Shannon McGee, the former manager of BMCP (Black Mass Communication Project), Tyrone Tugwell of Room 307, and Corey Rinehart of Phi Beta Sigma.

The three areas of discussion were violence in rap, its socialization, and gangsta rap vs. knowledge.

McGee was the first person to address the violence issue: "In regards to violence, from a business point of view, violence is in demand by record labels."

Tugwell responded by saying rap didn't start the violence that has become increasingly prevalent in black communities.

"The world's been violent since day one," he said. "Cain and Able were brothers, and they were killing each other, so people have a tendency to be violent.

"To an extent, [rap] doesn't cause you to act violent, but if you're out there, and you're lost, like some teenagers are, and you're trying to find yourself an identity and all you hear are people talking about driving fancy cars, selling keys, shooting and wearing Tommy Hilfiger clothes, then that's the identity you'll go after," he said.

One audience member commented on the fact that it isn't up to the rappers to take responsibility for the way their audience reacts to their music.

"Life is all about control," he said. "When you listen to the tape, it's the public's fault if they go out and perform whatever they hear. It's not necessarily the artist's fault; they're just speaking on whatever they lived."

Bam, a senior who asked his last name not be used, agreed with the sentiment.

"It isn't up to the rapper to take responsibility," he said. "He writes the rap that has something that he wants to say. It's up to us as adults to tell our children the right way. It's up to us to buy it and listen to it. If we hear it, we have the opportunity to turn it off. If we see it on the shelf, we have the opportunity to say that I don't want to buy this."

Rinehart said the theme of violence in rap will continue as long as the industry continues to profit from it.

"Over 60 percent of the purchasing of rap music is by white kids who don't know what's really going on; who just want to hear 'shoot 'em up,' and all that other crazy stuff," he said. "And if that's what's selling, and this is an industry, that's what's going to be dictated."

The next topic discussed was socialization of rap music. The first part of this dealt with how female rappers depict themselves.

McGee started by saying, "The female portrayal in rap music is out of control. First of all, I don't consider any of them, like Foxy Brown, real rappers. And second, we need to think of what kind of Images we're sending to our children. But the deep side of this is that we have those people who's rent depends on selling Foxy Brown records."

Reggie Remy, a sophomore, commented on the double standard of female portrayal in music between blacks and whites.

"When a sister comes up and says she's a ho, and getting paid telling how she is, people ill. But when Madonna comes out singing, or whatever, I never hear white people complain about the image she's giving white females," he said.

Another debate came about whether society inspires rap's negativity, or if rappers should inspire society positively.

Bam said that with or without rap, violence and drugs would still be around.

"I look outside, and see [expletives] with guns," he said. "This has been happening before any of this stuff touched record. Before blacks were on TV, this stuff was going on."

Tugwell had a different perspective.

"We could change the world with what we got. We're running things basically: the way people talk, the way they dress, the way people act is coming from us. If we have that power, why not use it to the best of our advantage?"

McGee commented on how rappers really don't have as much creative control as they'd like to have.

"If you ever get a chance when they come on campus, talk to the Tribe; the brothers will tell you how much creative control they have.

"Many rappers don't even write their own lyrics. CEOs go over their lyrics, and tell them what they can, and cannot say on their albums," McGee said.

On the subject of knowledge in the rap industry, Rinehart closed with this statement: "We, as blacks, have so much power across the world that we don't realize, and this is historical. Look at rock and roll, jazz blues, ragtime — we did that. And in the future, we're going to do it too. What I'm saying is that we got to smarten up now."

Black, disabled and rising to the top

Allana E. Todman
Collegian Staff

"We are always told what we can or cannot do," said Madeline Peters, director of disability services.

During a discussion about how black people are perceived as well as how difficult it is for Peters as a black female with a disability to advance, Peters wanted to share her experiences in the education system, as well as send a message to the ALANA students here on campus.

Peters began to explain that internal oppression puts people of color in a "box of isolation" which consists of labels, and stereotypes. She said the problem is enhanced by the fact people in the majority don't think people of color are capable of success, and they, in turn, begin to believe it. She went on to talk about how they then allow this internal oppression to bog them down.

"We are always talking about how we need community or a voice, but how come when I'm right here on campus saying 'hi' to you, you can't say anything," Peters asked. "Yet, we'll all get together and go to the Black Student Union or CEEBMS and talk about what we need to do."

Peters was then asked why should people say hello when their greetings won't be returned.

"It's OK if they don't say 'hi' to me because they're still growing, and these are my people; they may still be learning," Peters said.

Peters continued, saying that even doing as little as greeting each other in public is the beginning of starting a community, and breaking out of the box of internal oppression.

Reminding the audience that people of color need to break out of the "box," Peters said she not only struggles with the fact of being black, but also with being a woman who is disabled.

A woman who not only teaches Education 210, but who is also the director of Disability Services in Whitmore, Peters spoke of the assumptions that people have when they first see her.

One example is that people automatically believe she is an able-bodied woman, because her disability is not noticeable. Due to lack of knowledge that she is disabled, Peters expressed how insensitive some people are when they ask her questions about other disabled students, such as "How do you see them?" and "How can you help them?".

Dealing with "the box"

Revealing that she has a severe learning disability, Peters related her disability to herself as a black person, and described how disabled people are often placed in the same "box" of internal oppression.

"Being black is not an issue," Peters said. "We never question why our skin is black, because we are born that way. When black people are told they cannot do something they will go ahead and do it, just to prove you wrong.

"Being disabled is not an issue either but people make it an issue," Peters said.

"When people are blind, we look at them and think they can't see, but how many of us have changed our clothes in the dark," she asked.

Peters went on to say that having a lack of knowledge about disability can lead to discrimination. "You can't do anything" is the mindset that many people begin to have when looking at disabled people.

Early years of black education

Being a part of the first group of people to be involved with the integrating of white schools by the bus system in her middle school years, Peters explained how the tracking system in the early '70s allowed the education of the students to still be divided.

She continued to explain that even though they finally were going to get the same equal education in the school systems, due to the fact that they had so much unequal education prior to the Integration movement, there was no way that black students could catch up to white students who had been receiving the very type of educating black students were just beginning to get.

"Here we are being placed in that 'box' again," Peters said. "Parents didn't want to say anything either because they didn't want their kids labeled as special needs. People automatically talked or assumed that we weren't capable."

Peters pointed out that during her earlier years in education, she had no idea she had a learning disability. She said people in her school system just assumed she, as well as others, were naturally incapable of doing advanced work. Therefore, no one really acknowledged or attempted to see whether or not she had a learning disability.

Upon graduating high school, Peters was told she was not college material. Not having teachers with high expectations for her, Peters began to accept what school teachers were telling her and didn't apply for admission into college.

Peters finally realized she was college material after talking with her physical education teacher, and enrolling in a community college program where she received all A's.

Moving on up, Peters came to UMass and received her Bachelor's degree and is now going for her doctorate in education.

"Stop making assumptions and don't allow people to tell you what you can or cannot do," Peters said. "I'm a person who is aware of the 'box,' and am a resource to all students of color here on campus."

Peters reinforced the fact that students of color on campus need to take advantage of staff who are of African descent here on campus, because they are here for them.

Being black, disabled, and rising to the top of her education, and working for the University, Peters is an example of a strong black woman who won't allow herself to be a victim of internal oppression.

"Problems can be solved," she said. "Don't just look at the cover of a book, but open up the book and see what's there."

Writers needed!

The Black Affairs desk is always looking for students interested in covering issues of importance to the community. If you fit that description, call Humphrey brown III or Greg Casimir at the Collegian at 545-1851 or come down to the Collegian at 113 Campus Center Basement.

I am who I am today

I am who I am today, because of you made me back then
You saw me as different, unhuman, rather than a friend
I scrubbed your floors, I cooked your meals, I spoke no voice
As I had no choice

You beat me, you disrespected me, you enslaved me to your orders
I was invisible to you as your child drank from my milk, slept in my arms
Rested in my quarters

My fingers bled, with cotton seeds
As my tears fled from all the deeds
I did for you with no respect
As I lied in bed, and only wept

I was a womb to you, with just its parts,
no soul
Raped by your husband, brother, father, and son
Attacked by their whiteness, used by their flesh
For within them I had no pride, no humanity, no suffrage, no goal

But what you didn't know, is that I heard your plans, plots and schemes
I read your books, learned your traits
I had my own abilities and dreams

For God was watching me, through thick and thin
He was always by my side, teaching my children about inner pride
He told me that someday we would be saved
From this hellhole that we lived, embodied and enslaved

And there was a dream, full of courage and hope
And people really listened, watching, as he spoke
Of the future, the wisdom, the truth
Gone without a chance, taken from its youth

Now you see with me your eyes full of fear
Wondering what I'll do next
Why I'm really here

Today, I thought that you would be more educated
That you would see through my eyes
My pride and ability, I was hoping you would recognize

But once again, you set my limits
Push me to the back, oversee my every moves
I have faith that one day you'll look,

Feel my pain, speak my words, taste my sorrow
And finally see
That I'm not what you made me, anymore
I am, and always will be... me

By Jean Corbett

One time for the mind

One time for the mindIt's not often that Mr. Casimir and myself get together to write the "One Time for the Mind" spot, but this week we feel that it's necessary to address an issue that has been perplexing us for quite some time now.

Gregory Casimir and Humphrey brown III

What's up with CP Time?

For those of you who don't know what that is, CP time Is that chronic illness that seems to plague every black student when it comes to social functions.

Can anyone tell us why that when the flyer says, "General Meeting at 8 p.m.," it usually doesn't begin 'till about 9:30 p.m.?

For example, last semester, the Haitian semi-formal was slated to begin at 7 p.m. with dinner being served at 9 p.m. The actual formal didn't even begin 'till about 9:30 p.m. with dinner being served at 11:45 p.m.

We personally can't recall an event that has ever started on the scheduled time.

Why is that, black people?

Let's take It one step further, shall we?

When it comes to being on time for that test or getting to work, we'll be there on time and prompt. Yet, when it comes to functions run by blacks for blacks we feel that we can just chill and not take it seriously.

Can anyone explain to us why this is? Maybe we can. You see, we have this theory that stems all the way back to slave times.

We have grown so accustomed to doing everything for white people, how they want and when they say it (whether it be on the job, at school, or even in your everyday walk of life) that when anyone who is not white asks us to do something, we tend to not take it as serious.

It's almost like we look at things dealing with the improvement of black people as secondary to other general campus functions regulated by white people. We don't remember those whip-crackin' days, but at times it seems as though we still hold those same mindsets. We need to look at each other with the same kind of respect and courtesy that we give white people. That means being on time. And this has been one time for yo' mind.

Have you been with your special someone forever? Do you have an e-mail love? Have you ever used a dating service? Call the Collegian at 545-1361 and ask for Seema or Jeremy. We are working on an Arts & Living cover story about dating on campus. Please call before Wednesday, Oct. 9.

Arts & Living

Dave Matthews plays crowd under the table

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

DAVE MATTHEWS BAND
Mullins Center
Oct. 6

"Turns out not where but who you're with that really matters..."

The Dave Matthews Band's sound was born in small-town bar rooms, but last night's performance in a packed Mullins Center was downright stupendous.

Once again, Matthews blew the crowd away with a completely unpredictable set–list which mainly consisted of songs off of their breakthrough album, Under the Table and Dreaming — a pleasant change from most of their Crash–filled concerts.

The Dave Matthews band did open with Crash's "#41" — a melodic juxtaposition of Matthews' mellow lyrics and Boyd Tinsley's frenetic violin playing.

Though the band played to its utmost perfection, the first half of the show was all Tinsley. His violin strings were smoking as he wailed through a pair of Under the Table hits — the happy–go–lucky "Dancing Nancies" and "Warehouse."

Tinsley's performance reached its peak during the trusty staged–up version of "Tripping Billies," which was preceded by a sadistic little laugh from Matthews.

It may have been evident to some that Matthews has been recovering from a cold the past week, and had some difficulty hitting the higher notes. But what Matthews lacked in lyrics, the entire band made up for in instrumental solos that were so intense and so long, it wore out the audience just to listen.

The epitome of DMB's instrumental skills was their 20– minute performance of "Jimi Thing." Matthews' fingers flew over his guitar strings expertly before he passed the torch to Leroi Moore, who stepped out of the shadows to blare on the saxophone; on to Tinsley, who made love to his violin once more, then Stefan Lessard who made hearts beat with his bass; and finally Carter Beauford, who tantalized with his drum mixes.

One thing that was evident from the show was that DMB knows how to manipulate a crowd, and certainly knows how to build momentum. Though Matthews himself said it was, "a mellow evening," the band toyed around, going from relaxing songs such as "Crash Into Me" and the sentimental "Satellite," to the loud, rhythmic "Two Step" and "Drive In Drive Out." This sprinkling, ever–changing set constantly kept the crowd guessing.

And, of course, the crowd absolutely went crazy during their popular, early hit, "Ants Marching."

Tinsley again stepped up towards the end of the show, this time on vocals — first with, "Rent," and later with the romantic "Angel."

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

For two and a half hours, the Dave Matthews Band kept the crowd entertained at the Mullins Center last night.

While opening band Boxing Ghandis was a bit green and disappointing (their shameless plug for their new album not helping much), Matthews obviously felt right at home with the UMass crowd, thanking everyone constantly for "hanging out with them."

The mood of the night took an abrupt turn, however, with DMB's long–awaited finale of "All Along the Watchtower," as a front row fan nailed Matthews' guitar with a tee shirt. After voicing his opinion of the evil deed, Matthews simply exploded into a fury of guitar and vocals that would have made Hendrix turn in his grave.

Every rise and fall, twist and turn of the concert was spectacular — and the crowd was riveted to every note, thus proving the Dave Matthews Band is the best of what's around.

Sweet Honey rocks

All woman troupe storms into Smith

By Daniel Bodah
Collegian Staff

SWEET HONEY IN THE ROCK
John M. Greene Hall
Oct. 5

On Saturday night, six women transformed the stage of Smith College's John M. Greene Hall from an undistinguished, institutional–pink colored shell into a platform for magical melodies and brightly shining soul. On a journey from traditional African chants through urgent political blues songs and achingly passionate gospel love ballads, Sweet Honey In The Rock was accompanied by an audience often on its feet clapping and singing along.

Formed in 1974 by Bernice Johnson Reagon, Sweet Honey has garnered numerous awards and a committed following in its 22–year career. So it's no surprise that the group took the stage with an easy, comfortable presence, often dancing gracefully. Between songs, Aisha Kahlil punctuated her informative and concerned chats with flashes of humor.

A jubilant audience responded to the performance with frequent standing ovations throughout the show, and was quick to participate in the gorgeous African round that Ysaye Maria Barnwell lead them in several times, filling the hall with undulating waves of song.

The women sang a few Bob Marley songs ("By the Waters of Babylon," "Redemption Song") and a few other covers, but for the most part presented their own songs. High points included singer Carol Maillard's haunting arrangement of the stand–by "Sometimes (I Feel Like a Motherless Child)" and "Can't Hide, Sinner," sung by Reagon.

Accompanying herself with a large gourd percussion instrument, Reagon belted out the lyrics in a voice as deep and powerful as a Harley Davidson revving its engine. Sisters Kahlil and Nitanju Bolade Casel managed to simultaneously mock and put to use the muscular swaggering of rap with the popular "Women Should be a Priority." Later in the show a new song — "Run" — received its second–ever performance. This song is one to watch for; not yet quite smoothed–out, its harrowing lyrics (about spousal abuse) make mundane language into poetry.

And that's the magic that these proud African–American women work with their voices and souls.

Allison's cool piano work lights up show

By Daniel Bodah
Collegian Staff

There once was a singer named Mose...

...whose stunningly cool piano work and smooth vocals filled the Iron Horse Friday night for a wildly appreciative audience. Accompanied by Mark Linus on standup bass, Mose Allison produced music that was full of complex, mellow sweetness balanced by tangy, slightly bitter lyrics — much like the local pale ale filling the audience's glasses.

Completely at ease, the duo fit 28 songs into two hours– long sets and two encores. Most of the songs were Allison originals, with several Willie Dixon songs (including the incredible "Seventh Son") and a few other classics.

His consistently clever rhymes produced some real jewels — "your mind is on vacation and your mouth is working overtime / if you must keep talking, please try to make it rhyme" — which prove Mose ranks among the best blues lyricists.

An inspiration to musicians such as Pete Townsend of the Who and Black Francis of the Pixies, Allison's piano style is truly unique. Often reminiscent of the theme song for the Land of Make–Believe on "Mr. Roger's Neighborhood," Allison's playing comes on somehow domestic at the same time that it takes the listener into a smoky, esoteric, beatnik fantasyland.

What about Allison being a white bluesman, even if Mississippi–born? He addressed the issue with his first encore, "White Boy Steals the Blues." "The blues police from Dixieland tried to catch me with the goods on–hand / they broke down the door, but I was all smiles / cuz I had already shipped them to the British Isles."

There were some microphone problems making for a few jarring moments early on, but Allison quickly accommodated his vocals to the situation. Nearing 70, his voice has grown deeper, but hasn't lost its smoothness over the years. At times he would stop playing and draw out a line for several seconds in mid–song, quickly silencing the chatting in the hall. By the end of the show the crowd was glowing more from the humor and music than from that local pale ale. The appropriate closing song? "Please Don't Go."

Elvis impersonator shoots from the hip

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

EL VEZ
Iron Horse Music Hall
Oct. 4

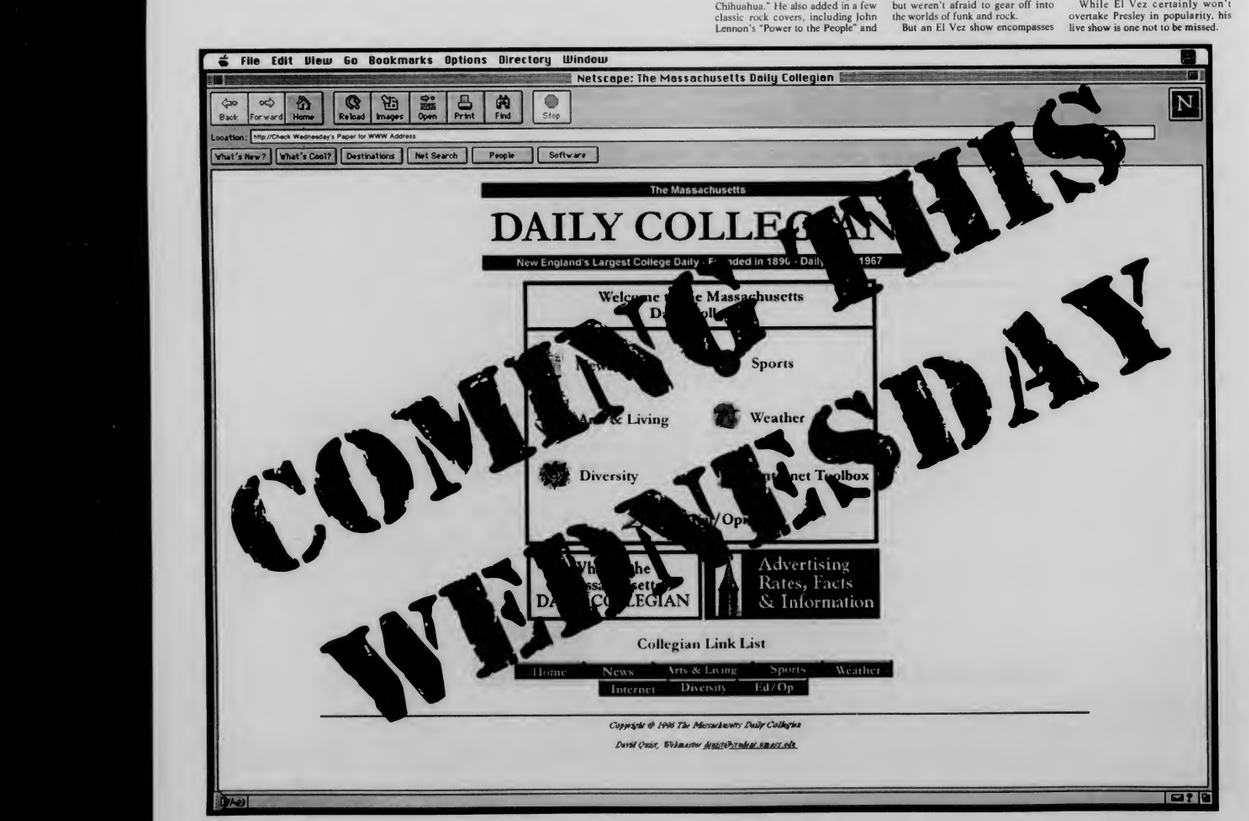
The truth has come out. Elvis Presley is still alive but hiding after being shown up by the new king, El Vez, the Mexican Elvis. Half Elvis, half Mexican Revolutionary, El Vez has added a new twist to the impersonation business.

El Vez and gang took the stage dressed in military fatigues, his back–up singers, the Lovely Elvettes, were armed with mock machine guns. The revolution was set to begin.

Through most of the show, El Vez added a Spanish twist to Presley classics, including "Misery Tren" and "You Ain't Nothing but a Chihuahua." He also added in a few classic rock covers, including John Lennon's "Power to the People" and Bachman Turner Overdrive's "Takin' Care of Business."

Musically El Vez' backing band, the Memphis Matriarchs, were a tight quartet excelling in rockabilly but weren't afraid to gear off into the worlds of funk and rock.

But an El Vez show encompasses much more than music. Like the best of off–Broadway, El Vez' concert proves to be a fest for both the ears and eyes.



A couple times during the set, the Lovely Elvettes displayed their seductive dancing skills alongside the king himself, El Vez. Their prowess with their guns was exemplified too as they ran around the club pretending to shoot at audience members. Once a masked terrorist appeared out of the darkness to scare the crowd as the sound of bullets reigned over the club's speakers.

El Vez also took part in the glitzy side of rock 'n' roll, changing his outfit at a rapid pace. From glow in the dark striped bell bottoms to pants bearing the flag of Mexico to Elvis–wear circa 1970, El Vez was the man with a plan.

While El Vez certainly won't overtake Presley in popularity, his live show is one not to be missed.

COURTESY EL VEZ

El Vez rocked the Iron Horse with bullets and more.

COMING THIS WEDNESDAY

■ men's soccer

continued from page 10

season with an ankle injury. He scored twice against Temple last week and has raised his point total on the year to six.

The game remained scoreless for the last seven minutes of regulation and the two teams geared up for an overtime battle.

It was Virginia Tech that took advantage of the overtime sessions, scoring twice, to send the Minutemen to defeat.

Brian MacFarlane scored at 103:45 off a feed from Chladek, his second assist in the game. The goal would prove to be the game winner, raising MacFarlane's tally on the year to three goals, tying him for the Hokie lead with seven points.

In the second overtime period, the Minutemen's attempt to rally fell short, as Cory Turner put the game out of reach for Virginia Tech with an unassisted goal at 108:18. It was Turner's second goal of the season.

The game marked the Hokies' first Atlantic 10 victory, and the Minutemen's first conference loss for the 1996 campaign. Although UMass held an advantage in corner kicks, 5–1, they were outshot 24–15. Jablonski made nine saves in a losing effort, while Salmin stopped seven shots for the victory.

The Minutemen will need a return to Jablonski's goaltending that sparked wins last weekend. As well, their potent scoring attack that crushed Temple last weekend needs to see team leaders Mike Butler (3 goals, 3 assists, 9 points) and senior All–American candidate Dave Siljanovski (4–0–8), rise up to the level that Castma (3–0–6) has sustained for the last three games.

The loss carries additional weight for the Minutemen, since they will undoubtedly fall out of the rankings when the polls for this week are issued. They entered the game ranked 25th in the nation.

The team will look to get back on track this weekend when they play host to two A–10 rivals at Garber Field. They will engage Dayton on Friday at 3:30 p.m. They will cap off the weekend on Sunday with a 1 p.m. start against Xavier.

The team was in action Sunday afternoon against George Washington, though results were not available as of presstime. Although the Colonials hold a 5–1–1 series advantage, the lone Minutemen win came in last year's campaign with a 5–0 shutout victory in Amherst.

■ Smith

continued from page 10

marching band that was, well, unpolished, and you have a sense of Saturday's Massachusetts–Rhode Island game.

Hardly the setting for a coming out party.

But's that's just what people came to see on Saturday. Five games into the 1996 season, Massachusetts coach Mike Hodges decided to make a change at the most watched of positions: quarterback. Out was junior Anthony Catterton, whose 3–13 outing last weekend against Northeastern prompted a change, and in was the unknown quantity, freshman Jeff Smith.

Three hours and a 41–21 loss to Rhode Island later, the reviews were mixed.

"He did some good things, he did some bad things," said Hodges of Smith's performance, which saw the freshman go 8–18 for 74 yards, with no touchdowns or interceptions. "He played with a lot of poise. I like the way he competed."

One thing that nobody has ever doubted about Smith is his arm. It's a cannon, but it takes more than a strong arm to become a successful quarterback. You have to know your team, you have to lead your team, and you have to do the little things that coaches can't teach if you want to succeed at the position.

If Smith is, in fact, the future at quarterback here at UMass, consider Saturday's loss the first step in the learning process. At the very least, Smith didn't feel out of place behind center in his first collegiate start.

"I felt comfortable back there," Smith said. "Our line, our receivers, our running backs, they all made me feel comfortable. They were behind me in practice all week. They made my first start real easy. It's a great team to be a part of."

Well, they weren't great on Saturday. Truth be told, there was really little Smith could have done to stop the bleeding. The game was lost, not at quarterback, but in the last two minutes of the first half, when URI turned a 14–3 Minuteman lead into a 17–14 Ram lead, one which Rhody would never relinquish.

With 2:41 left in the second quarter, Rhode Island got the ball on its own 34, and marched to its first touchdown in only 52 seconds. Helped by a UMass personal foul on a key third–and–seven from the Minuteman 49, URI closed the gap to 14–10 on a 26–yard touchdown pass from junior quarterback Chris Hixson to wideout Donald Talley.

On the ensuing kickoff, UMass sophomore tight end Kerry Taylor fumbled, and URI recovered. Starting at the UMass 28, Hixson struck again, finding senior All–Yankee Conference wideout Cy Butler on a 1–yard pass. In a two minute span, UMass had gone from controlling the game to being down at halftime.

The pattern continued in the second half. With 7:15 left in the third quarter, Massachusetts had cut the lead to 24–21, on a seven play, 77–yard drive that seemed to give the Minutemen back some lost momentum.

But, once again, they self–destructed. Butler ran the ensuing kickoff back to the 34–yard line, but another UMass personal foul put the ball at the URI 49. Rhody took this gift and ran with it, literally.

Six of the seven plays on the drive were running plays, culminating in a two–yard James Jenkins touchdown run. It was the first of two touchdowns on the day for Jenkins, who would victimize the Minutemen for 170 yards on 24 carries. The touchdown made it 31–21 Rhode Island, and the Minutemen were effectively out of the game.

Later in the second half, UMass wide receiver Eric Dawley would fumble a punt that would lead to a URI field goal, and Hixson's only interception of the day, with 6:55 to go, would be given back to the Rams on the next play, courtesy of a Minuteman fumble.

As for Smith, the coming out party was short lived and painful. Though Rhode Island would only register two sacks, they were in the freshman's face all day. Smith was on the turf for an extended period of time more than once, finally leaving the game with 3 minutes to go in the fourth after a particularly rough hit.

The numbers for Smith are unassuming. Going 8–18 for only 74 yards will not win you any Heisman trophies, but numbers aren't the important thing here. Smith did exhibit poise in the pocket, and when he and his receivers were on the same page, his passes were crisp and on the money.

He does not run the option as well as Catterton, but he showed some scrambling abilities, ending up with 22 yards on the ground.

So on this forgettable day, in a forgettable loss to a forgettable team in a forgettable stadium, the Jeff Smith era began at UMass. What this era will be like is still, like the new Minuteman passing attack, up in the air.

■ field hockey

continued from page 10

knocked it home for the score.

UMass wasted little time answering with a goal of its own, as MacLean netted a feed from Fuchs after Fuchs' initial hit on the penalty corner was deflected.

The Minutewomen fought back with attacks until the last seconds of the game, but that was all the offensive firepower they could muster.

Defensively they were outstanding, keeping the Tar Heels to their lowest goal production of the year. In the UMass net, Rose made 21 saves and combined with the backs to snuff UNC's offense.

North Carolina goalie Jana Withrow made four saves on the afternoon, and Carolina held a 7–to–6 edge on corners.

After the game Hixon was happy with her team's performance.

"For us this was kind of a moral victory," Hixon said. "We're disappointed that we lost, but as far as how we played it was a moral victory and we handled ourselves very well."

MacLean agreed.

"We were a little bit tense, which is good," MacLean said. "We all played together which was good. I think we learned from [this game]. I think we learned we can play with anyone."

Rothenberger also thought the Carolina game helped UMass.

"We played a really tough game," Rothenberger said. "This was one of our best games of the season so far. We played really strong and we stuck to the game plan."

WRITE FOR THE COLLEGIAN

Volleyball takes a pair, drops one over weekend trip

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts volleyball team, ranked third in Division 1, went 2–1 this past weekend by beating up on a couple of mediocre Atlantic 10 opponents while falling to sixth–ranked Temple.

The ranking, which will probably change this week, was the highest in school history. UMass (15–4, 4–2 A–10) trailed Notre Dame and fellow A–10 foe Rhode Island in the polls.

TEMPLE 3
MASSACHUSETTS 2

Temple 3, UMass 2

The Owls avenged themselves on Friday. Last year, the teams' first meeting was at Amherst. The Minutewomen lost their first two games, only to rally back and take the last three in what was maybe the biggest highlight of the 1995 season.

This year, the same thing happened — the home team stormed back from a 2–0 deficit to win the match. This time, however, the match was played in Philadelphia. Despite falling 15–13, 15–12 in the first two games, Temple stole the next three, 17–15, 15–10, 15–3.

Freshman Jill Meyers tied a career–high with 21 kills and 14 digs against the Owls (9–3, 4–1 A–10). Senior outside hitter Dionne Nash posted 17 kills and 13 digs for UMass and junior middle blocker Michelle Paciorek added five kills and a career–high 23 digs in the losing effort.

MASSACHUSETTS 3
LA SALLE 0

UMass 3, La Salle 0

The Minutewomen did what they had to do here, as the Explorers (0–13, 0–5 A–10) entered the contest winless. The final tally of UMass' first match of the weekend was 15–7, 15–1, 15–12.

Paciorek earned herself 10 kills, three service aces and three blocks, while hitting .538 to pace her teammates. Meanwhile, Meyers, a middle blocker, chipped in seven kills and seven digs.

The victory marked the 14th time this season UMass has won in three straight games.

MASSACHUSETTS 3
FORDHAM 1

UMass 3, Fordham 1

Bonnie Kenny's bunch received a scare when it dropped the first game in the Bronx to the Rams, 15–13. But it quickly got its act together and took the next three, 15–8, 15–2, 15–11.

Nash led the way, recording a match–high 21 kills to go along with three service aces and seven digs. Fordham (7– 11, 0–6 A–1–0) caught its first glimpse of Meyers, who notched 18 kills, nine digs and three blocks, and freshman Sarah Watters, who registered six kills, seven digs and a career–high five block assists.

Sophomore setter Katie Pearce continued her solid play, dishing out 56 assists, while junior Lesley Nolan nailed 12 kills and 15 digs.

The Minutewomen finish up its five–match road trip at Xavier at 7 p.m. on Friday and Dayton on Saturday at 7 p.m.

■ women's soccer

continued from page 10

Robin Smith and Kurowski paced the way to a 3–0 win, giving reserve goalkeeper Angie Napoli her second complete–match shutout victory.

Shimogaki's goal was her first of the season, while Smith's, coming on a feed from Erin Lynch, was her first goal at UMass, after transferring from Creighton. Sara Hill set up Kurowski's goal, earning her first collegiate point.

"La Salle's a difficult pitch but we got it together in the second half," Rudy said. "It's a bumpy field but we knocked [the ball] around. I'm pleased considering we lost our leading scorer in the first minute."

Former Collegian staff member Justin C. Smith contributed to this article.

■ football

continued from page 10

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Khari Samuel and the UMass football team dropped a 41– 21 decision at Rhode Island this weekend.

had two plays that we just can't make, roughing the passer and turning the ball over. We just can't make those plays. We didn't try to make them, but we did, and we let them back into the game."

The Rams then came out firing in the second half and jumped off to a 10–point advantage as Shyron Stanford ran in for a one yard touchdown for a 24–14 lead.

Rhode Island rushing on the day was very strong, as the Rams picked up 300 yards, with tailback James Jenkins grabbing most of the load with 170 yards on 24 carries. Sanford was good for 75 yards on 18 carries.

UMass would counter on the day with 340 yards, led by sophomore fullback Jim Pizano who had a career day in helping fill the shoes of the injured Frank Alessio, who sat out the day with a bruised shoulder.

The small, but determined, fullback from Exeter, Penn., rushed for 134 yards on the day on only five carries, including the longest run in UMass history as he broke it out for 96 yards and the game's first touchdown early in the first quarter, giving UMass a 7–3 lead.

Pizano took the pitch to the left side of the field, ran it down the sideline and cut it back up the middle of the field running in for the score.

He would then help put UMass back in it in the third quarter where he powered in a three yard rush to close the gap to 24–21 in favor of Rhode Island. But that would be as close as UMass would get.

Once again, as has been the case throughout this season, the defense of UMass looked as if it was on the field for most of the day. Time of possession favored the Rams, as they had the ball for seven minutes more than the Minutemen.

A key play occurred with 6:55 left in the fourth quarter when Hixson's pass would be tipped and then picked off by UMass' Mike Smith, the sophomore cornerback. He intercepted the ball at the URI 25–yard line and ran it down to the 19 where UMass would get the ball at a crucial point of the game, trailing 34–21.

However, on their possession, UMass fumbled as Matt Jordan got the call and was popped immediately by the URI defense, and the Minutemen gave the ball right back.

The Rams then went 78 yards in eight plays in 3:29 for the score, and ultimately the win. Tailback James Jenkins ran it in from two yards out for the score.

Rhode Island pushed its record back to an even mark at 3– 3 with the win and goes to 1–3 in the Yankee Conference.

"This was a good win, and we're proud of our football team," URI coach Floyd Keith said. "I think we played a pretty complete game against a good football team, and I was just happy to see it."

UMass QB Smith, making his first collegiate start, had a mild day throwing, going 8–18 passing for 78 yards. Smith however, would be relentless as he scrambled well on the day. He ran for 42 yards on the afternoon. Smith said he felt comfortable and was happy with the support even though they didn't come up with the win.

"I felt comfortable with my line, the running back and the receivers, this whole team. I felt comfortable out on the field," Smith said. "All credit goes to the whole team. They were behind me, they were backing me all week in practice, they made my first start really easy. I felt comfortable."

For Rhode Island, Hixson threw to his favorite target, the 5–foot–7 185 pound Butler, for 113 of his 207 total yards on the day. The two made the connection 10 times, averaging over 11 yards a catch on each one.

Two times the Minutemen faked the handoff and did a reverse with wideout Doug Clark. In the third quarter they faked a punt which they ran for a first down. At the end of the series they faked a field goal, but couldn't convert for the TD and URI took over.

"We have to get better as a football team," Hodges said. "There's some things we're not doing very well. We had a lot of turnovers today, it seemed like the ball was on the ground all day, and we just can't do that."

The Minutemen fumbled the football five times on the day, losing three. They were penalized six times for 66 yards, and only managed to convert on third down 15 percent of the time.

The Rams tallied up 462 yards on the day to the Minutemen's 425. However, the consistency of the Minutemen was not there and the times when they needed to convert they didn't. UMass' three turnovers compared with only one for Rhode Island played a major factor in the loss.

"We going to be a good football team, which I really truly believe we will be," Hodges said. "We've got to go out there and eliminate those errors at critical times. We have to have guys step up and make plays. If we stay together and have some people do that, we'll be fine."

UMass now drops to 3–2 on the year and 2–1 in the Yankee Conference. Every game is a big one and the Minutemen will look to rebound this weekend as they play only their second home game of the year, against Boston University Saturday at 1 p.m. at Warren G. McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

Auto Glass Center
American & Foreign
• Same Day Service
• Billed Directly To Insurance Company
• Windshields Replaced
North Amherst Motors
A Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
549-2880
(One Mile from UMass)

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Gorgonzola Buffalo Potatos 18.95 13.48
Fried Cheese and Onion Ring 15.95 12.98
Sweet Potato Fries 14.98 12.50
New Dinner Menu.. Come See
Watch the World Go By From Our Greenhouse!
Judie's
DOWNTOWN AMHERST
51 N Pleasant Street
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE
50% Off!!
Of Basic Program with valid college Student I.D.
Free Info Session
Wednesday, Oct. 16th
7:00 pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst
Now Accepting Visa, M/C, AMEX & Discover
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
Act Now! Space is Limited!!

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CHINESE FOOD KAI CHI delivering. Sunday-Thursday, to 2am, Friday and Saturday to 3am

The Sisters of Alpha Chi Omega would like to invite all university women to Open Rush. Oct. 8 at 5:30 for dinner, Oct. 10 at 6:30 for ice skating, and Oct. 16 for a self defense workshop. Meet at 38 Nutting Ave. for all events. Call Patricia @ 549-4802 for more info.

Free Couch, and table, coffee table, utility table. Pick up 256-6175

AUTO FOR SALE

1989 Nissan Pulsar 1 tops, 5 speed, no rust!!! $3,400 obo 546-2393 Aaron

1982 Chevy Cavalier Wagon AC, AM-FM, new tires, plus $250.00 O/B/O Call Bruce 256-1215

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired. Do you know your rights? Contact the Student Legal Service Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

1990 Dodge Dynasty automatic, 4 doors, air bag, A/C. Excellent condition $2875 (508)-544-3783

1984 Honda Accord AT, AC, PW, PL, cruise, 110k, mint. Call Jarrod 548-9292

EMPLOYMENT

Marketing Assistant No Experience Necessary. Looking for someone with good interpersonal skills $12.00 per hr Call 562-0711

EMPLOYMENT

SPRINGBREAK '97!! Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica, and Florida EARN FREE TRIPS & CASH! Call 1-800-700-0790

Business Opportunity. Need additional income? Want the energy to earn it? Earth Friendly company looking for distributors. Wild Organic Food, free tape 1-800-927-7527 ext. 7268

Spring Break!! Earn Cash!! Highest Commissions! Lowest Prices! Travel free on only 13 sales!! Free Info!! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

Cruise Ships Hiring Earn up to $2,000+/month. World Travel. Seasonal and Full Time positions. No exp necessary. For info call 1-206-971-3550 ext. C50015

National Parks Hiring - Positions are now available at National Parks, Forests and Wildlife Preserves. Excellent benefits and bonuses! Call 1-206-971-3620 Ext. N50018

Tropical Resorts Hiring Students needed! Entry level and career positions available worldwide. Call Resort Employment Services 1-206-971-3600 Ext. R50012

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS! Over 6 billion in public and private sector Grants and scholarships are now available. All students are eligible. Let us help. For more info call 1-800-263-6495 Ext. F50014

EMPLOYMENT

International Employment - Earn up to $25-$45/hour teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S. Korea. No teaching background or Asian Languages required. For info. call: 206-971-3570 Ext. J50015

Copacabana A Multicultural After School Program for Grades K-6 is interviewing students (with work study only) for teaching positions. Call Jan or Sheena @ 253-5059

FOR RENT

Grad Student looking to share office $75.00/month Call Joan 549-8527

Fridge Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

(2) 16MB NEC IBMs Simms RAM chips $170 for both. Call Jeff 535-1646

Word Processor 4 Sale, excellent condition $250.00 OBO, call Lisa 253-8185

Computer for Sale Macintosh LC with color monitor for sale. 10Mb ROM External 400Mb RAM hard drive Global Village 28.8 Global/FAX external modem System 7.1 software included. $700 or B/O. Call for more info, more software included Scott 253-7838

Macintosh Performa 5215CD, 75MHZ CPU, 8MB RAM, 1GB HD, 15" monitor, 14.4 Fax/Modem, 16 Bit Sound. Asking $1500 OBO Call 584-8402

FOR SALE

Mac Powerbook 140, 8/80, fax/modem, software and portable printer w/case $1,000 Call Mike 587-0347

2 Dave Matthews Tix Sun Oct 6 Floor seats, Row 27 Best offer. Sam 546-3982

KEGuitar Key System with 2 taps $250 or BO. Call 256-4201 or (617)354-9368

FOUND

Blue Univega Bicycle and blue Jansport backpack with leather bottom Found September 29th 6-0993

INSTRUCTION

Bartend with University Bartending 50% student discount. Amherst classes starting soon! Call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX for info.

PC/MAC Tutoring Cheap instruction for computer Patient, valuable help and advice. Set-ups, software, Internet (413)772-0633

English Language Consultant Available to International Students and Non-English Majors. Will edit papers and dissertations, also tutor ESL. Call Ms Reed, retired faculty member, for rate schedule and free initial consultation 253-3354

LOST

St. Anne Medal Will pay reward Call 546-7184

MOTORCYCLES

1980 CB 650 - $500 or B/O. 9000 miles runs well - must sell Call 549-8646

MUSICIANS

Guitar Classes Start 9/16 Acoustic and lessons available 10 wks/$40.00 ITUG Pad 545-0579

MISCELLANEOUS

New Metabolism Breakthrough Lose 5-100 lbs Guaranteed $35 800-776-9503

PERSONALS

Choices Not Chances Free contraception education. Every Mon & Thurs 3-4:30 and Tues & Wed. 7-8:30pm in Rm. 302 UHS. Men and Women welcome.

For more information call Health Education Office 577-5181

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

ROOM FOR RENT

Fulton Village Available at the end of January 549-0758 ask for John

One room available in Amherst, on bus line $285+ a month 256-0535

SERVICES

Computer Problems? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Scream Savers 549-0083

TRAVEL

Free Trips & Cash Find out how hundreds of student representatives are already earning free trips and lots of cash with America's #1 Spring Break Company! Sell only 15 trips and travel free! Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica or Florida! Campus Manager positions also available. Call Now! Take A Break Student Travel! 800-95-BREAK!

SPRING BREAK! Earn cash! Highest commissions/lowest prices! Travel free on only 13 sales!! Free info.! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

WANTED

Need Extra Phish Tix for Mon Oct. 21 show MSG 253-6959

Collegian Classifieds = Space Available

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

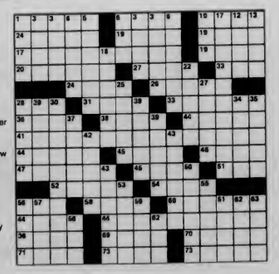
Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

"Starting Tuesday you can find the answers to the previous day's puzzle! Life is Good." →

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE



Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS

1 Urchins
6 Travelers' stops
10 Pepper et al.
14 Concede
15 Cutaway
16 Buffalo's lake
17 Sailor's time off
19 Departed
20 Hat or canal
21 —nosed: tough
23 Tree or tray
24 Fewer
26 Onions' cousins
28 — de deux
31 Corner store, for short
33 Arm cover
36 Concerning
38 Silver and Darling
40 Chopper
41 Marine's destination?
44 Succinct
45 Elder Dumas
46 Marinate
47 Military storage place
49 Vex
51 No and Strangelove
52 Skull protuberance
54 Kind of cone
56 Two thumbs down
58 Grandson of Adam
60 Mother's helper
64 Silver containers
66 Early talk-show hostess
68 Slip anagram
69 Jacob's twin
70 Confess
71 No sweat!
72 Agts.
73 Gnawed away

DOWN

1 Mud-dauber
2 A Khan
3 Fe, in chemistry
4 Wild
5 Appeared to be
6 Refrigerate
7 Ark skipper
8 Maritime
9 Metric units
10 Stitch
11 Oily shrub, aka white sage
12 Containers
13 Father of 58 Across
18 Beams
22 Indian city
25 Sailing ship
27 Retains
28 Italian specialty
29 One of the 12 tribes
30 Weather problem
32 Deduce
34 Of the palate
35 Estrada namesakes
37 "Citizen Kane" creator
39 "77 Sunset —"
42 Uncanny
43 Gusto
46 Up the road a bit
50 Isolate
53 Cacophony
55 It's a gas
56 North or South
57 Carreras specialty
59 Crackle and pops' pal
61 Oz visitor
62 Cupid
63 Lacoste
65 Secret agent
67 Switz. neighbor

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21–April 20
An investment in your future that you made long ago (perhaps you've forgotten it?) begins to pay off this week. Getting the best deal when you negotiate is a simple matter of being a good salesperson, so polish all your apples!

TAURUS
April 21–May 21
A good week to accomplish small, distasteful tasks. The feeling you'll get upon completion will more than offset the bother of the work itself. A careful plan of attack could make your tasks even easier.

GEMINI
May 22–June 21
Accepting advice from someone considerably older could be a good move if you're in the process of making a big decision. Take action to protect your health in the face of some hazard—this is not a good week to go without wearing a seatbelt.

CANCER
June 22–July 22
Someone who's looking for a handout could benefit much more from an opportunity. Express your faith in their abilities, and then let them handle the rest. A relaxing interlude with a friend keeps you lively in the time ahead.

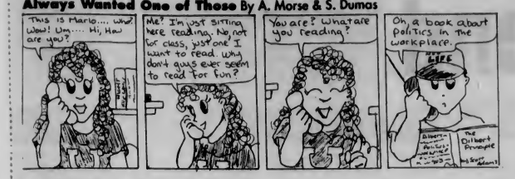
LEO
July 23–August 23
Social activities are best conducted in the sunshine this week. Plan a cookout or spend time at a park to make the most of your spare time. Treat a youngster to a special, unusual activity—the quality time will mean a stronger relationship.

VIRGO
August 24–September 22
If you spend much time shopping this week, avoid high-pressure sales tactics. The strain on your budget could be tremendous. Anticipating a tense situation may mean you'll worsen it, or even create it. Just be yourself, and breathe deeply.

LIBRA
September 23–October 23
Finishing up something you started a long time ago brings a real sense of accomplishment. Congratulations! Pay close attention to a friend or acquaintance who has trouble doing things in moderation. Your assistance may be needed.

SCORPIO
October 24–November 22
If you're feeling a conflict of interests, consult an expert for advice. Although it's frustrating, you may need to delegate some authority in this situation to keep from becoming the object of jealousy or distrust.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23–December 21
You may feel responsibilities closing in on you, perhaps even threatening to choke you. Resist the temptation to run away from all obligations. Communicating with the people involved may help make things seem less threatening.



CAPRICORN
December 22–January 20
A marvelous evening is in the offing—whether you've planned a special interlude for a significant other or just need a relaxing evening at home, you'll be pleasantly surprised by how much you enjoy yourself.

AQUARIUS
January 21–February 18
When you finally sit down to schedule a big date, you may encounter unexpected setbacks or problems. Be open to the possibility of delaying it until a more opportune time, and you'll find a way to work everything out to your satisfaction.

PISCES
February 19–March 20
A haunting memory encroaches on your peace of mind this week. Discuss it with a friend who is aware of your past, and they may be able to help you diffuse your misgivings. Head to the barbecue grill for weekend fun in the sun.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Always Wanted One of Those By A. Morse & S. Dumas

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Social Norm By Mr. K-

Frumpy the Clown Judd Winick

8 Years in Braces By Eric Petersen

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

My dad took me to New York City so we could spend the afternoon at the Metropolitan Musuem of Art.

There were Da Vinci's, Rodin's, Michelangelos, and others.

At the end of the day he asked me if I loved the art.

I told him it was O.K., but that basically.....
I don't like things that don't move.

Later he took me out to sushi dinner.

When they brought the appetizers he started to cry.

I told him I felt "likewise.". He said he was proud of me using the word "likewise.".

Always use the word "likewise" in front of your family.

University² By Frank Cho

Loodoo By Mike Rybicki

Close to Home By John McPherson

Carol makes a last-ditch effort to keep the kids from missing the bus.

SOME THINGS ARE MEANT TO BE CLOSED
YOUR MIND ISN'T ONE OF THEM.

For decades, MDA has shown how valuable people with disabilities are to society. We believe talent, ability and desire are more important than strength of a person's muscles. The one barrier these people can't overcome is a closed mind. Keep yours open.

MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY ASSOCIATION
MDA
1-800-572-1717

Quote of the Day

"These are not my figures I'm quoting. They're from someone who knows what he's talking about."

-congressman in debate

Quote of the Night

"It's the mother of all gophers."

-Prof. Wendy Lehnert

Today's Staff

Jacob W. Michaels
Night Editor

Thang Vo
Photo Technician

Lorraine Urbanski
Production Supervisor

Sandra Krauss
Chris Lavin
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Chicken Pucks	Chicken Breasts
Turkey Tetrazzini	Spaghetti w/Sausage
Philly Cheese Steak	Italian Tofu Balls
	Quarter Pound Burger

Hampshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on a Roll	Chicken Breasts
Chicken Pucks	Spaghetti w/Sausage
Turkey Tetrazzini

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Grilled Cheese Sandwich	Chicken Breasts
Grilled Ham and Cheese	Black-Eyed Peas
Spaghetti w/Sauce	Pastabilities
Hearty Latin Stew	Meatball Grinder

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Grilled Cheese Sandwich	Chicken Breasts
Grilled Ham and Cheese	Shrimp Jambalaya
Spaghetti w/Sauce	Black-Eyed Peas
Wheatball Grinder	Pastabilities

SportsWeekend

Inside this issue:

• The volleyball team won twice and lost once on the road over the weekend. See page 7 for the story.

• The men's soccer team played at George Washington today, but results weren't available at press time. See tomorrow's Collegian for the wrap-up.

• The men's water polo team had a tough weekend scheduled in Providence, R.I. See tomorrow's Collegian for the details.

UM field hockey plays tough to earn weekend split

Johnston has career day in 7–0 win over West Chester

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

The final scores indicated two completely opposite games, and that was just what the Massachusetts field hockey team got this weekend.

The No. 5 Minutewomen fought a gritty game with No. 1 North Carolina before losing 2–1 on Saturday. On Sunday they bounced back to crush West Chester 7–0.

With the weekend split UMass brings its record to 9–2, 3–0 in the Atlantic 10. North Carolina improved to 10–1, 4–0 in the Atlantic Coast Conference. West Chester drops to 4–7, 0– 4 in the A–10.

NORTH CAROLINA	2
MASSACHUSETTS	1

Sophomore Erica Johnston was the driving force for the Minutewomen yesterday as she scored four goals. Senior All–American Kyle Rothenberger chipped in with a pair of her own, as well as an assist on Johnston's final tally.

"I think once we got on top early, [West Chester] was gone. I didn't really feel that they would be dangerous," UMass coach Pam Hixon said.

Rothenberger notched UMass' first goal, 8:30 into the game when she connected on a penalty corner hit. Kate Putnam and Saskia Fuchs were credited with the assist.

Junior Courtney MacLean gave the Minutewomen a 2–0 advantage about four minutes later, when she took a feed from Putnam and carried the ball to West Chester goalie Stephanie Wise's right side and pushed the ball in for the score.

MASSACHUSETTS	7
WEST CHESTER	0

With 10:04 remaining in the half, Johnston scored her first of the game. Sharon Hughes took a free hit near the top of the circle and Johnston, who was substituting back into the game, collected the ball and fed it in to the West Chester cage.

"That was kind of spur–of–the moment. Nobody was marking me so I just took it," Johnston said.

Rothenberger increased the UMass lead to 4–0 when she dribbled past a defender before sending a shot home with 7:42 to go before intermission. Johnston then netted her second on the day to send the Minutewomen into the break with a 5–0 lead.

The second half was all Johnston, as she tallied the final two goals of the game after the break.

"She really had a lot of good opportunities today," Hixon said. "She took the shots when she had them, she just pounded away, and today was the day they fell for her."

Johnston was happy with her play.

"We had so many shots on goal I had a lot of time to get the rebounds and do what I could with it," she said.

Minutewoman goalie Hilary Rose had a lonely day in goal for UMass, as she needed to make only one save in order to record her 29th career solo shutout. Wise made 14 saves on the day.

UMass held a 14–to–3 advantage in the penalty corner column, and did not allow a corner in the first half.

The Minutewoman lead enabled Hixon to test several members of her squad that have seen little or no game action this year.

"It just worked out that way," Hixon said. "It's important that the starters play a little, but we have to get the other athletes some playing time.

"At least it gave people an opportunity to get out there and play against our team at practice," she said.

On Saturday, the Minutewomen suffered what Hixon described as "a good loss." They were able to hang tough with the top–ranked team in the nation, before finally bowing 2–1.

UMass played tight defense on the afternoon, stifling a Tar Heel attack that had averaged 4.9 goals per game.

"We made some tactical changes in how we play," Hixon said. "Our goal was to tactically play, and they did. We didn't press, we waited for them to make mistakes."

The tight play of the defense gave the Minutewomen increased confidence.

"[The game] really proved how good we can be," Rothenberger said. "This is a good building block for us."

Nancy Pellegreen was the stand–out for UNC, as she notched both goals. She got the Tar Heels on the board in the first half when Cindy Werley, who played for Hixon on the 1996 U.S. Olympic team, fed the ball in from the top of the circle. Pellegreen picked up the ball as a scramble ensued and fed it into the UMass cage.

She then gave UNC a 2–0 advantage in the second half when she collected a rebound on a penalty corner and

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 7

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Erica Johnston had four goals to lead the UMass field hockey team to a 7–0 win over West Chester yesterday.

URI capitalizes on UMass mistakes

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts football team fell flat against Rhode Island this weekend, losing 41–21.

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

KINGSTON, R.I. — It was a tough day for the Massachusetts football team this past Saturday in Kingston, R.I.

In a contest where the momentum, and probably the game was decided in a two minute span, the Minutemen came up on the short end, and were defeated 41–21 by the Rhode Island Rams.

With 2:41 left in the first, the Minutemen held the advantage 14–3, after a 17–yard scamper for the touchdown by freshman quarterback Jeff Smith. Rhode Island then started off on its own 34–yard line and marched down the field for a 26–yard touchdown pass from quarterback Chris Hixson to Donald Talley cutting into the UMass lead. A big contribution to that drive would be a roughing the passer penalty called on UMass giving URI 15 yards for its cause.

RHODE ISLAND	41
MASSACHUSETTS	21

Then on the ensuing kickoff, a short kick was recovered by Kerry Taylor at the UMass 20–yard line, where he would run for seven yards and then fumble. That put the Rams in excellent position for a back–to–back score right before the end of the first half with time running down.

The Rams would make good on the opportunity as Hixson once again connected for a TD pass, this one to his prime target of the afternoon, Cy Butler for a one yard score.

Now instead of UMass heading into the locker rooms up 14–3, they would be trailing 17–14 and the momentum along with the game, would be shifted towards the Rams.

"We continue to find a way to cause our own problems," UMass coach Mike Hodges said. "We

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 7

Freshman quarterback Smith shows poise, but Minutemen still lose in his first start

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

KINGSTON, RI. —— The University of Rhode Island's Meade Stadium is, in a word, unique.

The main grandstand is a rickety wood and steel structure, steep as logistically possible, that seems to have a life span as long as the next gust of wind. The plywood that passes as stairs leading up to the pressbox bends with each step, leaving you with the sinking feeling that if the URI football team could ever do anything on the field that would require its fans to jump up and down, you might not live to see the end of the game.

Add 5,390 apathetic fans, a cool October breeze, and a version of our national anthem by the URI

Turn to SMITH, page 7

Men's soccer can't sustain drive in overtime, fall 3–1

By Chris Krein
Collegian Correspondent

Fresh from consecutive Atlantic 10 victories, the Massachusetts men's soccer team could not sustain its winning ways, falling to Virginia Tech on Friday afternoon.

VIRGINIA TECH	3
MASSACHUSETTS	1
OVERTIME

In a 1–1 battle that went into overtime, the Minutemen were outscored in both overtime sessions and walked off the Tech Park pitch with a 3–1 loss.

UMass saw its record drop to 5–3–1 on the season. It also marked the first loss in A–10 action for the Minutemen, as their conference record fell to 2–1–0.

The outcome seemed to point to a repeat of last year's inaugural meeting between the teams, when they scuffled to a 1–1 tie at Richard F. Garber Field in Amherst.

It looked like a game that would be decided on goalkeeping strength, which would favor the Minutemen. Sophomore keeper Jeff Jablonski, a local standout from Ludlow, had been superb in his previous two starts, notching two shutout victories. He has filled in brilliantly for an injured Tim Pearson, shutting the door on Temple (3–0) and St. Joseph's (1–0) last week.

However, any illusions of a third consecutive shutout were dashed 9:34 into the game. Bobby Warnick scored his first goal of the season for the Hokies, from 14 yards out, on an assist from Tim Young and Chris Chladek.

Undaunted, Jablonski would regain the form he had shown in his two previous starts, shutting out the Hokies for the rest of regulation.

Hokie keeper Alexey Salmin played the first eighty minutes of action with his own designs on a shutout, a feat that he has yet to accomplish this year. However, the Minutemen spoiled his bid at 82:45, to knot the score at 1–1.

Junior forward, Joenal Castma, took a pass from Joe Jacobson, a senior back, and put it away from the top–right corner of the goal box. The goal improves Castma's goal total on the year to three, while Jacobson chalked up his second assist.

Castma has come on strong after missing the first four games of the

Turn to MEN'S SOCCER, page 7

Women's soccer blasts La Salle, draws with GW

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

Before the start of the 1996 season, the No. 6 Massachusetts women's soccer team gathered in groups by class and composed their goals for this upcoming season.

The junior class, comprised of Danielle Dion, Erica Iverson and Liz Rutherford, set out this season to "not lose, or even contemplate losing, an Atlantic 10 Conference game."

MASSACHUSETTS	3
LA SALLE	0

Facing its first full A–10 weekend of the season, and its first extended road trip, the Minutewomen (9–0–1, 4–0–1 in the A–10) accomplished their goal, but did not emerge completely unscathed, as they downed La Salle 3–0 on Friday, but played to a 2–2 tie at George Washington yesterday.

The Minutewomen were without the services of leading scorer Rebecca Myers against GW, after the senior injured her knee 43 seconds into in the La Salle match, and also fellow midfielder Julie Magid, who missed much of the GW contest after being injured in the second half.

GW proved to be UMass biggest challenge of the season thus far, as the conference rivals locked horns in the nation's capital. The Colonial Women, the conference's top team other than UMass, stuck with the Minutewomen throughout, and snatched a standings point.

MASSACHUSETTS	2
G. WASHINGTON	2

UMass got on the board first in the ninth minute on a goal by freshman Emma Kurowski, the team's top scorer after Myers with six goals and three assists for 15 points.

"The first goal was off a Magid rocket which the GW keeper knocked down, but Kurowski was there to knock it home," coach Jim Rudy said. "She is a natural goal scorer."

GW's second leading scorer, Tanya Vogel, would also involve herself in the scoring, netting a pair of goals in an eight minute span just after the half.

Vogel converted a penalty kick in the 48th minute, and an 18–yard shot to the top corner in the 56th minute, putting the Colonial Women on top 2–1.

The goals were only the second and third that UMass' defense has surrendered all season, and the first in over 768 minutes of action dating back to an own goal with 25 seconds to play in the season–opening win over Fairfield on Aug. 31. The Minutewomen had posted eight consecutive shutouts in the meantime, one shy of the school record.

Trailing for the first time all season, missing their top scorer, and with a starting midfielder (Magid) dinged up and substituted for by Tarah Tokarchik, some teams might have "contemplated losing," but the Minutewomen pushed through for the tying goal late in the match.

In the 83rd minute, Tokarchik served up a ball that freshman Kate Webb, another reserve, sent past GW goalkeeper Traci Jensen for the equalizer. The goal is the second of Webb's young career and could not have come at a more opportune time.

"The freshmen really stepped up for us," Rudy said afterwards.

UMass held territorial and shot advantages in overtime, but the game entered the books as a 2–2 draw, UMass' first to an A–10 foe since a draw with GW on Oct. 16, 1993.

"[I'm] pleased to get out of GW with a tie," Rudy said. "We did control both ends and most of overtime. Traci Jensen stymied us three times with big saves in the first half, one in the second half on a free kick by Lynch and again on a point blank shot in overtime, slapping the ball from Kurowski.

"Dion got tested today and we had to play on both sides of the field. It was definitely a good test for us," he said.

The Explorers were less of a test on Friday. La Salle held UMass scoreless for 53:06, but second half goals by Sandy Shimogaki,

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER page 7

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 25 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, October 8, 1996

The Butler did it!

Junior forward Mike Butler scored the game–winning goal in a 2–1 win over George Washington. Check out our coverage (see Sports, page 10).

He keeps going... and going...

Spaulding Gray sweeps into the Valley for one night to perform his new monologue, "It's a Slippery Slope." Check out our preview (See Arts & Living, page 6).

WORLD

Immigrants in Chile give economy a boost

SANTIAGO, Chile — Chile's decade–long economic boom has a new product these days — an influx of foreigners looking for a better life.

They are coming from neighboring Argentina and Peru and from as far away as India and South Korea, shopkeepers, doctors, musicians, laborers. Many stay on illegally after entering with tourist visas. Although the number of immigrants is still low, and far less in impact than that experienced by the United States, the newcomers have set off a similar debate over their potential effect on the country.

Some Chileans are not worried. They say the immigrants bring new skills and ideas that benefit Chile's economy, which is the gem of South America with annual 7 percent growth over the past decade and a low jobless rate of 7.1 percent.

"We are interested in receiving foreigners — professionals, people bringing investments," said Bellisario Velasco, the deputy interior minister who oversees immigration. "We just ask from them to respect our Western culture."

But others see the immigration flow that began in 1990 as a negative, arguing that foreigners are taking jobs from Chileans.

NATION

Tobacco makers admit knowledge of danger

ST. PAUL, Minn. — A tobacco company in 1980 considered acknowledging that cigarettes can cause cancer but feared losing U.S. lawsuits, according to an internal memo filed in a state lawsuit yesterday.

"This is an astounding disclosure," said Minnesota Attorney General Hubert Humphrey III.

Ranking tobacco executives "considered finally confessing the truth about tobacco and health for the sake of their 'integrity,' he said, but "obviously chose instead to perpetuate their deadly cover–up."

The 14–page internal memo from T.W. Kidd of British–American Tobacco Co. Ltd., parent of the U.S. maker of Kools and Lucky Strikes.

It recommended admitting that smoking, combined with factors such as "genetic predisposition, air pollution and psychological temperament," could cause lung cancer, emphysema and other respiratory and coronary diseases in a small minority of smokers. Officials with the Minnesota attorney general's office said yesterday that they didn't know whether the memo's author was a high–placed employee. B.A.T. attorneys said it wasn't clear whether the same person wrote the entire memo.

Whoever the author, the fourteen page memo clearly advocated going public with the bad news about cigarette smoking and cancer. "Our integrity is seriously in question over our position on causation,"

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wed.	Thursday
HIGH: 60	HIGH: 60	HIGH: 60
LOW: 40	LOW: 45	LOW: 50

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports.....page 10

Administration, Alumni bolster campus voter registration efforts

JAMES STANLEY \ COLLEGIAN

Resa Singleton, a sophomore Bio–Chemistry major helps get students to register to vote yesterday .

By Raghuram Vadarevu
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Student Government Association's (SGA) voter registration campaign received $4,500 and $13,000 from University administration and the UMass Alumni Association, respectively.

"We are thrilled that the campus administration has shown us support for our voter registration campaign," said Jason Vecchio, student coordinator for the Student Center on Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA).

"I am extremely pleased that the alumni gave us the $13,000 because it will allow us to educate more voters," Vecchio said.

The University administration has allocated $4,500, through an informal process started during the summer, to the SGA–led voter registration campaign to increase voter registration and turnout.

According to Richard Conner, director of State and Government Relations, the administration wanted to match the SGA's initial budget of $5,000.

"We are able to hire new people, give our present canvassers more hours and register more students [for the registration campaign]," said Marc Kenen, director of SCERA, commenting on the funding increase.

"A financial contribution [to the SGA registration campaign] was important," said Conner. "Our business is education. It is fundamental to the effective functioning of a democratic society for people to be informed and participate in the political process."

According to Conner, the administration decided to donate the money in order to demonstrate to state and national government that the administration and students care about UMass.

In addition to the $4,500, the Alumni Association, voted to allocate $13,000 to the registration campaign's UMass Voter–Candidate Guide, Vecchio said.

"The money will help us by allowing us to print more copies of the guide and to send it to more people," Vecchio said.

The mission of the campaign is to assist a University graduate in becoming an educated voter, said Frank Mozell, voter registration coordinator for the campaign.

"It can't happen without the money," he said.

The guide will be compiled from a survey–questionnaire which was mailed, yesterday, to candidates running in state and federal elections.

According to Vecchio, the survey should be completed by candidates and faxed back to the student government offices.

The number of questions from previous drafts totalled 15, but the number of questions for the final draft was decreased to five questions.

SCERA kept the questions simple to ensure that busy candidates will have time to fill out and return the surveys quickly, Vecchio said.

The survey was a joint effort between the SGA, SCERA and the Alumni Association.

"The survey is limited to state representatives and senators, United States representatives and senators, and presidential candidates," Vecchio said.

The campaign is moving into the final days of voter registration. The last day to register to vote is Oct. 16. The current total number of registrants on campus was at 6,000 students as of Oct. 6.

The SGA campaign is currently trying to set up a series of forums, held on Oct. 24 and 25, with the candidates from the First Congressional District in the U.S. House of Representatives. The forum will feature U.S. Rep. John Olver (D–Amherst) and state Senator Jane Swift (R–North Adams).

Two representatives from interested Registered Student Organizations (RSO) will have an opportunity to question each candidate.

The forum will be one hour and moderated by the SGA and possibly broadcast on Union Video Center.

Swift has already accepted the invitation to the forum.

Alleged armed robber hits Southwest

University of Massachusetts police said yesterday that they received a report on Sunday of an alleged assault and battery with a dangerous weapon and armed robbery in Southwest Residential Area.

According to police, the victim, who is a UMass student, reported that the incident occurred between the hours of 12:30 a.m. and 1 a.m. Sunday in the area of Hampden Dining Hall.

The victim reported being cut on the hand with a sharp object, possibly a knife, while being punched by an unknown individual.

During the assault, a wallet was taken from the victim containing cash and identification materials.

The victim was treated at the University Health Services and then released. Detectives from the Community Disorders Unit are completing follow–up questioning with the victim.

UMass Chief of Police John Luippold said, "we are doing follow–up with the victim."

No further comment was available, as the investigation is on–going.

UMass police are requesting anyone in the area of Hampden Dining Hall between the hours of midnight and 1 a.m. who may have heard or seen anyone to contact the Police Department at 545–0893.

— Laura Stock

Bomb blasts N. Ireland

Shawn Pogatchnik
Associated Press

LISBURN, Northern Ireland — Bombers struck at the center of Northern Ireland's security Monday, detonating two car bombs inside the British army's heavily defended headquarters and raising fears the province could again become a battleground between the IRA and pro–British paramilitaries. Thirty–one people were wounded. There was no claim of responsibility. Whether the attack was carried out by the Irish Republican Army or by another anti–British group might determine whether the province's pro–British paramilitaries call off their own cease–fire — and send Northern Ireland back into retaliatory violence.

The first bomb went off without warning in a parking lot inside Thiepval Barracks, the main camp for the 18,000 army troops in the British–ruled province.

A second detonated 20 minutes later near the base's hospital, apparently to ambush passing soldiers, medical staff and people wounded by the first bomb.

As flames and black smoke billowed from the blast site, soldiers and paramedics hauled off the wounded on foam mattresses. Some of the people injured in the second blast included medical staff attending to the victims of the first.

The army said 21 of the injured were soldiers and 10 were civilians — including the three most seriously hurt. One man was critically wounded and four received serious head, chest and leg wounds. The less seriously wounded included an 8–year–old girl who was treated for shock and released.

Army forensic scientists estimated that the two bombs contained a total of 500 to 1,000 pounds of homemade explosive. Each left a deep crater in the pavement.

The attack inside what, until now, had been Northern Ireland's most untouchable army installation deals an embarrassing blow to the British forces. Thiepval lies in Lisburn, a predominantly Protestant suburb southwest of Belfast, and is home to the army's senior commanders, key officers' families and its elite bomb squad. Thiepval has a single entrance guarded by armed soldiers and security cameras, with every car requiring clearance — though most are not individually searched.

Among the army facilities damaged were offices, the base's travel agency, the nursery and the chapel. The blasts smashed windows in surrounding civilian homes and at a nearby hospital. The Dublin office of Irish Prime Minister John Bruton said that "the barbaric bomb attacks" were "deliberately calculated to provoke further violence and bloodshed and [are] aimed at undermining the multiparty talks in Belfast."

During a campaign stop in Portland, Maine, President Clinton called the explosions "another painful setback" for peace. The talks between parties in the conflict started in June with the IRA–allied Sinn Fein party excluded because the IRA has not held to its cease–fire. The talks have made little progress. The IRA resumed its bombing campaign against British rule of Northern Ireland in February, citing the refusal of the British government to let Sinn Fein into the peace talks without conditions.

Cadets get a taste of repels against a brilliant backdrop

By Scott Jason
Collegian Correspondent

HUNTINGTON — Last Saturday the field in front of Southwest Residential Area at the University of Massachusetts trembled as U.S. Army transport helicopters landed several times throughout the morning.

The helicopters were part of an Army Reserve Officer's Training Corps (AROTC) training mission that brought cadets via helicopter to the Knightsville Dam for a repelling exercise.

Nearly 140 cadets, members of the Alpha, Bravo and Charlie Companies participated in the exercise, encompassing the entire Minuteman Battalion.

Alpha Company is composed mostly of first year AROTC cadets. Bravo Company consists of second and third year cadets from UMass, Smith College, Amherst College and Mount Holyoke College. UMass serves as the main headquarters where classes are held. The Charlie Company, which met Alpha and Bravo in Knightsville, is composed of students from the Springfield area and is stationed at Western New England College.

For Alpha Company, the day started at 6:45 a.m. on one of the coldest mornings of the fall. The Alpha Company stood on the cold, frost covered field and listened to a safety briefing by Captain Higgins.

At approximately 7:30 a.m., two CH–47 helicopters descended to deploy Alpha Company to the Knightsville Dam.

The Ch–47's, or "Chinooks" as the army calls them, are the army's largest helicopter. The twin rotored monsters are capable of carrying over 40 men and have the power to carry a jeep or cannon suspended from their underside, according to Cadet Captain Steve Niggl. After arriving back to campus at 11:15 a.m., Alpha cadet Dan Haydan said of the flight and the training exercise, "that was a really fun trip, definitely a good time."

"Those Chinooks are really loud," he added.

Bravo Company left campus at 11:30 a.m. and began the same repelling exercises that Alpha had just completed. By the time Bravo Company arrived at Knightsville, the sun had broken the mist and the temperature warmed nearly 15 degrees, turning one of the coldest mornings of the fall into one of the most gorgeous afternoons.

The Knightsville Dam is located about 15 miles southwest of Northampton, nestled between several small mountains making a brilliant backdrop for Bravo Company's exercises.

The helicopters descended between the hills and touched down on the dried up pond in front of the dam. Cadets ran from the helicopters, hunched over holding their helmets (or "Kevlars" as their called) until they were a safe distance from the choppers. Cadets then had to climb a rocky slope up the face of the dam.

Once on top of the dam, cadets got another safety briefing and a refresher course on the tying of a Swiss Seat. The Swiss Seat serves as the harness from which the cadet's life will ultimately hang. A total of three safety checks were then conducted on every cadet.

The dam has a bridge that extends out to a 100–foot tower that measures water depth. Cadets repelled from five points; three 30–foot wall repels in addition to a 60–foot and a 90– foot free repel.

At the first repel, cadets got a taste of putting their safety in the hands of their fellow cadets and their superiors. As the cadet steps over the edge, leaning back to the ground, face to the sky, all trust is put into Sergeant First Class Dietz as he explains to the cadet what they must do.

"Your gonna take a couple of

Turn to REPEL page 2

Arrest made in domestic assault case

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts police arrested an individual in Brett Residence Hall Friday at 1:25 a.m. for domestic assault and battery.

James Anthony Beringer, 22, of 6 Costello Ave., Bay Shore, N.Y., was charged with assault and battery towards a female student who lives in Brett Residence Hall.

"We responded to a disturbance regarding a female in Brett who indicated she'd been assaulted by this man," said UMass police chief John Luippold.

"We found that statutes within domestic violence had been violated and he was placed under arrest," Luippold said of Beringer.

In response to the incident, the Dean of Students office had planned to conduct a workshop in Brett last night about violence on campus and who students can contact in the event that they or someone they know become victims.

"It's a program about introducing students to a network of resources available in response to incidents of violence on campus," Luippold said.

A similar series of workshops was conducted by the Dean of Students Office earlier this semester in Southwest, Central and Orchard Hill Residential Areas. Last night's scheduled workshop originated from a request from a resident in Brett Residence Hall.

Representatives from the Dean of Students Office, UMass Police, Housing Services, Everywoman's Center, University Health Services and Mental Health Services are all participants in the safety workshops.

Assistant Dean of Students Merle Ryan said that the first series of workshops were successful.

"Judging from the feedback we've had, we find that students know where to go and what to do about violence," Ryan said.

Police Officer Steve Westerling, who spoke at one of the first workshops, said students were often surprised when the issue of domestic violence was discussed.

"In the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, incidents in dorms, in rooms or on floors, can be considered under domestic law," said Westerling.

ELIZABETH BROWN \ COLLEGIAN

Praise to the Lord

The UMass Chamber Choir practices for the Feast of St. Francis Earth Mass, or Missa Gaia, on Sunday at the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine in New York City (see photo essay on page 3).

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Tuesday, Oct 8

Meeting — The public is invited to the Annual Meeting of the Friends of the Jones Library System at 7:30 p.m. in the Large Meeting Room on the lower level of the Jones Library. The featured speaker of the evening is the new curator of the Dickinson Homestead, Cindy Dickinson, who will speak on "Perspectives of the Dickinson Homestead." There will be time for questions afterward, as well as refreshments. For more information, call Edith Barton at 549–1748.

Wednesday, Oct. 9

Religious Class — "Tanya Class," a free drop-in class on the Tanya, the Chassidic text of mysticism, 8 p.m. at Chabad House, 30 N. Hadley Rd., Amherst. Free and open to the public. Call 594–4094 for more information.

Forum — A forum on election year alternatives, independent political action, and grassroots organizing entitled "Campaign '96: Will Your Vote Count?" will be held at 7 p.m. at the Unitarian Meetinghouse, 121 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. Speakers include Eric Chester, Socialist Party vice-presidential candidate, and Jonathan Leavitt, Co-chair, Massachusetts Green Party.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will hold a meeting in the Cape Cod Lounge in the Student Union at 7:30 p.m. New members are always welcome. For more information, call Tim at 546–0562.

Meeting — The Distinguished Visitor's Program (DVP) will be having an informational meeting at 7 p.m. in room 801 of the Campus Center. If you are interested in bringing a lecturer to campus, or in helping us prepare for our upcoming lecturer, Nadine Strossen, please attend. For more information, call 545–0046.

Meeting — Interested in learning about deaf culture and practicing American sign language? HANDS club will hold its first general meeting of the fall semester at 7 p.m. in Machmer W–25. For more information, call the office at 545–1925 or stop by room 306 of the Student Union.

Meeting — The UMass Ski Club will hold its second general meeting and Montreal trip sign–ups at 7 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. All those interested must attend. For more information, call 545–3437.

Meeting — The UMass Italian Club will be holding an organizational meeting at 7 p.m. in 301 Herter Hall. New members are welcome. For more information, call Bill at 585–7806, or e–mail at wacave@student.umass.edu.

Meeting — The Anthropology Undergraduate Collective will hold its next meeting at 7:45 p.m. Meet outside of the Machmer Lounge. Newcomers are encouraged to attend.

Thursday, Oct. 10

Lecture — Ifti Nasaim,a poet form Pakistan, will read his poetry and discuss his work in a lecture entitled "On Being Gay and Creative in South Asian Culture," at 12:30 p.m. in Campus Center room 803. The event is free, wheelchair accessible, and is part of the GLBT Studies Lecture Series, and is co–sponsored by the Stonewall Center. For more information, contact the UMass Stonewall Center at 545– 4824.

Friday, Oct. 11

Lecture — Wolf Eston, from the University of New Mexico, will give a lecture entitled "The 2.06Ga Bushveld Catastrophe, South Africa, and Its Possible Global Effects on the Proterophytic–Paleophytic Boundary," in Morrill II South, room 131 at 3:30 p.m. This lecture is a part of the Geosciences Lectuce Series.

Opening Reception — The Student Union Art Gallery welcomes Benigna Chilla back to Amherst for an exhibition of her current works. Her art will be on display at the Student Union Art Gallery from Oct. 10–Nov. 1. The reception will be from 5–7 p.m. For more information, call 545–0792.

Notices

Final Exam Schedules — The Fall '96 Final Examination Schedule will be available beginning Friday, October 18. Copies will be delivered to students in residence halls, and will be available to off–campus students in the Registrar's Office (213 Whitmore).

New Organization — Attention Biracial and Multiracial Students on campus. A new organization is forming and your help is needed. If interested, call Jordan at 546–3548.

UMass Hang Gliding Club — Learn how to hang glide. The UMass Hang Gliding Club is sponsoring a beginner weekend on Oct. 19–20. Sign up now because space is limited. This is the cheapest way to learn how to fly – no experience necessary. Meetings are on Tuesdays at 6:30; everyone is invited to attend. Check board by SU ballroom for location of meetings and office hours. For more information, call 545–0804 and leave a message.

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley offers rides to students to attend the 10 a.m. service in Amherst. Drivers arrive at the Knowlton and Prince bus stops at 9:45. Please call Mark to confirm, or for other stops, at 253–0361.

Everywoman's Center — Acculturation Group for Latina Women, facilitated by Mari Vicente, Thurs. from 4–6 p.m. Child Sexual Abuse Survivors Support Groups: Group 1 facilitated by Sara Elinoff, Mondays from 7–9 p.m. Group 2 facilitator, day, and time TBA. Coming Out Group For Lesbians, facilitated by Lynne Schachne, Mondays 4–5:30 p.m. Lifting Your Spirits, facilitated by Carla Brennan and Diana Dalendina, Weds. 4–5:30 p.m. Eco–Psychology for Women, facilitated by Carla Brennan, Fridays 10–11:30 a.m. Post Abortion Support Group, facilitated by Peggy Warwick, Wednesdays 5:30–6:30 p.m. Self–Esteem & Assertiveness for Women, facilitated by Carla Brennan, Wednesdays 6:30–8 p.m. Single Mothers Support Group, facilitated by Amy Rosebury, Tuesdays 1–2:30 p.m. Women & Divorce, facilitated by Ali Thompson, Tuesdays 6:30–8 p.m. All groups offered by the Everywoman's Center begin in October, and offer a safe and confidential space. For other groups, call 545–0883.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition meetings are every Tuesday at 7 p.m. in room 306 of the Student Union. For more information, call the ARC office at 5–1925.

Staff Needed — The UMass Index yearbook needs staff in all departments. Editorial positions are available in Photo, Layout, Copy, and Marketing departments. An assistant copy editor and assistant sports editor are also needed. Meetings are held on Wednesdays at 7 p.m., 304 Student Union, or call 545–0848 if interested.

Religious — The Muslim Student Association at the University of Massachusetts invites all Muslims in the Amherst area to weekly Friday prayer from 1 to 2 p.m. in the Campus Center. The room number will be posted on the Notice Board. For more information, call Utamat 256–8482 or Laili at 253–0874.

Discussion Group — "A Course in Miracles" will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for 10 weeks on Mondays starting in September. For more information, call 253–3795.

Dance — The Northeast American School of Dance Studio in Northampton will hold a dance spree every Friday from 8:30 p.m. to midnight every Friday. People can dance to variety of music in a smoke and alcohol–free environment. All ages welcome. Sliding scale. For more information, call 584–8167.

Work–Study — All undergraduate students who have received federal work–study as part of their financial aid package must be on payroll by Friday, October 11, 1996 or have a deferral form filed at the Student Employment office by that same date. If you do not get on payroll or do not defer your work–study, you will only receive your spring portion of your award. Any questions, please call the Student Employment office at 545–1530, or visit our office located in room 243 of Whitmore.

Whitewater is still developing

McDougal claims she overheard her husband cut deal

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Susan McDougal accused her ex-husband Monday of turning into a bitter, broken man who cut a deal with federal prosecutors in exchange for testimony against President Clinton.

Speaking from jail in a telephone interview with Fox News Channel, she said she was in the same room when James McDougal agreed to help prosecutors build a case against the president and Hillary Rodham Clinton.

"I think they made him the same offer they made me," Mrs. McDougal said. "'Give us something we can use against the Clintons [and] you can walk away.'"

She said McDougal tried to persuade her to cooperate as well — but she refused.

"I know how broken he is and how sick at heart he is over his convictions. And I know that he feels so much bitterness. That is why he turned to those people," she said. "I can only tell you the man I married would never have done that. I don't know this man."

Mrs. McDougal was jailed for contempt for refusing to speak before a Whitewater grand jury, and has yet to begin a two-year federal sentence in federal prison for her May 28 fraud conviction. James McDougal would not discuss what his former wife said. "I cannot discuss any aspect of the case and I cannot characterize or discuss my co-defendants in the case," McDougal told The Associated Press yesterday at his home in Arkadelphia. Mrs. McDougal said her husband asked prosecutors to let him choose which prison he would be sent to, and said he wanted three months freedom before being sentenced and his living expenses paid. McDougal also asked for prosecutors to recommend leniency. Prosecutors agreed to the terms, she said. McDougal was not sentenced as scheduled on his 18 fraud and conspiracy convictions. Sentencing was delayed three months, to Nov. 18.

The McDougals were convicted along with former Governor Jim Guy Tucker, who was given probation in consideration of health problems.

Those convictions — and much of the Whitewater investigation — center on the McDougals' running of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, and the failed Whitewater land development partnership the McDougals and Clintons shared.

Mrs. McDougal said she thinks the president and the first lady did nothing wrong. But she said she's afraid prosecutors will "take whatever information we give them, even in the best light, and turn that into something that could be damaging and hurtful."

■ repel

continued from page 1

bounces, legs bent. You need to jump and throw your right hand, hold the 'L' all the way back into the wall," he orders.

A cadet stationed on the ground holds the other end of the rope, which keeps the cadet from falling.

At the 90–foot repel, Sergeant First Class Maholick does the last safety checks as he gives orders to cadets and assists them as they step onto the edge. Looking down from the top of the concrete bridge at it's maximum height, cadets realize just how high they are from the ground.

As the cadet leans back, Maholick gives his orders. (Without the proper jump the cadet risks swinging back into the steel girder beneath the bridge.)

"Right hand in the small of your back, you're gonna' take a couple bounces then jump out, throw your right hand way out and count one thousand, two thousand. Bring that hand back into your back and you'll swing. Now let's go, you've gotta do it," Maholick said.

When cadets reach the bottom, they seemed relieved that their 15–second descent is over, but were eager for a second chance.

For the Alpha Company this was the first of several training exercises that will come in the next four years. It was an opportunity to realize how important training is and what skills are required to be a Private, according to Cadet Captain Steve Niggl.

Cadet Dave Farrell, just before doing the 60–foot repel, said, "today's exercises are confidence builders. You never get over the fear, but you gain confidence and trust."

Black Affairs Needs Writers!

The Black Affairs desk is always looking for students interested in covering issues of importance to the community. If you fit that description, call Humphrey brown III or Greg Casimir at the Collegian at 545–1851 or come down to the Collegian at 113 Campus Center Basement.

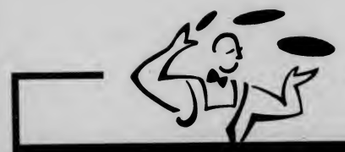

Photo Essay

by Elizabeth Brown

The UMass Chamber Choir sang in the Missa Gia, or Earth Mass over the weekend. They sang at the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine, the largest Gothic Cathedral in the world, to help celebrate the Feast of St. Francis, the patron saint of animals. Sue Balanski (left), a junior english major, and Keith Rutkeweitz (right), a sophmore music major, join in this effort. Karen, the African elephant, was blessed by the priest at the cathedral.

Working in the USA

Sure, it's a lot to handle. That's why every International Student needs this.

It's free when you sign with AT&T. Call 1 800 533-6198.

AT&T

© 1996 AT&T

Be a Resident Assistant!

Help Shape Your Piece of the World

Applications for Spring 1997 Resident Assistant Positions Now Being Accepted.

Applicants Must Attend an Information Session to Receive an Application:

October 15	7:00pm	Cashin	Main Lounge
		Kennedy	19th Floor Lounge
October 16	7:00pm	Gorman	2nd Floor Lounge
		Cance	Main Lounge
October 21	7:00pm	Hamlin	Hot Spot
October 22	noon	Campus Center	room 911
October 23	7:00pm	Field	classroom

For more information, call the Center for Diversity and Development at 545-0472.

Get Ready for MAY now!

ATTENTION GRADUATING SENIORS!

Learn more about our exciting Executive Training Program! Discuss the pivital role that an Assistant Buyer and Finance Executive play in our continued success! Join recent University of Massachusetts Alums at our

RESUME DAY

TODAY, October 8th from 10am - 4 pm

SOM Faculty Lounge

Learn more about how you can pursue a dynamic and challenging career with Filene's!

FILENE'S

The May Department Stores Company

what in the world are you going to do with your career?

For decades, Sanders, a Lockheed Martin Company, has been known and respected for its ability to produce the latest and the best ... impressive breakthroughs that have redefined the state-of-the-art in a wide variety of electronic systems technologies. Talented college graduates help make our programs the success they are– bringing fresh perspectives and ideas. At Sanders, you'll enjoy the support, responsibility and authority needed to get the job done. Along with that, you'll receive respect and recognition for your accomplishments.

Right now, positions are available for college graduates in the areas of Computer Science, Electrical Engineering, Mechanical Engineering, Aerospace Engineering, and Computer Engineering.

So, if you're ready to take on the world, talk to us first. Our recruiters will be visiting your campus on October 25, and they'll give you the lowdown on what we can do for your career. Resumes can also be mailed directly to: Sanders, A Lockheed Martin Company, Attn: 6532-4 St, P.O. Box 2029, Nashua, NH 03061-2029; email: kdunn@mailgw.sanders.lockheed.com

Visit our home page at: http://www.sanders.com

Applicants selected may be subject to a government security investigation and must meet eligibility requirements for access to classified information. U.S. Citizenship required for some positions. Sanders is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer

SANDERS
A Lockheed Martin Company

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE

50% Off!!

Of Basic Program with valid college Student I.D.

Free Info Session
Wednesday, Oct. 16th
7:00 pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst

Now Accepting Visa, M/C, AMEX & Discover

Shop Around & Compare

1-800-U-CAN-MIX

Act Now! Space is Limited!!!

Calvin Klein

25% Off Calvin Klein Basic Underwear Styles

2 Weeks Only! October 1-14

J•RICH CLOTHING FOR MEN

22 Masonic Street
Northampton • 586-5336
Open 7 Days • Thurs 'til 9

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Morse Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David Voklan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Mark McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor
Michael Elliott News Editor
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Josh Sylvester Editorial Production Manager
Sean Horgan Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Debate doles out some garbage

Sunday night at the first presidential debate, much of what happened was to be totally expected. Bob Dole attacked Bill Clinton as quickly and often as possible and Clinton sat back parrying Dole's thrusts, making sure that each claim was dealt with and that no real weaknesses were exposed. In the process, we learned a lot about Bob Dole.

One of the Dole camp's primary objectives was to portray its candidate as a warm and funny guy. You know, a guy with charisma. A guy like Bill Clinton. While Dole delivered a few obviously set-up jokes, which gave the audience a chuckle, it was clear that they weren't spontaneous and they didn't carry the weight that was expected. Otherwise, Dole presented us with the same old worn-out product: lots of ambiguity with a little stupidity thrown in.

Mark McGrath

On a couple of occasions during the evening, Dole addressed Clinton as Mr. President, reminding the audience that Clinton never showed George Bush the respect that was due in their debates. More often, he began sentences with the phrase , "I'm not going to bring up..." which was immediately followed by the very issue that Dole said he was not going to bring up.

What resulted was a series of thinly veiled yet crafty cheap-shots meant to pierce Clinton's armor but which only helped to augment the mean, old man image that commonly comes to mind when you think of the former senator.

My favorite moment of the night came when Dole was defending his policy towards Social Security and Medicare. He related the story of a discussion between himself and his mother.

According to him, Mrs. Dole pleaded with him not to cut those programs. "Social Security and Medicare are all I have," the poor, old woman said, momentarily forgetting that her son was one of the most powerful men in Washington. If those were the only resources that Mrs. Dole had, that fact ought to tell you a lot about the character of her son.

After that, he compared Clinton to his little brother, who has been known to stretch the truth. Apparently, the Dole family developed a rule that approximately one-sixth of what he said was true. He added that the same rule applied to Clinton, but more to the tune of one-half.

Wow, a revelation! A politician who is known to stretch the truth. Call out the National Guard; I think we have a problem here. Especially considering the fact that the senator, whose mother relied on Social Security, is the accuser.

Because a re-election campaign is mainly a referendum on the incumbent, Dole had to reach out in an attempt to rattle the President. In the process, he threw a lot of punches, but missed by a wide margin on most.

From a man who has been furiously attacking teachers' unions and other organized labor, I was amused to see pleas directed toward the working people and the young.

It is starting to come clear that Dole needs all the votes he is able to scrape up, no matter how duplicitous the process will make him seem.

But Dole is ever the optimist. A positive attitude can explain the fact that he never mentioned the word "if" in regard to himself and the presidency. "When I'm President" and "In a few months I'll" littered his dialogue. Here we have a man infinitely behind in the race insulting the intelligence of the average American by intimating that he's actually going to win.

In the debate, Dole actually accused Clinton of having a history of "going after more power and more power" as if that were a bad thing. Granted the President doesn't receive his position by accident or humility, but isn't Dole doing the very same thing?

Does the fact that he gave up his seat in the Senate prove that he, himself is not going after a higher amount of power? If anything, it proves is that he really, really wants the additional power, not that he has less desire for the presidency than his opponent.

Another one of the funniest moments of the debate came when, in a five-minute span, both candidates decided to tell the audience how much they genuinely liked each other. Maybe it was just me, but when Clinton said that he liked Dole it was very believable. When Dole reciprocated, his teeth were grinding. Perhaps Clinton really does like Dole, after all the guy is practically giving him the presidency for another four years. He ought to love Bob Dole.

In his closing statements, Dole attempted to reach out to the young voters of the country. The first minute of the argument placed the old man identifying with today's youth, telling them that he knows the pressure they're under... and that they should be strong enough to resist using drugs.

Bob Dole was born during the age of prohibition, yet he is able to understand the trials and tribulations of today's youth. I'm one of today's youth and I can't even identify with the problems we have. We live in a world whose streets are overridden with violent crime, drugs, gang violence and more broken homes than intact ones. But there's a light at the end of the tunnel; Bob Dole knows what we're going through.

And guess what. He even has a Web page, as he was more than happy to flaunt as his last point. Bob Dole has a Web page, and that makes him hip. If he could just pass one little test, he could back up his hipness. Just put him in front of a computer and tell him to visit his own page. Then we'd see who's hip.

Not surprisingly, post-debate polls indicate that nearly twice as many viewers thought Clinton won the debate than the 27 percent who saw Dole as the victor. The most amazing part is that the president didn't have to do anything to achieve his goal. Bob Dole seemed more than happy to do all the work for him.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

Why should I care?

How many times have you heard this one — students today are lazy, apathetic and have no willingness to address political and social issues.

This time, it came from the mouth of Kevin Sowyrga, a thirty-something Weld-Republican political consultant based in Boston, while he spoke at Northeastern University on the student role in the current election.

The candidates seeking higher office do not care about you, he said, because you do not care about them — they know that you'll stay quiet no matter what.

The reality is that, yes, if one were to measure the maturity of a political conscious solely on the basis of how active a particular group was in the electoral process, then, by and large, college students would have nothing to scream about.

This commentator, however, believes that some of his older and not-so-wiser colleagues are using an invalid criteria to base their analysis upon as they define success using their own terms.

"They had the Vietnam War to organize around — student activists today must grapple with the restructuring of a global economy with intertwined political, cultural and moral implications."

Michael Elliott

Students may not vote in record numbers, but that does not necessarily indicate blindness towards social realities. More importantly, for those of us who make voting a civic priority, we realize that the ballot box is not an ends in itself, but a part of a much broader activist conscious.

We have little inspiration coming from the national level. For those who watched Bill Clinton and Bob Dole debate, it become very apparent early on that both candidates were exceptionally skilled at saying nothing at all — or more appropriately, nothing too specific. That would constitute a political stance, which would create an agenda, which would spark debate and dissention, which would result in a healthy and active democracy. Clearly, this is not what the ex- senator and the soon-to-be-two-termer had in mind.

Take Clinton's rambling on the role of the U.S. military in international operations. He was careful to remind voters that he weighs "the interests" of the country before deploying troops on foreign soil.

Well, of course — nothing ground breaking there. If one agrees that Clinton is at least a reasonable person, it could be assumed that he is not using a haphazard method to make important decisions.

The discussion which should have occurred is how these interests will be defined in the next century. Unfortunately, the same, dried up, boring and vague language was used by both candidates. There is not too much substance (or political courage) in proclaiming that the United States is "the greatest country in the world."

One could also reasonably assume that young people are looking for a "better future." That's not the kind of rhetoric which is going to attract people into the process.

If I were Jim Lehrer, my follow-up question would have been: "In terms of specific proposals which follow a clear progression from work you have already completed, what does a 'better future' translate into in your administration?".

This argument has been made before: that the blame for student apathy lies in the system itself. To some degree, the parties recognize this as Democrats and Republicans scrambling to invent ways to court student votes.

Then, Mr. Commentator plays the numbers game — citing the hundreds of thousands who would fill campus quads during his college days at the slightest hint of governmental wrong-doing. We were aware that youth did not exist within a bubble, he said, and that people around the globe were dying because of the American government.

True enough, but overlooking the contextual differences which separate the issues and dilemmas students face today as opposed to 20 or 30 years ago.

They had the Vietnam War to organize around — student activists today must grapple with the restructuring of a global economy with intertwined political, cultural and moral implications.

I say this not to suggest that these complexities should offer students an excuse for being dumbfounded in the face of organizing an effective social movement. I simply want to remind those who have forgotten that this is a very different time which will therefore produce some very different approaches to fighting for social justice.

It will certainly be depressing on election night if a short blurb is given to low student turn-out at the polls, but that is not the end of the story as some would lead me to believe.

Michael Elliott is a Collegian columnist

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Student parents need University's support

For most people, going off to college is hard enough. New home, new school, new friends. For those of us going off to college with our children, it is (to say the least) challenging. Ironically, my daughter, Sarabeth (age 2), has adjusted to UMass just fine. I'm the one who's still having trouble.

At Stop & Shop, students walk by and shout, "Hi Sarabeth." At the gym, the girl on the treadmill asked "Hey, aren't you Sarabeth's mom?" Last spring at a child care rally, Sarabeth's photo was taken and ended up in the local section of the Union News. Finally, while walking by the Graduate Employment Office last week, I noticed my daughter's picture up in the front window (and I'm an undergraduate). Yes, it seems Sarabeth is fitting in quite nicely here at UMass. In fact, most children of students are doing well— it's their parents that are having trouble.

Becky Woodworth

One reason why students with children have such a difficult time here at UMass is that the University doesn't recognize (or want to recognize) that student parents are here and that our numbers are increasing. First and foremost, UMass needs to decide if it really wants student parents. If UMass is truly vested in diversifying its student population, that means not only accepting students, but encouraging and supporting them as well.

While many needed programs are costly, the first and least expensive change to the University would be in attitude, since so many offices, staff and faculty are not family- friendly. Often, exams for day classes are held at night, leaving many students looking for baby-sitters. Other times, teachers give last minute assignments and students with children cannot easily re-arrange their schedules.

The lack of understanding is most obvious when professors will not put a book on reserve because they believe it is "reasonably priced and everyone should be able to afford it." (Sure it is reasonably priced.., if one has an income.) Hardest of all is when students are told that they are "unmotivated" or "lack the skills necessary" because they were not in class or did not complete an assignment due to family illness.

Students are told that they must choose which is most important to them: being a student or being a parent. Well UMass, there is a term used when a parent that does not take care of their child. It's called neglect, and it's illegal. Take it from me UMass, many of us would welcome a day in class compared to a day at home with sick children.

Of course, there are many other changes needed on campus to support parents. Having a day-care center that opens before classes, not at 8:15, would be a nice start. Would I be asking too much for daycare to stay open until 5:30 since day classes end at 5:15? Since the University daycare only offers full time spots, limited financial assistance and toddler care, and no infant care or sick child care, UMass should re-examine this idea of support.

On the other hand, I do have to include the fact that the limited child care that is available here at UMass is wonderful. Never before have I met an entire staff so dedicated to providing quality child care. In addition, these caring professionals work incredibly hard not only caring for children, but looking out for UMass families as a whole—something the rest of the University could learn from.

So yes; Sarabeth has adjusted just fine to UMass. She plays with her friends at daycare, visits the ducks in the pond and takes long walks with her class to the football stadium. She leaves all the worrying about schedules and classes to me. So, if you see Sarabeth around campus or at the grocery store, please remember to say "Hi Becky" to the tall blonde next to her.

Becky Woodworth is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

U.S. lacks Middle East policy

To the editor:

President Clinton is balancing on a high-wire in the Middle East, and unless he changes America's lagging policy in the Gulf, a Reagan-esque relic of the Cold War, growing Anti-Western undercurrents will ultimately lead to world wide terrorism and a never-before-seen wave of dissidence that will rattle American strategic interests. The current administration's carte blanche' support of Israel and its glaring denial of Turkish human rights violations will not only alienate Gulf allies, such as Egypt and Saudi Arabia, but will also precipitate a level of violence against American interests that will severely affect our economic welfare.

For 12 years prior to the Democratic usurpancy of the White House, the two Republican administrations preceded cautiously with an unimaginative Cold War policy in the Middle East, based principally on the assurance of Turkish and Israeli stability and the denial of Soviet expansion into this oil rich region. The Clinton White House, which I admit has made extraordinary strides in reaching out to previously unorthodox Gulf autocracies such as Jordan and Syria has continued to waffle over the important issues of Kurdish autonomy in southeastern Turkey, and Palestinian self-rule on the Gaza Strip. In fact, the Clinton White House has made greater strides in not declaring any foreign policy objectives for the Middle East. Essentially, the United States still implements a pseudo-Cold War based strategy in the Middle East seven years after the fall of the Berlin Wall!

Clinton is not alone, his would be successor Bob "radical idea-man" Dole is more concerned with tax cuts than a Middle East policy. If Dole were elected we ought not to expect any change to our current wishy-washy agenda. I suspect, that citizen Dole's imaginative 21st century policy for the Gulf includes a Jack Kemp compromise for instilling a sense of reverence for football in the godless Aye'rabs.

Since it is a shoe-in that Bill Clinton will win the next election, then it is more critical now then ever before that the President outline his policy in the Gulf, specifically: How will America defend ethnic minorities? In what manner will the Palestinian quagmire be resolved? How much emphasis will the U.S. place on human rights in regards to national relations? And how will the U.S. Defense Department help to develop a strategic defense in the Middle East funded, equipped and manned by the Arab nations?

The White House needs a bold innovator vision for the Middle East. Hopefully the entourage of political analysts and Washington politicos that loiter at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave can cook something within the one remaining campaigning month before the presidential elections. William Jefferson Clinton, the leader of the most influential country in the history of this planet, has 30 days to either squeeze one out, or get off the hopper.

John Polagruto
Amherst

Report filled with lies

To the editor:

When an article is printed on a news page that purports itself to contain respectable journalism, unbiased reporting is a requirement. To quote the Society of Professional Journalist's Code of Ethics, "There is no excuse for inaccuracies or lack of thoroughness." Unfortunately the Collegian and its reporter, Shyamala Ivatury, do not feel bound by the standards of a journalist.

Tuesday's article "Israel kills 'Oslo Peace Accord'" is filled with lies, and half truths. The author alleges "Israeli colonialism will end and... Palestinians will no longer live as non-citizens in their own land." That statement is interesting because according to a UN partition resolution, "the great majority of the Arab population in recent decades were comparative newcomers— either late immigrants or descendants of persons who had immigrated into Palestine in the previous 70 years." The truth of the matter is that there has always been a Jewish presence in Israel for over 3,700 years. Jews who moved to the Middle East in the early part of this century actually went out of their way to avoid purchasing land where they might displace Arabs.

Other "facts" used to back up the anti-Israeli tone was "the West Bank is literally criss-crossed with 'Jewish-only' highways, on which Palestinians are not allowed." Why does Shyamala Ivatury need to mislead, is it because that is the only way to prove a weak argument? In actuality, Palestinians are being barred from one new road from Gush Etzion to Jerusalem. The reason for this is the new road does not have a checkpoint into the city. "Israel retaliated by shooting over 80 Palestinian civilians in three days, and wounding hundreds more." That is a lie. The riots that are being referred to took 76 lives in total including Israelis and Egyptians too. Not only did the Palestinian police not exercise effective crowd control of their own people, there were repeated instances of them joining the mobs and firing upon the soldiers with "peace keeping arms." Fifteen Israeli soldiers and policeman were killed. How could this have happened if the Israelis were firing on unarmed civilians?

If the Collegian and its writers wish to gain respect as a news source, truth in journalism is a great place to start.

Allison Feinstein
Amherst

Molitor doesn't speak for me

To the editor:

As a non-smoker I would like to say that I denounce the attitudes of Erik Molitor in his recent column "High on Life" (Oct. 2). Not only was his article condescending and brusque, filled with blatant stereotypes, but it was also antagonistic and self-righteous.

I have chosen not to smoke, and like Erik, I am proud of that decision. But it is a decision for me — not for everyone else. Others including smokers, respect my choice, because I respect them. My opinions are not clouded with prejudice.

You cannot change everyone's behavior and here's a clue — if you ever really want to try, don't attack people. Certainly everyone is allowed to have an opinion, but opinions do not make people superior nor do they make them inferior. I do not wish to be associated with someone so intolerant and hostile. I hope that no one judges all non-smokers by this one man's opinion.

Jessica Hoar
Webster

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Women's Issues

Tuesday, October 8, 1995

POWER unites UM feminists

By Ali Pearson
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts has a club or activity for everyone, even women who want to take control and make a stand.

Enter POWER, Progressive Organization for Women's Rights, one of the only activities on campus structured primarily for young feminists with an agenda.

POWER has been up and running for several years, however last semester it lost momentum. This semester, armed with a brand new staff, POWER is taking control.

"There is a lot to do in terms of social change on this campus," said Laura Royce, a new POWER member and new student this semester. POWER fully intends on creating awareness on campus.

One project in the works is a rape awareness program for pledgers of fraternities and sororities. This program will seek to explain a little bit about the potential dangers at fraternity-sponsored activities and how to protect those who intend on participating. Although this program hasn't started yet, many members of POWER are excited to take action.

"It is important to educate those who need to be educated. Most of the women who need the information won't come out and ask for it. That is why a program like this is important," said Kristen Gowdy, another POWER member.

Some other projects in the works include a self-defense class aimed primarily at women, petitioning the fraternities for support of the rape awareness program, plastering display's of anti-women advertisements commonly found in the media and planning for National Young Women's day of action held on Oct. 24.

In honor of this day there will be a rally on the steps of the Student Union which will include set speakers as well as an open forum for anyone who wants to address an issue. Right now, POWER is focusing on how to make their participation in the rally effective.

POWER is a collective, there is no set leader. They aim to have women work together to establish their place on the campus and perhaps the world.

"The organization is open to all sorts of feminists. Some of the things we'll do will be more radical than others. There is a spot for anyone who wants to make a stand," said Royce who was tentatively in charge of the meeting.

The Progressive Organization for Women's Rights is looking to take control of women's issues on campus. "There are a lot of students trying to take action and POWER is one way to do that." said Gowdy.

Meetings are held every Thursday at 6 p.m. in Room 306 of the Student Union.

A table will be set up in the Campus Center over the next two weeks advertising the group as well as selling green ribbons in honor of Domestic Violence Month recruitment.

Women discuss community resources

COURTNEY SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Emmy Gay (right) and a friend talk at the forth annual Women of Color reception last Thursday in the Mullins Center VIP room.

By Jess Arsenault and Dana Quagliariello
Collegian Correspondents

On Oct. 3, the Mullins Center VIP Room hosted the fourth annual Women of Color Reception. An appearance by comedienne Emmy Gay, as well as several information tables and a buffet dinner were the feature attractions.

Senior sociology major Renee Henderson summed up the evening with her sentiment, "The idea behind the night is to bring together women of color from the community to find out what kind of resources are available." One of the major resources of this kind was the information provided by the Dunbar Community Center of Springfield.

Laurice Jiggets, peer advisor representing the center, provided information about the various services that the center provides for area teenagers. These services include after school education programs focusing on teenage pregnancy, substance abuse, violence and HIV/AIDS awareness.

The volunteer staff provides male and female "mentoring" programs that address the issues of self-esteem, respect for life and limb, lifestyle options and career exploration through peer leadership, for African American and Latino teens between the ages of 11 to 17.

Mentors donate at least six hours per month of their free time to their respective mentoring partners. The mentors spend time getting involved with teens in various ways including field trips, going to meetings and speaking to parents.

The Dunbar Community Center provides an educational program which includes the instruction of Hooked-on- Phonics, EZ Math and computer training. A cultural enrichment program focuses on increasing youth appreciation of the arts, through dance, theatre, arts and crafts and presentations of African American history.

SNAP, a special needs service program, is provided for those families who live with children with mental retardation, and a support group of parents offers a forum of sharing and empowerment. In addition to educational programs, the Center offers athletic and recreational programs for males and females from six years old.

The Dunbar Community Center is a non-profit organization funded by the United Way government and private foundation, grants and corporate contributions. It has been at its current location, 33 Oak Street in Springfield, for the past eighty-two years providing the community with services benefitting teenagers from all walks of life. For additional information call the Dunbar at (413)788-6143.

Breast cancer info to be distributed

By Michelle Hillman
Collegian Staff

October is National Breast Cancer Awareness month and The Breast Health Project, a program of The Family Planning Council of Western Massachusetts has announced two new support groups.

The first support group is for women who are newly diagnosed and the second is for women dealing with a recurrence of the disease or a Stage III or IV diagnosis.

The first support group for recently diagnosed women will be facilitated by Carol Drexler, a psychotherapist and breast cancer survivor. The group will meet on Thursdays from 7–9 p.m., Oct. 17 through Dec. 17 in Northampton.

The second group for women with recurrent disease will be facilitated by oncology social worker Dianna Young. This group will meet on Thursdays from 5–7 p.m., Oct. 17 through Dec. 12 in Northampton. Sites of meetings will be announced after registration.

The Women's Health Project, a part of the Division of Health Education University Health Services, is also offering hour long workshops in a Women's Health Series available to anyone who is interested in obtaining information about women's health.

Suzanne Strickland, Women's Health Project Coordinator feels that the "main focus [of workshops] is one on one," attention that the participants receive.

The workshops offered address breast health risk factors, preventive measures and risk training, body image, cultural influences, skills for enhancing self image and social support, stress reduction and management, eating disorders— identifying signs and getting help, healthy realtionships, communication with your partner and contraceptive choices.

Strickland places special importance on the breast health program because "breast health is a topic that doesn't receive much publicity," and most women don't give it much thought, said Strickland.

Letters informing Residence Assistants will be distributed to all the residential areas this week. Students may speak to their RA's and ask to schedule workshops or call and set up independent workshops.

Facts on Breast Cancer:
- Breast cancer accounts for more than 30% of all cancers among women.
- 182,000 women will develop breast cancer this year.
- 46,000 women will die this year because of breast cancer.
- Only lung cancer causes more deaths among women.
- One in eight women will develop breast cancer.
- Most lumps (90%) are detected by women.
- Risk of breast cancer increases as women grow older.
- Drinking alcohol may increase my chances of developing breast cancer.
- Eight out of 10 abnormal lumps are not cancerous.
- Breast cancer is not caused by bumping, bruising, or touching the breast.

Inside the sweat shops

Last Thursday a tiny Nicaraguan woman wearing a colorful skirt and red sweater, accompanied by a translator, told approximately 30 women about the conditions of her country and workplace due to the occupation of United States corporations.

The woman who goes by the alias Julia has six children and works in an assembly plant called a "maquila." Julia and other employees work from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. and are not allowed to go to the bathroom or receive any benefits such as medical care for their children.

Michelle Hillman

Julia is forced to use an alias because she is organizing unions despite her employers disapproval. She has been active in the trade union movement for 20 years, motivated by the abuses of women witnessed daily by workers in the maquilas.

"The companies think they own us. We're ready to show them. Our intention is to bring solidarity to women workers," said Julia.

Julia is only about five feet tall, but is "willing to do anything," including fake a broken ankle in order to come to the United States to tour for two weeks including stops in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut and Maine.

One worker who sews Kathy Lee brand clothes says, "Everyone starts work at 7 a.m. They give us a fifteen minute grace period. But you never know when you will be able to go home. Normally the day is over at 5 p.m. but they might tell you to stay until seven, eight, 10 or all night."

Parts of Central America and other free trade zones such as the Dominican Republic, Haiti and Nicaragua are all subject to U.S. imperialism. The employers in the free trade zones enjoy complete exemption of taxes including no import or export taxes, or municipal taxes on corporate gains for a period of 10 years.

Julia spoke for about an hour and told the gathering of women about how her country was before the free trade zones existed and how her situation has worsened.

Julia said women were working to teach men to be non- sexist. "Men have learned to sew, cook and do all the things we do along with us. It is no longer strange to see a man sweeping or ironing— these days it is very normal."

Men have a hard time finding jobs in these maquilas because they do not know how to operate the machinery. Julia also commented on how drugs were never a problem before and now children are seen on the streets sniffing glue. The level of illiteracy has also gone up.

Julia said that everyone had work and education and medicine was free. Day care centers were also available where the children were fed for free.

The aspect that was most disturbing about Julia's speech was the fact that the women are earning $65-70 a week when their basic needs for a month are $165, not including extra money for emergencies. The Americans living in the country send their children to the best schools, receive free medical care and "are improving their situation at home while living in our country."

The most perplexing aspect of this woman's incredible story is not only the fact that she has endured these conditions but single-handedly raised six children while working to organize the women in her county. It is not the fact that this woman is risking her life and her job to come to the country that is destroying hers.

What is perplexing is the ignorance of Americans who only have concern for their $100 sneakers, $150 sunglasses, and designer clothing made by women who have no choice but to work for these companies if they plan to survive.

More perplexing is the fact that our country acts as if it is innocent and docile, moving into Third World countries, setting up companies that operate for pennies, stripping the country of any social and economic independence, and treating people as if they are bodies that solely exist as a means of production.

Julia concluded her speech by apologizing for telling the women in the room what their country has done. "Sorry I have to say this, but everyone loves what is their own."

Julia's tour has been made possible by an inter-faith organization for peace and social justice called Witness for Peace.

Stephen Cobb, a co-organizer, hopes that Julia's life experience will help to uncover the personal effects of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS
Kathie Lee Gifford

Write for Women's Issues - See Michelle Hilman at the Collegian!

Understand My Pain...

As a woman I grew up constantly being touted for my sexuality. For who I was and what I was lacking in comparison to a man, my inner self was constantly being knocked to the ground. I learned things I never wanted to know as I grew up surrounded by a domineering and for the most part male family. Don't get me wrong, my mother is a wonderful woman. Unfortunately, she could never quite help out when things got rough between my father and I.

Jamie Sinsheimer

I learned to come into my own relatively late in life — somewhere around the time I hit high school. Prior to this I lived my life for my father and did anything that he asked me to do. Still threatened by his overbearing shadow I am forced to hide parts of who I am in hope that someday I will be able to be myself.

Sometimes, if I am sitting in class or outside the Student Union enjoying a bright sunny day, I will start to think of where I am and how I got here. I think about my life a lot and (most of the time) it makes me very sad.

Last year, when I first started writing for the Women's Issues section of the Collegian I wrote a couple of editorials on rape and how widespread it was on our campus. I wrote because I felt the need to get my voice "out there" and show other women that I too have been a victim. Victimization comes in thousands of different forms and tons of different shapes and colors.

So yes, we can all say that we have been victimized in one way or another, but I am here to speak about my story and hopefully you can take what you can use and move on, because that is what I am trying to do.

As a child I lived my life on the sidelines for a while, watching and observing my father's actions towards the rest of my family — most notably my mother. As I watched and over time became involved I began to grow angry. As an eight-year-old child I did not know how to express this anger so I basically harbored it until now.

My father never hit my mother. I don't think he had the nerve to do that. He hit me though, probably because he knew that I couldn't hit him back. For about eight years of my life I lived with a man that completely frightened me. I was afraid to talk for fear of him reacting the wrong way. I was afraid to go out of my house wearing something that he might disapprove of. I was afraid to bring home a friend that might look different from his expectations of my friends. I was afraid...

I first remember my father touching me when I was about seven-years-old. It went beyond being hit and extended to a place that shouldn't be reached in a father/daughter relationship. This continued on until the summer before my junior year of high school, when I threatened him with a phone call to the police — that's when all the physical aspects of our relationship ended.

Being hit as a child is one of the most damaging experiences a person can live with. I know because I was a victim. A year ago I couldn't even mutter those words. I couldn't believe that I was a victim, I didn't think it could happen to me.

Since the incident during my junior year of high school I have grown to take a stand against men like my father. He, on the other hand has become implanted in my mind as one of the scariest people I know. That, as sad as it sounds, is true. When I speak to him now it's really hard for me to control the hatred that I have for him inside.

I love my mother, she has always respected my decisions and who I am. I admire the woman that she is for having the courage to leave my father in my senior year of high school. Though we can not fully erase what he has done, I know in my heart that I will never forget what he did to me when I was growing up.

Today, I pride myself on working for other women who have been victims of domestic violence and helping them cope with their own experiences. By asserting my voice through my writing I hope that I can touch other women and help them cope with the pain. I know that it is a hard burden to handle but if we don't handle it — then who will?

Jamie Sinsheimer is a Collegian staff member.

Dear Readers,

My name is Michelle Hillman and I am the new Women's Issues editor this semester. I intend to do as much as physically possible to keep women's issues a major part of the Daily Collegian and the UMass conscious. Please feel free to come down and voice your opinions, complaints and ideas. I look forward to an empowering semester. I'm always looking for new and interested writers, so come on down and join me. I look forward to seeing you all.

Most Sincerely,
Michelle Hillman

SPEAK YOUR MIND!
Write for Women's Issues in the Collegian

Arts & Living

Gray monologue slides into Noho

By Jeremy Brothers
Collegian Staff

COURTESY PAULA COURT

Spaulding Gray performs at the Academy of Music tonight.

Tonight, for one show only, the master of monologue, the titan of talk, the sultan of speaking—Spaulding Gray, in a very special appearance at the Academy of Music, will present his new piece, "It's a Slippery Slope."

Coming from three shows in Boston at the Emerson Majestic Theatre last weekend, Gray's newest monologue is about, among other things, learning to ski at the age of 53.

If this topic sounds slight, one only needs to examine the monologues that Gray has produced in the last 20 years to understand where he's coming from. Gray's greatest hit, Swimming to Cambodia, might be summarized as a monologue about performing a minor role in a movie. This is of course an amusing understatement in itself.

"Using the skiing as a metaphor, well, it's like 'The Magic Mountain.' Everything that's happening down below is driving me up to empty my head out. And I suppose it's a metaphor for nothingness and death, the whiteness," said Gray in an interview with The Providence Phoenix last December. Those familiar with Gray territory should know by now that nothing is slight when it comes to the subjects of his monologues.

Those who aren't familiar with Gray might still need explanation to what exactly he does. Those who try to label Gray might do so with "performance artist," "storyteller," "sit-down comedian" or simply as "actor," having been featured in films, including Diabolique, The Paper, Beyond Rangoon, King of the Hill and True Stories.

Gray, of course, has his own favorite label.

"The definition I liked the most came from a 10-year-old– girl who I saw hanging out once after one of my shows. And being surprised by how young she was I questioned, 'What are you doing here?' And she said, 'My dad said I had to come and see the talking man' I liked that definition," Gray said in an interview with himself for The Los Angeles Times in April,1994.

For diehard fans, tonight's performance will no doubt result in an evening full of, to quote Gray's Swimming to Cambodia, "perfect moments."

Spaulding Gray performs "It's a Slippery Slope" at the Academy of Music, Northampton tonight at 8 p.m.

Recent tributes raise the Dead

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

The Grateful Dead are one of those bands that were always so large, successful and prominent, that most people either love them or hate them, a phenomena especially prominent here at the University of Massachusetts. In their 30 years, they were the highest grossing concert act ever (then again, they never stopped touring — however, that was where their strengths were— in their live performances).

The Dead had an effect on most everybody, whether it was musical inspiration or just an opinion — they weren't to be ignored. To say they had an effect on many people is shown in three tribute albums that were released in 1996: Joe Gallant & Illuminati's Blues For Allah Project, The David Murray Octet's Dark Star and Fire On The Mountain: Reggae Celebrates The Grateful Dead. The fact that many artists had an effect on the Dead is evident on The Music Never Stopped: The Roots Of The Grateful Dead.

• Joe Gallant, virtuosic bassist, was asked by former Dead bassist and founder Phil Lesh, to remake the Dead's classic 1975 album, Blues For Allah, with new large ensemble arrangements. Part of the Illuminati big band is former Dead keyboardist Tom Constanten (who played between 1968–72). Guitarist of the band, David Gans, hosts the weekly nationally syndicated radio show "The Grateful Dead Hour." A great piece from this is the violin and guitar arrangement for the instrumental "Sage And Spirit."

• Saxophonist David Murray graced the stage with the Dead on choice occasions in the '90s and with Dark Star shows how short the bridge is between jazz and the Dead's multi–genre music. "Shakedown Street" with its funky horns and organ, sounds like the Rocky theme here in an interesting arrangement. The Octet (two saxes, three trumpets, a trombone, Hammond B–3 organ, bass and drums) takes the title track into the outer reaches of music where Jerry Garcia took his band on his own composition. There is even a new song by Bob Weir (acoustic guitar) and Murray on tenor: the melodic instrumental "Shoulda Had Been Me."

• Following in the footsteps of the superb version of "Estimated Prophet" done by Burning Spear on the 1990 tribute to the Dead, Deadicated, various reggae bands and artists turn out grooving, bright versions of Dead tunes on Fire On The Mountain. Great tracks include "Touch Of Grey" (better than the Dead's studio version, done here by the Mighty Diamonds), the title track (done by Chalice, who back up many individual artists on other tracks on the tribute), and "Franklin's Tower" (Steel Pulse's smooth version of an easily–adaptable–to–reggae tune). Reggae legend Frederick "Toots" Hibbert gives his own adaptation of a common Dead cover, "Catfish John." This album is a palm tree in the graveyard of the Dead.

• Cover tunes occurred in at least 90% of the Dead's many shows over their 30–year career, and most were so common and often played, they took on new identities as Dead songs. "Not Fade Away," Buddy Holly's 1957 classic, featured in its original glory on The Music Never Stopped (Shanachie). The Dead elevated the song to many great heights during all three decades of their career.

Marty Robbins' "El Paso" is another beautiful song, covered often by the Dead, sung strongly by Bob Weir in their shows. Other tracks on this great collection are dug from the mines of straight old blues (Rev. Gary Davis' "Samson & Delilah," Henry Thomas' "Don't Ease Me In"), bluegrass (Obray Ramsey's "Rain and Snow"), folk (Bob Dylan, who's played the Dead's original "Alabama Getaway" in recent tours, is on here with his "It's All Over Now, Baby Blue") as well as other genres like country and New Orleans R&B.

Son Corazon, a Puerto Rican story

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

SON CORAZON: HEARTSTRUNG FOR MYRNA VAZQUEZ
Bowker Auditorium
Oct. 5

The life of a woman who loved too much was eulogized Saturday night in Bowker Auditorium. Son Corazon: Heartstrung For Myrna Vazquez was a multimedia, bilingual presentation on Myrna Vazquez. Vazquez was a Puerto Rican actress who died at the age of 40. The play, which was written by Rosa Luisa Marquez, one of Puerto Rico's leading theater artists and theorists, looked at the impact Vazquez made in her short life.

Vazquez, celebrated as an actress, mother, political activist, union organizer, teacher and community volunteer, opened the first cooperative theater group in Puerto Rico. At one point, Vazquez fell in love with another actor named Felix and because she was too dark, his parents forbade the match. Eventually, she married Felix.

Vazquez was accused of being a communist and one night, her theater was burned down. Realizing she couldn't get work in Puerto Rico, she moved to Boston, where she died on Feb. 17, 1974, following heart surgery.

Son Corazon was very unique in its presentation. The show opened up with two women standing on the balconies talking about Vazquez in both English and Spanish. There was a lot of singing, all in Spanish. At one point, the audience was asked to switch seats when the actors were going to give a synopsis of two of her most famous roles so that one version could be done in Spanish and the other in English. While it was a creative way of presenting the characters of Juanita and Antigone, to the audience, the combined Spanish/English translations muddled the stories and made it hard to hear properly.

Straying from conventional methods of presenting a story, the play used masks, lighting, puppets, photographs and video clips to illuminate Vazquez's life. A puppet with a squeaky voice played the five–year–old Vazquez and the three actresses took turns playing Vazquez.

Son Corazon: Heartstrung for Myrna Vazquez was an intriguing presentation in that it wasn't completely linear nor was it typical of most plays. The actresses were very versatile, switching roles and languages with ease. They were also exuberant and enthusiastic in conveying her passions.

While at times the drama tended to be confusing, credit ought to be given for originality and creativity in presentation. Son Corazon managed to mix different elements in the right combination to present a vivid picture of the woman who loved too much.

HSCN spotlights Nine Months & more

HCSN Preview
by Frank Ciampella

The Truth About Cats and Dogs

Janeane Garofalo's low self–esteem finds herself in a love triangle while taking calls on her radio show, "The Truth About Cats and Dogs." One day she describes herself to a male caller as having all the physical features of the presumably more attractive Uma Thurman. Thurman is the friend who tries to help Garofalo get the attention of the gentleman but ends up having a few feelings of her own. The movie gets off to a good start, but goes through a little dry spell in the middle. Some really funny parts make it worth watching and something people may be able to relate to. B–

Rising Sun

Sean Connery and Wesley Snipes are odd couple detectives trying to solve a murder case that deals with people from the land of the rising sun, the Japanese. Inspired by a Michael Crichton novel, the movie doesn't live up to all the suspense that you might think it would. The story's complexity can cause lot a of confusion. Snipes is okay, but Connery has done better. The two never form any chemistry and the plot doesn't pick up the slack. D

Die Hard With a Vengeance

Bruce Willis is back to complete the Die Hard trilogy as he reprises his role as New York City detective John McClane. This time Willis gets the help of an entertaining Samuel L. Jackson as they go up against Jeremy Irons and his army. This third installment keeps suspense going all the way through with Willis' usual wise cracks thrown in. The good sequence of action after action will make you happy you watched. B+

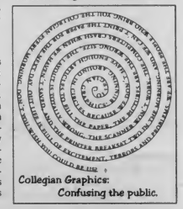
How to Make an American Quilt



Seven women reminisce about their past loves to Wynona Ryder as she goes away for the summer to ponder an engagement proposal. The women are working on a symbolic quilt for Ryder who gives a good performance. Maya Angelou also does well for someone who is not normally an actress. It is a warm movie with sentimental points, but can be a bit boring. C+

Benny and Joon

This sweet, romantic comedy pairs Aidan Quinn and Mary Stuart Masterson as brother and sister having trouble understanding each other. The mentally challenged Masterson continually manages to find herself in mischief that becomes Quinn's problem until a very amusing Johnny Depp enters the picture. The beginning and middle of the film have some dull parts, but is well compensated for by Depp's comedic antics and an enlivened ending that makes for a cute movie. B–

Nine Months

Julianne Moore is all set and ready to have baby in Nine Months, but guess who's not? Hugh Grant. Tom Arnold is the ultimate dad who befriends him and helps as the big event draws near. A special appearance by Robin Williams as a doctor who hasn't quite mastered the English language and gets confused between delivering animals and humans is hilarious. Along with Grant and Arnold, Williams loads the movie with laughs and slapstick. The chaotic ending is even funnier. B

Collegian Graphics:
Confusing the public.

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256.0733
145 main st. northampton 586.0155

Amber Waves
FAR EAST
Asian noodle soups, salads & stir-fries
63 Main St.
253-9200
MID EAST
Arabian delights salads & sandwiches
31 Boltwood Walk
253-9299
OCMP Delivery Express

Collegian Graphics
TICK...TICK..TICK.....

Want to write about poetry, film, theater, music, books, travel, food or anything else?
Then write for the Arts & Living Desk.
Come down today!

DID YOU KNOW?
The University Health Services offers Contact Lenses!!!
With all these great features:
• Same day fitting or replacement in many cases
• Wide variety of lenses available (including disposables)
• Convenient On-Campus Location
• Free sample start-up solutions
• Contacts mailed FREE!*
*normal delivery
WHAT ARE YOU WAITING FOR?
Call the Eye Care Services of the University Health Services.
577-5244

Free Loaner Cars
OOPS!
• Free Estimates
• 5 Year Nationwide Warranty
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental
North Amherst Motors
78 Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA 549-2880
(One Mile from UMass bus route)

"I got mine at Zanna"

Slip on, Zip up, Knock out!
ZANNA
downtown Amherst

No fixing needed for latest Tool

COURTESY ROSAMARIE MATTEY

Tool recently released their new album Anemia.

By Scott Bernard
Collegian Staff

TOOL
Aenima
Zoo Entertainment

A kind of unpleasant and self–indulgent creepiness hangs at the fringes of Tool's first LP, Undertow, something which sort of catered to the more depressed of the grunge generation. However, the musical ideas of guitarist Adam Jones, bassist Paul D'Amour and drummer Danny Carey were scrunched by a murky and claustrophobic production, and a mix which overemphasized bass and de–emphasized guitar.

The first thing one notices about this new release is that both Jones and Carey have been given a much more muscular part in the production, and new bassist Justin Chancellor, though still prominent, stays in the background. There is a power to this music which one has a feeling Tool was trying to realize on their previous release but just could not manage.

The style remains the same, sludgy songs which can be both melodic and brutal within the blink of an eye (or ear). And above this soars Maynard James Keenan and his multifaceted voice, capable of intimate whispers of regret ("I could have cried... I should have cried..." from "H"), straight howls of rage (numerous) and moments of quiet but deadly anger ("Don't you lie to me... don't you fucking lie..." from "Eulogy"). The lyrics are somewhat buried, purposely enigmatic, but the content or at least the mood of the songs are made apparent in snippets when they hit hardest.

But amongst all this angst and emotional upwelling of the songs proper, there are moments of (dark) humor. "Message to Harry Manback" seems to be a ridiculously over the top death threat left on someone's answering machine, backed by a very sympathetic and lilting piano. "Intermission" is a carnivalesque version of the very heavy opening riff of the next song, "Jimmy," played on a circus organ. Finally, as a real oddity, "Die Eier Von Satan" is an industrial song sung in German by one Marko Fox.

However, it is in Anima's final cut, "Third Eye," that the band displays its increased maturity and confidence. It begins with several samples of the late Bill Hick's routines on the important links between drugs and music (the album is somewhat dedicated to Hicks, who was a friend of the band and introduced them in Los Angeles during their 1993 Lollapalooza stint). It then proceeds to rapidly shift tempos and mood throughout its 13 minute length, always keeping the listener on its toes. It is both sweet and assaultive, at one point beautiful, and at another churning and brutal. This is definitely the product of a band which will only get better as it goes. B+

Garmana, Swedish rockers, set for Noho

Drawing from influences as diverse as Black Sabbath, Nine Inch Nails and their native folk music traditions, Swedish band Garmarna has drawn international attention with a fresh take on rock music. Named for the dogs that guard the gates of hell in Scandinavian mythology, the band consists of singer Emmy Hardelin, percussionist Jens Hoglin, and the multi–instrumentalists Rickard Westman, Gotte Ringqvist and Stefan Brisland–Ferner.

These Omnium recording artists will begin their U.S. tour tonight at Northampton's Iron Horse Music Hall, in support of their new album Guds Speleman (God's Musicians). Garmarna's members range in age from early to mid–20's, but have already accumulated extensive live performance experience through tours in Scandanavia, Germany and the U.S.

Their intense, haunting sound rumbles with industrial undertones and psychedelic tendencies Emmy Hardelin's voice puts so much expression and passion into her lyrics (often drawn from foreboding folktales) that you just may be inspired to run around the valley searching out a Swedish tutor so you can sing along.

Garmana performs at the Iron Horse Music Hall tonight at 10 p.m. Call the club at 584–0610 for more information.

— Daniel Bodah

■ water polo

continued from page 10

and "Tiny Tim" Troupis each notched a score auditioning for Marc Staudenbauer's vacated spot in the starting six.

Against Bucknell, the Minutemen were no less kind in the opening quarter, sprinting out to a 5–1 lead. UMass found themselves ahead 11–3 after three periods and shifted into cruise control in the fourth.

Stahl netted five more goals in the rout of Bucknell, snapping out of his scoring funk. He is still on a pace to become just the third Minuteman to score 100 goals in a single season.

Marrero and Aldo Roman each found the back of the net twice in the match as the UMass sophomores continue to dominate the scoring (and fouls) chart.

Engin stopped eight more shots in the victory before being relieved by Dane Teruya who notched three saves himself.

The Minutemen have nothing but practice this week as they anticipate their last EWPA league tourney of the season to be played in Flushing, N.Y.

From Poolside... The Minutemen were 9–0 in the EWPA last season and haven't lost a league match in over two years.

Women's tennis defeated by AC

By Michael J. Nam
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's tennis team fell to Amherst College 5–3 in a match last Friday. UMass (3–1) lost for the first time in head–to–head competition this year, while Amherst improved to an unblemished 6–0.

Laura Keith led Amherst with a No. 2 singles win, and the rest of her team controlled the doubles round in handing UMass its defeat.

The Minutewomen found themselves in a hole early when their No. 2 and No. 3 teams lost in the doubles round.

Juniors Noelle Orsini and Marie Christine Caron were defeated by a score of 8–4, and sophomore Jackie Braunstein and junior Lana Goredetskaya lost 8–2.

The instability of the doubles roster has been a concern for the team this year. The Minutewomen looked forward to solidifying the doubles team with the University of Connecticut match (rainout) and the Amherst match.

The lone bright spots during the doubles matches were freshman Ola Gerasimova and her partner, junior Caroline Steele.

The No. 1 doubles team won the sole point for UMass in the doubles round with an 8–4 victory.

Gerasimova's debut was delayed with the rainout at UConn after a ban from the first three games due to NCAA clearinghouse issues.

The anticipated first game for the freshman phenom was a successful one on an otherwise negative day for the Minutewomen.

In the singles matches, UMass players fell to three of the Amherst singles at No. 2, No. 4 and No. 5. The No. 1 singles did not play.

Braunstein won her No. 5 singles match over Ting Yu of Amherst in straight sets 6–2, 6–3, and senior Liz Durant did the same in the No. 6 slot, winning over Sam Toerge 7–6 (6–3), 6–0.

The Minutewomen had a difficult time at the heart of the singles matches.

Both the No. 4 and No. 5 slots lost in straight sets in their defeat. Orsini lost 6–1, 6–1, and Steele fared little better in falling 6–2, 6–3.

UMass will try and rebound in a match against the Providence College Friars at home today at 3:00 p.m. at the Upper Boyden Courts.

Minutewoman notes: This is the first time home for the women since their victory against the University of Hartford on Sept. 12. UMass has a 5–11 mark against Providence dating back to 1981. Gerasimova, though having played a successful doubles match, has not played a singles match yet as the No. 1 singles did not play at Amherst. Head coach Judy Dixon's record with the young tennis program is an impressive 49–20 (.683), and last year couched the women's team to an outstanding 15–3 season.

Coyotes destroy Bruins in scoring blitz

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

BOSTON (AP) — Mike Gartner, Norm MacIver and Oleg Tverdovsky scored during a one–minute, 49–second span in the first period last night as the Phoenix Coyotes got their first victory, 5–2 over the Boston Bruins.

Gartner finished with a hat trick and Nikolai Khabibulin stopped 30 shots for the Coyotes, who were the Winnipeg Jets until this season. Phoenix lost its opener, 1–0, to Hartford on Saturday. The victory also was the franchise's first against Boston in six games dating back to the 1991–92 season.

After Boston took a 1–0 lead on Jeff Odgers' spin move in front 2:16 into the game, Phoenix scored four consecutive goals. Adam Oates had a giveaway in the Coyotes' zone and Keith Tkachuk broke out, taking it all the way to the Bruins crease before Gartner knocked in a loose puck at the 7:11 mark.

Seventy–three seconds later, Craig Janney's shot from behind the goal line deflected in front, where MacIver sent it through traffic and past the out–of–position Bill Ranford. Thirty–six seconds after that, Tverdovsky put in a slapshot from the point to make it 3–1. In the final minute of the first period, Gartner broke free over the blue line and went in on Ranford all alone to make it 4–0. Ranford stopped six of 10 shots before Scott Bailey relieved him to start the second.

Bailey stopped all 14 saves, including a sprawling save with nine minutes left that temporarily denied Gartner his 17th career hat trick. Gartner eventually got his third goal on an empty–netter with 40 seconds left on a feed from Tkachuk, who passed up the open net. Tkachuk had three assists.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Sisters of Alpha Chi Omega would like to invite all university women to Open Rush. Oct. 8 at 5:30 for dinner, Oct. 10 at 6:30 for ice skating, and Oct. 16 for a self defense workshop. Meet at 38 Nutting Ave. for all events. Call Patricia @ 549-4802 for more info

Free Couch, and table, coffee table, utility table. Pick up. 256-8175

AUTO FOR SALE

1989 Nissan Pulsar T-roof, 5 speed, nice!!! $2,400/obo 546-3993 Aaron.

1982 Chevy Cavalier Wagon AC, AM-FM, new tires, plus $350.00 O/B/O Call Bruce 256-1215

1984 Honda Accord AT, AC, PW, PL, cruise, 110k, mint Call Jarrod 548-9392

EMPLOYMENT

Marketing Assistant No Experience Necessary. Looking for someone with good interpersonal skills $17.00 per hr. Call 582-0711

Spring Break!! Earn Cash!! Highest Commissions! Lowest Prices! Travel free on only 13 sales! Free Info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

Copacabana A Multicultural After School Program for Grades K-6 is interviewing students (with work study only) for teaching positions Call Jen or Sheena @ 253-5658

FOR RENT

Grad Student looking to share office $75.00/month Call Joan 549-6527

Fridge Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

Word Processor 4 Sale, excellent condition $250.00 OBO, call Lisa 253-9195

Computer for Sale Macintosh LC with color monitor for sale. 10Mb ROM External 100Mb RAM hard drive. Global Village 28.8 Global/FAX external modem System 7.1 software included $700 or B/O Call for more info; more software included. Scott 253-7938

Mac Powerbook 140, 6/80, fax/modem, software and portable printer w/case $1,000 Call Mike 587-0347

2 Dave Matthews Tix Sun Oct 6 Floor seats, Row 27 Best offer Sam 546-3982

KEGulator Keg System with 2 taps $250 or BO Call 256-4201 or 617/354-3768

INSTRUCTION

Bartend with University Bartending 50% student discount, Amherst classes starting soon! Call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX for info

INSTRUCTION

English Language Consultant Available to International Students and Non-English Majors. Will edit papers and dissertations, also tutor ESL. Call Ms. Reed, retired faculty member, for rate schedule and free initial consultation 253-3754

Boxing Lessons w/ Dyta Bumpus Call for brochure 732-8817

MOTORCYCLES

1980 CB 650 $500 or BO 9650 miles - runs well - must sell Call 549-6646

MISCELLANEOUS

New Metabolism Breakthrough Lose 5-100 lbs Guaranteed $25 800 776-9503

Fundraiser- Motivated groups needed to earn $500+ promoting AT&T, Discover, gas and retail cards. Since 1969, we've helped thousands of groups raise the money they need. Call Gina at (800)592-2121 ext 110 Free CD to qualified callers.

PERSONALS

Choices Not Chances Free contraception education Every Mon & Thurs 3-4:30 and Tues & Wed 7-8:30pm in Rm 302 UHS. Men and Women welcome. For more information call Health Education Office 577-5181

PERSONALS

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

ROOM FOR RENT

Puffton Village Available at the end of January 549-6758 ask for Julie

One room available in Amherst, on bus line $265+ a month 256-0535

SERVICES

Computer Problems? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Scream Savers 549-0083

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK! Earn cash! Highest commissions/lowest prices! Travel free on only 13 sales!! Free info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

Killington Ski House $500 per person for the entire season 549-8924

WANTED

Need Extra Phish Tix for Mon Oct 21 show MSG. 253-8858

WANTED

WOMEN NEEDED FOR ANTIOXIDANT STUDY

18-30 year olds You must run 30 or more miles a week or not exercise at all. You will be paid $100 to $250 If interested call Deanna at 253-4084

More Space Availble

Collegian Classifieds = Space Available

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

"Answers to yesterday's puzzle. ALRIGHT!" →

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS

1 Milan's La —
6 Angel's headwear
10 Bell and Kettle
13 Artist's prop
14 Maine campus town
16 Salamander
17 Tense situation for Robertson?
19 Mauna —
20 Printers' stamps
21 Disprove
23 Nice season
24 Grand follower
25 Spanish cats
29 Extinct
32 Related to the ileum
33 Tune
34 Napoleonic victory site
37 "... comin' — carry me home ..."
38 Salt Lake City player
39 Room's partner
40 Semester
41 Mine yield
42 Edition
43 Toady's forte
46 "— Call You Sweetheart"
47 Flee
49 Wright wing
51 Memorable diva Amelita — -Curci
52 Innkeeper
57 Nanty- —, Pa.
58 Rene, the prophet?
61 Part of i.e.
62 Zola
63 Playwright Baraka aka — Jones
64 Stadium shout
65 Santa's burden
66 Attire

DOWN

1 Dry, as wine
2 Serene
3 China setting?
4 Departed
5 Pacino outdoors?
6 Deceived
7 "Judith" composer
8 Hearth load
9 Washington bill
10 Breakfast item for Moore?
11 Run — of: get into trouble
12 Union unit
15 Polloco Hatch
18 Smack
22 Fence in 24 Ermine
25 Talent
26 Lotion ingredient
27 Fabric for Ellen?
28 Porridge
30 Downed
31 "For shame!"
35 Snare or bass
36 — fixe
38 Swiss canton
39 Clinton wallet?
41 Simple sugar
44 Add zest
45 Categories
47 Moth
48 Nacho topping
50 Actress Ullmann
52 TV actor Scott
53 Unctuous
54 Yesterday, in Lima
55 Be concerned
56 Baseball's Slaughter
59 Restriction: Abbr.
60 "— the season to be ..."

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

W	A	I	F	S		I	N	N	S		S	G	T	S
A	G	R	E	E		C	O	A	T		E	R	I	E
S	H	O	R	E	L	E	A	V	E		W	E	N	T
P	A	N	A	M	A		H	A	R	D		A	S	H
			L	E	S	S		L	E	E	K	S
P	A	S		D	E	L	I		S	L	E	E	V	E
A	S	T	O		R	O	N	S		H	E	W	E	R
S	H	O	R	E	S	O	F	T	R	I	P	O	L	I
T	E	R	S	E		P	E	R	E		S	I	A	K
A	R	M	O	R	Y		R	I	L	E		D	R	S
		I	N	I	O	N		P	I	N	E
P	A	N		E	N	O	S		S	I	T	T	E	R
O	R	E	S		O	T	I	N	A	H	S	H	O	R	E
L	I	S	P		E	S	A	U		L	E	T	O	N
E	A	S	Y		R	E	P	S		E	R	O	S	E

By Alfie Micci
© 1996 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21–April 20

It could shape up to be a difficult week. Keep a lid on your temper, especially when dealing with someone who doesn't listen. Screaming at the person won't help. Instead, use cool words and logic to make your point. A family gathering is relating.

TAURUS
April 21–May 21

Look your troubles straight in the eye this week, or you'll risk seeming indecisive. If you're not in a position to solve a big problem, do research until you can find a reliable ally. A significant other poses a difficult question.

GEMINI
May 22–June 21

A friendly gathering could become confrontational—keep your eyes and ears open for signs of trouble. Relax this weekend with a friend you haven't seen for awhile. Your call could be a real spirit-booster.

CANCER
June 22–July 22

Your creativity knows no bounds, especially when it comes to solving problems. Don't limit yourself to the obvious problems, either—go looking for things that aren't readily apparent, and you'll be an unsung hero in the weeks to come.

LEO
July 23–August 23

Brush up on all the background before heading into a difficult situation. You could gain some valuable insight. It's especially important to understand what someone wants. If you don't know that, then how can you give it to him or her?

VIRGO
August 24–September 22

Competition is intense for something you'd like to have. Don't waste time worrying—just do what you can and let it go. Finish up some old business before the weekend. You'll enjoy the weekend more without it hanging over your head.

LIBRA
September 23–October 23

If you're feeling misunderstood, persuade your sweetie to spend a night in with you and discuss it. There could be more going on than meets the eye. An old friend is in need of your compassion and understanding. Give your friend a call.

SCORPIO
October 24–November 22

Practice a skill you're trying to learn—it should flow naturally. Your finances may be in need of some attention. Pay your bills before going shopping so you have a clearer picture of what you should and shouldn't spend. Be generous with compliments to friends.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23–December 21

Lots of things may be on the blink early this week—ask for help from someone who's mechanically inclined. Even better, ask that person to show you how to fix things yourself. You'll feel more self-confident, and you'll save money on future repairs.

CAPRICORN
December 22–January 20

Clear the way for a difficult project or problem that's coming your way. If you have most of the loose ends tied up, you'll be better able to devote your full attention to the things you have to do next. A close friend shares some news.

AQUARIUS
January 21–February 18

A financial setback in the middle of the week could be temporary, or it could be a symptom of a deeper problem. Don't wait to find out—examine all your options and don't be afraid to re-evaluate a situation. Compromise with a sweetheart on your weekend plans.

PISCES
February 19–March 20

Feeling stressed? Be nice to yourself—it doesn't take a lot to renew your energy. A crazy gift elevates a friend's mood. Focus on business concerns toward the end of the week. Now may be the time to take a calculated risk.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Always Wanted One of Those By A. Morse & S. Dumas

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Frumpy the Clown Judd Winick

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

My mom's been raising me all by herself. She doesn't have much money. Sometimes she's so busy. She bought me a whole bunch of new clothes. She left them on my bed on Friday afternoon.

I really appreciated it so I left her a note on the kitchen table before I went camping for the weekend.

" Thanks for everything. Goodbye."

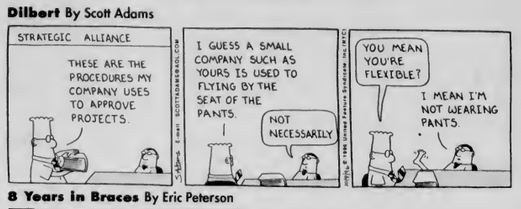
She thought it was a suicide note and went crazy crying all over the neighborhood, and calling everyone on the phone.

Me and my friends thought it was funny.

Sometimes she is so funny.

University® By Frank Cho

Generation X By Chris Lehman



Bastards By Matt & Greg

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

8 Years in Braces By Eric Peterson

Close to Home By John McPherson

How we get on junk mail lists.

DO NOT ENTER

Great pioneers don't hesitate. MDA research pursues every possible avenue.

MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association 1-800-572-1717

Quote of the Morning

"Those with vices are often those without virtues."

–Written on a Desk

Quote of the Afternoon

"Try to restrict our freedoms and we will fight even harder to preserve them."

–Parry Farrell

Today's Staff

Mike Burke
Night Editor

Mark McGrath
Copy Editor

James Stanley
Photo Technician

Josh Sylvester
Production Supervisor

Rob "I want it to" Snow Thang "Animal" Vo
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on a roll	Mandarin Chicken
Hugarian Noodle Bake	Meatloaf
Tacos	Ratatouille
Vegetable Tacos	Veal Parmesan Sandwich

Hampden

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on a roll	Mandarin Chicken
Grilled Chicken	Meatloaf
Tacos

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Tacos	Mandarin Chicken
Ziti/Italian Sausage	Garbanzo Bean &
Vegetable Taco	Rice Provencal
	Ravioli Alfredo

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Tacos	Mandarin Chicken
Brocoli & Cauliflower	Meatloaf
Casserole	Garbanzo Bean &
Vegetable Taco	Rice Provencal

Sports

UMass men's soccer beats GW

Minutemen emerge victorious on late Butler tally

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's soccer team bounced back from Friday's 3–1 loss to Virginia Tech by knocking off George Washington on Sunday. After playing its last three games on the road, the Minutemen (6–3–1) dropped the Colonials 2–1 late in the game, improving their Atlantic 10 record to 3–1–0 on the season.

George Washington (5–6–0, 0–4–0 A–10) lit up the board in the first eight minutes of the game when Tamir Young knocked home a free kick from 22 yards out. The Colonials held the lead until the second half, but Massachusetts pushed through with the win.

MASSACHUSETTS	2
GEO. WASHINGTON	1

"We played very well," UMass coach Sam Koch said. "We moved the ball well, created opportunities, it was really just a matter of time. Soccer is a funny game if you don't put one in. You can dominate an opponent and still not win."

UMass did roll on to win, as its first tally of the game came at the 73–minute mark when sophomore Marc Saad dove in front of the net heading.

"Marc Saad scored a great goal diving and hitting it in with his head. He's a guy that can get goals, but he does so many other things. He'll set other people up as much as he will create chances to finish for himself."

Junior forward Mike Butler nailed the game winner with under three minutes to play when he received a long ball from forward Dave Siljanovski and beat GW keeper Colin Berenhant on a breakaway, finishing the play off with a goal from 15 yards out.

"GW is playing well," Koch said. "Their backs were against the wall, they needed a win. They came out as strong and as focused as any team we have played against so far, and really didn't give us anything.

"Were we perfect? No, but we didn't have any lapses. It was a good step forward from where we've been and a good sign that we are moving in the right direction."

On the other side of the ball, the Minutemen saw continued success in the goal. Sophomore keeper Jeff Jablonski notched four saves on the day earning his third win of the season. A Ludlow native, Jablonski got the nod when UMass' other keeper Tim Pearson injured his shoulder in before the Sept. 27 match against St. Joseph's and has played well between the posts ever since.

"Tim Pearson got hurt and Jeff has stepped in and come through with flying colors," Koch said. I'm very pleased with his play, but not surprised. Pearson has done a very good job as well, but right now Jeff is doing the job and is 100 percent helthy.

According to Koch, Pearson was not back to full strength, but could play if need be.

The Minutemen have been on the road since their Sept. 24 home match with Hartford. UMass has gone 3–1 while away from Amherst.

"We've been on the road every weekend, and it's tiring, physically tiring," Koch said. "I think everybody is happy to be playing at home."

UMass returns to Richard F. Garber Field this weekend where they will face the A–10's two Ohio squads with Dayton on Friday at 3:30 p.m. and Xavier at 1 p.m. on Sunday.

"They are both playing very well. Xavier is very dangerous on offense, but suspect defensively. Dayton is very direct in how they play. They will get the ball forward as fast as they can and knock it in."

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

The Minutemen headed back from the nation's capital with a 2–1 victory in hand after beating the George Washington Colonials, 2–1.

UMass water polo sunk by Navy

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

The Navy Midshipmen continue to cast a regular–season spell over the Massachusetts water polo squad as the Minutemen dropped an 11–7 decision to Navy in the finale of the Brown Invitational this weekend.

This defeat marks the second time this season that the No. 16 Minutemen have fallen to the 12th–ranked Midshipmen and the ninth time in 12 all–time series matches that Navy has come out on top. UMass has still never beaten Navy in the regular season.

The Minutemen (12–3, 6–0 Eastern Water Polo Association) did, however, extend their winning streak to 11 games before losing to Navy by beating up on Princeton and Bucknell, 14–4 and 13–5 respectively.

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Sophomore Carlos Mendez was one of many bench players looking to scrape up some more playing time this weekend as the Minutemen won two of three.

Massachusetts actually held a 4–3 advantage going into the second half, but Navy held the beleaguered Minutemen scoreless in the third period and then exploded for six tallies in the final set.

The Midshipmen outscored UMass 8–3 in the final 14 minutes to account for the deciding margin.

Sophomore Juan Carlos Limardo paced the Minutemen with three scores in the loss as the Midshipmen shut down all of the UMass supporting cast.

Paul Engin managed nine saves against a physically relentless Navy attack.

There was no shutting down of any Minutemen in either of the other two matches this weekend as sophomores Brian Stahl and Gabriel Marrero combined for 14 of UMass' 27 goals.

In the Princeton match, Stahl (five goals) led a contingent of six UMass scorers that abused a weaker, less experienced Tiger defense.

Stahl and Limardo (three goals) led the Minutemen to a 6–0 lead after two periods, and the squad cruised from that point on extending their all–time mark against the Tigers to 7–2.

Freshman goal keeper Richard Huntley played the entire contest notching 11 saves on 15 attempts. Huntley has emerged as Engin's top back–up in the early going this autumn.

Fellow freshmen Bill Hunter

Turn to WATER POLO, page 7

MIDNIGHT MADNESS!

Have you ever pictured yourself jamming the Mullins Center court?

Sign up for the Midnight Madness Hot Shots competition, and you could play in the final game at Midnight Madness on Oct. 14.

Team registration is on the Campus Center Concourse today and tomorrow from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Playoffs move on; Leyland lost to fish

Red Sox still in limbo without Clemens aboard for next season

To wit:

If your name is Fred Hurlbrink, Jr., and you write a weekly baseball column, don't make any predictions about anything.

Yeah, so I picked the Rangers (it was my moral obligation to go against the Spankees). I picked the Indians — who wouldn't? I picked the Padres too. Let's not forget that I picked the Braves to beat the Dodgers.

FRED HURLBRINK JR. Baseball

Those results set up some interesting match–ups in the league championship series pitting AL East rivals, the Orioles and the Spankees against each other, and the powerful Braves against the upstart, overachieving, Cardinals.

The Baltimore Bombers come into this series after knocking nine round trippers in embarrassing the defending AL flag–winners. The Spanks, on the other hand, come in having scraped out a close series with the playoff virgin Rangers in which superior pitching and clutch hitting won out.

Guess who the leading hitter in the playoffs is thus far. No, not Pete Incaviglia. It's Bernie Williams, hitting at a .467 clip in the first four games. Bernie has also hit three dingers and produced seven of New York's 16 series runs.

Too bad he's a Spankee, people could actually grow to like this guy.

The Braves, now that the Indians have been ousted, are clearly the best team left in the playoffs, not that that means anything. I mean, the UMass football team was the better team going into this weekend's 20–point debacle in Rhode Island.

(By the way Luke Meredith, the football team was again outplayed by the marching band which kicked some major booty at an exhibition in Pennsylvania this weekend. A big Booty Schwag goes to the Minuteman Marching Band.)

Anyway, Tony LaRussa's boys dismissed a very strong team in the Padres. Ken (I'm supposed to be an MVP candidate) Caminiti's three errors didn't help San Diego's cause.

Greg Vaughn was about as useful and important in the Padres–Cards series as Jack Kemp has been in Bob Dole's presidential campaign.

Good thing Padres' management threw away a pair of lukewarm prospects to give Vaughn three at–bats in the playoffs.

With Ray Lankford hobbling, the St. Louis bullpen came up big. The ancient Dennis Eckersley dug deep to find some old (and, I mean old) magic and saved all three Cardinal wins. The even older (I think... you count the rings) Rick Honeycutt also pitched in all three games picking up a win in relief.

But, can the Cardinals keep going? I, apparently, am the wrong person to ask.

The Braves are batting a meager .180 as a team so far in the playoffs, but that doesn't matter when you consider the Atlanta pitching staff recorded a collective earned run average of 0.96 in the Divisional playoff.

Both these match–ups should be tightly contested and exciting for the fans.

After the rather messy Roberto Alomar incident, that still dangles — like that last bead of spit — without any real resolution, baseball could use another exciting post season to distract the fans from the endless squabbling that looms incessently over every diamond in the majors.

• Speaking of squabbling and looming (call me Mr. Segway), how 'bout that Red Sox front office.

Boston G.M. Dan Duquette should have been at Jim Leyland's feet, begging him and pleading him to come to Boston and manage the local nine. But somehow, Leyland, one of the most revered skippers in the game, was lured away from Beantown by a team with much less talent and teal uniforms.

Even Leyland's wife favored Boston over any of the other towns in contention for his services. How could Duquette let him get away? Who knows? I still think Duquette's smarter than people give him credit for, but he should have been able to get old Jimmy's John Hancock on the ever–present dotted line.

Well, there are bigger problems in the Hub than the lack of a manager, and I'm not talking about the stench emanating from the Ted Williams tunnel. I'm talking about the fact that the Sox haven't penned Roger Clemens to his four–year deal yet.

Why not sign the Rocket up? Is there a good reason not to? Sure, he's kind of old in baseball years. Sure, his overall velocity has dropped a little. But, we were all alive and coherent enough to see what he did to the American League in the second half of the campaign.

All he's asking for is a little loyalty. The Duquette–run Red Sox seem to be having a problem with defining that word, though.

Dan, I'll give you a short synopsis on the word: sign Clemens!

• Back on the issue of the Splendid Spitter, Alomar was levied a five–game suspension, period. As negligible and disgusting as I think his actions were, the rules are the rules. And the rules state that a regular season suspension be served in the regular season, which right now is over.

This whole incident just highlights the fact that baseball badly needs a commissioner, a strong governing body, not Bud (Gomer Pyle) Selig.

None of this would have ever even taken place if baseball had a commissioner like the late, great Bart Giamatti.

Fred Hurlbrink, Jr. is a Collegian columnist.

COURTESY OF SARAH ROSENTHAL

What's all that racquet?
Sophomore Jackie Braunstein contributed to the UMass effort, but the Minutewomen had a tough time against neighbor Amherst College (see story on page 7)

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 25 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Wednesday, October 9, 1996

Women's Soccer Bruised Up

Senior midfielder Rebecca Myers injured her ACL last weekend during the Minutewomen's road trip (See Sports, page 12).

The way you do the things you do

Tom Hanks makes his directorial and writing debut with That Thing You Do, about a '60s rock band. Check out what the Collegian had to say about Hanks' latest effort (See Arts & Living, page 6).

WORLD

First public Isreali visit by Yasser Arafat

CAESAREA, Israel (AP) — With Palestinian negotiators back at the table after walking off in anger, Yasser Arafat made his first public visit to Israel yesterday and pledged to keep his police from firing again on Israeli soldiers.

Sitting in garden chairs on the terrace of President Ezer Weizman's villa, Arafat and Weizman traded compliments, shook hands for the cameras and agreed there was no alternative to peace. The cozy exchange capped Arafat's transformation in two years from Israel's arch foe to its most important peace partner.

Yesterday's meeting came less than two weeks after deadly gun battles between Israeli and Palestinian security forces in the West Bank and Gaza Strip left 78 people dead.

The cordial luncheon and Arafat's promises contrasted sharply with the deep discord evident to the south, at Israeli-Palestinian peace talks on Israel's border with Gaza.

On Monday, Palestinian negotiators balked at Israeli demands for improved security arrangements for Jewish settlers in the West Bank town of Hebron, where an Israeli troop pullout is long overdue. Only the intervention of U.S. envoy Dennis Ross brought the Palestinians back to the table that night.

NATION

Senatorial candidates focus on environment

BOSTON (AP) — Sen. John Kerry huddled with environmentalists while Gov. William F. Weld got the endorsement of a leading anti-tax activist as their U.S. Senate campaign rolled along yesterday.

Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt also said that while Weld is a moderate environmentalist, he would be forced to adopt more extreme anti-environment policies should he beat Kerry and join the Republican majority in the Senate.

"He tends to speak the language of environmental protection, (but) I think his record indicates a willingness to loosen regulatory restrictions in favor of subsidizing industrial compliance," Babbitt said while appearing with Kerry in Boston. "I think that's the weak spot in his environmental record."

Weld, who has made tax policy a centerpiece of his campaign against Kerry, smiled broadly as Barbara Anderson endorsed him during a ceremony at the Boston Tea Party ship.

"As an unenrolled Independent, I vote for Republican or Democratic candidates based on their attitude toward taxpayers," said Anderson, head of the non-profit group Citizens for Limited Taxation. "Working people in Massachusetts are hurt by John Kerry's tax-and-spend (policies) in Washington."

Anderson's group was instrumental in passing the tax-limiting law Proposition 2 1/2 in the 1980s.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	day	day
HIGH: 60	HIGH: 60	HIGH: 60
LOW: 45	LOW: 50	LOW: 45

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics .....page 11
Crossword .....page 10
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News.....page 3
Sports .....page 12

UM Trustees meet

ELIZABETH BROWN \ COLLEGIAN

UMass Board of Trustees Dan Bogan and Myra Kraft sit in the WMUA studio awaiting the start of the "Trustees Talk" program, yesterday.

By Raghuram Vadarevu
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees met at the WMUA (91.1 FM) studio to discuss the role of fundraising, infrastructure and rising academic standards within the University system, yesterday.

"For a state [Mass.] that has the finest private institutions, it should also have the best public [institutions,]" said Trustee Myra Kraft, wife of New England Patriots owner, Robert Kraft.

The discussion started with Campaign UMass, an effort by the University to raise $125 million privately, which will be matched by the state, for faculty endowments, scholarships, out reach programs and new buildings.

"Speaking on behalf of the SGA, we are definitely involved. Both myself and Maurice Caston, the SGA president, are in the campaign cabinet and have had extensive discussions with the campus leadership to make sure that students are well involved and invested in this process [Campaign UMass,]" said Sean Carter, student trustee representing

Turn to CARTER, page 3

Grad students' bill increased, decrease in GEO financial aid

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

Graduate student employees of the Graduate Employee Organization (GEO) have had $490 withdrawn from their loan, scholarship and grant money and/or $490 added onto their bills by the University of Massachusetts, according to GEO officials.

The Bursar's Office is holding the money as payment for the supplemental health insurance fee.

"All members should know that the $490 is their cash," said GEO President Patrick Crowley. "They deserve it back."

Last year the fee was automatically waived. Yet, according to Crowley, automatically waiving the fee cost the University thousands of dollars, which has caused them not to reimburse students out-right, this year.

"The thousands of dollars came from the University automatically waiving the fee when outside insurance was already paying health care," said UMass Bursar Dan McGuffin.

"This was their mistake, and they are expecting us to just sit here and take it," said Crowley.

In no way did GEO make the changes which resulted in the holding of the $490, he said.

"GEO hasn't changed anything, and we haven't cost anyone any money," said Crowley. "The University screwed up, and as is normal for them, they are trying to shift the blame onto other groups on campus."

"Students who are expecting bills of about $250 are receiving bills of $750," said GEO Vice President Erin Enright.

The decision to hold the money did not arise from the Bursar's office.

"The Bursar was unclear about where in Whitmore (Administration Building) the change came from," said Crowley.

"I am not sure where the plan came from because there were so many players involved," said McGuffin, "I believe that the President's Office, the Chancellor's Office, the Vice Chancellor for Finance, the Graduate School and several others were involved in the decision."

McGuffin did say that the Bursar's Office was certainly involved with the decision in some capacity.

McGuffin explained that the change creates a more time consuming process and has actually caused extra work for his office.

> 'GEO hasn't changed anything, and we haven't cost anyone any money. The University screwed up, and as is the normal for them, they are trying to shift the blame onto other groups on campus.'
> - Patrick Crowley, GEO President

The problem is presently being resolved by the Bursar's Office. GEO members can go to the Bursar tellers and request that the $490 charge be waived from their bill.

The office will then process a check which can either be picked up at the office or mailed to a home address. Checks are processed in about one week.

"We are doing the best we possibly can to alleviate the situation," said McGuffin.

GEO will be holding a general membership meeting on October 15.

"We are hoping to have over 200 people at the meeting," said Enright, "We want to show the University that this is a serious problem."

"I hope that there is a mechanism to stop this problem form happening again next year," said Crowley.

The Bursar said that a plan would have to come through negotiations between GEO, the dean of graduate students and the Chancellor's Office.

The changes to the health care system will be discussed in this year's contract negotiations.

"This is about the University making our lives difficult, and then not having the courage to accept the responsibility to deal with the problem," Crowley said.

Speaker sheds light on Peace Corps

Columbus rally planned

By Beth McCarthy
Collegian Staff

A women wearing only a crown and a grass skirt hangs dead from a tree limb — as depicted on pamphlets being distributed for the anti–Columbus rally this Monday on the Amherst town common.

The inscription next to the picture reads, "The woman in the illustration was the queen of the western half of the island of Hispaniola. Her people were hacked or burned to death by the Spanish in the middle of a banquet they had prepared for the Spanish."

Another pamphlet depicts a native man being burned at the stake while religious figures urge him to convert to Christianity before he died.

These images are being used to raise awareness on behalf of the Indigenous Support Committee (ISC), Maoist Internationalist Movement (MIM) and Revolutionary Anti– Imperialist League (RAIL) to promote a rally in protest of a history of "imperialist genocide" and encourage "national liberation struggles against imperialism," said RAIL member Chris Johnson.

RAIL is a national "underground" organization which has been on the University of Massachusetts campus for two years, according to Johnson.

Robert Raddock, one of the founders of ISC, is specifically looking to "build political practices that support Native American sovereignty in North America."

According to Raddock, in 1975, two unmarked FBI cars pulled into a Sioux reservation in South Dakota. A shoot–out ensued, leaving two FBI agents dead. According to Raddock, Peltier was convicted for the deaths of these two federal officials and has been locked in a prison cell for more than 15 years.

"Basically, the government even admits that they don't know who was responsible, but they wanted to pin it on him," Raddock said.

The second issue that ISC is fighting for is the nuclear waste that has been dumped and desert-

Turn to PELTIER, page 3

By Lisa Chiu
Collegian Staff

Charlie McMartin, an Adult Union Educator from Maryland addressed a small group in the Commonwealth room in the Student Union last night. His topic was "The Peace Corps and U.S. Imperialism." This event is part of Anti–Columbus Week 1996; a week long series of events initiated by the Indigenous Support Committee, the Maoist Internationalist Movement and the Revolutionary Anti– Imperialist League.

McMartin began by describing his personal experience with studying the Peace Corps. Although he never served, many of his friends were involved with the Peace Corps.

Five years ago, McMartin wrote an article in Covert Action Information Bulletin titled. "Peace Corps and Empire." He said that when he wrote the article, it was primarily based on the Peace Corps role as an imperialist power in Latin America.

Today, according to McMartin, the Peace Corps has distinctly changed its role and makeup.

His approach to the discussion was interactive, instead of telling facts and giving a lecture, he said, he wanted to get an animate dialogue going with the audience.

He presented a quote from a most recent Peace Corps pamphlet, "Peace Corps volunteers have helped strengthen the ties between Americans and the people of other countries in a very personal way."

Turn to McMARTIN page 3

HOLLY ANDERSON \ COLLEGIAN STAFF

Charley MacMartin addressed a group about the Peace Corps and U.S. imperialism last night. The workshop took place in the Commonwealth room as part of Anti–Columbus Week.

McMartin asked the audience to say if they strongly disagreed, disagreed, were neutral, agreed or strongly agreed with the statement.

The majority of the audience chose neutrality. One student said the reason why he chose neutral was because he didn't see how the sentence said anything, or made any point.

McMartin –also handed out cards which contained various statements or quotes concerning the Peace Corps. He asked the group to fill in what they felt was an appropriate title to each quote and then to rank each card in order of importance in understanding the role of the Peace Corps.

He said that the Peace Corps is expanding, and is now much more involved in the areas of Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union. He cited the figure that over one–fifth of all Peace Corps volunteers are in Eastern Europe.

According to McMartin, the number of Peace Corps volunteers with business degrees and experience with businesses has expanded dramatically.

Volunteers are now for example, teaching business management in retail shops and hotels.

It is also seeking older volunteers with more management experience. According to McMartin, the average age of volunteers in their early 20s, to

SGA purchases criticized by students & officials

By Lisa Chiu
& Raghuram Vadarevu
Collegian Staff

The Student Government Association (SGA) has come under fire after reports surfaced that they recently spent $5,751.20 on the purchase of 14 chairs ($410.80 per chair) for the Student Union Building office.

The purchase of these chairs, which occurred before the start of the semester, has been criticized by students and SGA officials alike.

"It would seem to me that they have set the wrong priorities, a lot of RSO's (Registered Student Organization) could use the money... their priorities need to be analyzed," said David Nuñez, former SGA president.

"Meanwhile you have people in SGA spending $5,700. We weren't even fighting for that much, we were fighting for less than that, it seems to me they have to straighten out their priorities," said Nunez, referring to the ALANA (Asian American, Latin American, African American, Native American) student takeover of the Campus Activities Office, last spring.

ALANA students occupied the office in the Student Union Building for approximately 12 hours to protest what they believed to be insufficient funds for ALANA RSO's allocated by the SGA Senate.

According to current SGA President Maurice Caston, the funds used to pay for the chairs were made through the executive office's revenue fund, which contains money generated by the SGA through various fundraisers and not through the Student Activities Trust Fund (SATF).

One such fundraiser was the bed linen program conducted this summer, where the SGA enlisted On Campus Marketing to sell bed linens with the University of Massachusetts logo to students this fall. The SGA generated $7,000 through this venture.

The funds in the SGA revenue account rolls back at the end of each fiscal year, meaning that each year money accumulates from previous SGA fundraisers.

According to Secretary of Finance Jeff Coker, the revenue account contains roughly $18,000. He added that this figure changes frequently due to transfers which are constantly in the process of being approved.

Coker said that the chairs must meet California Fire Code 133. He also said that purchasing the chairs are important because of prominent visitors such as members of the Board of Trustees and the Presidents Office. He added that the chairs would support a more professional looking office.

"They probably are not the cheapest chairs we could find to meet the codes, but when people complain that when they are typing, that they cannot sit up straight to see the screen and that they have back problems, this is of major concern," said Coker.

According to Coker, the revenue account of the SGA is usually set aside in the event that the SATF runs out of funds or goes into deficit.

Coker added that the revenue account is also used to fund the internal infrastructure of the SGA office.

The decision to allocate money from the revenue account lies in the executive cabinet which currently does not have a formal process to decide how the funds are spent.

Coker said, "We can do whatever we want with it, there is no formal process to allocate the funds, it's not something the senate would vote on.

"It is not something that needs to be spent by the end of the year, I don't feel that there should be a process, it is spent on an as needed basis," Coker said.

He added that it was up to the judgement of the main leadership of the office like the executive cabinet.

Speaker of the Senate Brian Tirrell said, "I was unsure as to the amount of money they were spending on chairs, I do believe the SGA needs chairs... When this came up I said that they didn't necessarily need to spend that money, but it wasn't my decision, its not my place to tell the office and the people who make those decisions what to do [since] it didn't deal specifically with senate operations."

Others disagree with purchase

Nathan Peyton, associate speaker of the SGA Senate said, "I didn't support it from the beginning, I voiced my opinions early on to the Executive board, but I had absolutely no power to change it... we could have used the money much more wisely.

"I've seen a lot of RSO offices that are a lot worse than that," Peyton added.

"I think that's absolutely ridiculous, but somehow I'm not surprised, since I work in Campus Activities and I see the purchase orders. I've seen some of the things that SGA chooses to spend it's money on," said Savia Barón, a senior communications and English major.

"They have to set a standard in terms of getting their priorities straight... this university is not a vacuum. Outside events are going on which are affecting students and their

Turn to SGA, page 3

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Wednesday, Oct. 9

Auditions — Auditions for a scene from Yentil for Richard Trousdell's directing class, Theater 345, from 4–6 p.m. in FAC room 02. Sign up on the Theater Dept. directing board.

Religious Class — "Tanya Class," a free drop–in class on the Tanya, the Chassidic text of mysticism, 8 p.m. at Chabad House, 30 N. Hadley Rd., Amherst. Free and open to the public. Call 594–4094 for more information.

Forum — A forum for election year alternatives, independent political action and grassroots organizing entitled "Campaign '96: Will Your Vote Count?" will be held at 7 p.m. at the Unitarian Meetinghouse, 121 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. Speakers include Eric Chester, Socialist Party vice–presidential candidate and Jonathan Leavitt, Co-chair, Massachusetts Green Party.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will hold a meeting in the Cape Cod Lounge in the Student Union at 7:30 p.m. New members are always welcome. For more information call Tim at 546–0562.

Meeting — The Distinguished Visitor's Program (DVP) will be having an informational meeting at 7 p.m. in room 801 of the Campus Center. If you are interested in bringing a lecturer to campus, or in helping us prepare for our upcoming lecturer, Nadine Strossen, please attend. For more information, call 545–0046.

Meeting — Interested in learning about deaf culture and practicing American sign language? HANDS club will hold its first general meeting of the fall semester at 7 p.m. in Machmaer W–25. For more information, call the office at 545–1925 or stop by room 306 of the Student Union.

Meeting — The UMass Ski Club will hold its second general meeting and Montreal trip sign–ups at 7 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. All those interested must attend. For more information, call 545–3437.

Meeting — The UMass Italian Club will be holding an organizational meeting at 7 p.m. in 301 Herter Hall. New members are welcome. For more information, call Bill at 585–7806, or e-mail at wacava@student.umass.edu.

Meeting — The Anthropology Undergraduate Collective will hold its next meeting at 7:45 p.m. Meet outside of the Machmer Lounge. Newcomers are encouraged to attend.

Thursday, Oct. 10

Class — Sponsored by the UMass Anamda Marga Yoga Club, this class is an introduction to meditation and yoga practices, taught by Dada Anamtanda, in the Butterfield 2nd floor lounge at 8 p.m.

Lecture — Ifti Nasim, a poet from Pakistan, will read his poetry and discuss his work in a lecture entitled "On Being Gay and Creative in South Asian Culture," at 12:30 p.m. in Campus Center room 803. The event is free, wheelchair accessible and is part of the GLBT Studies Lecture Series, and is co-sponsored by the Stonewall Center. For more information, contact the UMass Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

Meeting — The Asian American Student Association will hold its second general meeting at 7:30 p.m. in Campus Center room 917, Casino Night will be Oct. 19.

Meeting — There will be a Math Club meeting at 7 p.m. in LGRT 1521D. Refreshments will be served and all math majors are welcome.

Speaker — The UMass chapter of Pi Sigma Alpha (the national political science honor society) is proud to host guest speaker Professor Karl Ryavec at 6 p.m. in the 6th floor lounge of Thompson. All political science majors and faculty are welcome to attend, and information about Pi Sigma Alpha will be available to those interested.

Friday, Oct. 11

Lecture — Wolf Eston, from the University of New Mexico, will give a lecture entitled "The 2.06Ga Bushveld Catastrophe, South Africa, and its Possible Global Effects on the Proterophytic–Paleophytic Boundary," in Morrill II South, room 131 at 3:30 p.m. This lecture is a part of the Geosciences Lecture Series.

Opening Reception — The Student Union Art Gallery welcomes Benigna Chilla back to Amherst for an exhibition of her current works. Her art will be on display at the Student Union Art Gallery from Oct. 10–Nov. 1. The reception will be from 5–7 p.m. For more information, call 545–0792.

Notices

Final Exam Schedules — The Fall '96 Final Examination Schedule will be available beginning Friday, October 18. Copies will be delivered to students in residence halls, and will be available to off–campus students in the Registrar's Office (213 Whitmore).

New Organization — Attention Biracial and Multiracial students on campus. A new organization is forming and your help is needed. If interested, call Jordan at 546–3548.

UMass Hang Gliding Club — Learn how to hang glide. The UMass Hang Gliding Club is sponsoring a beginner weekend on Oct. 19–20. Sign up now because space is limited. This is the cheapest way to learn how to fly — no experience necessary. Meetings are on Tuesdays at 6:30; everyone is invited to attend. Check board by SUB for location of meetings and office hours. For more information, call 545–0804 and leave a message.

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley offers rides to students to attend the 10 a.m. service in Amherst. Drivers arrive at the Knowlton and Prince bus stops at 9:45. Please call Mark to confirm, or for other stops, at 253–0361.

Everywoman's Center — Acculturation Group for Latina Women, facilitated by Mari Vicente, Thurs. from 4–6 p.m. Child Sexual Abuse Survivors Support Groups: Group 1 facilitated by Sara Elinoff, Mondays from 7–9 p.m. Group 2 facilitator, day, and time TBA. Coming Out Group For Lesbians, facilitated by Lynne Schachne, Mondays 4–5:30 p.m. Lifting Your Spirits, facilitated by Carla Brennan and Diana Dalendina, Weds. 4–5:30 p.m. Eco–Psychology for Women, facilitated by Carla Brennan, Fridays 10–11:30 a.m. Post Abortion Support Group, facilitated by Peggy Warwick, Wednesdays 5:30–6:30 p.m. Self-Esteem & Assertiveness for Women, facilitated by Carla Brennan, Wednesdays 6:30–8 p.m. Single Mothers Support Group, facilitated by Amy Rosebury, Tuesdays 1–2:30 p.m. Women & Divorce, facilitated by Ali Thompson, Tuesdays 6:30–8 p.m. All groups offered by the Everywoman's Center begin in October, and offer a safe and confidential space. For other groups, call 545–0883.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition meetings are every Tuesday at 7 p.m. in room 306 of the Student Union. For more information, call the ARC office at 5–1925.

Staff Needed — The UMass Index yearbook needs staff in all departments. Editorial positions are available in Photo, Layout, Copy, and Marketing departments. An assistant copy editor and assistant sports editor are also needed. Meetings are held on Wednesdays at 7 p.m., 304 Student Union, or call 545–0848 if interested.

Religious — The Muslim Student Association at the University of Massachusetts invites all Muslims in the Amherst area to weekly Friday prayer from 1– 2 p.m. in the United Asia Cultural Center Room (in the basement of Worcester Dining Common). For more information, call Utama at 256–8482 or Lalli at 253–0874.

Discussion Group — "A Course in Miracles" will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for 10 weeks on Mondays starting in September. For more information, call 253–3795.

Dance — The Northeast American School of Dance Studio in Northampton will hold a dance spree every Friday from 8:30 p.m. to midnight every Friday. People can dance to variety of music in a smoke and alcohol–free environment. All ages welcome. Sliding scale. For more information, call 584–8167.

Work–Study — All undergraduate students who have received federal work–study as part of their financial aid package must be on payroll by Friday, Oct. 11 or have a deferral form filed at the Student Employment office by that same date. If you do not get on payroll or do not defer your work–study, you will only receive your spring portion of your award. Any questions, please call the Student Employment office at 545–1930, or visit our office located in room 243 of Whitmore.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage
Oct. 3
There was a two vehicle accident on University Drive. There was no personal injury. The Amherst Police Department was notified.

Alarm — Fire Trouble
Oct. 3
There was a report of a fire in a trash can in the bus shelter.

Animal Complaint
Oct. 4
There was a report of an injured duck at the Campus Pond.

Annoying Behavior
Oct. 5
A noisy group was quieted on the Southwest Mall.

Assault & Battery/Dangerous Weapon/Armed Robbery
Oct. 6
There was a report of an assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, possibly a knife, which occurred in the area of Hampden Dining Hall. During the assault, a wallet was taken from the victim containing cash and identification. The victim was treated at University Health Services and released.

Assist Citizen
Oct. 5
A parent was assisted in locating son in Field Residence Hall.
A parent was assisted in locating daughter on Montague Road.

Assist Agency
Oct. 5
A crowd was dispersed from University Health Services.
ROTC was assisted in landing a helicopter on Stadium Drive.

Disturbance
Oct. 4
A 55–year–old individual was taken into protective custody on North Pleasant Street.
A minor argument was quelled in Cashin Residence Hall.
Oct. 5
There was a report of a fight in progress on North Pleasant Strett; individuals were dispersed.
There was a report of a fight in progress at the Malcom X Center; individuals were dispersed.

Drug Law Offenses
Oct. 6
Patrick T. Roche, 17, of 106 Longfellow Dr. Longmeadow, was arrested on Commonwealth Avenue for possession of a class D substance.

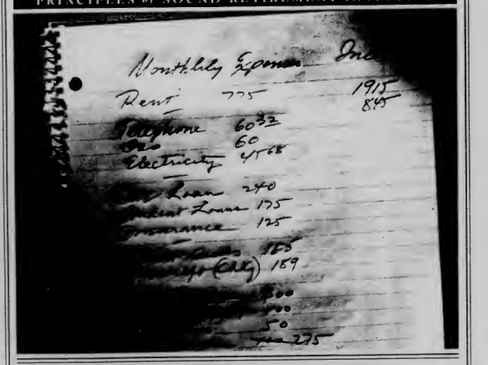
Health/Safety Hazard
Oct. 5
A bicycle was reportedly blocking a fire exit at Brooks Residence Hall.

Larceny
Oct. 3
A wallet was stolen from Boyden Gymnasium.
Oct. 5
A bicycle was reported stolen from Haigis Mall.

Liquor Law Violations
Oct. 4
Alcohol confiscated in Pierpont Residence Hall was destroyed.
Oct. 6
David D. Romanko, 17, of 91 Lincoln Rd., Longmeadow, was arrested on Commonwealth Avenue for underage possession of alcohol.

Lost/Found Property
Oct. 5
A backpack found was turned into the police; the owner was contacted.

Noise Complaint
Oct. 3
There was a report of bongos playing in Clark Memorial Garden.



Suspicious Vehicle
Oct. 3
Vehicles were damaged in parking lot 22.
Oct. 4
A locked vehicle running with no one around was reported in parking lot 12.
Oct. 5
An individual was found sleeping in a vehicle in parking lot 22.
Oct. 6
Edward H. Negoshian Jr., 19, of 12 Haven Rd, Medfield, was arrested on University Drive for operating under the influence of alcohol.

Suspicious Person/Activity
Oct. 3
A caller was upset by offensive language of an individual with a sign board at the Campus Pond.
A second report of an individual yelling with a sign board was made; officer to monitor the situation.
Oct. 4
Unauthorized individuals were dispersed from the Old Chapel.
An individual from Patterson Residence Hall was taken into protective custody.
Oct. 5
An individual discharged a fire extinguisher in Van Meter Residence Hall.
A couch was thrown off a balcony from Field Residence Hall.
Windows were smashed and screens damaged in Pierpont Residence Hall.
An individual bothering a security receptionist in Van Meter Residence Hall was spoken to.
Oct. 6
Individuals were reportedly climbing the water tower on Windmill Lane.
Individuals were reported attempting to gain entry to the Munson Hall Annex.

Vandalism
Oct. 3
Heavy duty screens were damaged in Van Meter Residence Hall.
Graffiti was found in a stairwell in Washington Residence Hall.
Oct. 4
A vending machine was damaged in Pierpont Residence Hall.
Oct. 5
A rock was thrown through a window in Grayson Residence Hall.
A window was broken in Thoreau Residence Hall.
Two vehicles were vandalized in parking lot 21.
The rear window of a vehicle in parking lot 22 was smashed.

Massachusetts Daily C
...e in two flavors: F
ELECTRIC !!
...w.umass.edu/rso

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

IRONICALLY, THE TIME TO START SAVING FOR RETIREMENT IS WHEN IT LOOKS LIKE YOU CAN LEAST AFFORD IT.

Can't afford to save for retirement? The truth is, you can't afford not to. Not when you realize that your retirement can last 20 to 30 years or more. You'll want to live at least as comfortably then as you do now. And that takes planning.

By starting to save now, you can take advantage of tax deferral and give your money time to compound and grow. Consider this: Set aside just $100 each month beginning at age 30 and you can accumulate over $172,109* by the time you reach age 65. But wait ten years and you'll have to budget $239 each month to reach the same goal.

Even if you're not counting the years to retirement, you can count on TIAA-CREF to help you build the future you deserve – with flexible retirement and tax-deferred annuity plans, a diverse portfolio of investment choices, and a record of personal service that spans 75 years.

Over 1.8 million people in education and research put TIAA-CREF at the top of their list for retirement planning. Why not join them?

Call today and learn how simple it is to build a secure tomorrow when you have time and TIAA-CREF working on your side.

Start planning your future. Call our Enrollment Hotline at 1 800 842-2888.

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.®

*Assuming an interest rate of 7% (set by TIAA Retirement Annuities. This rate is used solely to show the power and effect of compounding. Lower or higher rates would produce very different results. CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services.

© 1996 Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association of College Retirement Equities Fund, 730 Third Avenue, New York, NY

MORGAN STANLEY

Information Technology Division
Graduate Associate Position

We are seeking the best UMASS students from all majors to bring their talents to technology projects of worldwide scope. Benefit from a dynamic, highly creative environment which uses the most advanced technology available anywhere. Some of the technologies you will work with include:

Parallel Processing • Object-Oriented Database/Languages
GUI Development • Real-Time Data Distribution
Document Architectures • Distributed Computing
Genetic Algorithms • Mainframe Systems
State-Of-The-Art Trades Processing Systems

You are cordially invited to attend our presentation at

7:00p.m.
October 17th
Room 903, Campus Center

Both December and May graduates will be considered.
Job descriptions available at Mather Career Center.
Morgan Stanley contact:
Jean Ellen Murphy (212) 762-2559
Please email your resume to murphyje@ms.com
as soon as possible.

Morgan Stanley Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

■ McMartin

continued from page 1

29.

The third area of expansion according to McMartin is that of the private sector. The Peace Corps is building more links between itself and multinational corporations such as Levis

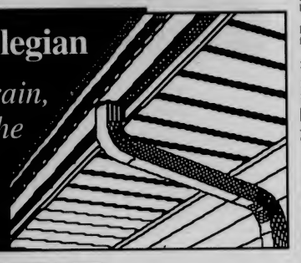
He concluded that even with its different areas of expansion, the Peace Corps does continue with its same problem and contradiction.

It is still a part of U.S. foreign policy; the experience of people's relation with the Peace Corps volunteers and vice versa are shaped dramatically by American foreign policy.

He suggested challenging Peace Corps recruiters just as one might challenge an armed forces recruiter, perhaps distributing informational pamphlets about the Corps and what it does.

■ SGA

continued from page 1



lives," said Méndez, senior management studies and HRTA major.

"The total cost for all of our furniture probably doesn't come to $5,700. To judge from our humble surroundings here, it sounds like a lot of money but we don't go out to buy new office equipment, so its hard to judge if that's a lot of money," said Glenn Siegel, advisor to WMUA.

"I'm sure that the SGA understands the critical need that exists throughout the RSO and Agencies," Siegel said.

"I think its interesting that spikes are coming through the chairs of my office, but I guess they need it more that we do because they're usually sitting on their asses anyway," said Brad Davidson, general manager for WMUA.

The Daily Collegian
if the news is rain, then we're the gutter of your life.

U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
North Amherst Motors
78 Sunderland Rd.
North Amherst, MA
549-RENT

Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday AM - Starting at $59.95
• Cars • Mini Vans
• Trucks
• Cargo Vans
• 15 Passenger Vans
• Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older
• Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
(One Mile from UMass bus route)

Green Street Café
NORTHAMPTON

FADO
Traditional Portugese Songs

Alda Fontes
Fadista

Juan Carlos Arean
Guitar

Every Thursday at 8:30 p.m.

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $179 $341
PARIS $224 $427
ROME $288 $549
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA $235 $446
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs, security and war taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave., NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

MIDNIGHT MADNESS
OCTOBER 14, 1996 AT 10:30 PM
WILLIAM D. MULLINS CENTER

TICKETS FOR THE 1996 UMASS MIDNIGHT MADNESS CAN BE PICKED UP BEGINING OCTOBER 9TH AT THE CURRY HICKS CAGE BOX OFFICE. THERE WILL BE A LIMIT OF FOUR (4) TICKETS FOR MEMBERS OF THE GENERAL PUBLIC AND TWO (2) PER STUDENT.

ATHLETIC TICKET OFFICE HOURS ARE 8:30 AM - 5:00 PM

UM Ski Club holding second meeting to discuss future events

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

The Ski Club will hold its second general information meeting tonight at 7 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

Established in 1921, the Ski Club is the oldest and largest Registered Student Organization at the University of Massachusetts.

The Ski Club consists of about 600 members; 40 percent of which are snow boarders, 60 percent are skiers. The annual membership fee is $15. After the ski sale in November the price will increase to $20.

The membership costs allows skiers to get their skis tuned and waxed, as well as allowing them to participate in discounted, club sponsored excursions.

Club members want interested students to know that being an experienced skier is not a prerequisite to becoming a member.

"We are not all awesome skiers," said Scott Conlin, last year's president, "We like to get together and have fun, it doesn't matter if you can ski well or not," he said.

Twenty–five trips are sponsored over the course of a year.

There are several day trips being planned to Sugarbush, Mount Snow and Stowe ski resorts. Every Wednesday night, the club will visit nearby Mount Tom for $10.

On Dec. 14, the Ski club will be heading to Vermont for a instructional oriented ski weekend.

There are many trips being planned for Spring Break. Members of the club will be spending their vacation in either Jackson Hole, Wy. for $675, Killington ,Vt. for $220, Jamaica for $499 or Cancun, Mexico for $399. Airfare is included in all prices.

Over winter break, a New Years trip to Montreal is planned, in addition to a week at Killington.

"We are just a bunch of fun and crazy people," said Arik Colbath, President of the Ski Club.

A weekend trip to Killington for 2 days and one night will be held on Nov. 22–24. The price is $115.

Although rental prices are not included in these prices, Conlin said that they can get special deals on rentals — usually better than group rates.

The Club does not rent skis directly.

A main event for the club is the annual ski sale, which will be held from Nov. 15–17, in the Student Union Ballroom.

Vendors from Western Massachusetts, Ski Market, Competitive Edge and Ski–inn will be selling their merchandise. Colbath said that merchandise will be sold at up to 70 percent off regular prices.

For more information call the UMass Ski Club at 545–3437 or stop by and visit their office at 434 Student Union Building.

■ Peltier

continued from page 1

ed on Native– American reservations, said Raddock. Raddock also expressed that ISC has a major problem with Native Americans land rights, which they claim are still being violated today.

While RAIL supports the autonomy of the Native Americans, it looks to the bigger picture.

Johnson would like to help "the 500 indigenous people take back their own lands and lives."

The anti–Columbus week is not necessarily against Columbus, or even the day honored to him, but it is a movement against "imperialism today and national oppression," both Johnson and Raddock agreed.

Raddock anticipates live music and inspirational speeches for Monday.

■ Carter

continued from page 1

UMass.

According to Trustee Jim Arcieu of UMass Dartmouth, the Dartmouth campus has been recently outfitted with three new computer centers and a $10 million Marine Science Center located in New Bedford, Mass.

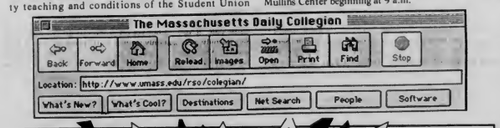
"The students are starting to understand on our campus that the system does work and if you put your mind to something and work with the system as a partnership, things can get accomplished," said Arcieu, referring to the new additions to the Dartmouth campus.

The feeling of a partnership between students and administrations was echoed by many of the trustees.

"We advocate on behalf of students... it's a comfortable place to be on the Board and it gives you a greater knowledge of what's going on, so when you are dealing with administration you have an idea of the issues and you don't always have to butt heads, but work together to make things happen," Carter said.

According to Carter, many students have expressed concern in areas of academic life such as advising, quality teaching and conditions of the Student Union Building.

"If there is a way to gain more recognition and more appreciation for their [student organizations] services and the benefits that the UMass community derives from their participation, I think that it would be really wonderful and that is something that we hope to work on with the administration this year," Carter said.



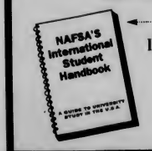
He added that a new Student Union will only happen if the administration shows more of a commitment to students by supporting a new Student Union plan so students can operate more freely.

"We instructed the campus [administration] to get back to us on the number of minority students affected," Karam said, citing that the incoming class to the University was made up of 19 percent people of color.

According to Karam, only about 500 students of color will be affected by the new standards that should go into effect next year.

The discussion was hosted by Alexandra Cruz, the news director of WMUA and a Collegian representative.

There will be a Board of Trustees meeting today in the Mullins Center beginning at 9 a.m.



© 1996 AT&T

Managing money in the USA

Sure, it's complicated. That's why every International Student needs this.

It's free when you sign with AT&T. Call 1 800 533-6198.

AT&T

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Morse Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor Josh Sylvester Editorial Production Manager
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor Sean Horgan Systems Manager
Mark McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Michael Elliott News Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Reconsidering Columbus

Next Monday, the UMass community, and others all around the state will be celebrating Columbus Day. While early October is a convenient time for a holiday, we have begun to wonder what makes a person worthy of having a holiday named after them.

Christopher Columbus, while he may have been a wonderful sailor and a pioneer was no great man. Inspired to load across the ocean for riches and fame, Columbus was responsible for the destruction of a number of cultures. It is documented that he wiped out the native population of Hispanola, the island which contains present-day Haiti and the Dominican Republic, through murder, slavery, wars and disease. The final death toll is estimated at 3 million people. Is this man deserving of his own holiday?

Part of the ALANA Agreements of 1992 relating to Columbus Day said that "The campus is willing to arrange for teach-ins on the day which Massachusetts calls Columbus Day, and to re-name that day appropriately as far as campus usage is concerned. It will remain a state holiday for those employees who wish to use it that way."

Four years later, we are still receiving a long weekend for the celebration of Columbus Day. At a University which is considered open to new ideas and which has been known to act as a spearhead to social reform, such slow action is contemptible.

While the Office of Human Relations has attempted to coordinate teach-ins and discussions have been held between Graduate Student Senate officers, Student Government Association officers and Native American students, no consensus has been reached regarding the holiday.

It's time the members of the University community stop dragging their feet on the issue of Columbus Day and give the holiday a more suitable name.

Let's get to know them

Republocrats, and every other strain of politically- interested and motivated anybodies, unite and mobilize.

A personal component of this year's intensive Massachusetts senatorial campaign, which is slowly becoming more bitter as it approaches full-circle, has the opportunity to visit us here, on campus, at the University of Massachusetts.

According to polls, incumbent Sen. John Forbes Kerry (D- Mass.), who is on the prowl for his third successive term, and his challenger, Gov. William Floyd Weld (quota- counters beware: both candidates are uppity white Anglos), are presently in a dead heat as far as the voters' electoral preferences go.

Both camps concur that the pivotal factor (read: the demographic segment who will elect either of the two as Senator of the Commonwealth this November) is undecided college students who will provide the desperately needed sway.

Contingent upon how many tickets are sold for this Thursday night's Goo-Goo Dolls show at the Curry Hicks Cage, Sen. Kerry would like (perhaps a better word during this election year may be "love") to bring his song, spiel and dance to us, the deciding factor.

Typical politician fulfilling his role by following the bouncing ball, or any other trendy wave that will benefit no one other than himself. It is in a politician's nature to tailor and target a message so that it will turn into votes.

Disclaimer: Whether or not it has become clear this is hardly — hardly — an endorsement of the incumbent Senator or, for that matter, his challenger.

This is an attempt to increase campus-wide awareness and efforts so that a cordial invitation is extended to Sen. Kerry, a candidate presently facing his toughest re-election bid yet.

Do we really — ponder this possibility — do we honestly want to help create a figure who stands great chance to parallel the longevity of senior Sen. Edward Moore Kennedy?

The key words to remember and strongly consider are term limits, status-quo and career politician.

Please, help bring Sen. Kerry and his message to campus, so we can put his ideas to the test and see if they, and he, sink or float.

Otherwise, the junior Senator is widely believed to have this area already gift-wrapped, and topped with a pretty bow.

Henry J. Brier

According to Paul R. Ferro, treasurer of the UMass Republican Club, the Commonwealth is largely Democratic, with a three-to-one ratio of registered voters. Hampshire County is even more disproportional, touting a seven to one ratio. And, students here on campus, who have registered to vote roughly break-down as 20 percent Democrat, 10 percent Republican and two percent Libertarian.

It does not take a math, statistics or accounting major to conclude that the overwhelming majority of students who are registered to vote are unenrolled. Chances are that they perhaps have not aligned themselves with the Revolutionary Maoists, whoever these people may be, and for whatever beneath the blue sky they may stand.

Keep in mind also that the aforementioned statistics represent those who have troubled themselves and even bothered to register so that they can vote.

"There are a lot of apathetic students at UMass," said Jay L. Bragg, a UMass Democratic Club organizer. "We want people to get involved and send a strong message to Boston."

A message to Boston, from where Gov. Weld calls the shots and orders decrees across and throughout the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Rumors abound that the governor is not even bothering, not even wasting his precious time by campaigning in this immediate area, as it holds little-to-no potential.

A Harvard boy presently surrounded by the multitude of prestigious Boston schools, Gov. Weld's affinity for consistently chopping our budget has brought him notoriety. However, as a moderate Republican who holds and implements liberal takes on social issues, the charismatic governor knows how to focus attention upon himself.

From the widely publicized races he runs while fully-clothed in a suit and tie to his swimming escapade shortly after signing environmental legislation and his singing to journalists at press conferences, Gov. Weld poses a grave threat to Sen. Kerry.

So, buy the readily-available tickets abounding on campus, and help bring real-life politics to our front yard.

Otherwise, the Pied Piper will lead, and the blindly-led will follow.

Henry J. Brier is a Collegian columnist.

Elevator etiquette

I have a problem with this school. "Sure," you say, "don't we all?" My problem isn't the outrageously high price for a year's worth of education, and it's not the schwagg they serve us every meal. It's not even the fact that they're digging up the pond for some reason and the poor ducklings have to bury their little bottoms in the sludge, although that does bother me. Quite a bit, in fact. No, my problem is complex in its simplicity, much like myself. In a word, elevators.

> "Consider this a public service message if you will. If you push the buttons repeatedly the elevator will not come any faster! I cannot stress this enough."
>
> Patti Lynott

Sure, they're a great invention, because I know I wouldn't want to drag my lazy behind up 22 flights of stairs, but a problem nevertheless. And it's not the elevators themselves that are the only problem, but the people who use them.

Okay, first things first. The only cool elevators on this campus are the ones in the library. That is because they could double for a ride at Great Adventure. Ever since I came to school here, I've tried taking the elevator up as far as I could go, but some jerko has always had to get on and ruin my fun. Ahem. But seriously folks, the rest of the elevators in a word... suck. Let's take the tower elevators for example. And the concept of the Supervator.

For all those less enlightened, tower elevators work like this. There are three of them. Only one, the "Supervator" goes to every floor. To save time? I really do not understand the purpose of the Supervator. Why can't all the elevators go to every floor? Who knows (If anyone does know, please feel free to inform me). Oh well. The other two stop at random floors. It's not like they stop at every other floor, or only the prime number floors, just random floors. It's some mystic pattern that only the Chancellor knows. Or does he? (If anyone knows the reason, please enlighten me.)

The elevators in the towers, super or not are really not that bad, I suppose ... compared to licking an electric socket. They're usually very dirty and there are puddles of various ... liquids in the corners at any given day. Not to mention other things. The other day, some moron decided to spread Vaseline all over the buttons. Yeah, thanks.

Oh, one more thing about the elevators themselves: if you get stuck in one and are hovering ten floors above the ground while the elevator is shaking violently and you're crying for your mommy, don't bother pressing the alarm button. It doesn't work.

For part two of my problem I address you, the campus community. Consider this a public service message if you will. If you push the buttons repeatedly the elevator will not come any faster! I cannot stress this enough. Day after day I see people who will stand in front of the elevator and push the button over and over ... like chimps! You may think that your touch will speed up the elevator somehow, but really it won't. You're no more special than the rest of us mortals, so please limit your button pushing to one time.

Elevators can be fun, if used safely and smartly. So if you're in an elevator and feel this sudden urgent impulse to be a jerk, or punch the up button thirty thousand times, don't, because if I am in the area, I will be forced to beat the crap out of you. Thanks.

Patti Lynott is a UMass student.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Between two worlds

Seema Gangatirkar

"Go back to your homeland."

Even now, two months after someone said those words to me, they still burn and they still hurt.

"Go back to your homeland."

I had never seen the woman who said those words to me before and I doubt I ever will again. Those 60 seconds when she yelled at me in the parking lot behind our local library are still painfully etched in my memory. Today, I still remember what she was wearing, the color of her car and the baby on her hip.

When I think about that sentence — those few words that shattered me in a single moment — the tears still form in my eyes, the lump still rises in my throat.

For my 20 years on this planet, I have never considered that I wasn't already home. You see, my parents immigrated here from India almost 30 years ago. I was born in this country and I've always considered myself an "American." I grew up in a state that is almost completely white and until the incident in the parking lot, had never encountered any sort of racism before in my life. And to be totally truthful, I didn't even know or understand what racism was. If I hadn't spent three years in Germany, going to school on a United States military base, I probably would have never seen another person of color who wasn't Indian.

Ironically, in an all white environment, I didn't feel that I didn't belong in this town or even this country. I never felt out of place and that I was where I was supposed to be.

Now this woman was challenging me as to where I called home. After all, if I didn't belong here, where did I belong? Should I consider India my home, even though I can count on one hand how many times I've been there and that my knowledge about the country is so little as to be almost shameful?

When I came to UMass, I was ready to embrace the diversity on campus. I was truly excited to meet people from all over the United States, from all over the world. I hoped to have friends of all backgrounds, ethnicities and otherwise. I was hoping maybe that I could make friends with other Indians and learn what I had missed all these years living out in the middle of nowhere.

I soon learned that I didn't fit in with the Indians on campus. They knew so much more than me, knew the current music, movies, fashion and I knew absolutely nothing. Pretty soon, I found myself reverting back to the same type of friends I had all my life — friends who happened to be white.

For years, I have smiled patiently at the "Where are you from? No, really, where are you from?" questions. I tried to be graceful about questions concerning sacred cows and holy rivers, trying to tell myself that people wanted to learn — not make fun of my culture.

So now I find myself caught between two worlds, neither of which I understand very well anymore. And you know, before the confrontation in the parking lot, I thought I knew who I was and where I belonged. Now I no longer know.

What I do know now is that it doesn't matter that I was born here or that I've been raised to be so "American," I can hardly find common ground with other Indians. Unlike white people, I have to prove I'm an American citizen — something that no one should have to do.

I'm not bitter about this cruel epiphany. I've forgiven the woman in the parking lot — virtually hours after the incident. After all she has more problems than my little identity crisis. But I haven't forgotten the episode and I don't think I ever will.

By the way, to all those people who have complimented me on how well I speak English, thanks. So do you.

Seema Gangarirkar is a Collegian columnist.

The return of Cal

Martin F. Jones

"I'll be back."

— Arnold Schwarzenegger in The Terminator

Hello true believers. It's me again. Your friendly neighborhood columnist with yet another earth-shattering revelation about incredible events that are coming our way. Today I'm going to convince all of you, and without a shred of a doubt, that a miracle will be taking place in Massachusetts. Yes, the real "Massachusetts miracle." Former head coach John Calipari is coming back to University of Massachusetts to coach right here at the Mullins center just like old times restored!

Many of you are assuming that I'm talking about Sunday's NBA exhibition game between the New Jersey Nets and the Washington Bullets. Well, I am. But that's not all. The fact is, Calipari is actually coming back to coach the UMass Minutemen, and may very likely deliver us our first-ever national championship on March 31, 1997.

Now, I know what you're thinking. Here he goes again. Bill Weld is still running for president, Michael Jackson is the Messiah and next year the world will learn that Adolph Hitler is still alive.

Alright, I'll be serious for a change. But first, let's take a trip through memory lane to fully understand the man behind the mouth, the one who refuses to lose, the coach who has mastered all trades and does gravitate towards all cameras, John Calipari, better known as Coach Cal.

In his new book Refuse to Lose, Calipari talks candidly about his childhood, adolescence, college years and finally his phenomenal career as a brilliant, rising star in the world of college basketball. After reading this very readable book, you will know that this man was indeed put on this Earth by a divine force to coach the best college ball UMass has ever seen, and perhaps even in the history of the sport.

So now what? Calipari abruptly abandoned "his baby" over the summer in the midst of a scandal involving illegal gifts accepted by the 1996 consensus Player of the Year, UMass basketball star-supreme, Marcus Camby. Calipari is now receiving $15 million over the next five years to coach the New Jersey Nets. Camby is has now signed a three year contract with the Toronto Raptors worth nearly $10 million. All this after making their first-ever Final Four appearance, a first for UMass as well. It's a shame that they were not able to stick around for one more season. They could have made sports history.

As it stands, we will find out in the coming weeks what, if any, penalties will be impuned upon UMass in the wake of the Camby scandal. There was a clear violation of the NCAA rules, and in a worst-case scenario, UMass would actually have to forfeit all of the games in which Camby played after accepting the gifts, including those of the Final Four.

And then what? Would Camby also be stripped of his Player of the Year title? Probably so. But no matter. Camby and Calipari will both be sitting pretty in Toronto and New Jersey receiving multi-million dollar salaries from the National Basketball Association.

I'm sure you can imagine the outrage. "Coach Cal and Marcus Camby sold us out!" Many former Camby and Calipari devotees will scream bloody murder as poor ol' Bruiser is left holding the bag.

But hold on here hoop fans, there is yet a glimmer of hope, as a silver lining may yet come out of this unfortunate scenario. Let's all turn on our imagination caps and see if we can envision a better outcome than this.

OK, check this out. Determined to redeem his name and former employer in the wake of the Camby scandal, I see Calipari returning to UMass in time to coach in the Great Eight game against Georgetown. The entire sports world is ecstatic! Later on, I see Marcus Camby managing to slide by NBA and NCAA rules to return to UMass and redeem his name as well. By the spring, the Big C returns to UMass to finish his senior year, and leads the Minutemen to their sixth A-10 Championship and NCAA tournament. Camby and Calipari are heros again and are firmly forgiven for their untimely departure. Finally, they both lead UMass to its first-ever National Championship and sports history is made!

So there you have it folks. I can see Coach Cal and Marcus Camby coming back to Amherst. Believe it. I can see it crystal clear, and soon, you will see it too.

Martin F. Jones is a Collegian columnist.

Editorial Policy

The Editorial/Opinion page welcomes columns, letters and cartoons from UMass and the rest of the Five-College Area.

Letters and columns must be typed and double spaced, with the writer's name, local address and phone number attached. This information is subject to verification prior to publication.

Anonymous submissions will not be printed.

The editorial staff reserves the right to edit letters and columns for grammar, clarity and length.

Any submission that is requested to be left unedited will not be considered for publication.

Submissions become the property of the Collegian and will not be returned.

The Editorial staff is not required to print all submitted material.

Letters should be no longer than 450 words and columns should be about 70 typed lines.

Submissions should be sent to the Editorial Desk, c/o Mark McGrath, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst, MA 01003.

A reporter's power

Erica Matthews

I was a sophomore in high school, introverted, a mess. I'd just dropped out of ballet and cross-country running because of a knee injury. My mother knew I needed something. Knowing that I'd always loved to write, she suggested I join the school newspaper.

After some nudging, I finally went to a meeting. I'd felt reluctant after feeling out of place at other school clubs. But this one was different. I felt it from the minute I walked in the door. It was mostly because of the advisor, a giant of a man with friendly, inviting eyes and a surprisingly soft- spoken demeanor. His name was Mr. Walenski, but most of his students called him Bubba.

His classroom was equally unique. It certainly didn't bear the trappings of the standard English room: Shakespeare posters, quotes by Walt Whitman, etc. Bubba's walls were covered with posters of Pete Townsend, the Doors and prom pictures his students gave him.

The other students at the newspaper meeting were all seniors, veterans of the school's Perspectives paper. They had a rapport with Bubba. Everyone was friendly and at ease. They joked with him more like he was their friend than their teacher, and he gave it right back to them. When they met me, they joked about how I'd be next year's editor by default.

And I was. I was editor of my high school newspaper until graduation, which is partially due to Bubba. I'd always had an amazing desire to write, but he taught me how to channel it into something tangible. Something I could feel a sense of accomplishment about. What I liked most about him was his willingness to let the students be in control. He was there to give us help if we needed it, but to let us steer the wheel the rest of the time. Most teachers I'd met didn't trust high school students enough to do that. But again, Bubba was different.

After graduation, I went on to a local college and began interning at a community newspaper. As I gained experience, Bubba was always half on my mind. I never forgot who gave me my start, who taught me to trust my decisions, who made me love writing even more. I wasn't going to forget.

It happened a couple years later, just as I was finishing up my internship and preparing to head off to UMass. My mother walked into the house one night in a daze:

"You'll never guess what teacher at the high school got caught making porn movies," she said.

I began listing off all the teachers I'd thought were a little weird. Just as I was starting to name the people in the audiovisual department, my mother interrupted me.

"It was Mr. Walenski," she said.

The words echoed in my head, but my mind rejected them. It was too ironic. He was one of the most down-to-earth, respectable teachers I'd ever met. He had a family. He probably watched football on Sundays, looked forward to having grandkids and burned a souffle every now and then. The point is, this wasn't him.

We turned on the television to see newscast after newscast report on a Dennis-Yarmouth High School teacher who had produced and appeared in several adult videos. Words like "lewd" and "pornographic" were linked to his name. Within days he became less of a person and more of a story. Someone that people gawked at and flippantly joked about. Someone reporters fed on.

I watched and read everything with a removed sense of disbelief. Ironically, it was the newspaper I was interning at that covered the story extensively. My allegiance was split between the person who'd introduced me to journalism and the people who were in that world.

I watched as a usually controlled newsroom lost composure over a story that spelled newspaper sales and nationwide attention. The reporters giggled like schoolgirls when the tabloids started courting them. One photographer left the office one day shouting, "I'm going to get a photo of this guy. I want to see what this clown looks like." Another one came back in huff, announcing what happens when a photographer gets too eager.

He went to Bubba's house to get a photo and ended up using a roll of film on another photographer who was after the same shot.

"I saw this guy in the driveway and thought, man, I've hit paydirt," he said. "He just stood there glaring at me until finally he goes, 'Don't you know who I am?'"

Back in the newsroom, they all laughed at the clash of egos.

Eventually, I'd had enough. I felt that since I was in a position to defend Bubba, I'd say something on his behalf. But then I saw how the reporters angled their questions to me. When I was asked if he ever solicited a student, I just kept repeating, "No, never." I was afraid that if I expanded on anything it would be twisted.

That's when I realized something. I didn't trust journalists, as much as I wanted to be one. They wanted to break a story, to get the dirt, to create a stir. Hard news reporting, getting just the facts, had become secondary. I respected most of the journalists at the newspaper, but a few of them displayed the tabloid sleaze I found to be the antithesis of everything I pictured real journalism to be.

Bubba was fired, and there was talk of pulling his Massachusetts teaching license. It was a lot of hearsay I'll never fully believe. Not because I'm so enamored with the guy, but because I've seen how people overreact, exaggerate, and most of all, twist the truth. I heard people on the radio and on TV describe him as a moron, a sicko and a pervert. But did they know — did they want to know — that he truly cared about his students? They loved him not just because he was a good guy, but because he spoke to them on their level and with respect. He acknowledged them as individuals who could think, feel, make mistakes and learn from them.

As everything in the news began to die down, my mother asked me if I was disappointed in him.

It took me a minute to fish for the words.

"I guess I am," I said. "I don't understand how a teacher who had so much to offer could put it in jeopardy like that. How could he be so careless?"

A few days later, I rephrased things a bit.

"I don't agree with what he did," I said, "but I'll always respect him as a teacher. Whatever he did doesn't take away from what he gave me."

I doubt I'll ever see Bubba again. Maybe he's ice fishing in some Alaskan town. Or maybe he's selling soft-serve where the temperature never dips below 80 degrees. Most likely, he's just trying to put his life back together miles away from here. Through him I learned many things — unfortunately one of them was how irresponsible journalism can hurt people. It can act like a spineless gossip, taking a partial truth and twisting it for sensationalism purposes. Or it can be so subtle — like omitting a relevant fact, or just not checking the facts. I'm in awe of journalism because it has the power to do such good, but it can also do the very opposite. It all depends on the ethics of the reporter. I'll remember that.

Erica Mathews is a UMass student.

Whatever works

Jeremy Hurewitz

I was talking to my friend Eric the other night. He graduated last year and is now a stockbroker in Manhattan seeking money and power like a shark in bloody water. He told me about his mentor, Lenny, who is a former University of Connecticut basketball player now making six figures and who can supposedly charm any woman.

"His new thing is eating."

"Huh?"

"The other day we were walking down Broadway and he turned around, looked at me, and said 'Hold on minute!' He dashed up to this gorgeous woman in a mini-skirt and said, 'Excuse me do I have mayonnaise on my face?' 'No ... why are you asking ME?' 'Because I wouldn't want to propose to you with mayo on my cheek.' She laughed and right after he ran back with her phone number."

"That's so cheesy!"

"Did it work?"

"Yeah."

"So?"

"I guess you're right. All right, tell me more of Casanova's lines."

"Well, it's all about charisma, self-confidence. I've seen him walk into a bar and say 'Does my hair look all right?' and he has them off-guard and laughing and soon he has their phone numbers or better. Oh, here's a good one! He saw a good-looking girl with an idiot one night in a bar in West Village and waited until the guy went to the bathroom and then approached her and said 'Excuse me, do you have an older brother?' and she said 'No.' He replied 'Well if you did he wouldn't want to see you with that putz.' She laughed and he got her number. True story."

"That's amazing. I wonder if I could use those lines."

"Sure you could man!"

"But wouldn't I have to be in an expensive bar, buying flashy drinks to pull it off?"

"Granted that helps, but it's all about confidence and actually believing, just for a minute, the line of b.s. you're feeding them. Once she's laughing your in."

"I don't know..."

"Give it a shot man!"

"We'll see..."

A few nights later I was uptown, drunk. I saw a pretty girl in a white half-shirt and ripped, tight jeans, looking pouty and bored smoking a cigarette. I broke away from my friends and approached her.

"Excuse me, do I have mayonnaise on my face?"

She looked appalled.

"No, why are you asking me THAT?"

"Well it wouldn't be mayo if I proposed it good."

"What the hell are you talking about?"

"I mean I wouldn't want to propose to you with mayo on my face."

"Whatever!" and she got up and walked away.

I returned to my drunken friends but soon spotted another hottie in the crowded bar. She had a kinder face, almost like a bird, with brown eyes and freckles.

"Excuse me, do you have an older brother?"

"Yes, do you know Tim?"

I paused, startled.

"Well, sort of."

"What do you mean sort of?"

I hesitated.

"We worked together."

"At Tony's Pizza?"

"Yah, Yah! At Tony's! Great place."

I smiled, drunkenly.

"I knew you were just pulling a line. Where do you guys come from?"

She stamped out her cigarette and walked away.

I wondered where we came from as I returned to my friends.

I decided to give it one last shot. I saw a cutie in blue jeans and a black spandex top sipping a sea-breeze, alone. I thought of my friend pulling off huge business deals during the day and courting super-models at night for inspiration.

"Hey, how's my hair?" I said it with flair looking into the bar mirror distractedly, while framing my head with my hands.

"It looks good. I like the George Clooney look."

Progress finally.

"Can I buy you a drink. my name is Jeremy?"

"Sure Jeremy, my name is Tiffany."

I motioned for the bartender and got her another sea- breeze and me another draft.

"So Tiffany, where do you live?"

"On North Pleasant street with my boyfriend."

"Huh?"

Just then I felt a massive hand on my shoulder and I turned around.

"Hey buddy, you hitting on my girl?"

He was enormous. Huge, meaty shaved head, 6'4" at least, bulging chest adorned with tight gray shirt.

"I'm buying drinks, how about one Thor? It might decrease that bulging vein on your forehead."

"You some sort of wise-guy?" his biceps and pectorals flaring like a peacock.

"I'm just a guy, not very wise. How about that drink or is alcohol and steroids as unhealthy as they say?"

He belted me across the cheek and I tumbled off the stool.

The next thing I knew I was in a cage and the sun was brightly courting my pain. I moaned loudly and felt my puffy face. There was a toilet without a seat in the corner and a mirror over it. I stared into my bruised and bloodied face.

A guard must have heard my uneasy stirring because at that moment they unlocked my cell and led me out. They gave me a court summons after I posted the $25 bail and I meandered to a bus stop and got home.

A few days later the swelling had gone down a bit and I was able to open my eyes all the way.

I sat on my bed looking at the address and phone number of the court I was to appear in at 8 a.m. the next morning when the phone rang with Eric on the other line.

We talked awhile. I asked him about business and he asked me about school. Then he asked me if I tried any of the stuff he told me.

"Well I was pretty drunk the other night..."

"That's good it can loosen you up."

"Yeah, I was real loose."

"So what happened?"

I looked down at the court phone number.

"I didn't do that well but I got one phone number."

"Ya see, there you go! It's a start. It's all about learning from your mistakes. Looking back, do you think you learned anything?"

"Yeah, I think I learned, but listen, I gotta wake up early tomorrow — some extracurricular activities. I'll talk to you soon."

"OK champ. I got some new lines from the master, I'll pass them on to you."

"Actually I think I'll just pass them on to my roommate, he's been complaining about women lately."

"Whatever works for you."

"Exactly."

Jeremy Hurewitz is a Collegian staff member.

Why'd they do that?

Eliza Berokawitz

Everyone remembers their first day of college, right? I know I do. I remember moving in. I remember when my parents made me cry in the munchie store. I remember when my dad thought that it would be really funny to pretend that he was staff and give all the Freshman the wrong instructions.

The one thing I remember the most, though, is my endless hunt for the Haigis Mall. I was so psyched to go shopping. My parents were finally gone and there I was, armed with a credit card (for emergency use only), trying to find a Gap, an Eddie Bauer, maybe even a Lechters. I walked around the Fine Arts Center, circled Herter and walked up the ramp in front of Whitmore. To my dismay, there was no mall. All I saw were buses, statues and grass. So I ask, why is it called the Haigis Mall? Why not the Haigis bus stop? What the hell is Haigis, anyway? Color me confused.

Now, that is not the only thing I'm confused about. I get confused easily. Call me stupid. Compare me to a Freshman, I don't care. It's just that UMass and the Pioneer Valley in general is a confusing place to live. I know that I am not the only person on this campus who has pondered why the Blue Wall is called "The Blue Wall." True, there is one big blue wall inside, but there is also a big white wall with a pretty orange and red stripe going across it. I think they should have called it "The White Wall With A Pretty Orange and Red Stripe." Catchy, huh?

What about the Hatch? The American Heritage Dictionary defines the word "hatch" in three ways. It could be an opening, as in the deck of a ship. It could also mean to emerge from or break out of an egg. The word "hatch" also means to shade by drawing or etching fine parallel or crossed lines. Okay, now with this newfound knowledge, who can tell me why they named a restaurant "The Hatch?" Why? I just don't see the connection. When I have lunch, the last thing I need is to wonder where my grilled cheese "hatch"ed from. Again, I am confused.

Sometimes, I get confused when I witness the stupidity of other people. Recently, a friend pointed out to me that the sign in front of the chancellor's house reads "The Chancellors House." No apostrophe. Why doesn't the sign say "The Chancellor's House?" The house belonging to the chancellor. Even if it read "The Chancellors' House," it would make sense, because it would imply that all of the chancellors that UMass has ever seen had lived there. In a place of higher learning, such as this one, you would think that someone might notice and fix that. Personally, I would think that the chancellor himself would have that fixed. I guess not.

It's not just things on our campus that confuse me. Outside of our campus, there are places of business that truly baffle me. "Dave's Soda and Pet Food City" is one establishment that I just don't understand. You go there to pick up some chow for your dog and while you're there you buy some soda. Why? Who thought of this concept? Were they aware that you can buy soda in a supermarket? You can, I swear. Soda and pet food do not go together. Is my dog the only dog in the world that is scared of carbonation? Probably not. Dave, if you're reading this, please tell me why you think that soda and pet food should be sold under the same roof. I just don't get it.

How about the cute little store "I Used To Be A Tree" in Amherst? It's a nice store. They sell nice things. If anyone is actually reading this far into this column, do me a favor. Next time you pass the store, take a look at the storefront. Go ahead, look at what it's made of: bricks. Since when did they start making bricks out of trees? Bricks are definitely not made of wood. I'm sure of that.

Confusion is not something to be ashamed of. I freely admit when I am confused. I think that if everyone was open about their confusion, this world would be a better place to live. Then again, if everyone was as confused as I was, we'd have a bunch of idiots roaming around this campus. Am I confusing you? I think I'm confusing myself.

Eliza Berkowitz is a UMass student.

On the absurdity of UMass security

Steven Grant

Well, before I begin, let me just say I am flattered what you chose my column to read out of all those others! There are so many of them. Like the one on the elevators. That looks pretty interesting, maybe try that one next.

My topic is a flawed system which every on-campus resident is subjected to on a daily basis (8 p.m.-12 a.m. on Sunday-Wednesday, 8 p.m.-2 a.m. on Thursday and 8p.m.- 3 a.m. on Friday and Saturday, to be exact). Now I live in Mackimmie Hall (a cozy little low-rise) so I'm going to be using that as my basis of reference, though I'm aware that many of the other dorms in Southwest operate under a similar format.

I feel the current security situation is for the most part an ineffective and self-contradicting one. And I'm not against it, because I'm afraid someone from the feared Melville Residence Hall is going to stab me when I'm asleep. I just feel I become irritated every time I have to walk in my building at night.

Let's go step by step, here. The main reason, I take it, that security is put in place in Mackimmie is to protect its residents from unwanted outsiders. So why did Campus Security decide to operate during the hours of which they felt my killer would strike? True, any assassin of mine wouldn't dare enter Mackimmie at 7 p.m., hide out in the bathroom for a couple of hours, wait for me to come home and then make his move. But what if his watch is broken? Huh? And it's a good thing kegs of beer don't exist before 8 p.m.

Doesn't my headline have a nice ring to it?

This year, I slide my I.D. through a scanner to get into the building. For the love of God, why? I'm only going to have to flash that same I.D. to the "receptionist" to get by him or her, anyway. And during the weekend hours during the day, I need my card to enter. If I'm a killer (or a thief, or a stalker), I can just wait for someone to come by who lives in room 110 to let me in.

After I slide through my card, and read "Accepted" (which I must admit makes me feel special) and after I show it to the guard making $4.75 per hour, I'm faced with perhaps the most frustrating thing of all — a locked door to my left, which leads to floors 1-4. Now what the hell is the point of that? Hey. I'm a busy, important guy. I can't be opening wallets and fumbling with keys all the time.

Okay, theoretically, Gabblenab J. Shootya could wait around the outside door for a resident to come along, charge past the receptionist, only to encounter the closed door (assuming he also didn't wait for that one to be opened).

But there's a problem. The basement is straight ahead and there's no locked door in the way. And what's more, if you go all the way down the basement hall, there's a stairway leading to all of the floors. Are they implying that the basement residents are not as important as the rest of the building? Or perhaps the correct statement is, "Let's not make the basement resident's life quite as useless behind it as the others."

Now, I'm not even going to touch the whole ridiculous signing-in process, or the fact that I have a lock on my room's door, or that my killer can wait until after security's hours of operation to find me. I'm just pleading with security to at least unlock that lousy door behind the booth.

And to my fellow students, if you live in a residence hall, have fear. Have much of it. If you think that security, despite its good intentions, is actually protecting you from anything, you are a moron who is kidding himself. Always remember: If there's someone out there who wants to get you, he will.

Thanks again for reading!

Steven Grant is a Collegian staff member

Letters to the Editor

Three cheers!

To the editor:

I am writing this in response to Tara MK Connelly's column titled "You try it" (Oct. 2). I am writing to let Tara, as well as the other editors, know that there are some of us who do appreciate the hard work that goes into putting the Collegian together. This paper is informative and entertaining, not to mention free on a daily basis. The fact that there are students willing to put in many hard hours per week to put together an excellent daily newspaper is something that should be commended.

In response to the "smart-ass" out there who claims "this paper sucks" or Dilbert isn't in, either get off your lazy ass, go down to the Collegian staff room and get to work or keep your mouth shut. The one who claims the paper sucks is probably the same person who picks up a new Collegian day after day. Therefore you should stop bad-mouthing the Collegian and learn to appreciate it. Some college papers come out monthly, or even once a semester. We have a staff of students willing to give us a new paper every day of the school week.

There are students who look forward to the Collegian every day, whether it be to read the sports section, editorials, comics, etc. The Collegian keeps students informed about our University and community. I wanted to let the Collegian staff know that they are doing a great job, and that there are some of us who do appreciate your hard work.

K. Michele Brown
Amherst

Molitor should clam it

To the editor:

This response is in regard to the column entitled "High on life," (Oct. 2) written by Erik Molitor. I myself have never been so offended as I was when I had finished reading this disappointingly narrow-minded editorial, unfairly bashing a lifestyle different from your own.

I know plenty of students who smoke pot, and they're not lazy, apathetic or moronic. You are correct, marijuana does cause damage to certain parts of the brain, but what about alcohol? Although alcohol is legal, widely used and innocently accepted, the significant damage to certain parts of the brain is overlooked.

Before applying, I was aware of UMass' reputation as a party school. Who wasn't? However, I have never heard of anyone being turned away from a job solely because they attended this institution. I am not aware of any label on this school associating it specifically with marijuana. No one will equate you with a stoner — that's just a little paranoid.

Who gave you the right to label people as stoners anyway? Are you quite sure that they are not interested in learning, attending classes or even living? They are worth a lot more than your snotty indictments, because they are here. They must have had a greater goal in mind than "scoring their next dime bag" if they applied and were accepted at the same University you were.

Everyone's entitled to their own opinions, but if you want to express your point effectively, perhaps you should refrain from your snide, cutting and, frankly, rude comments.

Are you still sure that you are better than pot smokers? Well, I have a recommendation for you, Erik. Don't make quick judgements on people you don't know and probably will never take the time to know. If you don't have anything nice to say, take your own advice and keep your mouth shut. High on life? How about high on yourself?

Catherine Burden Sylvan

Down with discrimination

To the editor:

It is time, in fact the time is long overdue, to eliminate racial discrimination in our society. An important place to start is where it is most pervasive, in government and in government supported and regulated institutions, such as UMass. The pervasive discrimination I am speaking about is affirmative action.

Affirmative Action is a system in which all people must be made to fit into some sort of category. The categories involved, largely racial, are the kind of divisions which are, or at least should be entirely irrelevant. Yet they are widely used in decisions concerning admissions, hiring and promotion. Members of various minority groups are given preference based on their category. These actions are justified by pointing to past grievances suffered by other members of the category. Suffering that is now more and more part of the historical past.

This is wrong.

The rightness or wrongness of the matter does not depend on which race is benefitting in which instance. Discrimination itself is just wrong.

It is also counterproductive. There is no reason why any person is not capable of success. However, affirmative action "spreads the word" that this is false, and that special help is required by the members of certain groups.

It is incredibly sad how far we have descended from Dr. King's dream. The dream in which "content of character" was the basis for judgements. And it is terribly tragic that the institution of affirmative action may end up holding back an entire generation.

But change is possible. It will not be easy; racial discrimination goes back a long way in the human condition, and there are lots of vested interests at work. Won't it be wonderful when we can finally transcend it? We can start the next millennium off fresh, with no categories except for the universal one of "human race."

Terry Franklin
Amherst

Arts & Living

Hanks makes directorial debut

Film's charm, good feeling goes to actors & real life situations

By Jeremy Brothers
Collegian Staff

THAT THING YOU DO!
Written and directed by Tom Hanks with Liv Tyler, Steve Zahn, Tom Hanks
Playing at Hampshire Six Theaters

Tom Hanks' presence tends to make everything shiny and happy, and though this might ensure the term "feel good" to anything that he does — it doesn't make everything he does good. Hanks might very well have been the only man who could win back to back Academy Awards for playing a gay man dying of AIDS in Philadelphia and a mentally challenged man in Forrest Gump, but there's something insidious about making everything feel good; some things need to be depressing.

The very premise of That Thing You Do! seems to scream boredom — in the summer of '64, a rock and roll group named "The Wonders" from Erie, Pa. records a song that makes it onto the charts, only to break up soon afterwards. The idea of a movie about a band who only has one song seems not only severely limited, but damn repetitive.

That Thing You Do! tosses all these presumptions out the window. Hanks, in his debut as writer/director, limits himself not only to a minor character, but as Mr. White, Hanks' character isn't completely loveable. It's still a film that glimmers, but that shine isn't coming from Hanks — it's the reflection off all those wonderful kitchen appliances that seem to be obligatory to films about America before black lacquer was invented.

There seems to be a general feeling of giddiness emoting from the film — a cast of relative newcomers working on Hanks' debut. A film whose actors seem to be having more fun than the wacky characters on-screen seems almost post– modern, a term I never thought I'd find myself describing to anything Tom Hanks did after Joe versus the Volcano.

But there is something wonderfully amiss about That Thing You Do! — Hanks has created a story which shouldn't mesh, but does. He takes for granted the same things we as an audience do — skipping scenes building to a romance between Guy and Faye (Tom Everett Scott and the thoroughly charming Liv Tyler) that would seem a necessity going, even going so far as to not give the band's bass player a name. Subtle charms fill the movie in a manner that doesn't conform with Hank's personae.

All of The Wonders deliver convincing performances, but Steve Zahn's Lenny is wonderfully absurd. The film describes him as a joker, but even this doesn't seem to do him justice. As The Wonders sit around, Lenny pipes out non sequitors that characterize him almost as if he's in his own performance of Waiting for Godot.

Hanks should be proud of That Thing You Do! — he has managed to create an entertaining period piece that revels in looking back to the past, reminiscent of Robert Redford's Quiz Show, except without all the messy corruption that goes with such realism. A–

COURTESY MARK SELIGER
Tom Hanks, Johnathon Schaech, Liv Tyler, Ethan Embry, Tom Evert Scott and Steve Zahn star in the comedy That Thing You Do!

Cale features avant pop on new album

JOHN CALE
Walking on Locusts
Hannibal

Lou Reed may get all of the fame and attention, but it is John Cale's post–Velvet Underground career that is, by far, the most imaginative and consistently good. Walking on Locusts, his first album of new material in over five years, finds Cale exploring more conventional pop terrain without sacrificing his love of the avant–garde or his ability to seamlessly meld a wide variety of styles and musicians.

"Dancing Undercover," the opening track on Locusts, will surprise long–time Cale fans. It's an almost jaunty pop number, with background vocalists, a ringing chorus and a snappy shuffle courtesy of drummer (and fellow ex–Velvet) Moe Tucker. The mood shifts dramatically on the second song, however. "Set Me Free," a song that is far more representative of Cale's earlier work, encapsulates all the best of both Locust, and Cale's work in general. Wrapped around a beautiful and delicate melody, The Soldier String Quartet and steel guitarist B.J. Cole weave a thick web of sound — deeply lyrical and fluid — to frame Cale's distinct Welsh voice. Indeed, the slower more meditative numbers are the most successful, allowing Cale's simple melodies and lyrics to shine, and allowing the musicians more space to explore. The "avant–pop" has always been Cale's particular specialty and it's nice to know he hasn't lost the knack.

The poppier numbers, however, are a little hit or miss. Most successful are "So What," and "Crazy Egypt," a collaboration with David Byrne that recalls Remain in Light era Talking Heads and the rant–ier '70s Cale. "Indistinct Notion of Cool" fails to catch fire (despite having a great title) and suffers from an overly slick arrangement. "Entre Nous," the closing song, is better written, but also suffers from unimaginative production.

The highlights on Locust are easy to recognize. Songs like "Secret Corrida" and "Some Friends" (for the late Sterling Morrison) are a perfect blend of beautiful pop lyricism and avant classical exploration — they find Cale on familiar ground, no less exciting or successful because of the more conventional atmosphere. It's a solid entry in Cale's catalog.

Let's Go Bowling

COURTESY TAHOE AGENCY

Perhaps not the best place to start (try Paris 1919, or the newly released Island Anthology,) but a welcome reminder that there is still great passion and life in Cale's truly distinct musical vision. B
(Bradley Skaught)

Trax On Trax Off

THE MARSHES
Fledgling
Grass Records

It would be easy to write the Marshes off as another band hopping on to the pop–punk bandwagon. However, what the Marshes lack in originality they make up for with their tightness and sincerity.

Musically, Fledgling sounds like a cross between Green Day and Jawbreaker. Fortunately for those who have grown bored with this genre the Marshes throw in enough nuances, like the ska beat on "Anniversary," to keep you happy. Of course if you don't like upbeat music this album is not for you. The band is tight and drummer Colin Sears has come a long way since his days in Dag Nasty.

The Marshes' song writing ability of lead guitarist and vocalist Emil Busi separates this band from most of its peers. The band provides the perfect oral paradox. While the poppiness of "Off–Shore" may make you want to jump around the room, the lyrics paint a darker picture.

While a lot of the material is candy coated — anger, frustration, confusion and pain are simmering under the surface. Occasionally on songs like "Obnoticus," those feelings boil over and all you can do is beat your hands against the wall. B (Adam Dlugacz)

Turn to Trax, page 7

Green Street Café
NORTHAMPTON

PRE-THEATRE MENU
WEEKNIGHTS
(Be seated by 6:30)
3 courses • $19.50 per person

AFTER THEATRE MENU
THURSDAY
FRIDAY
SATURDAY
9 - 11 p.m.
Light fare • Fondue for two Desserts • Espresso
Cappuccino • Latté
Waters • Sodas
Beers • Wine

DINNER
EVERY NIGHT from 5:30 p.m.
Reservations: 586-5650

A neighborhood restaurant, far from the maddening crowds, around the corner from Main Street.

Shut up before we have to smack you again Beavis!!

AMERICAN CREW
Quality Grooming Products For Men
Regency Hair
189 No. Pleasant St.
253-9326
Hey Man, Get A Haircut!
We Use and Recommend the Best in Men's Haircare

WHERE DO YOU WANT TO GO TODAY? HOW ABOUT: WWW.UMASS.EDU/BSO/COLLEGIAN

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE™
50% Off!!
Of Basic Program with valid college Student I.D.
Free Info Session
Wednesday, Oct. 16th
7:00 pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst
Now Accepting Visa, M/C, AMEX & Discover
Shop Around & Compare!
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
Act Now! Space is Limited!!

Everyone May Know Stand and Salute the Collegian Graphics Department.

Vienna:
An ancient city with modern importance.
Vienna is an elegant city in the center of Europe. Its baroque architecture, cultural importance and proximity to all Europe has to offer make it an ideal place to study the politics and cultures of Central Europe. Our European Studies program in Vienna offers classes in music, history, political science, business, psychology and even ecology. All our courses are taught in English with one German language class. You'll participate in an extensive field-study trip to places such as Zurich, Berlin, Brussels, Budapest and Dresden. Speak to your study abroad advisor about Beaver College programs or call for a free catalog today.
Study Abroad with Beaver College
1.888.BEAVER-9 • 1.888.232.8379
cea@beaver.edu
http://www.beaver.edu/cea/

Student Discount
at
EAST HEAVEN HOT TUBS
FOR RESERVATIONS
586-6943
33 West Street, Northampton
Tub for 2
for 1/2 hr. $15 Special!!
Monday - Thursday
Holiday Not Included, Valid til 11/15/96

"I got mine at Zanna"
Slip on, Zip up, Knock out!
ZANNA
downtown Amherst

Pop culture featured in videos

Williams & Hackman thought-provoking in The Birdcage

THE BIRDCAGE
Directed by Mike Nichols with Robin Williams, Gene Hackman, Nathan Lane

In the 1960's Mike Nichols established himself as one of the most provocative and cutting edge filmmakers of the time. Although some of his more recent projects have been successful in the box office, they have not contained the same substance as previous films like The Graduate and Catch 22. But The Birdcage has reestablished Nichols as a prominent director worthy of an Oscar nomination. He has combined a thought provoking and humorous story that examines society's misconceptions and stereotypes pertaining to homosexual males.

Robin Williams plays a homosexual Jew named Armand, who works as a show director at the Birdcage, a gay nightclub. Nathan Lane is superb as Williams self–conscious lover who has helped him to raise his son.

One day Armand's 20–year–old son tells him he's decided to get married. To make matters worse, his son's fiancee is the daughter of an ultra–conservative senator who would not be very fond of his daughter marrying the son of Jewish homosexual. The senator played by Gene Hackman is embodied in both a national controversy and the worries of reelection. To make matters worse, the senator and his wife are coming over to Armand's home for dinner to meet the future in–laws. This is the point where Nichols takes an honest look at both sides of the political spectrum and forces his audience to question their own beliefs and morals.

What is so interesting about The Birdcage is that not only does it look at what constitutes the stereotypes of sexual orientation, but also that of gender. In one of the film's best scenes Williams tries to explain to Lane on how to act like a man for when the senator comes over. It is through conversational brilliance like this that makes this film so important. B

I SHOT ANDY WARHOL
Directed by Mary Harron
with Lili Taylor, Jared Harris, Steven Dorff

There have been numerous films made about the strange life of Andy Warhol. He is perhaps one of the most celebrated and analyzed popular icons in recent history. His quote, "In the future everyone will be famous for fifteen minutes," has become a household term and his artwork is just as appreciated today as it was in the 1960's. Harron has captured Warhol's bizzare world in this brilliant film describing the life of Valarie Solanas, the woman who in 1968 made an assassination attempt on his life.

Solanas was an intelligent biology student who attempted to prove her college thesis that men were irrelevant to the continuation of the human species. She then left college and throughout the mid–sixties worked as a prostitute and lived off the New York City streets. She eventually wrote a manifesto called S.C.U.M. (Society for Cutting Up Men) in which she called for the annihilation of the male gender. Through her friendship with drag queen Candy Darling, Solanas was introduced to Warhol. She hoped Warhol could give her the chance she deserved by publishing a play she wrote. Solanas was thought even too weird by Warhol and in return she walked into his studio one day and shot him in the chest.

Lili Taylor has once again proven her self as one of the most interesting actresses of our generation. She is brilliant in her portrayal of Solanas, containing both humor and desperation which makes this film so refreshing. She is so good that regardless of how crazy this story is, not once do you doubt that it is completely true.

With an excellent score by former Velvet Underground bassist John Cale and brilliant photography by Ellen Kuras, the film has a very exciting flair. I Shot Andy Warhol is an intriguing story that once again proves you don't need a big budget and big stars to make a good movie. A–

Adam Levine is a Collegian correspondent.

UMass theater starts brand new season tonight

The University of Massachusetts' theater season opens the 1996–97 season tonight with A One–Act Stand, a series of three individual one–act plays. Directed by UMass graduate students, the plays explore the human nature to connect with others and the importance of relationships.

Overruled, written by George Bernard Shaw and directed by Linda McInerney, looks at two different married couples as they discuss the bases of love and devotion. The first act of the series explores the witty side of marriage through two different perspectives.

In Robert Spera's The Field, directed by Max Mount, the viewer will see how two individuals deal with a life and death situation during war. Through conversation and humor, the two characters portray how deep their bond is. During this time of war and suffering the characters find that friendship proves to be the most healing.

The last play, The Wibbly, Wobbly, Wiggly Dance That Cleopatterer Did is written by award winning writer Terrence McNally and is directed by Joe Salvatore. This bittersweet comedy is based on a night time conversation between two men. Their discussion reveals the foundations of loneliness and incorporates life questions and companionship.

Tonight promises to be a touching and moving evening of theater. The plays' exploration of matters of the mind and heart will captivate and intrigue a wide variety of people.

A One–Act Stand will be performed Wednesday–Saturday, Oct. 9–12 at the Curtain Theater at 8 p.m. Prices are $6 for general public and $3.50 for students and seniors.

— Julia Casson

■ trax

continued from page 6

LET'S GO BOWLING
Mr. Twist
Moon Records

For over ten years Let's Go Bowling has displayed a mastery of ska, funk, swing, jazz, etc. California's ska kings know the music to skank to — loud, fast and with the horns that are definitive Let's Go Bowling.

Last week Let's Go Bowling put on an extraordinary performance at Pearl Street and their newest masterpiece, Mr. Twist is yet another great representative of Moon Records.

Killer songs such as "Hot Buttered," "Spy Market" and "Days All the Same" could drive anyone to the dance floor. The traditional old school ska sounds are there as well as contemporary hardpowered rhythms.

"Cambia del So," the album's short and most unique song, is sung in Latin and although you may not understand a word, you sure can skank to it.

The lyrics are filled with a not so serious look at life. Keeping with the happy theme, slow ballads are nonexistent. Let's Go Bowling was ska for the '80s, for today and, quite possibly, for the future. A– (Sandi Okun)

CAKE
Fashion Nugget
Caprocorn Records

Listening to Cake's new album Fashion Nugget reminds me of that scene from that Steve Martin movie, The Jerk. Born to a family of loving black sharecroppers, the white Martin finds that he has no rhythm and no soul. But late at night, listening to a honky tonk station on the radio, he can happily bounce his foot to the beat. He can feel the beat because it is so bland.

Cake is a rhythmless band that tries to feed off of some soulful beats. The end result is disconcertingly bland. Even with the addition of trumpet and organ to the normal bass/drum/guitar arrangement, nothing seems to connect. It's a flat effort that a better band may have been able to make into something more.

The whole thing starts out with "Frank Sinatra" — it's the best thing on the album, but that's not saying much once "The Distance" comes on. And it's all down hill from there.

If Cake were really a cake, it'd be a vanilla sponge cake with no frosting and no flavor. Me, I prefer Carvel's Cookiepuss. F (Mike Messaros)

MUSIC • SOFTWARE MOVIES • BOOKS
MEDIA PLAY

NEW! 11.99
NIRVANA
From the Muddy Banks of the Wishkah

MUSIC
11.99
SHERYL CROW
Sheryl Crow

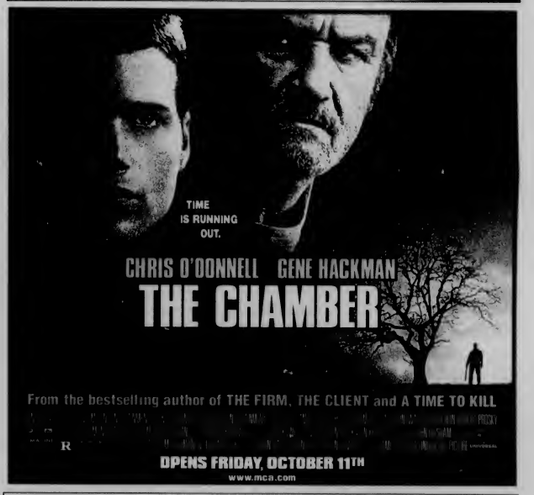
BOOKS
JAY LENO
NEW! 14.30 35% OFF
LEADING WITH MY CHIN
Jay Leno
HarperCollins - HC
List 22.00

19.47 35% OFF
COOKING FOR HEALTHY LIVING
Jane Fonda
Turner - HC
List 29.95

NEW! 16.22 35% OFF
DON'T BLOCK THE BLESSINGS
Patti LaBelle
Putnam- HC
List 24.95

35% OFF ALL NEW YORK TIMES HARDCOVER BESTSELLERS

34.99
MONSTER TRUCK MADNESS



24.99
Money
MONEY 5.0

SOFTWARE
VIDEO GAMES
CRUSADER NO REGRET
37.99

MOVIES
FIRM
12.99
FREE towel with the purchase of any two FIRM titles
THE FIRM
SAVE
CHOOSE FROM:
Abs, Hips, Thighs Sculpting; Complete Aerobic Weight Training; Step Crunch Workout or Tough Aerobic Mix

Sale ends October 17, 1996.
Hampshire Mall, Hadley, (413) 582-0410
Newington Commons Plaza, Newington, (860) 594-7272
Stateline Plaza, Enfield, (860) 253-4777
Crossroads Buckland Hills, Manchester, (860) 648-5871
STORE HOURS ENFIELD: MON-SAT: 8AM-10PM, SUN: 10AM-7PM
ALL OTHER STORES: MON-SAT: 10AM-10PM, SUN: 10AM-6PM

News | Arts & Living | Sports | Weather | Why flip ... when yo... click a...

STUDENT TICKET PICKUP SCHEDULE (TENTATIVE)

DATE OF PICKUP	SPORT	DATE OF GAME/OPPONENT
Thu, Oct 10, 1996	HOCKEY	10/12 v. CONCORDIA
	HOCKEY	10/18 v. POLISH NAT'L TEAM
Thu, Oct 24, 1996	HOCKEY	10/26 v. UMASS-LOWELL
	HOCKEY	11/2 v. BOSTON UNIVERSITY
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	11/15 v. MARATHON OIL
Thu , Nov 7, 1996	HOCKEY	11/8 v. NEW HAMPSHIRE
	HOCKEY	11/9 v. NEW HAMPSHIRE
	HOCKEY	11/16 v. MERRIMACK
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	11/15 v CONVERSE ALL-STARS
Thu, Nov 14, 1996	HOCKEY	11/22 v. ARMY
	HOCKEY	11/29 v. AIR FORCE
	HOCKEY	11/30 v. AIR FORCE
Thu, Nov 21, 1996	HOCKEY	12/6 v. PROVIDENCE
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	12/7 v. WYOMING
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	12/10 v. FRESNO STATE
Thu, Dec 5, 1996	HOCKEY	12/13 v. PRINCETON
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	12/12 v. DREXEL
Wed, Dec 11, 1996	HOCKEY	1/14 v. YALE
	HOCKEY	1/17 v. NORTHEASTERN
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	1/3 v. DAVIDSON
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	1/5 v. ST. JOSEPH'S
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	1/12 v. VIRGINIA TECH
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	1/21 v. RHODE ISLAND
Thu, Jan 30, 1997	HOCKEY	1/31 v. MERRIMACK
	HOCKEY	2/7 v. BOSTON UNIVERSITY
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	2/1 v. XAVIER
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	2/6 v. DUQUESNE
Thu, Feb 6, 1997	HOCKEY	2/14 v. MAINE
	HOCKEY	2/15 v. MAINE
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	2/11 v. ST. BONAVENTURE
Wed, Feb 19, 1997	HOCKEY	2/22 v. BOSTON COLLEGE
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	2/20 v. FORDHAM
Thu, Feb 27, 1996	MEN'S BASKETBALL	3/1 v. TEMPLE

PICKUP AND GAME DATES ARE SUBJECT TO CHANGE

You waited in line an hour to see this movie. Incredible opening! Heart-stopping action! Unbelievable tension! This is going to be ... a great ... a great ... oh no. Seated directly behind you. A talker. You can withstand many things. People who drive 55 in the left lane. People with 10 items in the 8-items-only checkout. But here you draw the line. Talking in movie theaters is sacrilege! You paid seven bucks for this ticket. Seven bucks! To the voice you say, "Could you please keep it down?" Mistake. The voice gets louder. "Let's move," you hiss to your girlfriend. "No," she says. "Come on," you implore. "No," she says. "I've had it with talkers," she says. She reaches into her bag. Drops a squat metallic object on her lap. What the...? Out of th corn r of your y , you see her squinting, slowly, surely screwing two pieces together. A... a ... silencer? Geez! This is a side of her you've never seen before. You think, momentarily, that should this case go to a jury, it will be important to have movie lovers on the panel. She lifts the weapon from her lap. What's it going to be? A Colt .45? A derringer?

You forc yours lf to look.

It's sleek. It's smooth. It's small. It's a... PDA? She's going to threaten the voice with a personal digital assistant? She quickly touches some keys, leans forward. "Computer," she says tersely to the little machine. Great. Now your girlfriend talks to inanimate objects. What's next? Lunch with ali ns?

She whispers something else to the machine. Wonderful. She's decided to catch up on work during your date. Suddenly, miraculously, the voice behind you stops. Weird-like, in mid-sentence. You glance back. What the...? It's long. Round. Pointy. A ... cone ... of... silence? "PDA with a silencer," your girlfriend mutters.

Damn, that's good software.

What will the next generation of software be? Come to Microsoft and shape it.
Real jobs. Real internships. With real responsibility.

Technical Interviews for Full-Time Jobs and Paid Summer Internships
Mon. Nov. 4 and Tues. Nov. 5
Full-time: Call the Job Line by 6pm, Oct. 16
Paid Internships: Resumes due to Mather Career Center Oct. 25
Resumes may also be given directly to the Microsoft Recruiter at the Oct. 17 Engineering Career Fair in Marcus Hall
For additional details, check out www.microsoft.com/college

Microsoft

© 1996 Microsoft Corporation. All rights reserved.

Seven Revelations

by Martin F. Jones

I

Three years shall pass when the lion and the lamb stand together in the garden of roses,
Heralding the promise of a greater peace between the followers of Mohammed and Moses.
The people will come to mourn the loss of the one named JFK.
A man of great courage and conviction, who lived in a special way.
And nineteen days after the Day of Atonement, a bird shall fall from the sky.
The world will react with deep sorrow to learn
The king's successor and his wife were inside.

II

He leads the herd when the elephants march, but soon will be struck down.
Another shall arrive from the beacon of a hill. He will wear a crimson crown.
With forty days to spare he'll declare his entry to the people's race,
As the herd of elephants meet to choose a new selection place.
And on the seventh day of the eleventh month, he'll give his greatest speech
In the Athens of the new world, at the center of the fleet.

III

A new successor will soon be gained with seven characters in each name.
He will have seen victory in the beloved game.
Each wife will call him and the king the same.
Time will pass while he does serve the king with all his might.
One day the king's great deputy will inherit a nation's plight.

IV

The ass and the elephant shall duel with galore as they fight to settle the endless score.
And though the elephant does valiantly soar,
In the end, the ass will triumph once more.
And soon after the elephant returns to his tent, the ass will build a new covenant.
With stately poise, he'll bring aboard
The one who led the eagle through the great desert storm.

V

The dove once left the great nest in shame.
This time he returns with the highest acclaim.
With the colors of the sky under his command,
He will be honored and respected in many lands.

VI

The bear will strike at those from beneath who defy his lethal claw.
Death will arrive to meet all who refuse to accept his sacred law.
But soon one day the bear will be slain.
To the west there will be great despair.
The defiant ones, however, will gather and rejoice
At the fall of the white-haired bear.

VII

The world will enter a dark new phase as his majesty takes the center stage.
Standing before his court he declares, "War is in place! Let the enemy beware!"
And so his subjects take arms for soon
They will battle the star and the crescent moon.
The prophet's followers will gather once more
As the hour draws near for the great holy war.

paid advertisement

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Free Couch, end table, coffee table, utility table. Pick up 256-8175

AUTO FOR SALE

1989 Nissan Pulsar 7-tops, 5 speed, new!!! $3,400obo 548-3393 Aaron

1982 Chevy Cavalier Wagon AC, AM-FM, new tires, plus $250.00 O/B/O Call Bruce 256-1215

1984 Honda Accord AT, AC, PW, PL, cruise, 110k mint Call Jarrod 548-9392

EMPLOYMENT

Spring Break!! Earn Cash!!! Highest Commissions! Lowest Prices!! Travel free on only 13 sales!! Free Info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

Capecidad A Multicultural After School Program for Grades K-8 is interviewing students (with work study only) for teaching positions. Call Jen or Sheena @ 253-3499

Education Majors Get paid to take tests, $10 each about 1/2 hour per test. Must be education major. Team given by National Evaluation Systems at Campus Center, Rm. 174-176, Tuesday, October 15, 9-7. Call 256-7410 to register.

EMPLOYMENT

ros T-Shirt and $1000 Credit Card fundraisers for fraternities, sororities and groups. Any campus organization can raise up to $1000 by earning a whopping $5.00/Visa application. Call (800)932-0528 ext. 65. Qualified callers receive free T-shirt.

FOR RENT

Grad Student looking to share office $75.00/month Call Joan 549-6527

Fridges Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

Word Processor 4 Sale excellent condition $350.00 OBO, call Lisa 253-9195

Computer for Sale Macintosh LC with color monitor for sale 10Mb ROM External 100Mb RAM hard drive Global Village 28.8 Global/FAX external modem System 7.1 software included $700 or B/O. Call for more info, more software included Scott 253-7938

Mac Powerbook 140 8/80, fax/modem, software and portable printer w/case $1,000 Call Mike, 587-0347

2 Dava Matthews Tix Sun Oct 6 Floor seats, Row 27 Best offer, Sam 546-3982

REGulator Keg System with 2 taps $750 or BO Call 256-4201 or (617)354-9358

PHISH Hartford $35 Good seats (800)862-6050

FOR SALE

Puppy four months old Rottweiler needs a home. Fun-loving and playful AKC registered and has had first year shots. 549-5265

INSTRUCTION

Bartend with University Bartending 50% student discount, Amherst classes starting soon! Call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX for info.

English Language Consultant Available to International Students and Non-English Majors. Will edit papers and dissertations, also tutor ESL. Call Ms. Read, retired faculty member, for rate schedule and free initial consultation. 253-3354

Boxing Lessons All Welcome! For brochure (413)-732-8817

LOST

A pair of glasses Gold frames in a soft black case If found, call 585-9028 Reward

MOTORCYCLES

1980 CB 650 - $500 or BO 9650 miles - runs well - must sell Call 549-6646

MISCELLANEOUS

New Metabolism Breakthrough Lose 5-100 lbs Guaranteed $35 800-776-9503

PERSONALS

Choicas Not Chances Free contraception education! Every Mon & Thurs 3-4:30 and Tues & Wed 7-8:30pm in Rm 302 UHS. Men and Women welcome. For more information call Health Education Office 577-5181

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

ROOM FOR RENT

Puffton Village Available at the end of January 549-6756 ask for Julie

SERVICES

Computer Problems? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Scream Savers 549-0063

Have you been ripped off by a retailer? Contact the Student Legal Services Office regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

19 year old from Venezuela searching for child care. Here for a year taking English courses. Staying in family housing with relatives. Very limited English. Has a lot of experience with children. Good personality, very out-going. Flexible hours Available Mon.-Fri. Please contact Priscilla at 546-6325

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK! Earn cash! Highest commissions/lowest prices! Travel free on only 13 sales!! Free info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

Killington Ski House $500 per person for the entire season 549-8824

FREE TRIPS AND CASH! Find out how hundreds of Student Representatives are already earning free trips and lots of cash with America's #1 Spring Break Company! Sell only 15 trips and travel free! Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica or Florida! Campus Manager positions also available! Call now! Take a Break Student Travel (800)95-Break

TRANSPORTATION

Need ride from Memorial Drive, Chicopee to UMass Sat. or Sun. Early mornings Will pay gas+ Bob 583-5626

WANTED

Need Extra Phish Tix for Mon. Oct. 21 show MSG 253-9659

WOMEN NEEDED FOR ANTIOXIDANT STUDY

18-30 year olds You must run 30 or more miles a week or not exercise at all. You will be paid $100 to $250. If interested... call Deanne at 253-4084

Collegian Classifieds

Space Available

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities	Musicians
Announcements	Miscellaneous
Apartment For Rent	Motorcycles
Auto For Sale	Personals
Employment	Room For Rent
Entertainment	Room Wanted
For Sale	Roommate Wanted
Found (2 days Free)	Services
Happy Birthday	Summer Sublet
Houses For Rent	To Sublet
Instruction	Travel
Lost	Transportation
	Wanted to Rent
	Wanted

Personals Policy

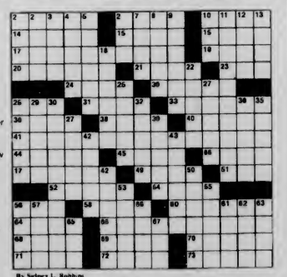
1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Looking for a good deal... Check the Collegian Classifieds.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS



1 Urchins
6 Travelers' stops
10 Pepper et al.
14 Concede
15 Cutaway
16 Buffalo's lake
17 Sailor's time off
19 Departed
20 Hat or canal
21 —nosed: tough
23 Tree or tray
24 Fewer
26 Onions' cousins
28 — de deux
31 Corner store, for short
33 Arm cover
36 Concerning
38 Silver and Darling
40 Chopper
41 Marine's destination?
44 Succinct
45 Elder Dumas
46 Marinate
47 Military storage place
49 Vex
51 No and Strangelove
52 Skull protuberance
54 Kind of cone
56 Two thumbs down
58 Grandson of Adam
60 Mother's helper
64 Silver containers
66 Early talk-show hostess
68 Slip anagram
69 Jacob's twin
70 Confess
71 No sweat!
72 Agts.
73 Gnawed away

DOWN

1 Mud-dauber
2 A Khan
3 Fe, in chemistry
4 Wild
5 Appeared to be
6 Refrigerate
7 Ark skipper
8 Maritime
9 Metric units
10 Stitch
11 Oily shrub, aka white sage
12 Containers
13 Father of 58 Across
18 Beams
22 Indian city
25 Sailing ship
27 Retains
28 Italian specialty
29 One of the 12 tribes
30 Weather problem
32 Deduce
34 Of the palate
35 Estrada namesakes
37 "Citizen Kane" creator
39 "77 Sunset—"
42 Uncanny
43 Gusto
48 Up the road a bit
50 Isolate
53 Cacophony
55 It's a gas
56 North or South
57 Carreras specialty
59 Crackle and pops' pal
61 Oz visitor
62 Cupid
63 Lacoste
65 Secret agent
67 Swiz. neighbor

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

C	L	A	D		S	L	O	P	E		P	O	L	L
H	A	V	E		H	I	R	E	S		A	G	E	E
I	D	E	A		I	N	E	R	T		U	R	N	S
C	Y	C	L	O	N	E		T	E	M	P	E	S	T
			A	V	E	S			E	E	E
B	E	S	T	I	R		T	E	M	E	R	I	T	Y
I	V	I	E	D		C	A	D	E	T		N	A	R
S	A	G		S	A	P		D		P	A	P	A
D	O	K	E		P	I	P		T		C	A	N	E	R
N	E	W	C	O	M	E	R			D	U	R	E	S	S
			A	R	M				S	I	R	E
B	L	U	S	T	E	R		T	O	R	N	A	D	O
O	A	S	T		R	E	W	E	D		T	R	A	M
N	O	E	L		E	D	I	T	E		A	N	T	E
E	S	S	E		D	O	T	S			L	O	A	N

By Sidney L. Robbins
© 1996 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN

New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 http://www.umass.edu/rso/colegian/

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21–April 20

When things get hectic early this week, just focus on getting one thing done at a time. Romance doesn't have to cost you an arm and a leg if you use your imagination. Work to lower your stress level, and you'll see the results almost immediately.

TAURUS
April 21–May 21

Before taking on any new responsibilities, take a good look at yourself. Trust your instincts when choosing a gift for a loved one. You may be a bit more accident-prone than usual toward the weekend. Play it safe, and things will work out.

GEMINI
May 22–June 21

A favorite place is calling your name—you could be due for a vacation. If responsibilities are pressing, go ahead and put them off, but not for too long. A friend may be self-conscious about his or her appearance—be sure to be reassuring.

CANCER
June 22–July 22

Take solace in routine if you're feeling overwhelmed. Things that are mundane and boring most of the time will take on new meaning and seem peaceful instead. You could get a lot of chores done before the weekend, when you'll be ready for some fun.

LEO
July 23–August 23

Don't overstep your bounds in a highly emotional situation. You would do better to look and listen instead of putting in your two cents' worth. Although it's difficult, try to let this one go. You aren't in a position to make things better, so don't interfere.

VIRGO
August 24–September 22

A friendly competition heats up—be sure you aren't storing some resentment unawares. Talk to an older friend to get some advice you'll be able to use for years to come. A special dinner with your sweetie gets the weekend off to a romantic start.

LIBRA
September 23–October 23

Your expectations will be met this week, so think big and reach for the stars! An oppressive and difficult person could be headed for a fall, so stay out of his or her way. Gather your friends together for a weekend of lighthearted fun and recreation.

SCORPIO
October 24–November 22

The adventures begin at home this week. Keep your sense of humor close at hand, and you might even find a belly laugh or two. Curiosity may have killed the cat, but it's your best friend this week, so follow your nose and don't be surprised by what you find.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23–December 21

A milestone approaches and you may be feeling rather downhearted. Look to a younger person for a proper sense of perspective. Soak up the last of the fall sunshine to boost your spirits against the winter that lies ahead.

CAPRICORN
December 22–January 20

Don't start a new project this week without a thorough understanding of what's involved. Instead, focus on tying up loose ends. A romance could be in need of some attention, too. You've impressed your mate with your trustworthiness—now dazzle him or her with your creativity.

AQUARIUS
January 21–February 18

If you plunge straight ahead this week, you'll lose more ground than you gain. Instead, look for the roundabout path to what you want, and you'll reach your goals. Stick to tradition when it comes to spending time with your family.

PISCES
February 19–March 20

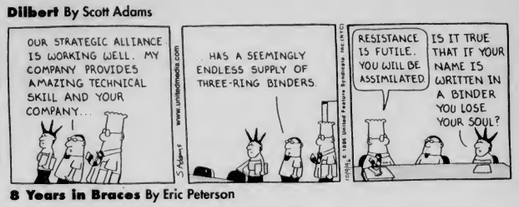
Allowing yourself to unwind is the single most important thing you can do for yourself. This week actually holds a lull in the action. It won't last long, however, and then it will be back to the grind. Join up with old friends for an evening of fun this weekend.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Call someone who cares. Call the Collegian

*(we do not accept collect calls)

Always Wanted One of Those By A. Morse & S. Dumas



Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown Judd Winick

8 Years in Braces By Eric Peterson

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Leold (leold@javanet.com)
by Roger and Salem Salloom ©1996

My friend Beeber can reach around the back of her head, come up from behind ond cover the front of her face with the palm of her hand.

She is cool.

But Beeber con't tell if she's being tricked. I've seen people say stuff to her that they don't mean.... like, "I'll meet you ot 5:oo tonight." Beeber will woit there for hours.

I love Beeber.

She'd put both of her hands in gorbage to find your lost wrist watch. Beeber hos the best hands. I hope no one ever hurts Beeber.

When I have kids I want my little girl to have hands like Beeber's.

Someday Beeber will recognize when someone is tricking her and then her life will be forever smooth.

That's a very fine recipe for contentment.....

greot hands that move smoothly.

Life is good.

University² By Frank Cho

Duh By Maura & Micaela

Loedoe By Mike Rybicki

Social Norm By Mr. K

Close to Home By John McPherson

"I know that many of you are squeamish about dissecting a frog, so as an incentive, three of the frogs have been implanted with concert tickets to Smashing Pumpkins."

Quote of the Day

"A cat's got her own opinion of human beings. She don't say much, but she can tell you enough to make you anxious not to hear the whole of it."

–Jerome K. Jerome

Quote of the Day

"I think I've made a difference in my phase of the broadcast industry, but I don't think I've impacted the world in the manner of Franklin Roosevelt."

–Howard Cosell

Today's Staff

Tara Connelly
Night Editor

Lisa MK Oliveri
Copy Editor

Elizabeth MK Brown
Photo Technician

Brian MK Inocencio
Production Supervisor

Kelvin MK Torres
Mark MK McGrath
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-3626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH: Grilled Chicken Sand., Corned Leaf on Rye, Ravioli/Tomato Sauce, Vegan Ravioli

DINNER: Hamb. on a Roll, Cheese Pizza, Falafel Pocket Sandwich

Hampshire

LUNCH: Hamb on a Roll, Chick. Cutlet Sandwich, Mac and Sneeze

DINNER: Hamb. on a Roll, Grilled Chick. Sandwich, Barbecued Beek on a Bun

Worcester

LUNCH: Grilled Chicken Sand., Futtuccini/Tom. Sauce, Ratatouille, Just Plain Rat

DINNER: Hot Turkey Sanswich, Rotini/Tomato Meat Sauce, Lentil Chili

Berkshire

LUNCH: Grilled Chicken Sand., Futtuccini/Tom. Sauce, Ratatouille, Just Plain Rat

DINNER: Hot Turkey Sandwich, Pizza, Rotini/Tom. Meat Sauce, Lentil Chili

Sports

Magid, Myers hurt during weekend trip

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

This past weekend the No. 8 Massachusetts women's soccer team (9-0-1, 4-0-1 in Atlantic Ten), came off their first extended road trip of the season with mixed results. There were no numerical losses, as UMass defeated La Salle 3-0 and tied George Washington, 2-2.

In terms of the team as a whole, though, they could have done without one of the unfortunate facets of the game: injuries.

Two key players in the starting eleven went down, as senior midfielders Julie Magid and Rebecca Myers were injured in the GW and La Salle games, respectively. Magid's left ankle appears to be day-to-day, but Myers' injured left knee looks like the bigger dilemma.

As of press time, the team is not sure if it is a complete ACL tear or not, and an MRI was scheduled for Tuesday afternoon. Just 43 seconds into the La Salle match, Myers jumped to block a kick upfield, and what seemed to be a harmless landing proved to be otherwise.

It looks like a case of too many lefts before a right, but in the long run, coach Jim Rudy has faith in letting the situation work itself out.

"Hey, we are who we put out onto the field." Rudy said. "Someone will step up, and we are still UMass."

***

A funny thing happened in Washington, D.C. last weekend, as the Colonial Women did something to the Minutewomen that has not been done this season: they scored on junior keeper Danielle Dion.

Not just once, but twice, as GW rode the crest of a disputed call by the head referee in the 48th minute, leading to Tanya Vogel's goal on the ensuing penalty kick. Freshman forward Emma Kurowski was called on a hand ball in the very top of the box, which was more of a bad bounce on the South Riding Field surface than an intentional penalty.

Eight minutes later, Vogel scored the go-ahead goal, legitimately beating Dion on a shot to the upper left corner. If there was any skepticism on how Dion would do actually facing shots on goal (nine saves going into last weekend's action), those thoughts were quickly dispelled. In the 68th minute, GW forward Chemar Smith threaded a screened shot, between UM defenders Erica Iverson and Erin Lynch, and Dion ranged to her far right to make the diving stop.

Rudy was impressed with Dion's play, and saw good things in another part of the team's game that they are unaccustomed to at this stage of the season: the comeback.

"Against any team you play, you will have a rough streak," Rudy said. "We don't dominate, so the idea is to minimize those times, and ride through them. We came back nicely, and GW basically threw their whole game into a twenty-five minute span. GW came on strong, and they played like they are able to play.

"Basically after that twenty-five minutes, that was it. We forced their keeper [Traci Jensen] to make a great save, and with twelve minutes to go, we put Webb [who scored the tying goal] back in, which was probably the right time."

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

After returning from a successful weekend road trip, Julie Magid is day-to-day with an ankle injury.

Rub your Stanley Cup; the Collegian gurus pick 'em

In the eternal search for the teams who will win what division; who should have won said division; and, who don't have a stinkin' chance in hell to win a division, and can pack for beautiful Rio de Janeiro nine months in advance; we, the Collegian hockey purists and gurus, will now give our subjectively objective picks on the 1996-97 NHL season.

Northeast Division (Boston, Buffalo, Hartford, Montreal, Ottawa, Pittsburgh)

Leigh Torbin: Come on without, come on within, you've not seen nothing like the mighty Pens. With the exception of the bleu, blanc et rouge, each team in this soft division is nothing like the mighty Pens. Les Habitants are a legitimate contender for the title, led by sophomore sensations Saku Koivu (Flying Frenchmen, Flying Finn, close enough) and Valeri Bure, and backed by Jocelyn Thibault, a worthy successor to the man named King Patrick. But, some advice for the remaining six teams in the Northeast, especially the one that's brewery owned and calls Le Centre Molson home; drink Bud Ice and, uh, beware the Penguins.

Jorma Kansanen: Can't argue too much about that one, with the theme song of this division this year being "I fought the law, and the law beat my butt into the ground." Mario Lemieux is the Sheriff in this town, with the always faithful Cartwright family behind him (Jagr, Francis, Hatcher and Sandstrom). Montreal will evolve, but the rest of the teams seem to be regressing to the point of anonymity, and in what used to be the strongest division in hockey.

Editor's note: Luke Meredith, our crack college football columnist, gives the Booty Schwag to the not-so mighty Hartford Whalers, the Huey Futch of the NHL. Luke would also like to point out that he gets a decent amount of his hockey news from the pimp-daddies of the puck, Leigh and Jorma. Hey guys, be one with the puck.

Atlantic Division (Florida, New Jersey, NY Rangers, NY Islanders, Philadelphia, Tampa Bay, Washington)

LT: The Macarena; hot new dance, or the YMCA of the '90s? The New York Rangers; shoe-in for the Stanley Cup, or the biggest collection of over-aged has-beens this side of the Republican Presidential ticket?

The Wayne-gers will dominate the regular season, but burn out in the playoffs, paving the way for Eric Lindros and the reincarnation of the Broad Street Bullies to be buried by the Avalanche, as the Cup final's sacrificial lamb. Gretzky led Team Canada with seven points in the World Cup, but his vanishing act beneath the tight-checking Americans in the final should make for MSG headaches, like bad lo mein, at Madison Square Garden come May.

Just about any team in this division has a shot at playing for Lord Stanley of Preston's sacred punch bowl, and the Atlantic will send at least five teams to the playoffs.

JK: This is the toughest division in the league, by far. The "Not So" New York Rangers will not survive the dogfight, as six of these teams have a legit shot at postseason action (if you include the Islanders in that group, you should be chopped up for shark chum). If the Flyers can get a productive second line going (Brindamour–Hawerchuk–Falloon?), and find a young defenseman who can move the puck up the ice (Janne Niinimaa?), they will take this overstuffed taco.

Central Division (Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Phoenix, St Louis, Toronto)

LT: Not really sure how this glut of mediocrity measures up from top to bottom; I just might "wing" it with this one. Just watch out for Dallas and Phoenix in the playoffs. These teams made quality free agent signings, including Dave Reid and Cliff Ronning respectively, that will have them prepped for mid-April runs longer than the Boston Marathon.

JK: Can you say "a lesson in mediocrity"? Sure you can. If the Red Wings trade Paul Coffey (he won't go to Hartford, maybe Philly?), they will win this division handily. But with early season injuries to forward Slava Kozlov and defenseman Vladimir Konstantinov, they will need a strong start.

Pacific Division (Anaheim, Calgary, Colorado, Edmonton, LA, San Jose, Vancouver)

LT: As the Butthole Surfers would say, the real power in the Pacific is "flowing like an avalanche coming down the mountain." But, with an uncontainable power play line of Pavel Bure, Alexander Mogilny and Trevor Linden, Vancouver will compete, much like the one-line Ducks. If any team in the Pacific, or the entire NHL for that matter, is looking for actual depth, they should tap the Rockies, where depth flows like Coors Light at Jackson's Hole in LoDo.

The Lanche had six players in the World Cup, and only Alexei Gusarov is older than 31; on a team with "dynasty" written all over it, like on Robert DeNiro in Cape Fear.

JK: Can you say "a lesson in obtuse-ity?" No, me either, but that is this division. This one could get ugly from the Avalanche down, and, I really am not saying this, but the only bright spot past the defending champs will be the first line of the Mighty Ducks. The hockey Gods are shaking their golden sticks in indignation at me, but I can not help but be a fan of the No. 1 Ducks combo. Legendary Finnish bookends (Selanne and Kurri), and a story (Kariya) that will be a classic, puts Anaheim into the playoffs. Really.

Eastern Conference Playoffs

LT— Northeast: Pit, Mont, Bos (by the hair of its chinny- chin-chin). Atlantic: NYR, Phi, Wash, Fla, NJ.

Philadelphia to Final

JK— Northeast: Pit, Mont, Bos (Bourque and Ranford save the day for the Black and Gold). Atlantic: Phi, NYR, Wash, NJ, Fla.

Philadelphia to Final

Western Conference Playoffs

LT— Central: Det, Dall, Phoenix, St.L. Pacific: Avalanche, Canuckleheads, Mighty Ducks, Edmonton.

Avalanche to Final

JK— Central: Det, St.L, Dall, Phoenix, Tor. Pacific: Avalanche, Canucks, Mighty Ducks.

Red Wings to Final

Lord Stanley's Cup

LT— John and the rest of Denver's set for another Rocky Mountain High in Colorado.

JK— Philadelphia goes through the Quebec Syndrome, learning from a prior year playoff disappointment, and moves on to the hoist the Holy Grail.

Defenseman of the Year

LT— Brian Leetch. The Oiler, er, Blueshirt system will only amplify his currently unparalleled ability to rush like a Coffey and remain a viable and exceptional *defense*man.

JK— Call me Homer. No one but Ray Bourque, baby.

Player of the Year: The consensus pick, the Big E, Eric Lindros. Runners up, in no particular order: Messier, Sakic, Modano, Kariya, Mario.

Rookie of the Year: Who knows? It won't be Mike Grier.

Vezina: You have to think about the B's. Not Bill Ranford, but Eddie Belfour (LT), or Martin Brodeur (JK).

Jorma Kansanen and Leigh Torbin are puckheads who try to be Collegian columnists.

Leigh Torbin&Jorma Kansanen on the NHL

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

There's no place like home
The Massachusetts rhen's soccer team returns to Richard F. Garber field this weekend to battle A-10 foes Dayton and Xavier.

Jets could be flyin' high; Bam Morris just says no

The more things change, the more they stay the same.

After a start of the season that saw second-year Carolina undefeated and atop the NFC West and the Super Bowl champion Cowboys at the bottom of the NFC East, a normalcy that even Woodrow Wilson would have been proud of is returning to the National Football League.

The Jets being bad isn't unusual, but people thinking they might not be is. Believe it or not, hopes were actually high for the Jets before the season began due to their bringing in some good players through free agency. Instead, they're off to their worst start ever and it's not likely to get any better with all their injuries (the latest to Neil O'Donnell and Webster Slaughter).

JACOB W. MICHAELS at the NFL

And then the Jets are compounding their ineptitude by starting the NFL's long-time No. One Backup QB, Frank Reich. The Jets should be starting Boston College product Glenn Foley, to see if he can eventually be a starting signal- caller for them, not someone who is likely to retire in a year or two.

While Reich might be able to win a game or two, does anyone think the Jets are going to win 10 straight and get to the playoffs? Plan for the future, because this season's already over.

Elsewhere in the AFC East, another quarterback has finally returned from his year in exile. The only reason to not say "Bledsoe's back" is for Boston sports fans' well- earned fear of jinxing their team. The Patriot QB had a career day against Baltimore (cough Cleveland cough), throwing for four TDs and no interceptions — and he's still playing without Vincent Brisby. Think Bill Parcells still regrets drafting Terry Glenn?

In another return to normalcy, the NFC West is back in order. Carolina, after going 3-0 to start the season, has lost their last two games, letting San Francisco back into the number one spot.

The amazing thing is the 49ers are doing it with backup Elvis Grbac, who is forcing his coaches to give Steve Young as much time to recover as they can. Grbac is sure to be the biggest free agent quarterback in the offseason, regardless of what happens with Jeff George.

***

Unlike the Jets, things only get better for Dallas as wide receiver Michael Irvin made his return from a five-week suspension for his drug conviction.

Also returning from a drug suspension is Bam Morris, whom Baltimore is hoping can revive a running game that is, in reality, doing fine with Earnest Byner. You have to love the NFL's drug suspension policy. It really stuck it hard to those two.

As of about an hour before the trading deadline there was still no word on George, which is probably good news for fans of Atlanta, Oakland and Seattle.

The most talked about trade, the Seahawks' Rick Mirer for George, didn't seem to make sense for either team. While it would unload George and give Mirer a chance to start over, it does very little for both teams besides create a quarterback controversy. Seattle needs a stabilizing influence at signal-caller, and John Friesz' performance in Miami shows he could fill that role. Atlanta, on the other hand, doesn't need the problems that would be caused by bringing Mirer in to compete with Bobby Hebert.

The Oakland trade made even less sense, at least for the Raiders. The last thing their team needs is another headcase like George, no matter how well he'd fit in. And as stupid as trading away Chester McGlockton is, getting rid of Jeff Hostetler is even worse. He may not be the best QB in the league, but Hoss is the only reason the Raiders win any games.

The trade would have been better for Atlanta, who could add McGlockton to a lousy defense, but it would also bring in Hoss, which would create a QB controversy and possibly take time away from seeing whether Hebert can be the man to lead the team into the future.

The NFL levied fines last week for the fights that broke out during the Houston–Pittsburgh game two weeks ago. The biggest fine was $7,500 for the Tennessee To–Be's Marcus Robertson for dragging Pittsburgh QB Mike Tomczak around by his face mask. Two other players who started a second fight were both fined $5,000.

In other words, the players were slapped on the wrist. While five grand may seem like a lot to a college student, to someone in a job where the minimum salary is over $100,000, it's absolutely nothing. Football isn't boxing or hockey, where punching opponents is part of the sport.

The NFL should fine players involved in fights their pay for that game. Perhaps that would encourage them to keep their hitting legal.

Speaking of money, first round draft pick Jeff Hartings, an offensive lineman out of Penn State, finally decided to sign with the Lions — almost a month into the regular season. While details of the deal weren't released, the hold out was certainly about money, even though Hartings surely received a contract worth millions of dollars.

Someone should tell these young men that they're incredibly lucky to be playing a sport for a living, much less getting the opportunity to make more money through advertising contracts, and national fame. Players like Hartings are blessed with ability and the fact they hold out when they should be happy to just be playing in the NFL is a joke.

One of those players who realize how lucky he is to be in the league is the Patriots' Larry Whigham, a backup safety. While Whigham does not get much playing time in the regular defense, he has become a special teams ace for the team.

His standing orders to go for a punt block if he thinks he can get one paid off this week as he blocked a Greg Montgomery punt, leading to Tedy Bruschi's game–clinching TD.

Whigham shows his joy of playing on the field every week, as he tries to motivate his teammates to a higher level of play. Whigham, and all the other players like him, make the game enjoyable, even with the antics of people like Irvin, Morris, George, Robertson and Hartings.

Jacob W. Michaels is a Collegian Columnist.

...ys away. Ticket...
...ked up today at th...
...y Hicks Cage from ...
... to 5 p.m. Make sure ...
...ing your student I.D...
...ts are free and two ...
... given to each pe...
...dnight Madness

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 27 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Thursday, October 10, 1996

Bruiser Ball begins!

Edgar Padilla and the UMass hoop squad will take center stage for Midnight Madness on Monday (See sports, page 14).

Arts & Living seeks commitment

Everything you've ever wanted to know about the art of dating is inside today's Collegian. Find out about email loves, date movies and more (See Arts & Living, page 5).

WORLD

New leader sworn in to heal torn Kashmir

By Qazar Mirza
Associated Press

SRINAGAR, India — Local leaders assumed power in India's troubled state of Kashmir yesterday for the first time in six years, despite a strike called by separatists that shut down the Kashmir valley.

Farooq Abdullah, 60, was sworn in as the state's top elected official, ending six years of direct federal rule that began after the separatist campaign turned violent.

"My first priority will be to restore peace," Abdullah said after taking the oath of office at a heavily guarded conference hall. The ceremony was televised live across India.

Kashmir is the only majority Muslim state in predominantly Hindu India. Muslim separatists want Kashmir to become part of Pakistan, India's Islamic neighbor, or to become independent. More than 14,500 people have been killed in the conflict since 1989. Indian officials hope Abdullah's assumption of office will be a first step toward a return to normalcy in Kashmir, but a widespread strike today showed that goal was still elusive.

NATION

Promos make profit as smoking ads drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cigarette industry spent $1.2 billion less on advertising and promotions in 1994 than in the previous year, the first drop in the industry's massive marketing budget since 1986.

Cigarette makers spent $4.83 billion in 1994, down almost 20 percent from $6.03 billion the prevous year, the Federal Trade Commission reported Wednesday.

Most of the drop came from promotions that directly hit consumers' wallets: coupons, multiple-pack discounts and other so-called "value-added promotions." Cigarette makers cut in half spending on such promotions, to $1.25 billion, down from an all-time high of $2.56 billion in 1993, the FTC said in its annual report to Congress.

Americans also got fewer free cigarette samples in 1994. That spending dropped to just $7 million in 1994, down from $40 million the previous year.

But tobacco companies increased by $95 million their spending on T-shirts, hats and other trinkets that bear cigarette brand names. They spent $850.8 million in 1994 on such promotions. Tobacco firms say they're simply ad tools, while smoking foes charge that teen-agers who own the popular items are more likely to smoke than their peers.

Companies also spent 7 percent more on magazine ads in 1994, totaling $251.6 million.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 60 LOW: 40	HIGH: 50 LOW: 30	HIGH: 55 LOW: 35

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds.....page 12
Comics.....page 13
Crossword.....page 12
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News.....page 3
Sports.....page 14

SGA alleges Housing violations; sweeps may be unconstitutional

By Raghuram Vadarevu
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Undergraduate Student Senate unanimously passed a motion last night, which demands University Housing Services cease their practice of room sweeps for illegal items without proper notification.

According to senators, the room sweeps are done under the guise of fire drills, and are in blatant violation of the Wellman document and the Housing Residence Hall manual.

"I feel that any entry into a student's room without a serious health and safety concern and without a warrant is a direct violation of their fourth amendment rights," said Seth Avakian, the Southwest Area Government representative to the student senate, in referring to the Fourth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

The amendment protects individuals from illegal search and seizures.

The motion was enacted to prevent a "lounge furniture room–sweep" in Thoreau Residence Hall in the Southwest Residential Area.

"This is a 'stop–gap' measure to stop [the sweeps] until we can have a discussion with housing over the viability of the policy," said Brian Tirrell, speaker of the SGA Senate.

"I spoke to Jeff Ederer (director of Southwest South) and he told me that this has always been the policy, but just not the practice," said Sen. Jennifer Casasanto (SW–John Adams).

"The students are demanding that the policy be changed immediately," she added.

According to Casasanto, the R.A.s go into each room to look for illegal items during the fire drill.

Tirrell said that the policy violated the University premise that unannounced inspections can only happen in the event of an emergency.

According to the motion, the room sweep policy specifi-

Turn to VIOLATIONS . page 3

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

The SGA Executive Cabinet addresses the first Undergraduate Senate meeting in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union Building, last night. Pictured left to right, Jeff Coker, David Heyes, Peter Kilbourne, Rob Mcdonald and Ashavan Doyon.

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

Arts and crafts...
Stefanie DiGioia, a senior art major, and Jessica Bearce, a sophmore nutrition major, made beaded necklaces together in the Craft Center yesterday afternoon.

Bulger talks on funding at UM trustee meeting

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees met yesterday in the VIP room of the Mullins Center to discuss the governance of the UMass system (Amherst, Boston, Dartmouth, Lowell and Worcester).

Robert Karam, the chair of the Board of Trustees, opened the meeting with a short address concerning 21 UMass Amherst faculty who were honored at a ceremony on Tuesday night.

"The 21 faculty members honored last night are an outstanding example of all faculty at UMass," Karam said.

President William P. Bulger added, "It was a splendid evening honoring these long-term, faithful faculty members."

Former Board Chair Dan Taylor was also honored at the ceremony.

Bulger informed the Board of Trustees that each of the five UMass campuses has received funding increases of at least six percent.

According to Bulger, the increases will be used for special programmatic needs at the campuses. UMass Boston will be increasing scholarships for students; Amherst will be investing money in their best departments in order to fulfill the standards of the National Research Council; Lowell campus will be working on infrastructure; and Dartmouth campus will add more computers to their labs.

Bulger distributed a letter given to him yesterday from the Executive Office for Administration and Finance of the State House, signed by secretary Charles D. Baker.

The letter said that Governor William F. Weld's campaign has decided to give $217 million over the next five years to the University of Massachusetts. The allocation fulfills 50 percent of the University of Massachusetts Capitol Plan; the University's commitment is to match the Commonwealth's resources with its own resources.

The plan will use half the money for the construction of new buildings, and the other half for deferred maintenance costs.

"The fact that the government has pledged to give us the money in writing is a great step forward," Bulger said.

The Amherst campus will receive approximately $60 million from the state.

In the letter, Secretary Baker wrote, "I applaud the committment of you and your Trustees to the rehabiliation, repair and replacement of your existing facilities, as well as the development of appropriate additional facilities."

Bulger also announced that he will be visiting high schools across the Commonwealth in the upcoming months, hoping to appeal to the top 15 percent of graduating seniors.

"We want to show high school students that we are a place of great excellence," he said. "We will encourage students to come to UMass."

Bulger spoke about Campaign UMass, which will begin next Thursday. The campaign is a five year plan to raise $125 million

Turn to BULGER, page 3

UM to host Feng lecture

By Daniel E. Levenson
Collegian staff

On October 17, the "1996 Tsuan Hua Feng Lecture in Environmental Engineering" will be given at 3 p.m. in the University of Massachusetts Campus Center in room 101.

The lecture will be presented by Robert C. Marini, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Camp Dresser & McKee Inc., an international environmental engineering firm.

According to Sarina Ergas, associate professor of civil and environmental engineering at UMass, Marini's lecture will focus on several key issues facing environmental engineering today. She said it will focus on "the nature of the work we do."

"Although it's specifically an environmental engineering lecture, the information is for engineers in general," Ergas said.

The annual lecture is named after Professor Tsuan Hua (Tom) Feng, who founded the UMass Environmental Engineering program. He joined the faculty in 1951 and stayed for 31 years. It was first presented in 1989.

The presentation will be open to the general public, and will be of special interest to those working in the field of engineering.

Ergas said that there have been changes in the field, such as more women entering the profession and increased focus on international involvement in environmental issues.

Marini, who received his B.S. with honors in civil engineering from Northeastern University in 1954, and his M.S. in sanitary engineering from Harvard University in 1955, is a diplomat for the American Academy of Environmental Engineers.

He is also a fellow of both the American Society of Civil Engineers and the American Consulting Engineers Counsel, as well as a member of the National Academy of

Turn to LECTURE, page 2

UM students organize for Immigrants & Poor March

By Lisa Chiu
Collegian Staff

On Friday, late into the night, over 150 University of Massachusetts students and concerned community members will meet at Hagis Mall to board three busses on route to our nation's capital.

They will go to attend the first ever Immigrants and Poor March on Washington. The march will take place Saturday, Oct. 12, when nationwide, people have the day off due to Columbus Day. The march will convene at the Lincoln Memorial.

The UMass contingency to the march has been organized by several students and student groups including, Casa Dominicana, Ahora, the ALANA Caucus, Boricuas Unidos, Campus Activities, Graduate Student Senate, Haitian American Student Association, Latin American Cultural Center, Office of ALANA Affairs, Student Government Association and others.

The UMass organizers have raised $4,000 from various student organizations, faculty members, academic departments, and local businesses.

March Organizer, Mahmood Ketabchi stressed that they still need another $1,300 to obtain a third bus. Over 250 people have already signed up for the march and there is an extensive waiting list.

The three buses and two vans can only accommodate 150 people (47 per bus). According to Ketabchi, if they do not raise enough funds for the third bus, 47 people will have to be turned away.

Coordinadora 96, the National organizers, based in New York, are calling for all immigrants of color to join them in seven demands which they call proposition one, to present to the United States government. These points include:

•Human constitutional rights for all
•Equal opportunities and Affirmative Action
•Free public education for all children through university
•Expansion of health services
•No more police brutality
•Reform labor laws and increase the minimum wage to cost of living.
•Citizenship now and amnesty for undocumented immigrants.

A poster by Coordinadora 96 reads, "Immigrants and poor are under heavy attack by racists and corporations. We are left with only one way to respond: Organize ourselves and fight back."

Ketabchi, a graduate labor studies student, became involved in planning

Turn to ORGANIZE . page 3

Gore, Kemp face off in Florida

Prime–time VP showdown tackles Clinton's domestic and foreign policies

By John King
Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Vice President Al Gore and Jack Kemp debated politely but pointedly Wednesday night, agreeing to leave character issues aside but differing sharply over economic policy and President Clinton's leadership abroad.

"This economy is overtaxed, overregulated," Kemp said in making the case for GOP presidential nominee Bob Dole's plan to cut taxes 15 percent across the board. Kemp said the economy was growing a feeble 2.5 percent a year under Clinton. "Bob Dole and I believe we can do a lot better."

Gore, in turn, said repeatedly that Dole and Kemp were offering a "risky $550 billion tax scheme" that would "blow a hole in the deficit and cause much deeper cuts in Medicare, Medicaid, education and the environment."

The early salvos between Kemp and Gore closely tracked the positions staked out by Clinton and Dole in their first debate Sunday night. The presidential contenders meet in a second and final debate next Wednesday in San Diego.

Dole was criticized by some Republicans after the first debate for not attacking Clinton on administration ethical lapses. Moderator Jim Lehrer opened the 90-minute debate by asking Kemp if he agreed with the critics.

"In my opinion, it is beneath Bob Dole to go after anyone personally," Kemp said. He said Dole and he wanted a campaign fought with "civility and respect and integrity and decency." Gore thanked Kemp for that answer, and from there the debate proceeded politely, even though the two men differed sharply over tax policy. Gore promoted Clinton's plan for targeted tax cuts to help low- and middle-class families pay for college. Kemp said government should not engage in "social engineering" by picking winners and losers through its tax policy.

Gore put Kemp on the defensive by noting the former Bush administration housing secretary had differed with conservatives in his own party by defending affirmative action programs.

Turn to SHOWDOWN . page 2

■ Candidates tap on the issues, but offer few answers

By Michael Elliott
Collegian Staff

Maybe it was the weather — because this time, the debate was somewhat interesting.

News Analysis

Republican Vice Presidential nominee Jack Kemp and Vice President Al Gore squared off last night in St. Petersburg, Florida, in what proved to be a refreshing turn from the more scripted presidential debate Sunday.

Kemp, never a conservative, did his best to defend Bob Dole, a man who he has criticized in the past. A definite contrast to a restrained Gore, Kemp was the primary catalyst of discussion.

While doing so, he found himself on interesting ground, engaging issues which conservatives generally do not address in

Turn to ANALYSIS, page 2

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Thursday, Oct. 10

Class — Sponsored by the UMass Anamda Marga Yoga Club, this class is an introduction to meditation and yoga practices, taught by Dada Anamtanda, in the Butterfield 2nd floor lounge at 8 p.m.

Lecture — Iftti Nasim, a poet from Pakistan, will read his poetry and discuss his work in a lecture entitled "On Being Gay and Creative in South Asian Culture," at 12:30 p.m. in Campus Center room 803. The event is free, wheelchair accessible, and is part of the GLBT Studies Lecture Series, and is co-sponsored by the Stonewall Center. For more information, contact the UMass Stonewall Center at 545- 4824.

Meeting — The Asian American Student Association will hold its second general meeting at 7:30 p.m. in Campus Center room 917. Casino Night will be Oct. 19.

Meeting — There will be a Math Club meeting at 7 p.m. in LGRT 1521D. Refreshments will be served, and all math majors are welcome.

Theater — A One-Act Stand: Three One-Act Plays About Trying to Connect. Overruled, by George Bernard Shaw; The Field, by Robert Spera; and The Wibbly, Wobbly, Wiggly Dance That Cleopatra Did, by Tony award-winner Terrence McNally. From the UM Theater M.F.A. Directing Workshop. Tickets are $6;$3; for group rates call: 545-6820. Curtain Theater, FAC, 8 p.m.

Training — A civil and constitutional rights training session will be held in room 168 of the Campus Center from 6–8 p.m. Attorney Mickey Harris of the ACLU/NAACP will be present to answer questions regarding proper police procedure and constitutional rights. The event is sponsored by CAPHV (Coalition Against Police Harassment and Violence), RGR Youth Organization (Rising Generation Represent), GEO (Graduate Employee Organization) and the Alliance for Economic Justice. For details about transportation and daycare, call 549–1407 or 549–1939.

Speaker — The UMass chapter of Pi Sigma Alpha (the national political science honor society) is proud to host guest speaker Professor Karl Ryavec at 6 p.m. in the 6th floor lounge of Thompson. All political science majors and faculty are welcome to attend; and information about Pi Sigma Alpha will be available to those interested.

Friday, Oct. 11

Concert — Southwest Area Government presents Yep with special guests Colonel Mustard Trio and Jiggle the Handle at 8 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. Tickets are $5 at Tix Unlimited. For more information, contact the Southwest Area Government at 545-0960.

Lecture — Wolf Eston, from the University of New Mexico, will give a lecture entitled "The 2.06Ga Bushveld Catastrophe, South Africa, and Its Possible Global Effects on the Proterophytic–Paleophytic Boundary," in Morrill II South, room 131 at 3:30 p.m. This lecture is a part of the Geosciences Lecture Series.

Opening Reception — The Student Union Art Gallery welcomes Benigna Chilla back to Amherst for an exhibition of her current works. Her art will be on display at the Student Union Art Gallery from Oct. 10–Nov. 1. The reception will be from 5–7 p.m. For more information, call 545–0792.

Rally — The Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance will hold its annual National Coming Out Day Rally on the steps of the Student Union at noon. There will be speakers followed by an open microphone for those who wish to speak on the importance of the day, or simply for those who wish to "come out."

Study Break — National Coming Out Day study break with a showing of the "Torch Song Trilogy," at 7:30 p.m., along with food, fun and prizes. The event is free and sponsored by the Stonewall Center, Crampton House. For more information, call the Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

Notices

Academic — The Fall '96 Final Examination Schedule will be available beginning Friday, October 18. Copies will be delivered to students in residence halls, and will be available to off–campus students in the Registrar's Office (213 Whitmore).

New Organization — Attention Biracial and Multiracial Students on campus. A new organization is forming and your help is needed. If interested, call Jordan at 546–3548.

Sport — Learn how to hang glide. The UMass Hang Gliding Club is sponsoring a beginner weekend on Oct. 19– 20. Sign up now because space is limited. This is the cheapest way to learn how to fly – no experience necessary. Meetings are on Tuesdays at 6:30; everyone is invited to attend. Check board by SU ballroom for location of meetings and office hours. For more information, call 545- 0804 and leave a message.

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley offers rides to students to attend the 10 a.m. service in Amherst. Drivers arrive at the Knowlton and Prince bus stops at 9:45. Please call Mark to confirm, or for other stops, at 253-0361.

Health — To help students and their families stay healthy and access University Health Services more easily, members of the Health Reach International team are available to help you find answers to your questions and concerns: Mondays from 4:30-6:30 p.m. in the Health Education Dept., UHS room 248 (call 577–5181 for more info); Tuesdays 6:30–8:30 p.m. in the International Lounge, Prince House (call 545– 2299 for more info). All conversations are confidential.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition meetings are every Tuesday at 7 p.m. in room 306 of the Student Union. For more information, call the ARC office at 5–1925.

Staff Needed — The UMass Index yearbook needs staff in all departments. Editorial positions are available in Photo, Layout, Copy, and Marketing departments. An assistant copy editor and assistant sports editor are also needed. Meetings are held on Wednesdays at 7 p.m., 304 Student Union, or call 545–0848 if interested.

Religious — The Muslim Student Association at the University of Massachusetts invites all Muslims in the Amherst area to weekly Friday prayer from 1 to 2 p.m. in the United Asia Cultural Center Room (in the basement of Worcester Dining Common). For more information, call Utama at 256–8482 or Lalli at 253-0874.

Discussion Group — "A Course in Miracles" will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for 10 weeks on Mondays starting in September. For more information, call 253–3795.

Dance — The Northeast American School of Dance Studio in Northampton will hold a dance spree every Friday from 8:30 p.m. to midnight every Friday. People can dance to variety of music in a smoke and alcohol–free environment. All ages welcome. Sliding scale. For more information, call 584–8167.

Work–Study — All undergraduate students who have received federal work–study as part of their financial aid package must be on payroll by Friday, October 11, 1996 or have a deferral form filed at the Student Employment office by that same date. If you do not get on payroll or do not defer your work–study, you will only receive your spring portion of your award. Any questions, please call showdown

continued from page 1

Gore noted that Kemp had criticized a California ballot initiative rolling back affirmative action programs but then changed his position and spoken in favor of the measure after being selected to share the ticket with Dole. Gore said he wished Kemp had convinced Dole to change his position instead.

"With all due respect, I do not believe Abraham Lincoln would have adopted Bob Dole's position to end all affirmative action," Gore said.

Gore began the evening with a light note, offering Kemp a deal. "If you won't use any football stories, I won't tell any of my warm and humorous stories about chlorofluorocarbon abatement," he said in a stiff voice. Kemp quickly accepted.

The prime-time debate was carried by three major broadcast networks. But there was competition on Fox, which carried the first game of the National League Championship series.

For activists in both parties, there was an inescapable subplot to the vice presidential debate. Gore, 48, is all but certain to seek the Democratic presidential nomination in four years. And if Dole loses to Clinton, the 61-year-old Kemp would be considered the top early prospect for the next Republican nomination.

But they kept their focus on the men at the top of the Democratic and Republican tickets.

"Our foreign policy is ambivalent, confusing," Kemp said of the Clinton administration. "We have learned over the years that weakness is provocative."

An overriding Kemp theme was that Clinton and Gore wanted the government to have too heavy a hand in every area of domestic policy, placing too many rules on initiatives ranging from urban empowerment zones to targeted tax cuts.

In contrast, he said, Dole would first cut taxes and then rewrite the "7.5 million-words-long" tax code altogether, making it flatter, fairer and less confusing. Kemp said this approach would make millions of dollars in job-creating capital available. "He will call it trickle down, I call it Niagara Falls," Kemp said of Gore.

Gore's quick retort: "The problem is Mr. Dole and Mr. Kemp would put the American economy in a barrel and send it over Niagara Falls."

analysis

continued from page 1

a constructive manner — specifically, Affirmative Action and inner–city investment.

He blamed social welfare programs for compromising the path to prosperity for the urban poor, characterizing the economic system in which they live as one of a "third world socialist country."

He said that conditions more conducive to free enterprise would provide opportunities that stem from economic privileges, such as a college education, to those historically denied.

Kemp, however, was unclear as to how this agenda would manifest itself in cities like Los Angeles and Detroit. Towards the end of the debate, in fact, he asked a question of Gore which he should have directed at himself — namely, how the capitalist system can progress into the next century when it has become clear that it plays a role in the perpetuation of class and racial inequality.

On Affirmative Action, Gore reiterated President Bill Clinton's appeal to "mend it, not end it." He criticized Kemp for supporting California Proposition 209, which would make all forms of racial and gender "set aside" programs unconstitutional.

However, Gore did not comment on why Clinton has not made Affirmative Action a defining issue in the campaign — indeed, this debate was a rarity in that the issue was prominently discussed.

Gore was more concrete when the debate turned to education, citing the $1500 Hope scholarship, which, if fully implemented, will make two years of community college education universal. Additionally, he said Clinton would make up to $10,000 each year tax deductible to finance a college education.

Any administration, however, will be pressed to provide these kind of benefits without someone paying a cost at some level.

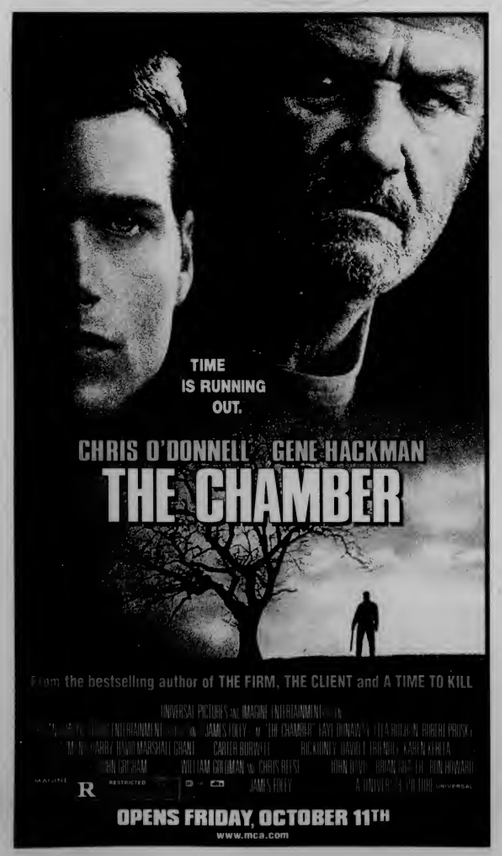
Kemp was very general as he discussed education, and did not respond to Gore's accusations that Dole would eliminate the Department of Education. On his part, however, Gore did not say what the implications of such a move would be, missing a opportunity to attract the attention of student voters.

The candidates relied on several recurring themes throughout the debate. Gore said that Dole's proposal to cut taxes while protecting programs which benefit the elderly, the poor, education and the environment is not realistic. Kemp fought back, be accusing Gore of waging a campaign of fear to paralyze voters.

Both, however, were not on solid ground. While it may be easy to point the finger at the 104th Congress, Gore and Clinton will be hard pressed to make due on their lofty proposals to cut the deficit without reducing entitlement and discretionary spending.

On the other hand, Kemp's point was legitimate, though not totally accurate. However, he only succeeds with this argument in derailing Gore and did not proactively articulate the Dole agenda.

lecture



continued from page 1

Engineering.

Marini is involved with several local and national professional organizations, including the American Public Works Association, the American Water Works Association and the Water Environment Federation.

In 1992, Daniel A. Okun, professor of environmental engineering at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, gave a lecture entitled "The Urban Water Crisis."

Last year's speaker was Phillip C. Singer, professor, department of environmental sciences and engineering at University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Singer's lecture was entitled, "Disinfection By-Products in Drinking Water: Formation Regulation & Control."

DISTINGUISHED TEACHING AWARD NOMINATIONS

DEADLINE: MONDAY, NOVEMBER 4,

If you know

A FACULTY MEMBER OR TEACHING ASSISTANT/ASSOCIATE WHO IS TRULY OUTSTANDING AND DESERVES RECOGNITION, SUBMIT A SIGNED NOMINATION IN WRITING WITH A BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF WHY YOUR NOMINEE DESERVES THE AWARD.

ALUMNI AND CURRENT UNDERGRADUATE/GRADUATE STUDENTS MAY NOMINATE.

For More Information Contact:
Lori Baronas at 545-5278 or
E-Mail Address: l.baronas@dpc.umassp.edu

TO: Distinguished Teaching Award Committee
Office of the Graduate Dean
Room 514 Goodell
Fax 413-545-3754

Bulger

continued from page 1

through private funds, which will then be matched by the state by up to $25 million per year.

"I know that the campaign will be a wonderful success," Bulger said. "It will ensure that UMass is ready for the 21st century."

UMass Amherst's goal of acceptance into the American Association of Universities (AAU) was a major topic of discussion.

The AAU is a group of 60 major research universities in the United States. According to Chancellor David K. Scott, the AA constitutes a powerful lobbying force in Washington D.C.

If UMass becomes an AAU member, it will be one of only 17 members who are both AAU and Landgrant affiliates.

"UMass will assume its rightful place in education through AAU membership," Scott said.

Scott gave a presentation of his Strategic Action Plan, "Towards a Commonwealth of Learning," which will be enacted over the next five years.

The plan resulted from a result of proposals from the Trustees and the President's Office in 1993.

"Strategic Action arrived through the very important realization that important societal changes are taking place," Scott said. "Societal expectations call for a university that is more inter–connected and more humane and caring."

Scott said that a major aspect of Strategic Action was to create synergy between the core value of a Land Grant (LG) University and its goal.

The Chancellor used a quote from Abraham Lincoln to describe the core value of an LG university: "Schools feed clothe and enlighten the great brotherhood of mankind."

He added that teaching, outreach and research will create a better and wiser world.

The "Big Audacious Goal (BAG)" of the University, according to Scott's plan, is membership in the AAU.

"It is most important to bridge the sore value with the BAG to create a model University," Scott said. "As an AAU/Land Grant University, UMass will be a flashing beacon spreading light across the Commonwealth, nation and, hopefully, the world."

organize

continued from page 1

for the march this summer when he worked in New York for Unite, a union of needle trade industrial and textile employees.

According to Ketabchi, the purpose of the march is to challenge the recent poor and immigrant bashing occurring in the government. The purpose of proposition one is to present a list of demands to the congress and the president to consider.

"We are really just demanding that the congress stop the measures that it is taking against legal and the so called illegal immigrants," said Ketabchi.

He said that the anti-immigrant movement out of control, and that the government wants people to think they are just targeting so called illegal immigrants when in actuality they are targeting all poor people and people of color.

"What is happening now in the country is going to affect all of us whether we come from Asia, Latin America or the Middle East, all immigrants of color are being targeted by these kinds of measures that the Congress and Clinton are taking and signing," Ketabchi said.

Ketabchi said he sees lots of student response for the march. He said that students seemed eager and excited to participate in the march, and that many students from all over the five college area have signed up.

Chairperson of Casa Dominicana, Aida Baez also sees student excitement.

"There are a lot of students who are really interested, they are calling from everywhere, since its a long weekend you would think most people would want to go home, but a lot are going to the march."

Baez, said that she wanted to plan for the march because she too saw how it united different groups of people.

"Hopefully the government will listen to what we are proposing, and see us as people. Hopefully students will feel like they took part in history, like in the sixties. This time we can say we did this," Baez said.

The UMass contingency will meet this Fri. at 10 p.m. at Hagis Mall and depart for Washington D.C. at 11 p.m. They will return to Amherst on Sunday at approximately 2 a.m. violations

continued from page 1

cally violates two Board of Trustees documents that set University policy.

"According to the Wellman document, housing must inform the student government of all policies concerning student welfare," Casasanto said.

The Wellman document and the Residence Hall manual hold administration and students equally accountable for their actions, said Ashavan Doyon, secretary of University policy.

"If a student breaks a contract, they are subject to all sorts of punishment and sanctions by the University," Doyon said. "I would love to see the administration succeptible to that sort of judicial procedure."

The Senate also voted to uphold President Maurice Caston's veto of a motion presented at the end of last semester.

The purpose of the motion was to grant WMUA (91.1) $4,500 from the SGA long–term reserves account to buy a new radio transmitter, which was 23 years old.

"The president acted in the best interest of the student body by vetoing such legislation," said Jeff Coker, secretary of finance. "Passing this legislation would have showed a vote of no confidence in the president."

Caston said that WMUA was awarded $25,500 by SGA from the additional funds in the Student Activities Trust Funds relief fund.

According to Coker, the long–term reserves are funds that are set aside in the event of an emergency.

He pointed to a possible catastrophic event such as a Student Union Building fire.

"I opposed the veto because I felt that WMUA is a major student resource," Sen. Paul Ferro (SW–Kennedy) said.

The SGA also passed a motion which will create a Women's Issues and Safety Commitee to address concerns of rape and political awareness.

Collegian Staff member Bryan Schwartzman contributed to this article.

SWAG hosts LBGA film, discussion

By Kate Elliott
Collegian Correspondent

On Monday night, the Southwest Area Government (SWAG) hosted a film and panel discussion with five members of the Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance (LBGA).

Sugar Jones, a cookie manufacturer in Amherst, supplied cookies and milk, and members of SWAG brought their questions.

The film, entitled "Straight from the Heart," detailed the lives of four families, and how their childrens' coming out affected them. The positive message of the film was intended to aid straight parents of gay children, and to help them deal with the internal issues they may be facing.

After the film, the LBGA opened the floor to questions and discussion. Since questions were slow to come at first, the LBGA asked the audience their feelings on what the campus had to offer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender (GLBT) students. Students agreed that the climate here for GLBT people is tolerant on the surface, but there is a definite undercurrent of homophobia at the University of Massachusetts.

At this point, the audience opened up more. Questions ranged from how to help friends who are questioning their sexuality, to what SWAG members, as student leaders, can do to help queer community members and the LBGA.

The panel members stressed the importance of being supportive of friends who are in the process of coming out to themselves, along with reassuring them "it's ok if you're gay — you're still my friend." Panel members also asked the student leaders to be aware of the language they use.

Words like "queer," "fag," and "dyke" are heard everyday, as insults and offhand comments. Even though these words are often used without any regards to sexual orientation, they serve to reinforce negative stereotypes and poor self– images. The LBGA asked the audience to try to make an effort not to use such language, and to ask others to do the same.

The LBGA wrapped up the hour–long discussion by announcing the National Coming Out Day rally, to be held on the steps of the Student Union on October 11 from noon– 2 p.m.

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

Pool shark...
Shanti Shipsky, a senior natural resource studies major, played pool in the Games Room, in the Student Union, yesterday.

MIDDAY MADNESS at:
CAMPUS GEAR
Be Prepared for Midnight Madness & UMASS Basketball with Merchandise from Campus Gear.
•T-Shirts •Hats
•Sweatshirts •Jerseys & Shorts
ALL UMASS BASKETBALL PARAPHERNALIA
20% OFF!
Friday 10/11 – Tuesday 10/15
at
CAMPUS GEAR
Between Dave's Mart & Northampton Co-Op Bank

EL ACUÑA
Bar & Grill
Now Open SIX Nights a Week 'Till 1 AM!
$3.75 Mega Margaritas
$2.00 16oz Drafts
Full Menu untill 11 pm, Appetizers until we close
Friday night D.J. Dance Party!
Saddle seats
Behind Antonio's
$2.25 Corona
$2.75 Micros
41 Boltwood Walk, Amherst
413-259-4040
Tues. – Sun. 11:30 a.m. – 1 a.m.

THE LEAVES AREN'T THE ONLY THINGS FALLING! OUR PRICES ARE TOO!!!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
COORS & COORS LIGHT 30 PACK CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS $15.49 + DEP
ROLLING ROCK CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BAR BOTTLES $12.99 + DEP
HARPOON I.P.A., ASSORTED MIXED & SAM ADAMS LAGER 12 PK. BOTTLES $8.99 + DEP
GENESSE 18 PACK CREAM ALE - RED - ICE CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS $9.49 + DEP
NEW BASS COUNTRY CHASE ALE 6 PK BOTTLES $5.99 + DEP
WINE OF THE MONTH
NAPA RIDGE CHARDONNAY, ZINFANDEL, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750ML $5.99
GALLO LIVINGSTON CELLARS ALL FLAVORS 3.0LT $6.99
BOLLA WINES ALL FLAVORS 1.5LT $8.99
FETZER EAGLE PEAK MERLOT 750ML $6.99
SUTTER HOME WHITE ZINFANDEL 1.5LT $6.49
Cossack VODKA 1.75L SALE 9.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -2.00 FINAL COST $7.49
FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED WHISKEY 1.75L SALE 11.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -4.00 FINAL COST $7.49
BLACK VELVET 1.75L $12.49
JACK DANIELS 750ML $10.99
J&B SCOTCH 1.75L $24.99
We Accept Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 10/10/96 THRU WEDS. 10/16/96
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Friendly's presents
The New Jersey NETS battle the Washington Bullets
Sunday October 13th 7 p.m.
See 7' 6" Shawn Bradley, Ed O'Bannon and Kerry Kittles of the Nets and Bullets' 7' 7" Gheorghe Mureson, Chris Webber, and All Star Juwan Howard.
Tickets on sale now at: MULLINS CENTER
See basketball again in the "Cal Zone" as this game marks the return of Coach John Calipari!
NEWS 40 DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE TODAYS 99.3 MODERN ROCK

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Morse Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Mark McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor
Michael Elliott News Editor
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor

Josh Sylvester Editorial Production Manager
Sean Horgan Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Rob McDonald Circulation Manager
Ryan Courtemanche Subscription Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Renee LeBlanc Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

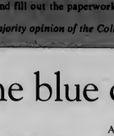
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Registration deadlines are quickly approaching for the upcoming Nov. 4 elections. Next Wednesday, Oct. 16 marks the final day to register for elections in Massachu setts.
Mail-in voter registration forms must be postmarked or delivered by hand to the local Board of Election Commission by that date. Applications for absentee ballots are not due until the day of the election.
The Collegian urges its readers to take the time and register to vote before the upcoming elections. It is the right to vote the campus community has the ability to gain greater political clout in local, state and state events.
On campus, the Student Center for Educational Research (SCERA) is available to help students register. Look for their tables in the Student Union.
Take the time over the next week and fill out the paperwork. It may be the most important thing you do all semester.
Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian Editorial Board.



In the blue corner…

I was ready for a fight.

When I tuned into the debate Sunday night, I wanted a knock–down, drag–out, bare–knuckles, shirts–off, no–holds– barred clash of titans. I wanted blood. I wanted maximum carnage. I wanted them blotting the mess up off of the walls of the Bushnell for weeks.

I didn't get it.

What I got instead were two stodgy men, swapping gentle barbs and chuckling self–consciously and deliberately insisting that they liked each other. All that were missing were oversized red leather chairs, cognac and cigars.

Bob Dunn

I didn't want a "gentleman's gathering." I wanted the Thunderdome. I wanted Clinton and Dole to march into the arena raising their arms and pumping their fists while an audience of mutants, freaks and half–wits scream their blood lust: "Two men enter… one man leaves."

That would have been something to see.

All of this is metaphorical, of course. I would never suggest something so brutal and archaic as to put two men in a steel cage with chainsaws, sledgehammers and rusty scythes, At the same time, though, I didn't want these two guys up there acting like old college rivals trading quips at a cocktail party, either.

I was ready for a fight.

It makes sense when you think about it. If you dig back deep into our tribal ancestry, into our collective unconscious, we need battles. We want the ascension of our tribal chieftain to be determined by overpowering the opponent. If we can't have it in a physical contest, like in the good old days, then we should at least have it in a verbal one.

I didn't get it.

Dole left ample opportunity to be skewered, too. Stumbling over his words, wasting no time in mentioning World War Two (within the first 30 seconds of his opening remarks if my watch was correct), taking cheap shots at Clinton and his family, and all the time I was screaming at the set.

"Finish him! C'mon he left himself wide open! Parry! Thrust! Cry havoc! And let slip the dogs of war!," I cried. But he didn't. Clinton smiled, shifted his weight, and calmly retorted, draping his barbs in feathers and velvet. Deciding to throw his punches in a boxing glove full of down.

At the same time, Dole reacted to perceived inaccuracies in Clinton's answers with raised eyebrows, bugged–out eyes, and sideways glances. Yup, nothing says astute political commentary better than funny faces.

A lot of the blame can be laid on the shoulders of Jim Lehrer, the moderator, who never even dared to ask anything even closely resembling a tough question. Didn't even bother to directly ask how either candidate proposed to make their plans work.

For example, if Dole is so insistent that his tax plan is a good idea, and 546 economists (including seven Nobel laureates) tell him it isn't, how can he convince us otherwise?

If Dole is so insistent that young people turn away from the evils of drugs, what does he offer as an alternative? And, how does eliminating the Department of Education help?

How does Clinton react to critics who say his anti–terrorism legislation threatening to cut off aid to any ally who continues to do business with suspected "terrorist" countries is reactionary, racist, and setting a dangerous precedent?

These are the questions that make the candidates squirm. This is what we needed to see. Not only do they provide a glimpse of the "character" of the candidate, but we actually might learn something about how they plan to run things in the next four years.

What we got instead of how a candidate stacks up than to ask them tough questions, see how they handle themselves and give them the opportunity to take their opponent down a few pegs?

So, I'm hoping for round two the gloves come off. Pistols at dawn! Let the two tribal chiefs enter the sacred circle and battle it out for supremacy. Who wants to see two nice guys spar? Let's see two battle–scarred behemoths verbally pound each other. Chuck the "gentlemen's agreement" out the window. In the attempt to soften the debate, it only serves to deflect attention away from what's really important: ideas, trust and a plan of action. None of these were brought up, as the candidates instead relied on charm and pre–written jokes.

I'm ready for a fight.

Maybe next time, we'll get one.

Bob Dunn is a Collegian columnist.

A Multicultural Joke

Is anyone out there sick of hearing and/or reading about multiculturalism yet? It's almost as if the word itself has evolved to stand for some sort of necessarily attainable utopia. Proponents of multiculturalism would hold each and every one of our society personally responsible for achieving some sort higher state of multicultural unity. Where is the necessity?

Evan Young

I simply don't feel that multiculturalism is of utmost importance. I have read over and over how it will become increasingly impossible to live in our society if you lack some sort of cultural awareness. I have read that if you cannot respect others not only despite their differences, but especially because of those differences, then you will find yourself lost in the modern multicultural world that will inevitably develop.

I repeat: Where is the necessity for all of this? Why do I need to be more culturally aware? I get along fine as it is. Maybe I just don't understand what multiculturalism is all about. If you are white and you go to the store, and the person behind the counter is black, are you being a good multicultural citizen if you are nice to them? Is respect the only requirement here? Respect is something that should be earned, not given away. I refuse to simply respect somebody because it will make an everyday exchange such as a purchase at the CVS easier.

What gets me is that when someone speaks of multiculturalism, they are telling you to blindly accept and respect someone simply because they are of a different origin, race or religion. I am white, but I am American, from a Lutheran background, and with a mostly Italian heritage. Am I really simply white? No, but that's where I lie in the multicultural world, and that's the basis on which blacks, Asians, gays and Hindus would have to respect me.

That is wrong. I am not to be respected simply because of convenient labels. Read what I write, listen to what I say, and base your opinion of me on what I am, not what category I fit in. The problem with multiculturalism is that it would easily ignore the individual in light of the color of their skin.

But I have a bigger problem. Where I am asking others to base their opinions of me on who I am, I very quickly form opinions on others based on what they look like; basically, that is racism, the arch–enemy of multiculturalism. I have read that racism is proof of weakness, of stupidity, of an unwillingness to care about the differences of others. Racism is wrong.

Is this true? Isn't racism simply natural? Is it racist for me to look at a black person and think that here is someone who comes from a completely different background than me, his family values may be different, his religion may be different, and his breadth of experience is most certainly different. I am simply not like him at all, and will never truly understand what it means to live as he does. Where is the racism? It seems like a perfectly natural thing for me to think.

So is racism a term derived only from the use of stereotyping? Stereotypes have evolved to become what they are for a reason; there is some sort of truth behind most stereotypes. Do Irish people drink more? Are Italian men more jealous than others? My friends and I were discussing racism the other night, in light of a racist joke. It was a joke that played on a basic stereotype, and I basically felt wrong for laughing. Well, if supporting negative stereotypes through jokes is what racism is, then I guess that's what I am.

But of course, the term "racist" implies some sort of hatred. A racist does not simply view someone as different because of their skin color, but hates them because of it. Hatred is, of course, wrong. But the main point is this: It is just as bad to blindly hate somebody because of their race as it is to blindly accept them because of their race. Multiculturalism seems to be the flip side of the same coin as racism.

Learning how to be completely colorblind, as multiculturalism says, is not possible. All people of all races not only have different cultural histories, but different personal histories. The day when all of these differences are blindly accepted is the day that they lose all of their importance. I will not attempt to either live in or achieve a perfect, happy, homogenous multicultural society, exactly because we are all different.

Evan Young is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Big concert blues

Sunday, Oct. 6 Mullins Center 7:30 p.m.

The lights dim, the band takes the stage, and they come out of the woodwork. You never know where they'll be or who they are until that pivotal moment when the show begins.

They come in all shapes and sizes, transcend all race and gender barriers. They usually look just like you and me. Shockingly, some of them are people you know, the crew you came with.

C. Taylor Conner

Suddenly, you find yourself in that inevitably claustrophobic big concert state, surrounded by big concert loons, vowing to never go to a big concert again.

You begin to take note of the basic characteristics of these folks, partly out of curiosity, but also partly for your own protection.

The Drinkers

Predominantly male, these are the clever guys who start shouting, "Play 'Smoke on the Water'" in the middle of the opening band's set. They're also the ones who cram beers into any body cavity necessary to avoid their discovery during security frisks.

Drinkers also have the innate ability to kick the back of your chair while you sit, and elbow you in the back of the head while you stand. The latter annoyance usually occurs as a result of the concert phenomena known as the "white man sway." Most Drinkers have perfected this aberration of all known human rhythmic impulses, which involves the erratic bending of the knees, accompanied by the equally unpredictable swinging of the arms.

Ironically, it is a blessing that there is an absolute negligence of hip movement, as this sort of pelvic motion might cause the Drinkers to soil themselves, as well as the unlucky fans around them.

The Stoners

While I have no problem with marijuana usage, the Stoners, that lovable group of sluggables whose pictures appear in dictionaries all over the world under the definition of "contact high," aren't the coolest on the concert scene.

It's almost never a thrill to have your vibe interrupted by the security guard who has to swing to your section two, three, four times just to ask those knuckleheads to cease and desist baking.

And another thing — Stoners, how slow do you want the beat to get? Is it your intention to inhale until a Dave Matthews harmony part sounds like the Benedictine Monks?

Frankly, I don't understand the whole logic. Weed makes the music more intense. Weed also can make you paranoid. It's always a temptation to turn around, even enduring that faceful of kind smoke, just to say, "You know, all these thousands of people — they're out to get you. And the band's in on it, too."

Stoners are usually guilty of the white–man sway, but naturally gesticulate at a much, much slower speed. In general, however, they prefer the "Dead–fan twirl" (a.k.a. the "Phish–fan swim"), which consists of pendular rocking with eyes cast starward and mouth ajar much like Nicholson in the end of One Flew Out of the Cuckoo's Nest. For further reference, rent any zombie flick.

The Dancers

There is a fine, yet distinguishable, line between grooving to the music and trying to execute a Bob Fosse routine in a space roughly the size of a Southwest corner room.

Dancers apparently have no concept of the physical constraints most of us recognize in our immediate space. They are impervious to the sharp sensations whacking one's limbs into non–malleable solids — ranging from hard, plastic seats to your hard, bony head — often produce.

Accordingly, they are also oblivious to the welts, cuts and bruises both they and the patrons around them sustain during their re–enactment of the Irene Cara–fueled mega–production number from Fame.

If you belong to any of the groups above, know that you are being observed, know your behavior irritates, and know that one day an incensed fan will open a cavity–smuggled can of Beat–Ass on you.

C. Taylor Conner is a Collegian columnist

This is who I am

As I sat looking out the muffled glass panes of my window, I thought to myself, "What kind of life am I leading?" Then I realized, Is this so wrong that I am in love with a woman? Is it so wrong that I choose to sleep with a woman next to me in my bed at night? Who's to say if it is? You? Who are you and why are you so concerned with who I am?

Jamie Sinsheimer

Two years ago I was in high school dating a man, thinking that I was actually in love with him. Not knowing what love was. As a juvenile young woman, I continued on in this relationship until I realized that something pertinent was indeed missing.

This realization came in October of my senior year somewhere around my birthday, when an event occured that I will probably never forget. Like many other high school seniors around the country, my boyfriend and I were sexually active. I had a pregnancy scare that completely turned me off to the prospect of sex, not to mention sex with him. I thought to myself during this time about why I was actually with this man. I didn't love him, but I thought I did. I didn't enjoy having sex with him, but I did (that's a whole different story). It was then that I realized I did not want to be with a man at all, and that was what was missing all along.

Now, let's skip back another year, to my junior year of high school. I was still with the same man (we were together for a little too long) and a close friend of mine was coming on a little bit too strong for me to deal with. One evening we were at her house, this girl and I, and we were having a conversation about lesbianism and bisexuality.

I told her that I always thought I was bisexual and something about being with my boyfriend always made me wonder what I was missing. She told me she felt the same way that I did and we almost kissed, but never did because fear stepped in the way. After that, our friendship, much to my chagrin, diminished.

Unfortunately, we do not speak any more, but our secret was safe within the white walls of her bedroom.

That was high school. I spent the majority of my time there closeted and miserable. I wasn't who I wanted to be for fear of what others would have thought. I lived my life to please other people and not bring any sort of differences into our warm cozy circle. It was a sad place for me to be at, but now that portion of my life is over.

As I entered college in the fall of last year, I came out so fast, it was like a tornado that I couldn't stop from twisting, but it was such a thrill. I came to school with a girlfriend whom I had met over the summer, and all the new people that I met associated me with this girl… like we were one– half of the same person. I hated that association because I wanted to be me, not someone else's "me."

As time progressed and Thanksgiving break fell upon me, I went home to "outness." Everyone at home knew about me, but I didn't know how to handle it. I was just getting comfortable with being out at school, so I didn't really know how to deal with it at home. It was a long winded chain of events that got back to my family and everyone else that I know. Basically, it felt like all of New York City knew that I was a lesbian, and they were all breathing down my neck for more information.

When I returned back to school to finish up my first semester, I came back to all sorts of negativity thrown in my face, including one homophobic remark on the door of my room. I confronted this the only way that I knew how, by writing. I wrote a letter to the residents of my building addressing this nonsense that was written so impersonally on my door. I proceeded to plaster this piece of writing all over my dorm, and I received positive reinforcement from a lot of people, which was comforting.

At about the same time I started to write for the GLBT (Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender) section of the Collegian. As I became more comfortable with dealing with the stupidity of people's mind–mindedness, I became more comfortable with myself.

My relationship with the woman I was seeing in my first semester slowly started to dwindle, and I started to really come into my own. No longer a freshman or just a writer, I am now the editor of GLBT Issues at the paper. I am proud of who I am, and definitely would not change a thing that has happened.

It is still hard to hear a comment like "dyke" being thrown at me as I walk down the street holding my girlfriend's hand, but I have learned to ignore it and enjoy just being who I am. So, yes, I am in love with a woman, and no matter what any one might say, they can not take that away from me.

Jamie Sinsheimer is a Collegian staff member.

Where are the cabs?

"Walk! Not bloody likely. I am going in a taxi."
— George Bernard Shaw

The University of Massachusetts at Amherst has a lot to offer a student like myself. It has given me the opportunity to study and live in a different country, expanding my knowledge not only academically, but also socially and culturally. Already in my short stay here I have been introduced to the wonders of American Football, dorm–style living, cable television and, of course, the "D.C. Licious" Dining Services.

Miranda Purnell

This is not to forget the phenomenon of "lite" beer, (less calories — yeah right), and the possibility of earning credit for subjects like step aerobics (which, in theory, no one needs to take because they drink "lite") and pocket billiards or frisbee. I have also come to love this little pocket of New England and the surrounding Five College Area, but (and I'm sure you could see this coming a mile away) I'm afraid I do have a bit of a bone to pick. It's about the transportation thing.

Unfortunately, I couldn't fit my car in my suitcase to bring over with me. If I had been able to, you'd see me driving around campus in a white Nissan with a "Get Your Rosaries Off My Ovaries" bumper sticker. But that's another story and another column. Even if I did have my car with me, I'd still be having the same problem I'm experiencing now. It's what's known as "T.D.S." (Taxi Depravation Syndrome), and I'm not exactly sure how much longer I can put up with it. Like the above mentioned George Bernard Shaw, Martin Scorcese, and countless other famous and/or fabulous people, I simply love taxis.

Taxis remind me of my childhood. Of speeding through a lit–up Sydney on Christmas Eve with my head on my mother's lap, exhausted but too excited to sleep. The taxi driver would be singing along to Christmas carols, and every so often my dad would turn around and wink at me from the front seat. As I grew older and lazier (too young to drive, but old enough to earn money), taxis became an essential feature of my lifestyle.

They meant I could stay out longer or go home early or go just about anywhere I wanted. Once I hit eighteen (the legal drinking age in Australia), I discovered the practicality and necessity of taxis in avoiding the booze bus and other unsavory situations. For me, taxis represent freedom and independence. They provide the ability to do what I want when I want, the only restrictions being the amount of cash in my pocket or credit on my card.

So here I am on a campus of 30–odd thousand people, in an area surrounded by reasonably affluent towns, and I cannot find a comprehensive taxi service in the Valley. The population at UMass alone should be enough to sustain a viable taxi company; yet when I look in the Yellow Pages, there are more entries under taxidermist than taxicab. It's not just that I'm selfish and want to enjoy the exhilaration of having wild, irrational, political conversations with taxi drivers again, but rather that I imagine taxis could be quite useful here.

I am forever being told not to walk the campus alone at night. While the escort service is an option, it can't be everything to everyone, and it certainly doesn't solve the problem of getting from Amherst or a private residence to my dorm. A taxi service which operated in addition to the escorts would allow people who could afford to, or who wanted to, to use it as a safe means of transportation, and this, in turn, would reduce the demand on the escort service.

Also, I can't help thinking about the issue of drunk–driving. Everyone knows that it is illegal, not to mention downright stupid and dangerous, to drive after drinking a certain amount. However, I am also told that it is illegal to sleep in your car. So what do you do if you have taken your car out, had a few too many "lites," and need to get home? Some may suggest the PVTA buses, and while I have found these to be most excellent (and free, which is quite amazing), they don't run everywhere and they don't run all night.

All over the world, taxis form an integral part of a city's identity. New York is known for its yellow taxis, and London for its black cabs. Surely there's a place on the campus roads — and in the Haigis Mall — for the maroon and white of "Minuteman Cabs."

Miranda Purnell is a UMass student.

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
ARTS & LIVING
Thursday October 10, 1996
Weekend Edition • Volume CVI Issue 27

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Chris Connor compares baseball and dating… p.5
Mike Burke asks if dating is dead… p.5
Seema Gangatirkar capures cute couples… p.5
Jeremy Brothers reviews classic date films… p.5
Matt Wurtzel gets sexy in cyberspace… p.6
Lisa Oliveri relives the fun of email love… p.6
Tara MK Connelly takes on the bar scene… p.7
The GLBT staff share stories on dating… p.7
Michelle Hillman on the dark side of dating… p.7

Personals

BORED IN SOUTHWEST
by HSCN and Dining Commons food. SBF, 18, Comm Major, looking for someone with a life for a change. Let's go out and get a real meal, see a good movie and maybe more.

OFF–CAMPUS
and loving it! 22 yr. old SWM finds it harder to meet people now that I'm not living in a tower. Looking for a [illegible] who's p[illegible] too lo[illegible] and [illegible] cute SW[illegible] drums, wa[illegible] another SW[illegible] ski[illegible] Into: the [illegible]scene. Looking for the same for dancing and making music.

SHY BOY
18, SWM, looking to meet someone to share these years which are supposed to be so good. Love hiking and smoking, hate the mall and MTV.

CHANGE THE WORLD
21, STEPC major, WF looking for anyone special to hang out with, write letters, march on D.C. NO REPUBLICANS!

MEAN JERK
SWM looking for some friendship and maybe more. I'll never talk to you and I'll act like all the world's problems are your fault. Your move.

SLEEPLESS IN SYLVAN
SWF loves Tom Hanks movies, Top Gun and [illegible] Wuzzels. Looking for a guy w/ lots [illegible]

Here's [illegible] kiss the [illegible] dancing [illegible] SWF for [illegible] row, cyb[illegible]s an[illegible]

DRANK ME!
Timid MWM, 60, loves skiing, dining[illegible] and more. [illegible]

BEA[illegible]
Cu[illegible] Wi[illegible] aged [illegible] tasic[illegible] Let [illegible] for it!

I'M [illegible]NE!
Perfect [illegible] and more. [illegible]e same for nights by my fireplace. Taurus men a plus.

HARE KRISHNA
Come chant with a SBF.

WELLNESS GEEKS
SWF looking for SWM to share soy milk, straight edge hardcore, and Nintendo Playstation. Must never leave the [illegible] Greenough [illegible] deep. [illegible] Please [illegible]

AX OFF
[illegible]BF Ralph [illegible] watch [illegible]h. I and [illegible] were goo[illegible] is one's [illegible]cial. Let m[illegible]ve you a [illegible]at on the morina, [illegible]oy!

I VANT TO[illegible]OUR
SWM quas[illegible] the intim[illegible] of subm[illegible] relation[illegible] Vampires[illegible] [illegible]k my t[illegible]

NOM[illegible]ALONE
[illegible]/F, 2[illegible] [illegible]ants t[illegible]ur Sho[illegible]enjoy [illegible]nces[illegible]d pickup [illegible]acks. Don't spend another night alone!

NO JOY
SWM, 18, Ian Curtis fanatic seeks depressed SBM. Tear my love apart. No New Order fans need apply.

BE MY GREG!
Spastic Marsha Brady look–alike seeks fun. Will you be my Greg? Let's share more than just the attic.

LET'S PLAY SPANK THE NASTY ARMADILLO
Former nationally syndicated Republican talk show host seeks Pat Nixon look–alike for hours of raunchy fun. I will provide the Armadillo, you provide the Crisco.

TALKY, TALKY, TALKY
I'm a crazy Adam Sandler fan who wants to act out all of his movies, including the very violent parts. If you want to be severely beaten while I toss out corny one–liners, give me a call.

CRAZY CHEF SEEKS BOYARDEE
Are you looking to put a little sauce back into your can? I'm a SWM searching for a woman who can put some zest back in my meat balls and pasta.

MEANWHILE BACK ON EARTH
I'm a recently abducted earthling seeking passionate sex with household appliances. Do you want to turn my burners on?

ARE YOU LONELY TONIGHT?
So am I! 40ish SF collector of Elvis memorabilia looking for 40–60 year–old hunka hunka burning love to share trips to Graceland. Are you the teddy bear I'm looking for?

FRIENDS FAN
I love the TV show but have no friends. SWM seeks someone to talk to. I'm not picky. Call me, I'll be there for you.

I'M THIRSTY
For your bongwater and more. Phishhead, SWM, 19, come swim with me. Let's make our love burn down Butterfield.

BURN MY BUNSEN BURNER!
BiWF, 26, is looking for BiWM for some hot play while I get my science degree. Let's see if our chemistry will work.

LOSER
SWM, i[illegible] Im[illegible] [illegible]ett[illegible] e Bed Ju[illegible] rnative. I[illegible] ther.

NATURAL BORN KILLER
DiWF, 58, just out of jail. Seeks partner in crime for drug store hold–ups and slumber party massacres.

WESLEY WILLIS
SBM, 35, rock 'n' roll singer. I whup a horses' ass and more. Will you buy Alanis Morissette?

PSYCHO GIRL
SWF, 19, wants boy to mentally abuse.

FRAT BOY
Are your bored of the typical frat party? Do you feel used when you wake up every Saturday morning having no idea what you

A whole new ball game

Kids are crazy these days, I tell ya.

No sense of romance — everything has to be instant gratification. No time now, no time later. Sorry, Cupid, folks aren't standing still long enough for you to get a beat.

C. Taylor Conner

Take the example of this girl I know. She can't stand dating. Would rather hook up and see where things go from there. Says she feel uncomfortable on dates, feels awkward, feels like she has nothing to say.

Hello, pumpkin? While sticking your tongue in someone's mouth may be a temporary, if not momentarily pleasurable, solution to traditional courting, there is a method to the madness we know as dating.

Most people are familiar with baseball–inspired sexual innuendo system: first base is kissing, and so on. But few are aware that the great American game can be used to explain the entire concept of dating.

That's right — our favorite past time also serves as the key to our labyrinthine social past–time, the only difference being that we all start out in the minors, rather than just a select few exceptional athletes.

For those unfamiliar with the minor leagues, these small organizations serve as the breeding ground for major league prospects. There is intense camaraderie coupled with intense competition, as would be expected in a best–player–wins situation in which that individual may be your teammate (i.e. good friend).

